NEW COUNCIL TAKES HOLD OF CITY WORK.

Mr. Andrews Elevated to the Presiding Place.

COMMITTEE SELECTIONS.

CHAIRMANSHIPS ABOUT THE SAME AS LAST YEAR.

The New Council Called to Order by City Clerk MacMurray—No Opposition to the Choice of Mr. Andrews—Little Business Besides Reading of Mayor's Message and Appointing Committees.

Promptly at 8 o'clock last Tuesday City Clerk James T. MacMurray called the City Council of 1899 to order, and from the start there was an air of business depicted in every city official. After Clerk MacMurray called the meeting the first business transacted was the election of a president of the Council. Frederick H. Andrews was nominated by Mr. Buckle and it was the unanimous choice of all for the secretary to cast the ballot. Messrs. Liefke and VanHerwerden were appointed to escort President Andrews to the chair. Mr. Andrews heartily thanked the members for the honor conferred and promised to make his rulings as fair as possible. He said that in the selection of the ten committees he would appoint such members as he thought would best serve the city on the particular committee to which they were assigned.

At this time Mr. Hetfield was excused from the meeting on account of illness at home. The next order of business was the reading of the opinion of the Corporation Counsel regarding the term of the city clerk. In his opinion the clerk's term expires January 4th, 1900.

The new Council is seated as follows: Messrs. Barrows, Coriell, Homan, VanHerwerden, Mellick, Tolles, Hetfield, Buckle, Smith and Liefke. The arrangement is such that the new faces are well scattered about the semi-circle.

According to a resolution offered by Mr. Barrows the Daily Press and News are made the official papers of the city. The same member also moved that the rules for 1898 govern the body for 1899, and that the laws and ordinance committee be consolidated with the printing and stationary committee. Mr. Barrows also gave notice that at the next meeting he would move that the rules of order for 1899 be made the by-laws for 1899. He moved also that all unfinished business from last year be referred to the proper committees.

W. V. Mundy was elected janitor of the Council rooms for the sixteenth time, he having served fifteen years in that position.

The only unfinished business was that regarding the petition of J. G. Bicknell relating to a reduction on his tax bill. This matter was referred. A petition was received from A. Kane and others asking the Council to lay a crosswalk at Fillmore avenue and Third street, and to locate a light on Fillmore avenue.

The next business of importance was the reading of Mayor Rockfellow's message.

After the reading of the message Mr. Barrows moved that all parts that referred to standing committees be typewritten and referred to the proper committee.

A communication was received from S. A. Ginna and others in which the Council was asked to take hold the garbage disposal business for the city or to regulate the business so that a uniform service could be given. This matter was referred.

The report of Former Judge Stillman for the month of December showed that sixteen cases had appeared before him, of which number ten were fined. Forty-three dollars was received in fines, of which amount $11.45 was paid to Chief Grant for expenses, leaving a balance of $30.45, which amount had be turned over to the City Treasurer. Mr. Stillman spoke in disconsolate tones about the present city jail and urged the Council to seek other quarters which would not be a disgrace to the city.

Mr. Barrows moved that $2,000 be appropriated for the use of the streets and sewers committee, as that amount is necessary until the regular appropriations are made. Mr. Barrows stated in connection with this that no sum is designated to tide the committee over till the appropriations are made as is the case with other committees.

MINISTER IN OFFICE NOW

DR. RICHARDS A MEMBER OF NEW BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Board Held at Mr. Lovell's House Owing to His Illness—Dr. Probasco Again President and F. C. Lounsbury Secretary.

The Board of Education held its first meeting for 1899 Tuesday at the home of Leander Lovell, on Crescent avenue, who is too ill to leave his house. The full board were present, including Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., the new member who takes Dr. Jenkins' place.

Nothing important was done last night at the regular session except to organize for the new year, and elect officers. Dr. Probasco was re-elected President and F. C. Lounsbury Secretary. Dr. Probasco said that he was not able to announce his committees at the meeting but would do so later.

The tax collector reported that $31,702.89 had been collected and placed to the credit of the school fund in the bank.

The medical inspectors, Drs. Tomlinson and Murray, reported 100 examinations of pupils during the month of December, and Dr. Murray, in a communication to the board, said that he had attended the convention of the New Jersey Sanitary Association at Lakewood a few weeks ago, at the suggestion of the board, and heard of many things that may in time be adopted by the Plainfield board.

Dr. Murray also explained to the convention the work of the medical inspectors of the Plainfield schools, and they were very much interested in all he said, for the schools in this city are the first ones in New Jersey to establish medical inspectors, and as a result there were no contagious diseases in the schools here last year to amount to anything.

This ended the regular business and at 9 o'clock the board went into executive session to listen to Drs. Tomlinson and Murray give a talk upon vaccination among the pupils.

HUGE FLAMES SHOT UP FROM GASOLINE STOVE

SMOTHERED BY USE OF A RUG.

Happened in Kitchen of George VanBoskerck's House—Ill but Fatsied Away.

Just before noon yesterday an alarm of fire was sent from box 34, corner of West Fifth street and Liberty street, for a fire that broke out in the basement of the house occupied by George VanBoskerck and family, corner Seventh street and Central avenue. The fire was caused by a gasoline stove which the laundress was using to heat irons. Suddenly a huge flame shot up into the air and the girl was greatly frightened. A workman in the vicinity, who happened to notice the fire, rushed into the basement and securing a rug threw it over the stove and smothered the flames, but not before damage to the amount of $40 resulted, chiefly to clothes.

Mr. VanBoskerck's son arrived home from New York ill about the time the fire occurred and the excitement caused him to faint away. He was soon resuscitated.

Owing to the snow on the ground the department was unable to make as good time as they ordinarily do.

Entertained at Whist.

The Monday Evening Whist Club was delightfully entertained last Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, of Park avenue, and the meeting was, as usual, one of great pleasure to all. The full membership was in attendance. Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., and Mrs. William A. Pinto secured the first and second prizes for the ladies, while for the men Charles E. Brooks and E. H. Booth were the successful contestants for first and second prizes.

Rooster, Even, Has the Grip.

The family of J. H. VanHorn, of Duer street, have been victims of the grip during the past few weeks. All five of them have had it and recovered. The rooster, even, has been invalid, which Mr. VanHorn numbers among his family, a pet rooster, that now is unable to crow because of an attack of something he thinks is the grip. Mr. VanHorn has administered regular doses of quinine to the biped, and it is on the road to recovery.

Mrs. J. J. Dougherty is very ill with the grip at her home, 87 Somerset street.

Mrs. Voehl, wife of Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street, is detained at home by a severe illness.

The families of Horace J. Martin and Henry VanMiddlesworth spent New Year's at Roycefield.

Assessor Joseph A. Hubbard, of Fifth street, is seriously ill at his home. Dr. Zaglio is in attendance.

Mildred Miller, aged three years and a half, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Doul Miller, is very ill with the grip.

A JOLLY GOOD TIME FOR FIRE LADDIES.

TWO GOLD BADGES PRESENTED.

Former Chiefs Bodine and Fairchild Receive Handsome Recognition of Their Services.

Among the last, but not the least, of the Christmas entertainments was the one given last Tuesday in Warren Engine Company's house on Somerset street, when the members and a few invited guests assembled and enjoyed a fine programme. The whole affair was arranged by Borough Electrician Julius Stahl, who was assisted by ex-Chief David Bodine.

Mr. Stahl was master-of-ceremonies and distributed the gifts. Among those of note present were: Mayor Wilson, Councilman Geo. T. Rogers, Former School Commissioner S. B. Joseph, Borough Clerk Arnold and several other prominent officials, in addition to the members of the company. Everyone received a present of a humorous character.

An unlooked-for event was the presentation to George R. Fairchild and David Bodine of handsome badges in recognition of their services. They are inscribed for ex-chief's, and were from the members of the company.

It was announced during the evening that a prize of a handsome rubber coat would be given to the member of the company who sells the greatest number of tickets for the fair to be held by the company February 6th to 11th for the benefit of the uniform fund.

During the rest of the evening the time was passed in listening to a phonograph entertainment given by Whitfield Frazee, and banjo selections by W. C. Force. Before the affair came to an end refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served in abundance. Before Mayor Wilson retired from the room three rousing cheers were given him.

SAY IT IS A NUISANCE.

West End Residents Complain About the Sanitary Company.

A complaint signed by a number of property owners in the vicinity of the Plainfield Sanitary Company, and sworn to by two of them, was received by the Board of Trade of Health last Tuesday at their meeting. The complaint sets forth that the plant is operated in such a manner as to make it a public nuisance, and they pray of the Board of Health that they take some action in regard to it.

The communication will be headed at once, and the Board will investigate the matter and notify the company to abate the nuisance if it proves to be such. The two members of the Board whose terms of office expire this year are Dr. W. H. Murray, secretary, and A. J. Gawett.

There was no business of importance transacted last night. The Board feel well pleased that despite the numerous cases of grip and other diseases prevalent in town, there is no contagious case reported.

HE WILL DO BETTER NOW.

Alfred Springer Gets a Scadsman and is Released From Jail.

Attorney William G. DeMeza went to Elizabeth yesterday and secured the release of Alfred Springer, one of the gang of boy burglars, who were captured three weeks ago. Sentence was suspended on Springer when he was arraigned before Judge Van, but was held until a bondsman could be found who would furnish a $200 bail bond for his good behavior. Jacob Voehl went on Springer's bond.

A Prosperous Business.

Under the watchful management of John J. Crouse, manager for the Grand Union Tea Company, 138 West Front street, the business of that company has so increased that he is enabled to cater to the most fastidious taste. The goods sold by him are of a very superior quality. Mr. Crouse guarantees satisfaction or money refunded. All this week he will give to each one making a purchase of a fifty-cent can of their baking powder a handsome jardinier or statue stand. There is no better baking powder sold than that sold by this company.

Death of John Fitzgerald.

The death of John J. Fitzgerald, aged 48 years, son of Stephen and the late Mary Fitzgerald, occurred Tuesday at his home in the borough after a long illness. The deceased was a brother to Mrs. Andrew Carney, also of the borough. Requiem mass will be said for the repose of his soul at St. Joseph's R. C. church, Friday morning next at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

To be Married in Dunellen.

This afternoon at St. John's church, Dunellen, will take place the marriage of Miss Powers, of Samptown, to Philip McQuire, of this city. Mr. McQuire is one of the popular employes of the Plainfield Street Railway.

MAYOR ROCKFELLOW'S ADVICE TO COUNCIL.

New Executive Explains His Views of City Affairs.

WANTS NO NEW BONDS.

UNLESS THE EXPENSE IS OF IMPERATIVE NEED TO CITY.

Advises Municipal Ownership of Water Works—Would Like to See Time of Collecting Taxes Set Forward Several Months, and Date of Fiscal Year Changed—Sewage Question Important.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Gentlemen—Since the law was changed so that the terms of office of all members of the Common Council do not expire at the same time, and especially since the custom was established for standing committees and heads of departments to make full reports at the close of the year, it is no longer required that a newly-elected chief executive of the city should, in his inaugural message to the Common Council, submit any elaborate review touching municipal affairs. It is appropriate, however, that pursuant to the charter requirement, I should at this time make certain general recommendations, reserving for future occasions such special recommendations as may be called for by the course of events or a more accurate knowledge of the city's needs.

I am opposed to the issue of any more bonds in this city, except in case of absolute necessity. While I recognize the justice of extending time for payment of permanent improvements over a series of years, whereby those who hereafter enjoy the benefit of the improvements may contribute toward the expense of the same, yet in view of the burdens upon taxpayers in recent years necessarily imposed for the city's good, it is my judgment that further public improvements involving large expenditures, including a bond issue, should be held in abeyance until additional burdens upon taxpayers will be less felt than at the present time. This conclusion is the more readily reached, because it is likely that during the present year the city will begin to reap the benefit of the proceedings taken under the Martin Act to enforce collection of arrears of taxes on lands. The importance of these proceedings cannot be easily overestimated. From the outset the Common Council and my predecessor in office stoutly resisted any such application of the Martin Act as would harm innocent purchasers in good faith, and the court has, in substance, declared that law and justice are synonymous in this respect. The duty of the city government to invoke the powers of the law so as to compel delinquents to pay up their just share of the expense of government, is plain, and this city will not be deterred from the rigorous enforcement of its rights in this particular by any suggestions respecting the high standing or the great number of those who are delinquent. No action taken by the city in recent years redounds more to the credit of the city government, or is calculated to do more lasting good than the action taken by the last Common Council to compel the city's debtors to square up their accounts.

WATER.

The present contract for fire hydrants will expire on the second day of May, nineteen hundred and two. This flourishing city should be the owner of its own water works. The question of ways and means should not be left until so late a date that the city would be put at a disadvantage for want of time, either for deliberate negotiations with the present Company or the adoption of such measures as the law provides to enable cities to own and control their own plants. I recommend that the whole matter be referred to the appropriate committee, with request for an early report.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The admirable report of the Chief of the Fire Department will doubtless receive early attention. The questions presented in that report, especially those respecting the proposed plan of reorganization of the fire department, are vital questions, and I recommend that no changes be made until time and opportunity shall have been afforded for most mature consideration. There is a body of men in this city who have, in years gone by, given their best thoughts and efforts to the service of the city, and the Common Council has from STOVE EXPLODED AND WRECKED THE KITCHEN.

ACCIDENT WAS A PECULIAR ONE.

Sudden Heating of the Pipes Generated Steam With a Heavy Pressure.

A peculiar but dangerous accident occurred at the home of Mr. Hamilton, of 215 Church street, Tuesday morning, by which the kitchen range was blown to pieces and the kitchen itself nearly demolished.

Mr. Hamilton went away to spend Christmas with some relatives near Somerville. He was delayed by the illness of his wife and didn't reach home until Tuesday morning. Mr. Hamilton lighted a fire in the kitchen range at once and then went up stairs for a few moments to take a cup of coffee with the family who live above, when he was startled by a terrific explosion which shook the house from top to bottom.

Hurrying down the stairs Mr. Hamilton found that the range was lying in fragments all over the room, and the gas walls and ceiling of the kitchen were ruined. An investigation showed that the waterback, a little arrangement inside the range by which the water in the tank is heated, had exploded. The extreme cold Sunday and Monday had frozen all the pipes and the water in this waterback, and when the fire was lighted the ice began to melt and this, generating steam, caused the explosion. A plumber was called in to shut off the water. Mr. Hamilton is thankful that he went upstairs when he did, otherwise he would probably have been killed.

Elizabeth, Jan. 4.—The regular January Grand Jury was charged by Justice VanSyckle yesterday. The official life of this Grand Jury, like the charge of the justice, will be the shortest on record in Union county.

Justice VanSyckle's charge was as follows: "There is one case, a charge of homicide, which you are called upon to investigate. There is some question as to the man's sanity, but this, gentlemen, is not for you to decide. There are no other matters to which the court wishes to call your attention. Gentlemen, you will choose your own officers and proceed with the investigation."

FLYNN, OR WHOEVER HE IS, WILL PROBABLY DIE.

NEVER REGAINED CONSCIOUSNESS.

The man at the hospital who was supposed to have been Thomas Flynn, and who was picked up unconscious along the tracks of the Central Railroad, in Dunellen, Monday evening, is fading and hope of his recovery have been given up. The authorities in charge at the hospital are not perfectly sure that the man's name is Thomas Flynn, as no one has come to the hospital to identify him except Overseer of the Poor Corcoran, of Raritan.

From the time the man was found lying along the tracks to the present time he has not been conscious once and has not been able to tell anything about himself. He has completely lost the power of speech. Every possible effort has been made to learn who he is and where his home is, but without success.

CITY TO BATTLE OVER SEWAGE BEDS.

Arguments Pro and Con in the Milliken Suit.

SUES CITY FOR DAMAGES.

PLAINTIFF CLAIMS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT TO REDRESS BY LAW.

Argues That Otherwise the Act Authorizing Beds is Unconstitutional—Corporation Counsel Hatch Quotes Law in Defence of the City—Injury Mrs. Milliken Has No Remedy for Loss.

The sewage disposal beds are once more a topic of conversation. This time it is a lawsuit against the city that brings them prominently before the attention of the people of Plainfield. The suit was instituted some time ago, when it was duly noticed in the columns of this paper Tuesday The Daily Press told of the hearing before Judge VanSyckel in the Supreme Court at Elizabeth Tuesday morning, in the case of Mrs. Sarah Milliken against the city of Plainfield for $10,000 damages.

The counsel for the plaintiff, Mrs. Milliken, were Senator Chatterton A. Reed, of Reed & Coddington; S. F. Swackhamer, of Codington & Swackhamer, of this city, and Charles C. Hartshorne, of Jersey City. They held that the city was taking private property for public use without compensation which was in conflict with the provisions of the Federal and State Constitutions. The destruction, partial or entire, of private property or the lessening or diminishing of its value, they construed to come within the meaning of those provisions of the two constitutions.

It was contended by the defense that this was a public improvement carried on by a municipal corporation under a special act of the Legislature and that the injuries to the plaintiff's property, if any, were simply incidental, being only such as were unavoidable with the exercise of due care and skill by the city, and therefore did not subject the city to suit.

S. S. Swackhamer, one of the counsels for the plaintiff, was the first speaker upon regarding the case as presented by the plaintiff. He contended that that the injuries to Mrs. Milliken's property were not incidental but direct, and he cited a case in the Supreme Court in which a county was held liable to an action for injuries caused by the freeholders making an excavation in a street and leaving it unguarded, whereby the plaintiff in the case was injured. The Court, in that case, held that while the County or Freeholders were a municipal corporation, yet the wrong complained of, while a public nuisance, was still an active wrong whereby the plaintiff was injured, and although an indictment would lie, the plaintiff could recover.

The two principal points taken by the plaintiff's counsel was first:—that if the act that permits the city to build the sewer beds is constitutional, there being no provision for compensation in the act, it, therefore, intended by the Legislature that a party injured should have his remedy by suit. And second:—if that were not the intention of the Legislature and if the act was not so construed, then the act is unconstitutional and void and furnishes no justification to the city.

When a Press reporter called at the law offices of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Hatch to learn the city's side of the case, Mr. Hatch declined to discuss the case but handed the reporter two decisions of the Court of Errors and Appeals from which the following appropriate sections are given:

"When property has been incidentally injured, no matter to what extent, as an unavoidable result of a public improvement, such loss has always been deemed remediless and it has never been supposed that property so injured was taken in the constitutional sense for public use. All public improvements in the State have been built and are resting on this foundation.

"The courts of this State have said in conclusive form that the neglect of a municipal corporation to perform, or its negligence in the performance of a public duty imposed on it by law, is a public wrong to be remedied by indictment and cannot constitute the basis of a civil action by an individual who has suffered particular damage by reason of such neglect."

Receiving New Mayor.

Mayor Rockfellow had many callers Tuesday who wished him a happy new year.

OUR YOUTHS' COLUMN.

TEAR AND SMILE.

"What are you?" said a tear
To a smile playing near
"With a flickering shimmer
You transiently glimmer
On the meaningless features of mirth;
But you nothing express
For she was his young mother,
And in her lap he lay
And while she sang so sweetly,
He merely squalled away.

—Cleveland Leader.

Such a Surprise.

"This is our last nice day together," said Eric, disconsolably.

"But I can't see why it should be," persisted May. "She may be a very nice little girl."

"But she won't. She's a girl, and all girls are silly."

"I'm one, too," objected May demurely.

"But you're not like other girls. You like running about and building castles—in the sand, and all that sort of thing. That one likes dolls!" with supreme contempt. "I asked papa, and he said she was very fond of dolls."

"But so am I, Eric. One can't always run about, and when I'm indoors I love my dollies."

"Anyway, you're different. You're nice, and I'm quite sure she'll be nasty," Eric insisted.

Poor Eric couldn't remember his mother at all, and as his papa, though very fond of him and very kind, was almost always busy, his had been a very lonely life. But it was all to be changed now. A few weeks ago his papa had told him that he was going to have a new mother. Eric did not mind that. He had often longed for a mother. But what Eric did not like was that this lady had been married, too, and had a little girl. Eric did not like girls; he thought it beneath his dignity to play with them.

Then, about a fortnight ago, papa had told Eric that, after his wedding, he and the new mamma were going for a time journey, and Eric was to spend that time at the seaside. So he and his nurse had come here, and, living in the same house, they had found a little girl who was staying there with her governess. The two children speedily made each other's acquaintance, and were now fast friends.

Papa had in the meantime got married, and that very evening he and his wife were to arrive, to take Eric home with them for a few days.

After a short pause the boy began to speak again.

"It's not only the girl I mind, May; I'm a little tiny bit afraid of the new mamma, too. Perhaps she won't be as nice as I real am."

"Oh, but she will!" said May, quickly. "All mammas are nice. You should see mine."

"I wish I had seen her," Eric said wistfully; "then I should know perhaps, how to behave to mine. I do want so much to make her like me."

"I'm sure she likes you already. I'm sure she began to love you as soon as she knew you were going to be her little boy. May said, with the happy confidence of a child who had a mother and knew a mother's love. "All the same I wish mine were coming. I had a letter from her yesterday, and she says she is coming soon, and has got a great surprise for me."

"Master Eric! Master Eric!" called his nurse's voice, and he had to run in.

That same evening Eric's parents arrived. Papa caught his boy in his arms and kissed him; and then Eric felt another pair of arms round him, and was kissed, oh, so tenderly; and, looking up, he saw such a sweet face bending over him that he knew immediately he should like the owner of it.

"I hope you and I will grow very fond of each other, Eric," she said.

"Yes," he answered. He longed to say more, but he was too shy; so, to change the subject, he asked:

"And the little girl?"

"She is not here this evening," papa replied.

Eric went to bed a very happy boy that night. He felt that he would love his mother very much, and when he came to breakfast the next morning and found only his papa, he was quite disappointed.

"Where is mamma?" he asked.

"Gone out," said papa. "We are to meet her on the beach after breakfast."

Accordingly, after breakfast, papa and Eric set out together; and as they were walking along, papa said:

"You see, Eric, I was very sorry that you hated the idea of your new sister so much, and so I sent you here because I thought you would surely get to know some nice little girl who would cure you of your prejudice. Now, your friend May, whom you told us so much about last night, is a girl, and is nice, isn't she?"

"All girls aren't like her," Eric signed. "She is—oh, there she is, papa, coming to meet me."

May came running toward them, her long hair flying behind her.

"Eric, Eric!" she cried, "Just fancy! My mamma arrived in the night, while I was asleep. Do come and speak to her. She is sitting over there, on that bench."

Eric looked in the direction she pointed out. A lady was sitting on a bench, and Eric's papa had just sat down beside her. He said something to her, and then they both turned round and looked at the children.

"Why, that's my mamma," said Eric.

For a minute they stared at each other. Then, all of a sudden, they understood.

"Why, Eric!"

"May, you——"

And then they flung their arms round each other's necks and hugged each other.

Hand-Reared Calves.

Successful to a marked degree in all my ventures in calf rearing, I would suggest that all calves be hand fed from the very start. One reason is the necessity of weaning calf and mother from each other is thus avoided. This has been made one of the cruelest of farm practices. No calf need run a day with its mother or ever be allowed to suck. It can be tied beside the cow at night and kept within sight and sound of her through the day. Thus treated both calf and mother become weaned in a little time. In a very short time the calf may be turned into the pasture or lot with its mother and the other cattle without giving any trouble about sucking.

My best cows, Jerseys and common stock, have developed from hand-fed calves. They were regularly given milk that was sweet and warm. A calf that is allowed to become hungry and thirsty, and then allowed to gorge, becomes "pudded" and ill-shaped. Three times a day is not too often to give milk to a calf under three months of age. The quantity given at a reasonable quantity in each time of milk, is desirable. The making or ruining of a cow lies largely in the hands of her owner. Blood and the results of the main factors, of course, but the best of thoroughbred blood, and the most careful breeding of her ancestors, may become of no avail, if that calf be left to come up, instead of being rightly brought up.

It is unwise to give much corn as soon as the calf will eat it. Oats ground or whole are always good for her. Eggs if cheap and plenty may be very advantageously added to the milk once in a while. She responds by showing you a glossier coat and a general air of thriftiness. A calf I have used blood-meal, a teaspoonful at first and but once a day in a feed of milk. This amount can be increased to twice and three times that amount, but five only once a day. Practical experience of years proves to me that hand-reared calves are the best and much the cheapest. They must first be fed a proportion of new milk and later on sweet skimmilk, and a moderate quantity only of meal and muscle producing foods.—Nellie Hawks in Agriculturist.

Keeping Cream in Winter.

In small dairies where it takes a long time to secure cream enough for a churning, it often becomes old, smells and tastes bad, but is not sour. One of the best ways out of the difficulty is to have conveniences usually at hand, is to keep the cream in as cool a place as possible, not below freezing, and 24 hours before churning, place the can in hot water, stirring frequently until the temperature of the cream reaches 85 degrees. Then put the can where it will keep warm. The next morning it will be sour with that velvety look which indicates that it is of the proper acidity. If not enough to churn properly, put it again in warm water and stir so that it will warm evenly.

The Yellow Skin Fad.

In mating fowls for breeding stock, from which to raise broilers and roosters, each fowl should be selected with care. If the flesh and skin are not deep yellow, the fowl should be rejected. First class trade in the New England markets and to an immense degree in the best trade of many western cities does not want white meated poultry. The male bird is of the first importance. He is half the flock. Yellow meated poultry is a fad of the markets in certain sections, and there is no use in kicking against it so long as we can make money out of it. Even a yellow-skinned breed will be whitish if not fed right. Nothing but yellow corn meal will make the yellowest meat.—W. H. Rudd, in Agriculturist.

Why Winter Squash Rot.

Many people who grow winter squashes complain that the fruit will not keep for any length of time after it is removed from the vines to the vegetable cellar. The trouble may occasionally rest in the choice of varieties, but this is not usually the case, since the favorite sorts vary little from the old reliable Hubbard, which is noted for its keeping qualities. Generally the fault rests with the man who, occupied with other matters, lets his "hardy" vegetables lie in the field exposed to the frost long after they should be stored, and when he removes them, grumbles because these crops must be left until the weather is "most too cold to work out of doors."

How to Kill Lice on Hogs.

Hogs will invariably take to the water when given an opportunity, especially when troubled with lice. If the animals have no wallow, one should be provided. This is easy to accomplish. Simply dig a hole and fill with water and then allow the rest. When the wallow is formed pour over its surface kerosene oil varying in amount according to size of wallow. The mud and water thus treated becomes sure death to the lice on the hogs.

Measuring Hay.

The quality of hay varies so widely that it is very difficult to get an accurate measurement of a certain quantity. It is generally believed, however, that 400 cubic feet, taking it right through, will make a ton. A mow, 24x12x16 would, therefore, contain very close to 11 1-2 tons.

HERO AND MARTYR.

OBSERVING THE QUADRIGENTENNIAL OF SAVONAROLA.

All Creeds Now Laud the Great Priest Who Died for Freedom's Cause. He Was Not Afraid to Stand Up Alone Against Vice and Corruption.

It is now four hundred years since mankind saw the example of a great churchman standing up unaided and alone to voice the will of his masters and to rebuke as he did, vice and selfishness and lust of power.

That man was Savonarola. Savonarola was not canonized. His name does not grace the calendar of the saints, but he was the nearest churchman to the type of Christ that appeared since the Crucifixion, and immeasurably the greatest since his own day.

Savonarola lived in Florence when Florence was the first city of the world and when it was ruled by a man to whom time serving writers have given the name of Lorenzo the Magnificent, but whose proper designation ought to have been the corrupt Podesta of the Italian Renaissance.

The Medici were extensive merchants in Florence and held power by packing the primaries. They and Lorenzo in their person by first selecting its rulers inside the walls of the palace and then condescending to call the people together to announce the names of those upon whom choice had fallen. The last lusty praetor of this line, but two years before he had exhausted the spice of life at the age of 44 years. His motto was to encourage "cheerful sins." Politically he also was so corrupt as to call for the censure of Savonarola; but he was the Papal Legate at Rome and the dictator of the Republic. He had sufficient "pull" to remove the monk to a parish on the top of a neighboring mountain where Savonarola could appreciate the plight of Tantalus by looking down upon the Florentine city but not having any water. Lorenzo as personifying the State was the first to surrender. The debauched dictator was about to die. He sent a message for Savonarola's presence and priestly blessing. Lorenzo was a man with excellent common sense notwithstanding his bad and sinful life and knowing that the intercession of a wretched padre would have only laughed and insulted an already angry God he sought for the benediction of an honest, upright, and righteous exponent of the life and examples of Christ. Savonarola's answer was worthy of him. He offered to help Lorenzo to the Throne of Grace upon these three conditions. First, Lorenzo was to make a declaration of faith in God and his Church. This condition was that Savonarola differed largely from the subsequent career of those reformers of whom Luther is probably the best type. Savonarola unlike Luther never ceased to be a Catholic in spirit, sympathy and affiliations. The second condition was that Lorenzo was to restore to the people all the illegal tribute he had wrung from them in order to enrich his family and to endow churches and to build libraries. Thirdly he was to restore also the political liberties of the Republic of Florence. Lorenzo gladly offered to comply with the first of these conditions, but he declined the last two. Savonarola now left the death chamber and the tyrant went to Heaven unabsolved.

Then soon after the death of Lorenzo the Magnificent a holy boycott was proclaimed from Rome against Savonarola. A secret society was organized in Florence for the purposes of his persecution. The second form in which he uttered the truths of his Creator was filled with the refuse and the filth of the streets. Nails were hammered upwards so that their points protruded through the pulpits and the steps. Bribes were in all hands in driving home to the hearts of men the great truths which inspired him. He was eventually burned in the public square of Florence, May 23, 1498.

and wonderingly asked also whether such can be as true of Heaven as it has unfortunately been of the Medieval despot. If so we may well deny ourselves such a place and prefer the company of those pious Italians who in spite of every anathema still annually strew with flowers the place where Savonarola's ashes crumbled. If religion is ever to recover the ground it seems to have lost such will only be done by the clergy keeping the model of this brave and immortal man steadily before their minds. The spectacle of a Savonarola burning while a Rockefeller or a Carnegie of his delinquencies in the very temple which he had reared and to his face would do more to revive popular interest in the churches than all the revivals and sermons and bazaars in the world. Bishop Potter attempted this role in a mild way in St. Paul's Church in New York in 1888 in the cases of the politicians and in the presence of President Harrison but his example feeble though it was hasn't found among the pastors of America one single imitator.

MISS ETHEL R. BENJAMIN.

The first and only woman allowed to practice in a supreme court in British dominions is Miss Ethel R. Benjamin, who last year graduated from Otago University at the head of her class in every branch of the law. The New Zealand courts immediately admitted her to the bar, although in Great Britain and British possessions as a prejudice or conservatism that has prevented any other woman from being thus honored.

Mugitsh as It Is Spoken.

It is little wonder that foreigners are in despair in learning to speak the English language when the most prominent officialties is the way in which the same syllable sounds have often very different meanings.

"You'll get run in," said the pedestrian to the cyclist without a light.

"You'll get run into," savagely resented the cyclist, as he knocked the pedestrian down and ran on his spoke.

"You'll get run in, too," said the policeman, as he stepped from behind a tree and grabbed both.

And just then another scorcher came along without a light, so the policeman ran in two.

A PHILOSOPHER.

In winter time he's happy
When he's pelted by the snows;
In summer time he's singing
If he gathers one sweet rose;
And as with seems ever better
For the happy way he goes.

If dark the tempest's frowning
And no stars are in the night,
He thanks God for a shelter,
And sleeps and dreams of light.
And somehow Earth is brighter,
For that lesson—love—obey!

A LIFE GAZE.

A few years after the close of the war I was one of a party of men from my town of Harrison and adjoining town of Bridgton who went to Cambria county, Pennsylvania, and worked in the woods for the late Honorable Abraham A. Barker, a congressman from the Keystone state. Our camp was in a large tract of pine where we were settled and squatters were few and far between.

An old hunter, Calvin Trott, whose acquaintance I made, speaking of the wild beasts indigenious to that region, instanced the catamount, otherwise known as the panther or painter, as the kind most to be feared, albeit it was rarely seen in those parts.

He said that a catamount's usual trick was to watch for his prey from ambush, up in a tree, and when the intended victim was sufficiently near, leap down upon it, fasten his teeth in the neck, cutting the jugular vein, and causing speedy death. But sometimes this terror of the forest would be encountered on the ground; in which case there was but one way. His only hope of escape lay in quietly facing the animal, catching its eye before it made a spring, and literally looking it out of countenance.

I little thought that I was to be afforded occasion to try what seemed to be very doubtful expedient, to say the least.

My job was ox-teaming, and my route was a logging road, of a decidedly primative kind—simply a wide pathway cut through unbroken woods, too rough for carriage use, but answering for logging purposes.

It was a bright day in early autumn, and I was returning to camp. I had halted the oxen to give them a short rest, had sauntered some rods ahead of them, intending when they had sufficiently rested to start them on advance—a mandate they were sure to obey. All at once, from behind a pine shrub beside the road, not over six paces from me, appeared the form of a huge animal of the cat species, which, I felt too well was the terrible catamount!

The animal at once crouched down close to the earth, his face towards me, while his tail begun that peculiar gentle twitching movement which with the cat species foreboded mischief.

That I, like grandfather's clock, stopped short, goes without saying. To turn and run was my first impulse, but I well knew this would be a fatal move. I was unarmed, and to advance would only serve to abridge my probably short chance of existence. What the hunter, Trott, had told me flashed across my memory, and I resolved to try the life-or-death experiment.

Now I had known what it was to face hostile cannon and rifles, but in the excitement of battle one in a measure loses his consciousness of danger, and besides, a battle is a lottery in which the number are not all blanks, but in this case, alone and unarmed as I was, and in the heart of a great forest, far from human help to stand and look close range a pair of eyes which represented what was more deadly than gunmuzzles, was the most appalling position I was ever in. I trembled from head to foot, and I could feel the cold sweat start on my forehead, but I nerved myself for the task, and at once, with head slightly advanced, fixed my eyes directly on those of the catamount, which evidently was ready for the fateful leap.

How long I thus stood I cannot say. It must have been five minutes, it might have been but minutes, but to me it seemed at least half an hour. It was a dramatic tableau in real life—we two thus posed, his eyes riveted on mine, my eyes riveted on his, neither of us for one instant removing our gaze. Events in my past life, and thoughts of the dear ones at home whom I might never see again swept through my brain in quick succession, but the central idea that it was a game for life, with the odds tremendously against me, held me straight to the line, and I faltered not.

And I was destined to win!

Presently the catamount rose to his feet, gave a low, disgruntled growl, as he, for the first time, averted his head, then slowly walked off, at a right angle, into the woods.

I remained motionless except keeping my face turned towards my retreating foe. At the edge of the thicket he paused and gave me what proved to be the last look, keeping my gaze still upon him, he gave a species of snarl, and disappeared in the forest.

Yes, thank God! I was saved.

I silently returned to my team, and as speedily as possible resumed my journey, which ended without further incident.—Exchange.

A ROYAL DENTIST.

Dr. Evans, Who Has Treated Teeth for Many European Sovereigns.

Slowly, and with the aid of a strong cane, an aged man made his way down the gang plank of a French liner, from Havre the other day. He was Dr. Thomas W. Evans, the most celebrated dentist in Europe, a friend of Napoleon III., and of Empress Eugenie.

Dr. Evans has done what no American can boast; he has treated and filled the teeth of every ruler in Europe, save only Queen Victoria. He went to Paris in 1846, and has resided there ever since.

His wealth is estimated at $35,000,000, besides a matter of $5,000,000 or so which is invested in real estate on Riverside drive in this city. He purchased this property in 1876, when he last visited this country.

It was in the reign of Napoleon III. that Dr. Evans came into prominence. He had succeeded in elevating dentistry and in perfecting methods far in advance of that time. The Emperor practically insured the doctor's future, for, by dint of his fame, he earned his skill.

A warm friendship sprang up between the Emperor and Dr. Evans. It was through this that Dr. Evans was enabled to accumulate wealth rapidly, for to be the Emperor's dentist meant to be that of every member of the court.

Kaiser Wilhelm I, of Germany, sought his aid. The present Czar of Russia, when a boy, also sat in the doctor's chair and had his teeth filled.

Napoleon's dentist enabled the shrewd American to make real estate investments in Paris that rapidly swelled his wealth. He now owns an elaborate office building and a magnificent residence on the Bois de Boulogne, besides many other valuable properties in the French capital.

The Empress Eugenie was also his patron, and when the French empire tottered to its fall and she feared for her life, Dr. Evans assisted her to escape at night from the Chateau de Pierrefonds. In his own carriage Dr. Evans took the Empress to Calais, and from there on board his yacht, where she remained during the horrors that followed in France.—New York Journal.

THE GATE WAS TAKEN OFF.

Summary measures may often be taken when human motives conflict, if only, at the same time, "mercy seasons justice."

When Sir Richard Burton was British Consul at Damascus, his wife, Lady Isabel, found that a large wooden gate, in the garden next hers, swung continuously on its hinges, and that it was keeping one of her guests, an English official, awake at night.

The garden belonged to an old woman, and Lady Burton caused her to have the gate fastened; but she sent back word that it was impossible. It had been broken for years, and she had no money to repair it. So the English lady took the law into her own hands. That night her guest slept well, and in the morning he asked gratefully how she had managed about the gate.

"If you look out of the window," said she, "you will see it in the courtyard. I had it pulled down at sunset."

He drew the long face of official rebuke.

"Oh!" said he, "but you really must not treat people like that! Suppose they knew of these things at home!"

"Suppose they did," echoed she, laughing.

After her guest's departure, she ordered the gate to be mended and replaced in its old position; and the next time she went out, the little old woman next door ran after her, crying:

"O thou light of my eyes, thou sunbeam! Come and sit by the brook in my garden, and honor me by drinking coffee, and tell me what thou hast ever break something else of mine, and live forever!"

He Followed the Advice.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Willie.

"Across the ocean?" persisted the visitor, facetiously.

"I shouldn't wonder," answered Willie, promptly.

"Why, Willie, do you know how far it is across the ocean?" demanded Willie's mother.

"Don't care how far it is," retorted Willie. "Pop told me once never to admit that I couldn't do a thing until I'd tried and failed, and I never tried this."—Chicago Post.

CHURCH AND PEOPLE.

HOW TO REACH THE MASSES AND OVERCOME THE SALOON.

Chicago Methodist Ministers are Addressed By Miss Jane Addams, Who Advises Changed Methods for Changed Conditions in Church Work.

The Methodist ministers of Chicago listened to an address the other day by Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, the well-known social settlement of that city. In their invitation to her they requested her to say plainly what in her opinion, are some of the defects in the working machinery of the churches, and she did so. There are two things, she declared, which contribute to the lack of success of the Protestant churches among the masses. The first is that they have not had the wisdom to adapt their methods to the special needs of the city. With some notable exceptions, they retain the system that has been successful in suburban and rural communities. In the country town the church is a sort of social centre, and stated services and social gatherings, therefore, appeal powerfully to many people who do not care greatly for religion in the abstract. But in the cities a different state of affairs exists. The church must compete with theatres, music halls, clubs, and countless fraternities and social organizations of every kind. And it simply cannot do so if it restricts itself to the usual Sunday services and the weekly prayer-meeting. To gain the masses of the people who are profoundly indifferent to its spiritual message it must make some provisions for their social cravings, not only by giving more tone and color to the regular services, but by giving to them such social opportunities as they find in the theatres and dance hall.

It is a mistake, Miss Addams says, to denounce the theatres as wholly bad. She has found the cheap people's theatres of the Nineteenth Ward, where Hull House is situated, unmoral rather than immoral. They rely for their effects on such melodramatic incidents as the blowing up of a steamboat or a raid of painted Indians. It is all very lurid and impossible, but the boys and girls find in the theatres and dance hall.

Miss Addams says, is also to denounce as fashionable play which has for its motive some unclean story of domestic life. "I would not," she declares, "make the church a theatre, but you have got to teach morals and ethics and be more attractive than you believe if Christ came to the earth to work again and He found a church steeple or the written sermon or the music and singing needed changing He would not hesitate to change it. If by so doing he could reach the people. The saloons are doubtless an evil, and I'm not a friend of them; yet they do supply a great deal of unimpeded, unstilted good-fellowship. The young men and women who work in our churches or clubs should learn how to be natural and give it a professional air. The people detect this readily and resent it."

The second reason, in her opinion why the Churches often fail to reach the people is that they do not sufficiently try to understand the point of view of the workingman, who feels himself to be the under dog in the battle of life. The pressing problem with millions of workingmen is not how they shall save their souls, so that they may play on harps in heaven, but how to make their present condition a little less smarting—how to get a little more physical and mental comfort out of life. It would be a revelation to many optimistic preachers if they could attend a few meetings of Labor unions or some gatherings of Anarchists and Socialists, and hear just what these men have to say. It will not do to dismiss the grievances of such men as absurd. They are human beings, and from the point of view of the Church they have souls to be saved. It may be that they ought to go to the stated services of the church; and doubtless, if they did, they would learn much that would help them. But they will not do that, and many of them look on the Church as one tool of capitalism." Under these circumstances it behooves the Church to go to them and in a patient and sympathetic spirit show them how truly the religion of the Carpenter's Son desires to improve their condition.

It is interesting to know that the Methodist ministers received these somewhat radical suggestions in good part. A few criticised Miss Addams' position, and made a plea for the preaching of "the old-fashioned Gospel in the old-fashioned way." But the late Dr. Caddy appeared to carry the majority with him when he said:

I believe all Miss Addams said of us is true and more. I believe the church is not reaching the masses. Only last week I stood watching a crowd of men coming out of a meeting in my church. I wanted to reach them but I couldn't. It seems as if a great wall was built between myself and the men in the ditch. We as a church are not reaching the people. There is more brotherhood in the saloon and the theatre and in the mutual benefit society, and I mean to try to have a brotherhood spirit in my church.

Mrs. Fyffe's Rebellion.

While he was Secretary of the Navy, William H. Chandler issued an order that officers should not permit their wives to reside at foreign stations to which their husbands were attached. The order was promptly rescinded upon the receipt by the secretary of the following letter from Commodore Fyffe, in command of the Asiatic squadron: "I becomes my painful duty to report that my wife, Eliza Fyffe, has, in dis obedience to my orders, and in the face of regulations of the Department taken up her residence on the station and persistently refuses to leave."

PARKER'S WIFE.

BY HARD COURTLAND.

The place is a summer resort in the South. The time eleven in the morning. The sun is warm, but a soft breeze whispers from the mountains, and kisses the thin purple quiver.

Under a widespread water oak is stretched a hammock in which reclines a woman. She is beautiful, in alabaster, her only color tints red lips and tawny hair.

Presently she gives utterance to a yawn; one hand, in which she loosely holds a book, falls negligently over the hammock.

Lil Parker—that is her name—throws first one ivory arm over her head then the other. As the tiny twins clasp she says,—

"Oh, dear!"

A man sitting somewhat concealed by clumps of flowering laurel, starts at the murmurous sigh. For the last three hours he has seemingly been occupied with a book, but in reality stealthily regarding the golden tressed Titania under the spreading tree. He is swarthy, handsome, well-endowed with physical attributes. There is love and passion in his glowing eyes, for Prince Parker has a volcanic nature. He is the recognized proprietor of the "tinted Venus" in the hammock.

Lil half rises and looks around. There toward the house, the long piazza at which is filled with summer guests. She generally has a coterie surrounding her immediate throne, wherever it may be, and at this moment is perplexed at the defection. For Lil Parker is a married belle since months ago, and her husband is astounded at the fallen volume. Lil takes a look backward; then a start and quick blush as she subsides on her air pillow, while the flush drifts even to her pearly neck.

Thirty minutes elapse. Then Prince Parker emerges from the crimson bower, his black eyes glowing like midnight stars.

"You wanted your book," he says rudely. "Why didn't you ask me to restore it?"

His tones are smothered fire.

"I didn't," falters Lil.

"Don't say you didn't know I was here, because you did!"

How cutting his voice.

"I saw you, certainly," answers Lil. "I didn't dare to disturb you was what I intended to say."

"Wives are not generally so considerate of their husbands."

"Prince, are you my husband, really?"

Lil's childlike way has scored her many a point with men.

"The law gives me that title, I believe."

He stands with arms folded over his broad chest, as it to keep down the raging fires.

"Ah! I had forgotten!"

Her voice, silvery and careless, drives him to exasperation.

"Do you want to know the reason?" he asks scornfully, "why no one was here to pick up your dropped trifles? Because I—your husband—was keeping guard, and those cold-blooded, shallow men will think twice before they thrust their attention on a wife in her husband's presence, even if he is only in law. Yes, I have kept them from you—two, three hours," mockingly. "They are awaiting you, your admirers, up there; and you will whirl the night away in their arms. God! Why did I bind my life to yours? Cold? Arctic poles are warm, Lil, beside yours in love!"

He speaks in suffocated gasps.

"I echo 'Why?'" She is stung at last. "Let us sever these unhallowed bonds, cemented by wounded pride, which have grown hateful to us both."

Her eyes, wide and strained, gaze into his.

"Never them?" he shouts. "As the Lord hears me, no! Do you covet the publicity? I don't doubt it would suit your plans admirably, but never mine.

This is the prologue.

Prince Parker had married Lillie Blake under very peculiar circumstances. Lil was the betrothed of Chester Reynolds. Prince was the affianced of his cousin, Mattie Wey-man. Blood, not of true love went decidedly wrong, and Reynolds and Mattie found that to be separated would be eternal misery. One night at a ball they solved the problem—in other words, ignominiously fled.

Two hours later a note was handed Prince. In the dainty, perfumed travesty Mattie implored him not to be angry. She was a weakling intellectually, and awfully afraid of Prince. Would he please not shoot Chester, and reconcile matters with papa, et cetera. As Prince read the satire upon womanly faith a sardonic smile distorted his handsome mouth. Ten minutes' reflection, then he crossed the ball room—it was thinning for the hour was late—to Miss Blake's side. He knew her only by reputation; indeed, this was the first time he had even seen her face.

"Miss Blake," he whispered in an odd, suppressed voice, "excuse the liberty, but circumstances are imperative. Will you spare me a few minutes?"

Lil stared in surprise. He thought, "The fellow's a fool to leave such sweet eyes."

She quietly slipped her hand in Prince's arm. "How strange!" she thought. "What can he want?"

Under the star bright skies, away from the lingering scent of the ball-room's crushed roses, by the flicker of an expiring Chinese lantern, he silently handed her Mattie's note.

He anticipated a scene. He did not know Lil! She might endure the scandal, but she would never betray herself. And he admired her for it.

"I hope, Miss Blake, you will not be offended at a request I am about to make. You will be startled, I know. My pride is humiliated. You also are proud. Will you marry me? Now? See, the day is breaking. No one can swear who took the initiative in 'Change partners!' if we are silent. It is merely an arrangement. I claim nothing from you save to wear my name."

As yet Lil had not spoken. At last, as if the words were impelled, she said wearily,—

"I agree."

But her words had the ring of a shattered icicle.

As he almost lifted her to the carriage, he stopped, for the chill of her hand startled him.

"Are you sure you will not regret?" he asked tardily.

"Quite sure. And you?"

"I am sure."

That was the "Wooing O't."

Six months passed, and Prince had learned to love with all the passion of his nature this cold, beautiful statue who had bound herself to him in a pique.

When he compared her to others and saw how she eclipsed them all, his heart was filled with wild longing, the lava tide would sweep through his veins like fire if by chance his hand fell on hers. They had been strangers—save to the world—when their fateful marriage. Prince fairly cursed the men in whose arms Lil circled night after night. For she knew she was beautiful, was conscious of her power, and with the knowledge that she was safe, indulged as did others, in fashionable follies. Safe? Yes. For to Lil Parker these men were as moths that flutter for a night and die.

She rejoiced to meet Chester Reynolds this summer; was glad that of his old dream not one spark remained.

* * * *

"Aunt Chloe, I'm so weary!"

"Spec you is, honey; you bin in de sun too much."

And old Aunt Chloe woman brushes away at the golden fleece, that, as Lil sits down, trails on the floor. She is dressing for dinner; her arms and neck, softened by webby lace, gleam whitely through the vail.

In confusion Lil reaches for a shawl.

"You needn't." He laughs meaningly. "You will be in no fuller dress to-night when you whirl in the arms of the Philistine."

She draws a chair noisily to the window.

"An apology is due for my intrusion, but it is necessary that I should be seen occasionally in my wife's apartment. Watering-place gossip is scathing."

He worries his mustache as he regards her, with disheveled tresses, beautiful as the fairest picture, the dainty finish billowing even to the pearly ears.

* * * *

He has passed the window again and again. The ball with its kaleidoscopic whirl is at its height. In vain has he looked for the perfect face that makes his heaven. Lil is not among the waltzers, neither is she on the promenade, balconies, etc. God! where is she! The woman who is eating out his life? An hour. No Lil! Now raging, tortured, he enters her room. It is empty, and has a deserted look. Two notes are conspicuous in a photograph holder. The first, in Lil's dainty, perfumed ink, he seizes and reads:—

"Prince, there is only one course open to you and me. We must part. We are wearing each other away. I am safe from harm. Chloe goes with me. You will not care. If you care back your freedom. "Lil."

"O my God!" he groans. "Where?"

His face is furrowed, as if tempests of grief have swept it these last minutes.

The other note, folded in a fantastic, crumbled bow, was written in crooked, misspelled capitals—Chloe's company hand—reads thus:—

"Fur de lub ob de Ark angels, Mass Prince, git an engine an pursue. Miss Lil's a-runnin' off. Do nuthin but cry an cry. We's gwine home fur one day; after dat we's boun' fur de lan ob Canaan or he debbil. She mak me swar not to tell; an I only jes writ it.

"Chloe Sweetwines."

With an oath he thrusts in his pocket a tiny, deadly toy. Yes; if he cannot find Lil by evening, he'll have her dead. No other man shall drain the sweetness of those lips.

* * * *

Softly with a night key he enters his house. Straight to Lil's room he strides. Chloe comes over him as he enters the door.

On her knees before an old cabinet, sobbing as if her heart would break, is Lil, in her hand a locket hugged tightly to her breast. Prince softly closes the door. With a peculiar smile on face he kneels behind her. She will have the intoxication of her lips before they face eternity—and draws her to him savagely.

"This is done. Other men clasp you in their arms while I—by the Lord, I say it's done! Lil, Lil, why have you treated me so? Whose face is it you steal away to mourn over? Tell me. I will know. He cannot love you as I do, my matchless darling. Do not be startled! He is safe—from me. I go on my last journey to-night. See!" He lays down the jewelled toy. "I thought to take you with me, but I can't, Lil, for I love you so. You shall be happy; I swear it."

"Love me!" she falters. "I thought you hated me, Prince!"

"Hated you? Lil!"

His swarthy face almost touches hers.

"What do you mean? Quick! I am mad, I think!"

"You must have guessed that—that—"

Her crimson face tries to find shelter on his heart, as he draws the locket from its warm resting place. With wild heart beats he gazes at his Prince Parker's—handsome, strength-ful face, glowing at him from the soft-hued ivory.

With an ecstatic cry of "Lil—oh, Lil!" he kisses her soft, flower face with a half-starved greed.

"Prince," Lil whispers shyly, "I have loved you almost since—well, quite a while, any way. I don't think I ever really loved Chester."

Will the love loose her from his clasping arms?

It is hours after. Without the moon weaves silver arabesques across the trees; a mocking-bird trills his seductive song among the myrtles. Within is echoed the same love song whose notes, first set to music in the far off garden never to go out of fashion, but will still be new, even at the end of time.

HOW WORRY AFFECTS THE BRAIN.

Philosophical Reasons Given Wherein It Is Injurious.

Modern science has brought to light nothing more curiously interesting than the fact that worry will kill. More remarkable still, it has been able to determine, from recent discoveries, just how worry does kill.

It is believed by many scientists who have followed most carefully the growth of the science of brain diseases that scores of the deaths set down to other causes are due to worry, and that alone. The theory is as simple one—so simple that any one can readily understand it. Briefly put, it amounts to this: Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain, and the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some diseases of these organs, or a combination of them, arises, death finally ensues.

Thus does worry kill. Insidiously, like many another disease, it creeps upon the brain in the form of an idea, constant, never lost idea, and, as the dropping of water over a period of years will wear a groove in a stone, so does worry gradually, imperceptibly, but no less surely, destroy the brain cells that lead all the rest—that lead to speech, the commanding officers of mental power, health and motion.

Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant of certain points, which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or irregularly. Constant worry, the commanding of the brain can cope with, but the iteration and reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against. It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain tightly with a hammer every few seconds, with mechanical precision, with never a sign of let-up or the failure of a stroke.

Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike and fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, and week by week diminishing the vitality of these delicate organisms that are so minute that they can only be seen under the microscope. —Pharmaceutical Products.

Speaker Crisp and Old Tom.

The following story is told of the late Speaker Crisp, of Georgia: It was election day, and the Republicans had put up a strong fight. Prominent in their ranks was an old darky, Tom. All day long he hovered around the polls and in an impromptu procession carried a transparency. In the evening Mr. Crisp was standing in front of his hotel, when old Tom sidled bashfully up and requested the present of a dollar. "Why, Tom," said Crisp, "you have the audacity to come here and ask me for a dollar after working hard against me all day?" "Well, but Massa Chawles, I'se known you eber since you was so high, and I suttinly do need a dollah bad." "Tom," said Crisp, looking sternly at him, "didn't you cast your vote against me to-day?" Tom looked cast down for a moment. "Das so, das so, Massa Crisp," but brightening up with an inspiration, "you know it gwine to count foh you, anyhow. Please gimme dat dollah, Massa Chawles."

A Barefooted Bridesmaid.

At a very fashionable wedding in London lately one of the child bridesmaids was barefooted, though robed in silk. Children in Paris feet are often seen in summer in wealthy English and Scotch families. Gloves also for childish hands are omitted except in winter. On this point the Pall Mall Gazette recalls the comment of a West Indian negro soldier when he put on full regimentals for the first time: "Barracks for de feet bad nuff; barracks for de hands too bad—too bad!"

HER CLUB.

"It is so long, dear, since I saw you—
We have so much to discuss and talk
And as for our clubs and receptions,
Why, we never see one at all.
You used to delight in the opera,
At a dance to the gayest one there,
And trampled your masculine heart-strings—
A queen in our vanity fair.

"But now, like some sun in her cloister,
The paths of our world know you not.
And the flowers and fashions that bloom to
You doubtless long since have forgot.
Not so? Ah, then, Dora, do tell me
What made you drop out of our set,
And own that you think of past pleasures
With something akin to regret."

A sheer ringing laugh was the answer,
"And do you really know
Why I've given up balls and parties
And other attractions foreign?
Why, I have given up flirting and dancing
And the other joys of our sex;
Cannot even be called a 'new woman,'
With our fashionable circles."

"Yis a home club, where love is the umpire.
Equal suffrage" the motto set in the arch.
And the members—my boys and their father.
And I'll tell you—but whisper it low—
That this club includes our entire existence
Is the one that includes our men too.
Do I vote? No Jack does that for me.

THE RUBY HEART.

Aunt Jessica had been round the world more than once. She had been what is vulgarly called a "globe-trotter." In her day she had collected many rare and curious and beautiful things; but now she was an old woman, and her time was come to die in the great, silent house, filled with the furniture that had belonged to Aunt Jessica's father, who had died years ago, and enriched by the spoils of many lands, brought home by the energetic hands of Aunt Jessica herself.

There was one treasure above all that I coveted, and that I would have asked my aunt to have had for my own—my Cousin Edith.

As for the money, well, I am not more disinterested than most people; but I would rather have had Edith without a penny than all Aunt Jessica's money without Edith.

William and Bertram and I were sitting in the dining room. Edith was above, helping poor aunt in the hard work of dying. Three raps came on the floor. We knew they were a signal that we were to go up, and that aunt had asked for us; and up we went.

"I have left everything divided among you all," she said, "and the ruby heart is togo to whichever of you three boys can find it." She spoke slowly and with difficulty.

I remembered the jolly old days when she used to come to see us at school and tip us, and I wished that death had dimmed the eyes that saw the brain can cope with, but the iteration and rpiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against. It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain tightly with a hammer every few seconds, with mechanical precision, with never a sign of let-up or the failure of a stroke.

Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike and fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, and week by week diminishing the vitality of these delicate organisms that are so minute that they can only be seen under the microscope. —Pharmaceutical Products.

"I am content with what you have!" she asked.

"I am content with what I have," I answered and my other arm went round her.

They never found that ruby heart, though the poor old house was tapped and tested from top to bottom. At last, wearied out, they took the portion of goods that fell unto them and went, fortunately for us, into a far country. And Edith and I were married.

We didn't go on a wedding tour, but came straight back to the dear old house.

On the evening of our wedding day we walked in the moonlight through the rose garden to listen to the nightingales. I stopped to hold her in my arms on the very spot where I had first kissed her, and the light shawl she wore round her head and shoulders fell back.

"What's that you have round your neck?" I said, for something darkened amid the white laces on her breast.

She did not answer. I put up my hand, touched with a thrill the whiteness of her neck, and found in my fingers the ruby heart!

"Then she gave it to you," I said; "it is yours?"

"She gave it into my keeping," answered Edith, dropping her chin till her lips rested on my hand, "but she left it to the man who should find it."

Prohibition Fowl This Parrot.

Chicago has the record-breaking freak parrot of the century.

She is an elderly bird of severely self-contained habit of speech and awe-inspiring staidness of manner.

But that is not her chief peculiarity. She is unalterably opposed to the pernicious habit of drinking.

Not only do wines and spirituous liquors fall under the awful ban of her disapproval, but water itself she has remarked.

For fifty years has this strong-minded bird lived in strict accordance with her total abstinence principles.

She even goes so far as to deliver monologues on the subject of temperance.—New York Journal.

The only windows in Korean houses are places of glass about the size of a nickel.

"So shall I," said William.

So Edith and I went to the ruins alone together.

"I hope it does not seem like disrespect to poor aunt's memory," she said, as we drove snugly back in the logcart that evening, "our going out like this. But I couldn't bear to stay in the old house where she was so kind to me. It's better to go out, and I'm sure she would have wished it."

I felt that it was foolish of me not to make an effort to find the ruby heart. The next morning I got up very early and came down before the servants were called. I had pulled out half the drawers of the Chinese cabinet and looked into them, when my heart leaped into my mouth at the touch of a hand on my shoulder—Edith's!

"Still after that wretched ruby?" she said. "How you waste your time!"

"Why? Don't you think I shall find it?"

"I don't know," she said, looking at me with her eyes wide open; "but I don't think you will be there, because Bertram has been through that three times already. Did you ever eat strawberries before breakfast and gather them yourself?"

So we went into the kitchen garden and ate strawberries till the gong rang for breakfast. Bertram and William were feeling quite sulky and savage from the non-success of their search, and the little time I had devoted to it annoyed them.

"I believe," said Bertram, with an air of gayety, a little over done, "that William thinks he knows where the heart is, and that he can put his hand on it at any moment."

"I wish I could," I said.

"So do I," said Edith, almost in the same breath.

"You wish Wilfrid to find the heart!" said William. "Why?"

"Oh, no, I don't mean Wilfrid; I meant—at least——Well, we shall all be glad when it's settled one day or the other, shan't we?"

I had never told Edith I loved her, because I didn't know how my aunt intended to leave her money, and if Edith were to be the heiress of the whole—but any one will understand my reasons.

It was a week after aunt's funeral that I went into the rose garden where Edith was snipping roses into a basket.

"I've been looking for the heart again," I said, "but I haven't found it."

"No," she answered, "and I don't suppose you will. Would a Gloire de Dijon be any compensation?"

She began to stick one in my coat as she spoke. Her slender waist, in its black gown, was very near my left arm where she stood.

"I will take that bud," I said, "but not as compensation for the heart."

"Don't you think," she asked me, "that it might be possible to live happily without a charm to help you?"

"No," I said, "not without a charm to help you. But ruby hearts are not the charms in the world."

My arm fell on her waist.

"Let them find their ruby hearts! Let them chop it in pieces and divide it between them and sell the bits," said I.

What will the bells of the New Year ring us?
What will the days of the New Year bring us?
Sorrows and sighs,
And weeping eyes,
Gardens of blooms and brighter skies?
A rose o'er the grave where a dead rose lies—
What will the New Year bring us?

What will the bells of the New Year ring us?
What will the voice of the New Year sing us?
Songs to cheer
The hearts that bear—
Garlands over the thorns we wear;
And Love, to blue away each tear—
These will the New Year bring us.

"TO YOUR HEALTH."

How the Term Wassail Bowl First Came to Be Used.

The word wassail comes from "wass hail," "to your health." It occurs in the oldest of carols that have been made known to us, and Spenser, Jonson and Shakespeare refer frequently to it. Lady Macbeth, in planning the murder of "gracious Duncan," refers to it and Hamlet, awaiting on the platform the advent of the ghost, and hearing the flourish of trumpets and ordinance shot off, refers to it to Horiatio:

"The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse,
Keeps wassail, and the swaggering upspring reels;
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus brayed out
The trumpet of his pledge."

Innocent, Horatio asks him if it be a custom, and Hamlet replies that it is, but one "more honored in the breach than in the observance."

In a collection of ordinances for the regulation of the royal household in the reign of Edward VI. on Twelfth Night the steward was enjoined, when entering with the spiced and smoking bowl to cry "Wassail!" three times, to which the royal chaplain had to respond with an appropriate song—whether he was in voice or not.

The beverage that was in such demand was called "lamb's wool," and was carefully concocted of ale or wine, sugar, nutmeg, toast, and roasted crabs or apples.

While the wealthier classes were pouring down their copious libations at the shrine of Bacchus, the poor people went from house to house with wassail-bowls adorned with ribbons and singing carols calculated to beguile every householder's heart of a Mince into giving. If, however, the combined efforts of song and wine failed to elicit a sufficient pecuniary recognition the carol speedily terminated in most malignant and maledictory anathemas.

The wassailing at New-Year's was kept up in monasteries as well as private houses.

The mighty bowl, called "Poculum Caritatis," was placed at the upper end of the refectory table at the front of the abbey, and from it the superior drank to all, and all drank in succession to each other.

A custom much like this is still kept up in the corporation feasts of London. A double handled flagon, full of sweetened and spiced wine, is handed to the guests as they are standing, by the general health as announced by the toast-master; then passes it to his neighbor on the left, who drinks, standing, and so on until all have drunk. This is the popular ceremony of the "loving-cup."

The custom of drinking wassail in Scotland prevailed even into the early part of the nineteenth century. As the clock struck the knell of the departing year, it was accompanied by a cordial shaking of hands, and a decorous dance around the table.

The elders of the family would then sally forth, bearing the hot bowl and a generous supply of buns and shortcake or bread and cheese, to interchange cordial greetings with their neighbors. So general was the custom that in Edinburgh the principal streets were more densely thronged between the hours of 12 and 1 a. m. than at mid-day.

In Devonshire, England, and other cider countries the custom long prevailed of farmers marching in the evening to their orchards, accompanied by all the farm servants bearing large pitchers or milk pails filled with "cyder," and wassail apples blazing therein. They encircled some of the best bearing fruit trees, and drank the toast three times. The dregs were then thrown upon the tree, with the idea that a fruitful year would be the result.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Need of Safety Valves.

A high pressure life calls for protective measures, and the woman who engages mind and heart in her purpose, even though she may not be classed among public workers, instinctively seeks her safety valves. These are peculiar to her individuality, and suit, as she imagines, her needs; but sometimes they are not altogether chosen wisely, and are often overused. The intense nature with the greatest feed of letting off steam is the one who will make the mistake in this direction. Action and reaction will be equal with her. The home of such a woman is often a place where tragedy is frequently enacted. Her nervous system, wrought up to a point bordering upon frenzy, her mental and physical energies following its lead, there comes a moment when the strain must be relieved or it will snap. This will give way under the great weight.

It is not an easy thing to acquire the habit of withholding the worst from the dearest friend and showing him only the best, but is possible when the heart is right and the mind is under the control of strength. One brave, gentle woman, full of the fire that would have sorely consumed her but for her wise use of safety valves, confided to a friend her experience in regard to the repression of mind and spirit without giving discomfort to those whom she loved. Her piano became her abiding friend whenever she felt the need of letting loose the pent-up feelings of a highly strung condition. She played off her feelings and gradually found herself calmed and rested. And there were times when a favorite poet offered herself as guide into the realm of restfulness. Her books were her friends, as to the heights where she found repose. The woman with mental resources and with wise discrimination will learn to choose her safety valves with reference to the comfort and peace of the home, and will not find a gain in self-respect and in strength of will.—M. E. Baldwin, in Home Life.

A Chemical Reason for Nursery.

The nursery ought to be the freshest and most cheerful room in the house, says a writer in Woman's Home Companion, with ample receptacles for toys, some attractive pictures and a pleasant outlook from the windows. Sunlight and fresh air are what nature gives great endowment, and it is easily managed. I prefer a tightly drawn, well-tacked-down tapestry carpet upon the floor. It can be taken up and shook-cleaned in a few minutes, and properly used for battening the ills to children are always tripping over rugs and hunting themselves. For the reason that sharp angles furnish dangerous points to fall against, tables and chairs should have rounding edges. The first consideration is always safety and comfort, after that, prettiness. Clear space for running about is most essential, for there are many fall and winter days when outdoor exercise is out of question. Even on these days it is well to put on the little one's bonnet and coat, open the windows for half an hour, and invite him to a brisk game that requires plenty of running and jumping. Provide a low table and chair, where he can sit at ease with his toys, imagining himself lord of a little realm. This conceit is one that children delight in, and it is a very harmless delusion—not altogether without opportunities for wholesome lessons in the way of hospitality and kindness to others.

Nervous Children.

A word about nervous children. Never scold them nor "make fun" of them. They suffer enough without their thrusts from you. Pretend not to see their awkwardness when in company, nor their grimaces when alone. A case was reported the other day of a boy of ten years who, on being asked, and often without any apparent provocation, would distort his hands and make the most frightful contortions of the muscles of his face and head until his poor mother feared he was idiotic. By no means. He was at the head of his class at school, but was of a highly nervous temperament, and had not been taught to control the little wires, so to speak, on which he was strung. This is no single case. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves in similar fashion. Talk to them about these curious little fellows that should be their servants, not their masters. Never whip them. The man or woman who whips a nervous child is one who loves little wrecks that have no reason. Encourage them. Help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at whatever they undertake. Brace up your own nerves and be less indulgent toward the capers of your over nervous children.—New York Ledger.

How Pens Are Made.

Pens are made by machines which seem almost to think. The steel is cast into long strips, wide as the length of one pen, and these are fed to machines which cut out the blanks, then fashion, stamp them, split the points, and place the maker's name on the backs.

Mr. Kinsman and the Trolley.

Now that the Common Council has finally passed the ordinance granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend its tracks to the eastern limits of the city, we desire to say a word of commendation for Frank E. Kinsman and his attitude throughout the agitation of the trolley matter. In his argument for a short term franchise we believe that Mr. Kinsman took a stand that represented the sentiment of the majority of the people of Plainfield, but the slight support that he received at the hands of those who agreed with him made his efforts unavailing.

It requires considerable courage and a large amount of perseverance to do what Mr. Kinsman has done in this trolley agitation.

At every move he was up against strong odds. The members of the Council, judging by their studied action from the beginning to the end, were determined to grant a franchise on the terms that were secretly fixed up between themselves and the promoters of the street railway. Of course, as the law requires, they held public hearings, but it was well understood on all sides that the Councilmen were resolute in their intentions to grant the franchise on the terms agreed upon before the people had had a chance to have their say as to the stipulations. In fact, many of the Councilmen openly stated their intention of voting for the ordinance irrespective of what the people thought after the latter had become acquainted with its provisions. And had it not been for the hasty and dramatic action of one Biker when the previous ordinance was under consideration, there is every reason to believe that the Council would have passed that regardless of the demonstration that was made against it by the taxpayers of the city the night of the big hearing.

In the face of this feeling among the Councilmen, and without effective support from those who agreed with him in his contentions, Mr. Kinsman laid himself open to being put in a humiliating position every time he appeared before the Council. Some of the members were inclined to be supercilious and patronizing towards him, and endeavored as frequently as possible to give him a hint without a kick that he had better hold his tongue for all the good that it would do. It certainly is not pleasant to attend a public hearing, conceived in the eyes of the law as eminently fair, and then realize that it is practically a farce in so-far as accomplishing what it is intended for—the guidance of public officials along the lines the majority desire. Mr. Kinsman has displayed exceptional and admirable civic interest in his conduct, and if there had been more of those who were less faint-hearted in their opposition to what they thought was wrong we have no doubt but that Plainfield would secure a better franchise than it is to possess.

In conclusion, however, it is gratifying to know that some of the best points of this new ordinance are those that were suggested since the agitation against the previous ordinance was started—demonstrating the fallicious claims of the railway promoters at the start that they had agreed to in the old ordinance all that they could or would do.

Evidently Sheriff Littersi, of Middlesex county, doesn't know all that is to be known about jails yet, and the latest methods of managing the getting in and getting out part of them. It is with pleasure, therefore, that we are able to offer for his consideration the experience of an Arkansas Sheriff. It seems that four prisoners broke out of the county jail at Eureka Springs, the other day, to attend a dance given by some of their friends. The jailer spent the night in a fruitless search for his missing charges, and upon returning to the prison at daybreak, found them waiting to get in. He was disgusted when they asked him if breakfast was ready, and told them that "after the way they had acted they could stay out." Then the jailer went inside and locked the door, whereupon the prisoners forced their way into the jail and returned to their cells.

Mayor's Message.

Councilman Barrows advances the opinion that the custom, which, however, is described by law and must be so, of the incoming Mayor at the beginning of a new municipal administration communicating with the Common Council and aiming to outline a plan of action for their consideration, is not in the line of practicability that the true condition of affairs suggests.

In communicating by annual message with the Common Council the Mayor is presumed to have an intimate acquaintance with city affairs and capable of recommending action to the Common Council to take to improve the general welfare of the town. It is obvious that upon assuming office a Mayor must know but very little of the general conditions of city government.

Whatever he says in his first message must needs be of little practical use to the solons owing to the lack of firm and definite information on the part of the executive to base his sentiments on. It is thus that the first messages of Mayors are usually but perfunctory papers and of little value to the Common Council.

On the other hand, at the end of his term the Mayor has had three years of solid experience with city affairs and is without doubt more capable of recommending in a practical and sensible light than at any time during his career as the executive head of the town. He is able to dwell in detail on matters that need attention from the Council and to make his opinions and suggestions of value. It is at this more than any other, that he should communicate with the incoming Council to prepare and instruct them in public business.

Of course, there are times when there is a Mayor who assumes office for the purpose of making radical changes in the policy of municipal government and has peculiar and personal ideas of what should be accomplished during his administration. To deprive him of the opportunity of communicating those ideas to the Council would be wrong. In view of this it would seem proper that at the expiration of a Mayor's term both the incoming and the outgoing Mayors should send messages to the Council—the former briefly to cover any personal opinions he may have, and the latter in detail to acquaint the Councilmen with the exact condition of city affairs and his views of what should be done.

Mr. Fisk's Public Service.

After seven years of service to the city—two terms in the Common Council and one term in the Mayor's chair—Charles J. Fisk retired to private life Monday noon. Mr. Fisk has been one of the most influential and conspicuous public officials Plainfield has ever possessed. Independent in political matters, he was the result of personal attention and work to city affairs that has aided materially in bringing Plainfield up in the front rank of New Jersey cities.

His service in the Council was one of activity and interest in advancing the city to a proud position among the municipalities of the State. In the two terms he was a Councilman he served on several committees, but it was as chairman of the finance committee during his second term that he accomplished excellent work. Mr. Fisk's intimate knowledge of financial matters qualified him particularly for the work that devolved upon that committee, and as its chairman he succeeded, in putting the city's bookkeeping in model shape. But other than this work, he was also alert in every other public matter.

During his public service some of Plainfield's most important public institutions have been established—notably the street railway and the sewer system. It was largely through his efforts that the present street railway facilities exist in this city. In securing an adequate sewer system one of the greatest drawbacks to its success was the financial end. By Mr. Fisk's thorough personal work this disadvantage was overcome speedily and to the best interests of the people.

Of course, during his term as Mayor Mr. Fisk's acts have been simply executive, but his advice and experience has been of great value to all branches of the city government.

"They threaten to bar from Congress a member-elect from Utah who is alleged to have four wives," says the Hawaiian Gazette. Give Roberts a show, at least. He is having trouble enough with his three better halves, but if he has four by the time the news reaches Hawaii what the number will be by the time it reaches Hong Kong is mere conjecture. Probably it will push the Sultan of Turkey very close for first honors.

An Arkansas editor who read that a lady in New York "kneads bread with her gloves on," remarks: "We need bread with our pants on; we need bread with our boots on, and if our subscribers who are in arrears don't soon pay up we shall need bread without anything on."

Well, may it be a Happy Three Years to Mayor Rockfellow.

Want Better Local Government.

Following after Elizabeth, Plainfield and Railway, Summit and Westfield are the next towns in point of population and importance in Union county. But strange as it seems both of these communities are still under township government. Though from a commercial and social standpoint both places are up and doing always, they cling to the unprogressive form of local government with a devotion that is truly startling in the light of how much more satisfactory a borough government is to communities of their size and situation.

It is true, however, that some Westfield people have earnestly agitated the creation of a borough for that place, but some of the voters whose sight only extends in the direction of their pocketbooks have thus far prevented the formation of a municipality with laws and methods more convenient and auspicious to the town.

Summit seems to be tiring of the backwoods township ways, too, and last week an enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of that place was held to discuss the question of providing themselves with a better system of local government than the township plan affords. Summit has gone at the subject with an energy that augers well for a change in the not distant future.

Mr. Martin's Fine Example.

Our journalistic friend, James Martin, of the New York Tribune, who is one of the members of the State Board of Arbitration that didn't arbitrate during the last year, has taken a commendable stand in reference to the position. In aiming to arrive at some plan whereby the work of the Board in settling labor disputes can be of some practical value, Mr. Martin has agreed to resign his position to make a place for a representative of the labor unions. The trouble with the Board in the past seems to have been its failure to engage the serious attention of disputing employers and employes. With a representative laboring man as one of its members it is thought that it will be brought into closer touch with at least one class of people whom it is intended to aid.

Mr. Martin has acted sensibly and practically in his attitude by conferring directly with the recognized principal trades union organization in the State. Even if his offer of resignation is not accepted with a view of providing a remedy for the present condition of affairs surrounding the State arbitrators, Mr. Martin's position will show that he has acted in the right spirit.

Obviously it would be to his personal interest to retain his position as a member of the Board at a good salary, but his willingness to subserve his own opportunity of gain for the public interest is an example that is too often absent in the makeup of public officials, and which is very creditable to Mr. Martin.

The officials of South Orange have reached the point in their dealings with trolley companies where patience has ceased to be a virtue, and they have decided to try something else in the effort to get decent service on the street railways. The North Jersey Traction Company controls valuable public rights in South Orange, but the way they operate their road is very aggravating to the people from whom they secured those concessions. At the meeting of the Township Committee last night an ordinance revoking the franchise to operate a trolley line on Springfield avenue was progressed to second reading and will be passed in a few days. The thoroughfare is known as the Irvington-Millburn bicycle course. The Township officials have also determined to discipline the trolley company in other directions unless they cease violating their agreements with the township.

Mr. Voorhees' aversion to having a spectacular display at his inauguration as Governor is commendable. In those days of hifalutin' things, when many persons fly to the clouds at the slightest opportunity, a little Jacksonian simplicity at an affair like a Gubernatorial inauguration is relished by the plain people.

The New York World points with shame to the fact that half the school teachers of that great and gorgeous metropolis gets a smaller compensation per diem than the street sweepers are regularly paid by law. The street cleaners are able to vote, however.

The Trenton Times, alone of all the capital city papers, has taken up the fight against the formation of trusts in New Jersey, and especially the pottery combination, which directly affects Trenton. More power to the Times' hot shot in this direction.

Richard Croker has gone into the insurance business in New York. Now if he can induce Tom Platt to take out a policy protecting him from being thrown down by Col. Roosevelt, the Tammany Boss will have made a masterstroke at the very start.

The Mayor's Message.

In his first message sent to the Council Tuesday, Mayor Rockfellow exhibits a comprehensive view of city affairs in a general way and well defined opinions on some very important municipal subjects.

His expression of aversion to the city floating any more bonds not imperatively required for its general welfare is in line with the general ideas of economy which the people have become imbued with since the tax rate has reached its present figure.

In suggesting that municipal ownership of the water works system is the proper thing, Mr. Rockfellow is expounding gospel that his predecessor took a hand in propounding in his last message a year ago, and which certainly strikes a responsive chord in the minds of the people when they realize the profit that is accruing to the present exclusive right of furnishing water to both the city and its residents. It is considerable of a problem to bring about municipal ownership of such an institution, but as there are three years for agitating and studying the subject it is proper that as often as possible the subject should be brought to the attention of the people in an official way.

Mayor Rockfellow indulges in many other observations on the public business which he will have to deal with as the chief executive of the city, and which indicates that he will watch city affairs with a close and discerning eye.

Congressman Pitney, who is also a Senator-elect in this State, was in Washington yesterday and said that he would send his resignation as a National legislator to the Governor in a few days. Some of Mr. Pitney's close friends have expressed a wish that he might retain his position in both Houses till his term as Congressman expired, dividing his time between Trenton and Washington. Mr. Pitney declines to do any such thing, however, as he says he cannot discharge the duties of both offices. He thinks he can best be spared from the legislative body having the largest number of members, and consequently he will bid adieu to Congress. Mr. Pitney would probably rather be a big man in a little body than a little man in a big body of lawmakers.

A writer in the Newark News says that the close of the year shows a decided falling off in the number of trolley casualties as compared with the previous twelve months. That speaks well for the agility of the people. Who can tell but that the trolley juggernaut may, in the course of a few hundred years, become so harmless that people will jump in its way just to see how near it can come without hitting them. That view, of course, does not take in Brooklyn, for there lots of persons are trying the trick now and have been for some little time. It is not reported, however, that Brooklyn people have yet become adepts at the practice.

Col. Dickinson, of Jersey City, says that he will retire as Republican leader of Hudson county. The astonishing part of this information is to know that there are any Republicans in Hudson county to retire. We thought that the only political party in Hudson county was the Bob Davises.

In making up the Councilmanic committees for the year President Andrews has exhibited careful judgment in apportioning the various solons to localities where their natural qualifications as private business men will come into good play in handling the affairs of the public.

Summit is glorying over $1.75 gas. But like Plainfielders, who pay about $1.00, Summit people are getting down to a fair gas rate by piecemeal. Sometime in the distant future we are hopeful that dollar gas, and even less, will be here, but it seems a long ways off.

Assuredly there can be no politics in the Common Council of 1899 when there is complete unanimity in the selection of the president. The minority failed even to take advantage of its prerogative and name a candidate for the honor there is in it.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The national debt of France is the largest in the world—upward of $6,000,000,000, about $116 per capita. This debt has not been reduced recently.

A Holyoke teacher who has been studying manual training in Sweden at a point where the cars run only twice a week, says the Boston Transcript, recently received a letter from home in a flag envelope, which the authorities thought to be a communication from the United States government, on account of the flag. Immediately a special train was made up and took the letter forty miles for the benefit of the recipient. This looks as though we enjoyed Sweden's good will.

Boiled water is a leading topic of interest in Chicago, and the Health Commissioner says the boiling, to be effective, must continue half an hour. After the water has cooled and the sediment settled it is poured off and bottled. Having completed the bottling, the citizen feels at liberty to take an antidote for breathing the vapor of the Chicago river.

Let us spell it Richport. Neither Puerto Rico nor Porto Rico is English, but Spanish and Portuguese. Since the island now belongs to the United States, the sensible thing to do is to translate its name. That process preserves the historical designation and affirms the dominance of the English speaking United States. The Government departments will then be rid of their differences as to the official designation of our Antille.

Of these 250,000 troops called into service for the war with Spain, only 87,000 were utilized; but the War Department estimates that it will take rather more than that number to hold the territory wrestled from Spain, and maintain a proper garrison force in Hawaii. Its estimate for service is 90,000 men. It is very evident that the United States army is going to be a much more prominent factor in the public affairs of this country hereafter than it ever has been heretofore.

Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain has been discussing in Scribner's the recent developments of policy in the United States. The British Colonial Secretary believes that the two greatest nations in the world are Great Britain and our own country. He sees no reason why they should not officially admit their mutual dependence on one another. He thinks he distinguishes less of the tendency that has recently dominated the American press to caricature the peculiarities of Englishmen and to freely depict their faults.

The newly discovered peak in Alaska, which is said to be taller than Mount St. Elias, is away over on the American side of the boundary line, and is thus indisputably ours. It will be somewhat rough on Elias to lose his long-reputed pre-eminence, but as the great landmark of the international boundary line he may get some consolation.

Admiral Dewey refused an offer of $5,000 for a magazine article. Spain would have paid more than that if the Admiral had kept his magazine articles locked up in Manila Bay.

The Princeton undergraduates have acted for the good name of the university in adopting resolutions against hazing. That is a practice unworthy of the years and dignity of even a college sophomore. When a boy matriculates he should begin to be a man. But the insistence upon "time-honored customs of the university," when those customs are absurd and without warrant in good taste or morals, will win scant sympathy from the outside world. The regulation of the conduct and bearing of the freshmen should be left to common sense and not made to conform to tradition decreed by dead men. We dare say that in good time this little problem will work itself out in that way.

This is an era of women's clubs, of all sorts and descriptions, from the frankly frivolous to the ambitious associations that wrestle with problems of State or delve deep into the arcana of science. It is the easiest thing in the world to make fun of them. The new woman may exist in real life as well as in the pages of the so-called comic weeklies, but she is very hard to find. Generally the club woman, although by no means "old," is after all just the same woman that has always blessed the world by her presence. She has simply learned that she may do many things that might have surprised her grandmother, but which are not at all essentially masculine, and not open to the gibes and sneers of the paragrapher who finds such fun in the "new woman," as he imagines her. Moreover, whatever tradition may indicate to the contrary, women are generally eminently practical. The American woman, especially, not only says things, but does something. Her clubs are very apt to be more than meetings for gossip—a thing, by the way, that is by no means distinctively feminine, as the male gossip is not a rare bird.

PLAINFIELD GREETS NEW YEAR IN WHITE.

Most Severe Cold Wave of the Season Was Here.

STREET DEPARTMENT BUSY.

THE CROSSWALKS WERE FIRST LOOKED AFTER BY THE CITY.

Then Street Commissioner Gavett Looked After the Enforcement of Sidewalk Cleaning Ordinance—No Arrests Were Made—Mercury Fell to Nine Degrees Below Zero Monday Morning.

New Year's came in like a roaring lion, only it was a decidedly chilly lion. Saturday morning saw the beginning of a steady downpour. In the afternoon it grew colder rapidly and the rain changed to sleet and then to snow. The wind came out of the north and drove the light, dry snow about in promiscuous fashion. It continued all through the night and Sunday, the first morning of the new year, saw Plainfield hidden under a covering of white, six inches deep. The wind had drifted it in many places, however. The mercury was not far above the zero mark.

Sunday saw a still further descent on the part of the mercury and Monday morning it broke all local records for many years and dropped down to nine degrees below zero. The wind kindly subsided as the mercury departed for the bottom of the thermometer.

Despite the fact that it was Sunday, the day after the storm saw Plainfield in good shape as far as cleaned sidewalks and crosswalks was concerned. Most of the property-owners looked after their walks at once. Street Commissioner Gavett had a full force at work early in the morning. Two snow plows were at work in the suburbs cleaning crosswalks and incidentally cleaning the adjacent sidewalks. Private plows were put on duty by Elsbree-Compton and Jamison & Marsh, and aided the city in its work.

Last Monday Street Commissioner Gavett went out prepared to bring those who hadn't cleaned their walks to justice. They were comparatively few and most of them had good excuses so the walks were cleaned by the street department gang and no arrests were made. A number of citizens followed the advice of The Daily Press and cleaned away the snow in the immediate neighborhood of the fire hydrants.

The sleighing was fair Monday, but the snow was too dry to pack well. There were many sleighs and cutters out, however, and all the local livery stables found business brisk.

YOUNG OLD MEN WELCOME NEW YEAR

Much Pleasure Enjoyed by the Famous Asbestos Club.

The members of the Asbestos Club, together with a few of their friends, assembled in their wigwam Monday afternoon and celebrated the arrival of the New Year in a fitting manner. President Stephen Merritt was in charge of the exercises.

A feature of the programme was the appearance of Frank O. Bristol, of Fifth street, who entertained those present with short stories, witty remarks and some pathetic recitations.

Another feature was the playing by Fred VanRyn on the banjo, accompanied by D. W. Littell, Jr., on the guitar. They were recalled time and again.

One very enjoyable part of the afternoon's celebration was the reading of the club's history for the past year by F. M. Bacon. This paper was filled with good words and kind remarks were made about the members.

After the rendition of the programme refreshments were served, and the menu was all to be desired. There were oysters, fruit, cheese, crackers, nuts, apples, oranges and soft drinks.

Another part of the programme that should not be forgotten was the gramaphone concert given by Andrew Love and Asa Collier.

Home From Honduras.

JUDGE RUNYON NOW.

HAD HIS FIRST TRIAL MONDAY AFTERNOON.

Was Lenient With the First Offender—Gave an Unruly Husband Ten Days in Jail—Other Sentences Were Suspended

It's Judge Runyon now. Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock William N. Runyon assumed his duties as City Judge and held his first trial in the dingy little courtroom in the city jail. Judge Runyon was visibly cold when he arrived, but he warmed up in the general handshaking that followed and under the congratulations that were showered upon him by the regular habitues of the City Court. There was a host of friends of the young Judge who were out hunting for him so that they might be present when he first assumed his authority, but Judge Runyon escaped them all but one.

Frank Moncton was the first victim. He was arrested by Patrolman Totten for being helplessly drunk. Judge Runyon suspended sentence after delivering a seasonable lecture with the promise of a heavy sentence for future misbehavior. Sentence was suspended on Mrs. McCleary, charged with being helplessly drunk Saturday night.

Last Tuesday William McConnell and Howard Doty were arraigned before City Judge Runyon and sentence suspended. They were arrested by Special Officers Mattox and Gallaghar for disturbing a gathering at Washington Hall. Patrick Dunavan, alias "Cookney," was sent to jail for ten days for cursing at his wife and children and throwing crockery at them.

FUNERAL RITES BY KNIGHTS TEMPLARS.

VERY IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES.

Trinity Commandery, Knights Templars Were in Charge of the Funeral of John Brooks.

The funeral of the late John Brooks was held from his residence, 517 Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The service was that of the order of the Knights Templars, of which Mr. Brooks had been a member. The services were conduted by Trinity Commandery, twenty-eight members being present in full uniform. Eminent Commander Nelson Y. Dungan was in charge. Generalissimo W. H. Freeman acted as his aide. Captain-General H. W. Marshall was in direct command of the Commandery.

The full Templar ceremony was given. Rev. E. M. Rodman, a member of the Commandery, acting as Prelate, assisted by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The Knights formed two lines, one on either side of the casket, while the pall-bearers, Jacob Kirkner, B. Frank Corieli, Asa Collier, H. B. Woodland, B. A. Meeker and John Bingiemas, grouped about the head of it. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery. The funeral was very largely attended.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying and exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. What is needed is that which is cleansing, soothing, protecting and healing. Such a remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. To test it a trial size for 10 cents or the large for 50 cents is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York. Druggists keep it. Upon being placed into the nostrils it spreads over the membrane and relief is immediate. It is an agreeable cure.

The Biggins' Won the Cake.

Eugene O'Reilly gave one of his most successful dances in Washington Hall Monday evening. There were over two hundred people present and everyone had a thoroughly enjoyable time. The cake walk was won by Miss Higgins and her brother, Michael Higgins. There were many out-of-town people present.

THE BACHELORS LOST MASCOT AND GAME.

Second Match With Benedicts at the Park Club.

BENEDICTS WON EASILY.

THEY LED FROM THE START AND WON BY 69 PINS.

The Bachelors Failed to Capture the Pig and Had to Be Content With Another Mascot—Great Array of Bachelors—F. O. Ball Rolled the High Score—The Scores Given in Detail.

The Bachelors lay it all to the pig, their absconding mascot. Had his squealing majesty only lined up on the Park Club alleys along with the Bachelor rooters, there is no doubt in their minds but that they would have won. As it was, the Benedicts of the Park Club won the second of the bowling matches between Bachelors and Benedicts at the club alleys Saturday evening. The first match, a week ago, was won by the Bachelors by six pins. This time sixty-nine pins separated the two teams at the finish.

The Bachelors had made elaborate preparations to have a nice little grunter on hand as a mascot. The Benedicts had also determined to have the same mascot. Then the piggy departed for parts unknown. In his place the Bachelors had a pasteboard darkey that danced and played the banjo through clever manipulation of a string. He was a veritable hoodoo, for every time he played a Bachelor would "break."

The Benedicts marched into the alleys with a magnificent array of talent. From the start there was no doubt in their minds as to the inevitable result. After the game was fairly under way there was no doubt in the minds of the audience either. Peter Matthews couldn't hit the head pin. Clarence Roome lost his nerve, and various other Bachelors fell down from the pedestal of glory. The Yale contingent, McCutchen and Dupee, saved their own reputation. Dryden rolled well, but the Benedicts said that was because his sympathies were with them.

The Benedicts took the lead from the start and increased it to over 100 pins. The Bachelors were game to the last and made a strong finish. "Captain" Fred Ball carried off the honors of the match with a score of 204. "Doc" Thiers showed a marked improvement over the last game.

The individual scores were as follows:

BENEDICTS.		BACHELORS.
Lyman	118	McCutchen	164
Douglass	138	Mandolph	159
Ball	204	F. H. Ball	159

HAPPY TIME FOR THE BOYS.

Listened to a Good Address and Saw Youngsters Do Acrobatic Feats.

The members and friends of the Boys' Club had a happy time New Year's Eve when the annual entertainment and gymnastic exhibition was given. There were about sixty boys present. The exercises were in charge of Wm. B. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, who was assisted by Olaf Saugstad, superintendent of the club. The programme included an address of welcome by Mr. Wadsworth; violin solos by Hugh Gray; vocal duet by Martin Kane and D. Muldowney; jigs by E. Muldowney and C. Muldowney, with musical accompaniment by M. Kane and Hugh Gray; vocal duet by Thomas Kane and Robert Edmenson. This part of the programme was followed with the serving of refreshments by Stephenson and a phonograph entertainment.

Then came the tumbling exhibitions of William Bentiff, Bert Hanson and Joseph Sedar. There were rope, ladder and spring-board contests. The first and second prizes in each contest was a knife and shiney sticks. In the rope contest William Lawlor won first and John Waring second. John Berry won first and William Reynolds second in the ladder contest, while William Bentiff and Hugh Gray won the first and second in the spring-board event. It was just 12 o'clock when the entertainment closed, and everyone departed carrying with them the best wishes for a happy New Year.

NEW MAYOR IN TOWN.

MR. ROCKFELLOW ASSUMED OFFICE MONDAY NOON.

Former Mayor Fisk Was There and Welcomed His Successor—Fine-art Remarks Passed Between the Mayors.

Monday at exactly 12 o'clock noon Mayor-elect George W. Rockfellow became Mayor de facto by Charles J. Fisk, who was Mayor up to that time, consenting to him the seal of the city and the one lone single key that goes with the transfer of Mayoralty prerogatives.

Mr. Fisk, in a very happy speech, welcomed the new Mayor to office and spoke auspiciously for his future success. In reply Mayor Rockfellow thanked Mr. Fisk and said that he hoped to be able to give the city general satisfaction and he trusted that he would receive the support of all in performing the duties of his office. With these remarks Mr. Rockfellow assumed the duties of his office.

Among those present to witness the transfer were Councilmen E. T. Barrows, F. H. Andrews, Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, City Treasurer Wm. F. Arnold, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Sergeant Kiely, Lawyer William Newcorn, the two young sons of Mayor Rockfellow, and a representative of The Daily Press.

During the time that the officials were at the Mayor's office many other officials called and received a box of choice cigars from the retiring Mayor as well as his compliments for a happy New Year.

HOPE CHAPEL KEPT OPEN HOUSE FOR ALL.

WOMEN SERVED LOTS OF TURKEY.

Mrs. Hall and Her Fair Assistants Made Everybody Welcome—Single and Married Men Bowl.

Hope chapel held its eleventh annual New Year's Day reception Monday at which the usual turkey dinner was served. Preparations were made for 1,000 visitors, and between the hours of 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 10 o'clock at night the ladies of the church were kept busy waiting upon the many who took advantage of the invitations to come and partake of the feast.

No formal invitation to the board was necessary, for dinner or supper was served to everyone who came, whether members of Hope chapel or not. The dinner consisted of turkey and all its accompanying dishes, cranberry sauce, celery, cake, coffee, etc.

Mrs. W. W. Hall was chairman of the house committee. This committee saw to the spreading of the tables, the seating of the people and the feeding of them. Mrs. Hall's assistants were any of the ladies of the chapel who would volunteer to help. The ways and means committee, consisting of I. W. Travell, chairman; Messrs. Harris, Muir, Evans, Firstbrook and Weston, saw to providing the food needed. In the evening there was a little music and an informal social.

During the day there was a bowling match on the alleys between the single men and the married men, which was won by the single men by about 150 pins. The men and their scores are as follows:

SINGLE MEN.		MARRIED MEN.
Martin	178	Hood	130

SIX YEAR OLD BOY IS WITHOUT PROPER HOME.

PLIGHT OF A LAD IN DUNELLEN.

Experience Has Brought Him an Attack of Diphtheria—Father Lives in New York.

Dunellen, Jan. 2.—The good citizens here are very much worked up over the neglect of a six-year-old boy, the son of Frank Covey, who formerly lived here. The little lad has been handed from one family to another to be cared for until his mother, who is ill, and now lies at the home of A. P. Warden with the diphtheria.

When Covey's wife died he left Dunellen to live in New York. He had two children, a girl, who is now about eight years of age, and the boy. The little girl was adopted by a family here and has a good home. The boy lived away from here until a few weeks ago when he was brought back. Three dollars a week was the price that was offered anyone to keep him, and first he was taken by one family, then by another, until the poor little fellow didn't know what a home was.

His father, it is said, is only making $12 a week in New York, and as he has another wife and family to support, he claims that he cannot take care of the little waif until after this month, when he will have more money.

On Friday night little Covey was out until late. He became ill Saturday, and Dr. Brakeley, who was sent for, said that he had diphtheria. Mr. Warden kindly took the lad in, and will care for him until other arrangements are made. Meanwhile Covey, in New York, has been communicated with.

An Unparalleled Time Record

Was made every day during the period of the Omaha Exposition by the trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway on its Chicago & Omaha Short Line.

Altho its trains hauled from ten to thirteen well filled sleeping cars and coaches each night, yet schedule time of arrival at Omaha and at Chicago was an accomplished fact,—a record to be proud of, and which has resulted in establishing the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway in the minds of the traveling community as the shortest, best and most reliable route from Chicago to Omaha, as well as to California.

GRIP PROVED FATAL.

Death of Mrs. Willard After an Illness Lasting Two Days.

Mrs. Willard, widow of Stephen Willard, died Sunday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. Noyes, of LaGrande avenue, after a short illness with the grip. She was seriously ill only two days and that was caused by a relapse which resulted in spinal menengitis. For twenty-five years Mrs. Willard was an assistant at the home of Dr. Frank Wells. She was a cousin of Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, and an aunt to Mrs. Craig Waldron. A sister, Mrs. Bird, also survives her. The funeral services were held from the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Baengerbund Society's Good Time.

Last Monday in Baengerbund Hall there was a dance for the members and their wives in honor of the tenth anniversary of the society. The affair was largely attended and everything passed off pleasantly. The music was good, as was also the selections by the singing section of the Society. There were no special features in connection with the dance, but everyone had a jolly good time.

Repeat-a Christmas Exercises.

Last Sunday afternoon at Warren chapel the Sunday-school repeated the Christmas service held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church one week ago. There was a fair attendance of members. Owing to the non-arrival of the presents the scholars who earned them by learning the golden texts for the year were disappointed in not receiving them. They will be given out next Sunday.

An Informal Dance.

More Yuletide Pleasures for the Sunday-schools of Local Churches.

CANTATAS APPROPRIATE TO THE SEASON

SPECIAL EXERCISES THAT WERE ARRANGED ESPECIALLY FOR THE CHILDREN.

Trinity Scholars Heard a Clever Cantata Showing How Hard It is to Get Along Without Christmas—Elaborate Programme Rendered in St. Mary's Parochial School—Exercises in Other Churches.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

The Christmas entertainment at Trinity Reformed church was held last Sunday in the lecture room and attended by an enthusiastic audience. The entertainment consisted of a musical cantata entitled "General Santa Claus, or the Merry Christmas War." It dwelt on the unsuccessful attempts of "Prof. Pessimist" to do away with all the Christmas tide spirit and fun and told of his final rout by "General Santa Claus" and his brownies and fairies.

The principal characters were taken by the following: "Santa Claus," Horace J. Martin; "Uncle Sam," Raymond Pool; "Columbia," Miss Cora Lairo; "Prof. Pessimist," Edgar Sheppard; "Prof. Love Money," Charles M. Dolliver; "Drummer Boy," Horace J. Martin, Jr.; "Paterfamilias," Arthur Smith; "Miss A. Single Woman," Miss Cora Lairo; "Poverty," Miss Grace Borg; "Envy," Miss Sadie Holmes; "Hatred," Miss Minnie Williams; "Malice," Miss Etta Krymer; "Hope," Mrs. Frank Woodruff; "Love," Miss Sadie Holmes; "Faries," the Misses Gussie Kreitling, Ethel Bohen, Hazel Martin; Maxie Grey, Hattie Martin, Annie Holder, Anna Randall and Anna Garretson; "Brownies," the Masters Claassen, Brokaw, Yaeger, Sheppard, VanMiddlesworth, Calene, Nitchwits and Cooley.

The committee in charge consisted of Miss Lilly Remson, chairman, Miss Emma Gillem, Horace J. Martin, Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. E. E. Anthony and Arthur L. Titsworth. For the music, Floyd Jones acted as violinist and Miss Lillian A. Force as pianist.

Before the cantata, Superintendent E. E. Anthony, in the name of the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school, presented an envelope containing money to W. Olmstead, who had done so much to make the cantata the success it was and for his valuable services rendered in decorating the room, etc. Mr. Olmstead was present and received the gift, but he was too weak from a recent illness to reply, and Rev. Dr. Schenck thanked the donors for him.

The primary department held its entertainment in the afternoon, which included recitations by Lucile Day, Helen Woolley, Davie Roper, Ellsworth Bennett, Willie Luckey, Elmer Bohan, Harold Adams, Arthur Williams, Walter Dennis, Elsie Tier, Pansy Luckey, Willie Luckey, Ida May Tier and Bessie Randall. W. Olmstead impersonated Santa Claus. Mrs. J. M. Tier was in charge of the exercises.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

A musical cantata entitled "Santa's Surprise or A Merry Christmas," was the principal part of the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church held in the Sunday-school rooms Thursday. It was a rather up-to-date tale of Santa Claus in which the audience was entertained with songs, music and drills while waiting for him. Santa Claus had meantime been upset in the snow near Chimney Rock. He finally arrived and distributed gifts among the children. William Holmes played the part of the old saint.

Those who took the leading parts were Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Case, L. H. Bigelow, Jr., Jerry Manning, Willie Flanders and Miss Violet VanWinkle. The others to take part were Maud Crane, Bessie Wilson, Ethel King, Bessie Flanders, Hazel Grant, Minnie Sorrell, Daisy Bogert, Clarence Smalley, Beulah VanWinkle, Elizabeth McGee, Julia Crane, Hazel Morrison, Helen Smalley, Ethel VanWinkle, Ethel Webster, Ada Kellar, Helen Armstrong, Marguerite Sorrell, Marguerite Lee, Allene Carver, Mamie Wiess, Helen Smalley, Josephine Sorrell and Belle Mantz.

The committee in charge consisted of J. Herbert Case, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, Miss Margaret Harold, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Sue D. Woodland, Frank Jones and L. H. Bigelow, Jr.

Thursday afternoon the primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school enjoyed their Christmas entertainment. There was a large attendance and all had a good time. The programme consisted of singing by the scholars, a tea drinking drill by Helen Armstong, Marguerite Sorrell, Josephine Serrell, Edna Keller, Ethel VanWinkle, Beulah VanWinkle, Margaret Lee, Ethel Webster, Helen Smalley, Belle Mantz, Jessie Clawson, Arlene Carver; recitations, Edith GaNun, Nellie Ballentine, George Rogers, Jr., Harold Robins and Beulah VanWinkle. Harry Allen sang "Old St. Nick," and "Santa Claus." He was also Santa Claus and distributed the gifts to the children from the tree. There was another song by George Francisco. The whole affair was under the direction of Mrs. Powlison, superintendent of the department, and everyone taking part reflected credit on themselves and their instructors.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST.

The Christmas entertainment at the Park Avenue Baptist church Thursday consisted of the singing of carols by the school, responsive readings, and a cantata by the primary department. At the close of the exercises boxes of candy and bananas were distributed to the members of the school, and the tittles ones also received gifts. Rev. J. W. Richardson received a handsome silver chafing dish, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson. The cantata was entitled "Snow Stars." The first number was a song, "The North Wind," by the primary department; "The North Wind Doth Blow," by David Smalley; "Snow Star Song," the Misses F. Smalley, M. Odam, F. Moffett, L. Cuming, J. Nankin, M. Soper and A. DeLaney. The carol, "Joyful Bells," was sung by the primary department; then came the Song of the Stars, by the little girls, Miss F. Smalley, M. Odam, L. Cuming, A. DeLaney, M. Soper and E. Ingham. Two more carols by the class and a tableaux, "The Star of Bethlehem," by a number of little girls, completed the primary class exercises. The verses of one of the carols were sung by a quartette composed of Miss Ada Runyon, Miss Adelia Runyon, William A. Stimpson and Thomas Cuming, while the school, under the direction of Theodore L. Runyon, the musical director, joined in on the chorus. Another carol was sung as a duet by Miss Ada Runyon, the school again joining in the chorus. The Sunday-school room was trimmed with greens, and in one corner stood a large Christmas tree. The Christmas entertainment committee consisted of Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Ada Runyon, Miss Myra Runyon and Thomas A. Cuming.

ST. MARY'S.

St. Mary's church, as usual, held an Christmas entertainment Thursday in St. Mary's School Hall. This afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the programme will be repeated in part, and the children will be given their gifts of candy, etc.

The programme last night was in two parts, part two being selections from Edison's phonograph, manipulated by Father Westman. Part one consisted of an overture by the orchestra; a solo, "O, Holy Night," by Miss A. Daley, in which the school joined in the chorus; a recitation, "The Knight's Toast, "John Traynor; vocal duet, "Helping Mamma," F. Traynor and Miss H. Lynch; and a farce, "A Sea of Troubles," in which the characters were taken by F. Traynor, J. Carty, H. Shannon, P. Galbraith, J. Berry, T. Mack, A. McKeon and F. Wilbe. The parts were well taken, and the little interruption to the programme, caused by the introduction of the farce, was welcome.

Then there was a vocal duet by J. Kyle and Miss K. Harding; a recitation by Miss Sara Barelle; an instrumental selection by Misses M. Smith and K. Flynn, piano, Misses E. Day and J. Summers, tambourines, Misses M. Doll and M. Brady, triangles, Miss Mary Burk, drum, and Miss Frances Hillman, castinets; a chorus was sung by the Misses A. Daley, S. McInerney and L. Flanagan, sopranos, and the Misses M. Harding, E. Shea and Sara Barelle, altos.

The appearance of "Santa Claus," in the person of Andrew McKeon, and a tableau of "The Nativity of Our Blessed Lord," closed the first part of the programme.

MT. ZION A. M. E.

An elaborately trimmed Christmas tree was the attraction at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church last night at the Christmas entertainment. From it boxes of candy were taken and distributed among the children; then they were treated to ice cream and cake.

The entertainment consisted of songs and recitations by the little ones and addresses by the pastor, Rev. Jas. E. Groves, Rev. J. W. Mitchell and Grant Canaon, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Reunion of Class of '97.

The members of the class of '97, of the Plainfield High School, held a reunion Thursday at the home of Miss Mary Buckle, of Westervelt avenue. A very delightful evening was spent.

IT TOUCHED LINCOLN'S HEART.

How a Man Whom He Could Not Do as President.

A gentleman of Chicago, a veteran of the civil war, tells an anecdote in the life of Abraham Lincoln as related to him by Schuyler Colfax.

One day on his way to the executive mansion Colfax came upon an old man just outside the capitol grounds, looking so dejected and miserable that the genial Speaker stopped and spoke to him. The old man then begged for aid in getting an audience with the President, as so far his efforts had been unavailing—and added that it was a case of life and death.

Colfax, moved by the old man's distress, brought him, trembling with conflicting hope and fear, directly into the great and kindly presence. Without wasting a moment upon preliminaries, the petitioner plunged into the heart of his troubles—an old story never grown sadly familiar to the President's ear. Briefly, his son had been sentenced to death for having slept at his post. He had relieved a sick comrade the night before, and overworn nature had succumbed. Lincoln listened, all the kindness of his great heart welling in his eyes; but he had already issued so many pardons for this offense that it was beginning to have a demoralizing influence upon a most important part of the service, and Congress had thought best to give the power of confirming the death sentence directly to the Generals in charge. In this particular case, too, Butler had written the President, strenuously urging him to turn a deaf ear to any one pleading for the offender's pardon, as the discipline of his army absolutely required an example.

With a troubled air, therefore, Lincoln said: "My good sir, I would give anything I possess for the power to help you. But the President himself is powerless here. I am under orders not to issue another pardon for this particular offense. Too much depends upon the vigilant sentinel. I sympathize deeply with your sorrow, but must refuse your request."

"So that is all the President of the United States can do for me," faltered the old father.

"All," replied Lincoln.

The old man stood motionless in the deep silence that followed the President's ultimatum. Then, taking a step forward, he said: "The President of the United States has done his duty. Now, I want to hear from Abe Lincoln. Put yourself in my place, your son in my son's place. Then what would you do?"

A minute of intense thought Lincoln's face took on an expression of radiance as he exclaimed:

"Butler or no Butler, here goes!" And seizing his pen he rapidly wrote two duplicate orders, handing one to the petitioner, who read:

"Sentence in case of Private —— of —— regiment is not to be executed until further orders from the executive office."

"This," said the broken-hearted father, "only postpones the agony. If the boy must be shot the sooner the better."

"My friend," said old Abe, taking him by the hand, "if your son doesn't die until further orders for his death he will live to a green old age."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Not Failed Yet.

A certain more than locally famous dentist—he lives on Thirteenth street—has among his clientele patients an elderly woman of wealth, who is superstitious about the 9th of September.

"Well" said she, with a sigh of relief, when her unlucky day this year had passed, "I certainly am glad when the 9th of September is over. I always know that if I live past that day I'm sure to live till another year. Oh, I'm certain of it! Why, it's a sign I've never known to fail, never."—Washington Post.

CRAZED, SHE SOUGHT DEAD SISTER'S GRAVE.

Miss McKee Screamed and Groaned in the Cemetery.

ACTIONS WERE OBSTINATE.

WANTED TO KNOW DOCTOR'S POLITICS BEFORE TAKING MEDICINE.

Said If He Was a Democrat She Wouldn't Take the Medicine He Had Prepared, and When He Asserted That He Was a Republican She Would Not Take the Medicine Anyway.

William Pangborn and his family were resting quietly at their home on Chatham street last Thursday, when they were startled by hearing cries of murder, accompanied by hideous groans. Mr. Pangborn hastily put on his hat and coat and left his home to investigate the cause of the disturbance. In the First Presbyterian cemetery, which adjoins his property, there was a woman lying prostrate over a grave. It was she who was screaming and groaning.

At the same time Alex. Frazee, an employe of the freighthouse, was walking past the cemetery and he, too, was started by hearing the strange noise. Mr. Frazee also investigated and together with Mr. Pangborn succeeded in getting the woman into the latter's home.

Chief Marshal Wilson was then sent for. He recognized the women as Miss McKee, who has been residing at the home of Lawrence Walker, of Grandview avenue. She is about 30 years of age, and is subject to such fits.

It appears that she was kneeling on the grave of her sister, the late Mrs. W. B. Philpitt, and was mourning over her loss.

The woman was obstinate and at first refused to do anything except according to her strange notions. Chief Wilson sent for Dr. Darnan, the borough physician, and when he arrived he prepared a glass of medicine for the woman, and tried to get her to take it.

"Are you a Democrat or a Republican?" exclaimed Miss McKee. "If you are a Democrat I will not take the medicine."

The doctor replied that he was a Republican, whereupon the woman said "I won't take the medicine anyway."

The doctor was persistent, and finally persuaded her to take the dose. In the meantime Chief Wilson secured a hack and took the woman to Mr. Walker's home. Here they refused to let her in on account of her condition. Just then Mr. Philpitt appeared and at his request he took charge of Miss McKee and took her to his home. It seems that Mr. Philpitt is the only person that can subdue Miss McKee, and Chief Wilson was perfectly willing that he should take her.

EVENING WHILED AWAY BY MERRY DANCERS.

HOLIDAY EVENT AT THE PARK CLUB.

Patronesses Included Several of Leading Society Women Who Reside in the Borough.

The regular holiday dance was given last Friday at the Park Club under the direction of the house committee, Elston M. French, Edward T. Wilson, H. D. Hibbard and the following patronesses: Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Joseph Howell, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. George F. Dupee and Mrs. Samuel Townsend.

The affair was very largely attended and was in every way a complete success. Music was furnished by Elsler. It was rather late when the guests arrived, but they remained late and thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of those in charge.

Among those present were many whose faces have not been seen at the club for some time, and the committee in charge feel as though there is an increased interest being manifested. President B. A. Hegeman, Jr., was present and he added not a little to the pleasure of the guests by his affable manner.

WHERE SANTA WAS GOOD

CHRISTMAS TREE AT CHILDREN'S HOME FRIDAY.

Each of the Twenty-five Little Tots Were Well Remembered With Presents—Many Visitors Were There to See It.

Santa Claus in all his glory certainly stopped at the Children's Home this year, for everyone of the twenty-five little tots now residing there were well remembered Friday afternoon when the annual Christmas entertainment was held. The present number at the Home is the largest in its history and it means much work to look after them. The tree was lighted yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock and at the same time the children marched into the room as they sang a familiar carol. Some of the little ones had never seen a Christmas tree before and their faces brightened with joy as they beheld the brilliantly lighted tree laden with lots of good things for them.

The gifts, both useful and ornamental, were distributed to the children by Mrs. Kimball and her assistants, Miss Ella Serrell, Miss Margaret Serrell, Miss VanBoskerck and the matron, Mrs. Hendrickson.

The home has been remembered very kindly in a substantial manner this year, and those in charge desire to express their appreciation for what has been done. They also hope for a continuance of support from Plainfield people. This was through the goodness of the people of the city that the children were given such a good time yesterday.

Two former residents of the home were present yesterday and enjoyed the festivities and received words of encouragement from the managers. The exercises came to an end about 5 o'clock, when the children were served with a bountiful supper. During the afternoon there were about sixty guests present at the home, and they enjoyed the celebration quite as well as the children.

LITTLE FOLKS TOOK PART.

Christmas Exercises Held at the Christian Church Last Friday Night.

The annual Christmas entertainment was held Friday evening at the Christian church on Grove street. There was a large crowd present, and the children of the Sunday-school were treated to Santa Claus, impersonated by John Staats. The programme consisted of recitations by Lillian Scribner, Harry Smith, John Baldwin, Nettie Thompson, Henry Staats, Emley Victor, Mabel Scribner.

There was a pleasing song entitled "Santa Claus," by little girls, a drill by ten children from the school, a vocal duet "Flower Land," by Mr. and Mrs. McKane, and a tableau entitled "Harvest Gleaners," by members of the school. Santa Claus made his appearance at the close of the entertainment and distributed gifts to all present. The exercises were in charge of Rev. W. H. McKane, pastor of the church, assisted by Superintendent John Staats, of the Sunday-school.

TOM CUMING AS SANTA.

Sang His Way Into View of the Members of Loyal Temperance Legion.

Friday evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms on East Front street the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion celebrated their annual Christmas entertainment. The attendance was large. Mrs. R. K. Case was in charge of the exercises, and the programme consisted of singing by the members of the legion, recitations by Miss Newman, several tableaux and a phonographic exhibition by Mr. Colgate.

Toward the last Santa Claus appeared in the person of Thomas Cuming, and as he approached the scene of the festivities he sang an appropriate song. The members of the legion were remembered in a substantial manner, and after the entertainment everyone went away feeling as though a profitable evening had been spent.

Dance at a School.

The holiday dance at the Miss Scribner and Green school was held last Friday at the school building on La-Grande avenue. It was arranged by a committee of young women who attend the school. The chaperones were Mrs. Lapsley and Mrs. Howard Fleming.

VICTIM OF SWINDLER.

ROBERT LEWIS' BARGAIN WAS A COSTLY ONE.

Paid $10 to a Book Agent Who Had No Authority to Act and Who Kept All But $2 of It—Lewis Wants Revenge.

Robert Lewis, of this city, appeared before Justice Mosher last Friday morning to make a complaint against the Universal Publishing Company, who, Lewis claimed, has swindled him. Lewis says that last June an agent, who claimed that he represented this company, came to him and secured an order from him for a set of historical books. There were to be ten volumes, and they were to cost $20 for the set, $2 to be paid on the delivery of each volume.

The books were not all ready for distribution then, said the agent, but would come out at regular intervals. The agent, before he went away, offered Lewis a bargain which he accepted, and now mourns his loss as a consequence.

The offer was that if Lewis would pay $10 down upon the delivery of the first book he would receive the whole set as fast as they came out, for half price. Lewis agreed to these terms and in June last received the first volume and paid him $10. He was told that volume number two would follow in less than a month, but he has been waiting ever since for it. Lewis said that he had written to the firm of publishers and showed the Justice his answer, which stated that the company had no agents, that the works Lewis had received had been on the market for years, and that the so-called agent was no more than a swindler, who had made about $8 clear profit out of the deal. Upon this Justice Mosher refused to take any action except against the agent, whose name Lewis did not know.

BLACKSMITH SHOP DESTROYED BY FIRE.

IT CAUGHT FROM THE STOVE.

Long Run for the Fire Department—The Losses Were About $150—No Insurance.

The blacksmith shop of McCready & Wenner, corner of Clinton avenue and South Second street, caught fire Friday evening shortly after 6 o'clock and was almost destroyed.

The fire apparently started from the stove, although the proprietors were quite certain that there was no fire in it when they departed. Ex-Policeman Hartpence, who lives close by, saw the flames issuing from the window and sent in an alarm from Box 49 at 6:26 o'clock. The apparatus of the fire department responded promptly although they had a long run.

The blacksmith shop was a one-story frame structure, with no cellar. The walls are built of one thickness of boards. The interior was all charred and the rear end of the roof burned off. The department laid a line of hose 700 feet long, from the nearest hydrant on Front street.

There was considerable stock on hand, which was all ruined. The loss to the contents will amount to $50. The building itself is a wreck. The loss to it will reach $100. There was no insurance on building or contents.

Christmas at Warren Chapel

The Christmas entertainment at Warren chapel was held Thursday afternoon for the children, and in the evening for the grown up folks. Both programmes were alike, being moving pictures. The little ones in the afternoon received gifts of candy and fruit, and in the evening ice cream and cake were served to the others. The Rev. Mr. Jones, of which pastor of the chapel is teacher, presented him with a camera outfit, and the Ladies' Bible class gave Robert Clark, their teacher, with a gold pen.

Bethel Chapel's Good Time.

At Bethel chapel, Thursday night, the little folks held their Christmas entertainment which consisted of singing by Edith Johnson, who is home from school at Bordentown; a duet by Walter Peterson and Daisy Dunham, and a recitation by Gussie Wade. At the close of the entertainment the superintendent of the school, Stephen A Ginna, was presented by little Gussie Wade with a magnificent cake, made by her mother.

SON AND DAUGHTER WEDDED THURSDAY.

Two Weddings In Family of Mayor-elect Rockfellow.

CEREMONIES WERE PRIVATE

MISS CORNELIA M. ROCKFELLOW MARRIED FRED W. STACK.

Took Place at Bride's Home Thursday Afternoon at 4 o'Clock—Miss Caroline Potter Married to George A. Rockfellow, at Rahway, in the Evening—Both Couples to Live Here.

Very quietly Miss Cornelia M. Rockfellow, only daughter of Mayor-elect George W. Rockfellow, was wedded to Fred W. Stack, of this city, at her home on Park avenue Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The young people have been engaged for some time, but had not intended to wed so soon. Mr. Rockfellow has been ill with the grip and overwork, so that his physician ordered him to go south at once. So the preparations for the marriage were hurried that it might take place before the departure of the bride's father. It was a very quiet affair, witnessed only by the immediate relatives of the couple.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, which the couple attends. It took place in the parlor which was prettily decorated with palms and flowers, the prevailing colors being green and white.

The bride was gowned in green brocaded silk, trimmed with chiffon and white ribbon. The bride was given away by her father, John Bissel, of New York, acted as best man.

After the ceremony the bridal party sat down to the wedding supper which was elaborately served. Then the newly wedded couple left for New York, from where they returned today. Mr. Stack is bookkeeper in Mr. Rockfellow's store. They will reside at the bride's home for the present. Owing to the departure of Mr. Rockfellow for the south the last of the week the wedding journey has been postponed until later. The young couple received a number of handsome and valuable gifts.

After seeing his daughter wedded, Mr. Rockfellow went to Rahway where his eldest son, George A. Rockfellow, was married to Miss Caroline Potter, of that place, Thursday at 8 o'clock. Miss Potter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Apollos Potter, of Broad street, Rahway. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Voorhees, of Commerce street, owing to the fact that her home was entirely destroyed by fire last Tuesday.

The ceremony was a very simple one, being performed by Rev. Dr. Lowry, of Rahway. It was followed by the wedding supper. Only the near relatives of the young couple were present.

The bride was gowned in white organdie over white silk. The bridesmaid was Miss Irene White, of Rahway. John Bissell, of New York, stood up with the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow will reside in Plainfield, where Mr. Rockfellow will take charge of his father's store in the absence of the latter. The wedding trip was postponed on that account.

Mr. and Mrs. Stack and Mr. and Mrs. Rockfellow went to New York, where they registered at the Waldorf-Astoria, and spent the night there.

LINES FOUND GUILTY.

Charged With Assaulting a Poor Hebrew Tailor Named Strager.

Friday morning, John Lines, twenty-one years old, came up before City Judge Stillman charged with assaulting Isaac Strager November 18th. Lines told a rather improbable story about being attacked by the tailor without provocation and said that he was merely defending him. Judge Stillman reviewed the case very impartially and spoke very forcibly. Only the good character of the defendent in the past saved him from a very severe sentence. He was given his choice between $15 fine or twenty days in jail. His father refuses to pay the fine.

New Store Building.

John G. Bantle, the East Fifth street tailor, has moved to 421 Watchung avenue for the present. The contract price for the lot and building is $6,000.

New Cashier at White's.

Miss Mabel Wilson, of this city, has accepted the position of cashier at White's dry goods store, recently held by Miss Etta Milligan.

'98 COUNCIL IS NO MORE.

Last Session of the Solons For Last Year Was Held Thursday Night.

THE TROLLEY EXTENSION ORDINANCE IS PASSED

POLICE TENURE OF OFFICE ORDINANCE ALSO ENACTED WITH THREE DISSENTING VOTES.

Reports From All the Various City Departments Received and Read—Much Information About Municipal Affairs, as Well as Many Suggestions—Kindly Words for Retiring Members.

Plainfield's Common Council for 1898 is no more. The last business to be considered by that body was transacted Thursday and all work for last year was completed.

The first business taken up last evening was the public hearing on the trolley extension in the east end of the city. The ordinance has been adopted on its second reading, and before its final adoption a last chance was given for remarks for or against it. F. E. Kinsman was the only one present in opposition to the extension and he again remonstrated against the adoption of the ordinance. He said that it grieved him greatly to be obliged to appear before the Council again and protest against the proposed action. He still argued that the matter is an important one. He said that during the past twenty-four hours he had been talking with prominent capitalists, who had informed him that they would come to Plainfield and construct a trolley road according to the present conditions on a twenty year basis, and give the city a fair proportion of gross receipts. Mr. Kinsman said that he regretted that he was unable to secure, in so short a time, the necessary bond for the faithful performance of such work. He urged the Council to defer action on the ordinance for the present, and said he felt sure the Council would make a mistake if they adopted it in its present condition.

At this time President Thomas Nevins, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, communicated with the Council stating that the company would agree to extend their lines anywhere desired in Plainfield under the conditions of the present ordinance when the proper number of consents were secured.

Mr. Barrows then called up the trolley ordinance on its third reading and it was adopted unanimously, every member voting for it.

The bond of Constable P. V. Weaver was presented, attested correct by the Corporation Counsel, and was recorded. J. G. Bicknell, of South avenue, petitioned the Council to return to him $4.60 interest on tax money, which he claimed is due him. The matter was referred to the next Council. The report of the committee on streets and sewers was presented. It is as follows:

The promises made by last year's committee have been carried out and while we are sensible of the wants and needs of certain streets seemingly neglected, we are obliged to ask that patience be exercised until the coming year.

NEW WORK.

During the year Stelle avenue from Plainfield avenue to Madison avenue, Madison avenue from Stelle avenue to Ninth street and Woodland avenue from South avenue to LaGrande avenue were macadamized from curb to curb at an expense of $2,926 81, of which property owners paid $1,391.56; Plainfield Street Railroad paid $183 23; city paid $851.02.

RE M CADAMIZING.

During the year the following streets were re-macadamized:

West Front street, from Grant avenue to Clinton avenue; West Third street, from Plainfield avenue to Muhlenberg place, (the only part ever macadamized); Muhlenberg place; South Second street, from Muhlenberg place to Manson place, (as far as the macadam extends); East Second street, from Park avenue to Watchung avenue; Watchung avenue, from Green brook to North avenue, and other portions to Belvidere avenue; Westervelt avenue; Sandford avenue; East Fourth street; East Fifth street from Park avenue to Richmond street; Belvidere avenue; Crescent avenue; LaGrande avenue, from Watchung avenue to Richmond street; Woodland avenue, from Watchung avenue to Highland avenue; South avenue, from Belvidere avenue to Woodland avenue; Madison avenue, from Seventh street to Third street; West Fourth street, from Park avenue to New street.

The total cost was $11,215.49; of which property-owners paid to extend macadam to curb $739.39; city paid $7,804.11; Plainfield Street Railway paid $1,672.

DIRT STREETS.

Most of the dirt streets and roads have been turnpiked, rolled, and the gutters have been opened: this is the most discouraging feature of street work, for the reason that as soon as continuous rains come, these streets rut up and dry into an uneven road.

CROSSWALKS.

During the year sixty-three crosswalks were laid, divided among the wards as follows: First ward, 7; Second ward, 29; Third ward, 15; Fourth ward, 12. The cost, including repairs to old crosswalks, was $1,197.13.

SIDEWALKS.

During the year 22,724 feet of sidewalks were laid, divided among the wards as follows: First ward, 2,851 feet; Second ward, 4,409 feet; Third ward, 9,189 feet; Fourth ward, 6,275.

CURBS.

During the year, 6,906 feet of curb were laid, divided among the wards as follows:

First ward, 1,011 feet; Second ward, 577; Third ward, 3,309; Fourth ward, 2,009.

PERMANENT PAVEMENT.

The question of a permanent pavement for the business portion of the city, which has been recommended by the Mayor for the past two years, was taken up early in the fall; but the necessity of having the storm sewer laid in Park avenue, and all conduits, and connections made, necessarily delays the work until the coming year. It is proposed and we recommend that West Front street, from Central avenue to Watchung avenue; Park avenue from Fourth street to Front street, and Somerset street to the brook, be laid with asphalt and vitrified brick.

While the bulk of permanent pavements now being laid in this country consists of asphalt, it is well to remember its slippery nature in wet and cold weather; in view of this it would probably be well to use asphalt on the more level portions, and vitrified brick on the steeper grades. The estimated cost of an asphalt pavement for the streets named is:—Front street, $19,500; Somerset street, $2,380; Park avenue, $9,900; total, $31,780; of which the Plainfield Street Railroad Company would pay $9,900.

SEWERS.

At the beginning of the year, the regular force employed last season on the disposal beds, (two men) was continued. A force of at least four men, with a horse and cart, could be kept profitably at work all the time.

The cost of repairing sewers has been $702.21 and it is estimated that a further sum not exceeding $700 will be necessary to complete the examination and repair of the sewer in Richmond Street. The new beds constructed by contract, with additional drains, etc., cost $1,977.81, which it is proposed to cover by an issue of sewer bonds early in the coming year.

SEWER EXTENSIONS.

Stelle avenue, from near Central avenue to Plainfield avenue; Plainfield avenue, from Stelle avenue to West Eighth street; Somerset street; Watchung avenue, from Front street to the mill race; Orange place; Hillside avenue, from Putnam avenue to a point near Watchung avenue; Berkely avenue, from Ravine road to a point near Belvidere avenue.

The total cost was $3,009 01, which the commissioners assessed as follows, subject to slight changes made by the Council: On property, $1,599 56; on city at large, $415.45.

The annual report of the late City Judge DeMeza was presented by William Dumont. It was received and filed.

Chief Engineer T. O. Doane submitted his annual report for the fire department. He states that there are ninety officers and men which comprise the manual force of the department. During the year four members have become exempt and one was repelled. There are 277 fire hydrants and during the year thirteen new ones were added. There is a pressure of 74 pounds to each hydrant, except a few at Netherwood heights where the pressure is forty pounds. There are also sixteen fire wells and two brooks that can be used in case of necessity. The department has 5,500 feet of hose, 3,900 feet of which is good, 1,600 poor and 800 feet unfit for use. There are eleven horses used by the department, of which number eight are owned. The team used for the steamer is hired and the horse used for the chief's wagon is owned by the driver.

Three new fire-alarm boxes were added during the year. There have been 61 alarms, 39 box calls, 15 telephone, 5 still and 2 breaks, an increase of 18 over last year. The small hand extinguishers have been discharged 20 times, and the tanks on the chemical engine 9 times. The chemical engine has attended 43 fires and has extinguished 5 fires alone, and 3 with the use of hydrants.

The loss on buildings by fires has been $38,983.50; insurance on same, $116 175; loss on contents, $17,561.76, insurance on contents, $66,675; total insurance involved, $181,850, total insurance collected, $66,545.25; total value property involved, real estate, $159,900, personal, $43,070.70.

The report states further that all firemen except two are now exempt, and the two will go out January 4th, next. It is recommended that the department be re-organized, and that a call system be adopted, appointing eight men to each company at a paid fixed sum per year. In this way the men could be compelled to do fire duty and would answer the needs of the department with one-quarter of the men as is the case now with the volunteer system. It is also recommended that five more full paid men be appointed, three for headquarters and one for the West Second street house, and that the old hook and ladder truck be placed there, also a combination chemical and hose wagon be purchased; that the gray team now used for the chemical engine be used for the combination wagon and that a heavier team be purchased for No. 1 chemical. It also recommended that four men be appointed for the new house and eight call men, and that the city purchase at a fair price Alert hose wagon, which the company now want to sell, as the company is now going out of existence.

Chief of Police George W. Grant presented his report for the Police Board for the year. It shows the number of arrests to be 423, 367 males and 56 females, 82 of which were colored, 123 were fined, 51 committed, 39 dismissed, 161 sentence suspended, 11 untried, 6 held for the Grand Jury, 10 held in bonds. The amount of fines collected is $631.37. In comparison with last year's report there is quite a difference. Last year there were 640 arrests and $1,212 00 was received in fines. The increased fall of expenses shows that during the year it cost the city $14,533.07 to maintain its police department. The above report covers in the main the report of the City Judge, and in fact all the important items are embodied in the report of Capt. Grant.

The Board of Engineers reported that the resignations of Wallace V. Miller, Garrett Drier and J. Bremmer, of Engine Co., No. 2, had been received, and the same were accepted. The Board also reported that Frank Randolph, of Engine Co., No. 2, had been expelled for neglect of duty. The above action was confirmed by the Council.

Building Inspector Doane reported that 150 building permits were granted during the present year.

Overseer of the Poor Hansen made a report in which he stated that 23 persons had been beneficiaries during the month. The report also showed that out of the $6,000 appropriated to the poor department, the sum of $3,153 was spent.

Resolutions were offered by Mr. Andrews providing for the borrowing of the necessary amount of money to pay the interest on sewer bonds Nos. 5, 6, 7, 8; that $1,620 10 be borrowed for sewer work; that a sufficient sum be borrowed to meet notes maturing this month; that $208.34 be transferred to the poor building account.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution which provided for the correction and revision of the sewer commissioners in a few particulars which removes about $112 from taxpayers and puts that amount on the city at large. In that change D. C. Irvin was allowed the amount he asked the Council to deduct from his assessment. After allowing these few claims the report of the commissioners was confirmed.

The report of the committee on printing and stationery showed that out of the $2,200 appropiated to that committee $1,843.10 was expended.

The police ordinance was called up on its third reading and was adopted. Messrs. Baker, Barrows, Andrews, Homan, Newman, Buckle and Runyon voted in the affirmative, while Messrs. Hetfield, Moffett and Leifke voted in the negative.

On a resolution offered by Mr. Barrows, the Corporation Counsel was requested to give his opinion as to when the term of City Clerk MacMurray expires. This action was taken as there seems to be some doubt about it.

At this time a recess of a half hour was declared so that the Clerk could write up the minutes of the meeting to allow their adoption at the present and last meeting of the present Council.

Mr. Barrows offered a motion that all unfinished business be placed in the hands of Clerk MacMurray, be to distribute it to the proper committees of the incoming Council.

Just before the adjournment a number of the Councilmen took occasion to pay a few compliments to one another just as part of a farewell.

With the close of these kind expressions, President Baker announced that the last session of the Council of 1898 stood adjourned.

BUSINESS MAN IS DEAD.

ALONZO T. AYRES' LIFE WENT OUT WITH THE OLD YEAR.

Taken Sick Early Last November With the Grip, Which Developed Into Hasty Consumption—Born in Plainfield.

The death of Alonzo Ayres, of Grant avenue, a member of the firm of Marsh, Ayres & Co., the Park avenue wall paper dealers and painters, occurred December 28th after an illness covering a period of several years which resulted in consumption. Mr. Ayres was born in this city, where he lived all his life. In his early days he attended the public schools in this city. By hard work and a great amount of energy he succeeded in establishing a good business, associating himself with Messrs. Marsh. In politics he was a staunch Republican and was a member of the Republican City Executive Committee for several years.

A few years ago he traveled west in the hopes that he would recover from his ill-health. His health did seem to improve, but when he returned home he perceptibly grew worse. He was a sufferer from a growth on the back of his neck, and this gave him a great deal of trouble.

Mr. Ayres was the son of William B. Ayres, of this city, and he leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss. His last illness detained him at home about three weeks. Last Sunday a consultation of physicians was held and it was then learned that he could not recover. Mr. Ayres was a member of the Knights of Pythias.

The funeral services were held from Hope chapel last Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

A small sharp-pointed stick attached to a chain on a wagon was the cause of Eddie Grob, aged 16 years, of 237 Manson place, losing his left eye Friday morning. The lad was riding in a wagon with a friend in the neighborhood of Clinton avenue. As the wagon struck a bump in the road the stick flew up and penetrated the boy's eye to such an extent that there was scarcely anything left of it. The globe of the eye was punctured and either today or tomorrow what is left of the injured member will be taken out and a glass eye will be placed in the socket.

Grob is the son of Mrs. Agnes Grob, a widow woman. The family is in moderate circumstances. The lad suffered excruciating pain from the injury. He was taken as quickly as possible to the hospital and proper treatment was given by those in charge.

GOOD CHEER AND GIFTS LEFT IN SANTA'S WAKE

The Genial Old Sprite Pays More Visits to Sunday-schools.

GENEROUS MAN HE SEEMS.

HIS COMING AND GOING MADE PLEASURE FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

Several Churches Held Their Yuletide Exercises for the Younger Generation Dec. 25th, But Some of the Older Ones Were There, too, to Enjoy the Compliments of the Season Shorn in Good Way.

These are busy nights for Santa Claus, and if he was a union man it might be expected that he would get double pay for his work, seeing that he puts in so much time, but in view of the fact that the old sprite enjoys his visits here and there quite as much as ordinary human beings he doesn't mind the hustling one bit—in fact, rather takes pleasure in it himself. The following are some of the places he visited Wednesday night, Dec. 28th:

ST. STEVENS EPISOPAL.

One hundred and fifty little ones went away from St. Steven's Episcopal church, Netherwood, Dec. 28th afternoon carrying their presents and boxes of candy, and with happy hearts. The Christmas entertainment was held at 5 o'clock, and consisted of the singing of hymns and carols, and an address by the rector. Then the lights were turned out, the Christmas tree was lighted, and the distribution of gifts began. There were dolls and toys for the little tots, boxes of candy and oranges for the older scholars, and fun and pleasure for everyone. The entertainment lasted until 6 o'clock, and was the best attended of any St. Stevens has held.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

The full choir were present at Grace church Dec. 28th, and the prescribed service of the Episcopal church for the mid-week Christmas festival, was held, with the addition of a few Christmas carols. Then an adjourdment to the chapel was taken, where there was a Christmas tree, lighted with candles, and trimmed prettily. The little ones were given dolls and toys, and all were remembered with candy and oranges.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

Jolly old Santa Claus made glad the hearts of the little ones at the entertainment of the Sunday school of the Holy Cross Dec. 28th. He brought with him presents galore for the children in the shape of dolls, games and toys of every description, and every child received a handsome present. There was a beautiful Christmas tree heavily ladened with brilliant ornaments, and the room was tastefully decorated with Christmas greens. Previous to the appearance of the famous old saint there was a short service conducted by the rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, assisted by Superintendent William A. Westphal, which consisted of singing of carols and reading of the Scriptures. The music was greatly enhanced by the assistance of J. Owen Smith, who played the cornet very acceptably. After the singing George H. Fountain gave a large number of excellent views of the life of the Christ-child thrown upon a large screen by a stereopticon. He gave an interesting and instructive talk upon the subjects while they appeared in view from time to time. Then followed recitations by the children, Westphal, Ethel and Bessie Reynolds, Dorothy James, Willie LaRue, and Willie Westphal, and a Christmas song by Miss Ethel Reynolds, which was very sweetly sung, and evoked considerable applause. Then came Santa Clause and the distribution of the presents, accompanied by a box of candy and an orange for each. Superintendent Westphal and each of the teachers were remembered as were also each of the choir boys. Altogether the affair was a most enjoyable one for all present. Santa Claus was ably impersonated by Horsley Barker, who was so completely disguised that his best friends would not have recognized him. The room was crowded during the evening with the scholars and their friends, many of whom were obliged to stand during the entertainment.

HOPE CHAPEL.

The Christmas entertainment at Hope chapel Dec. 28th was one of the most successful yet held. Counselliman F H Andrews had charge of the exercises. The regular programme consisted of a recitation by Miss Marie Newman, and one also by Arthur Lowe. Judge-elect Wm. N Runyon presided at the piano and he pleased his audience by singing several of the latest songs. A cantata of a musical character was given by the members of the Sunday-school. Other numbers on the programme consisted of a recitation by Miss Lossey and a violin solo by Mr. Lossey, accompanied by Mrs. Patton. After the rendition of the programme Santa Claus made his appearance in the form of B. W. Hand, who distributed gifts from the Christmas tree. One feature was the presentation of a handsome chair to Mrs. Hall by the members of her class of young men. The presentation was made by Alex. Muir and George Firstbrook.

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER.

The members of the Church of the Redeemer and Sunday-school assembled Dec. 28th in their church and enjoyed themselves greatly in celebrating Christmas. There was a good attendance and the exercises were interesting. A beautiful Christmas tree brilliantly illuminated was the joy of the children, and they greatly enjoyed the presents they received. During the evening the regular Christmas service of the Episcopal church was rendered. Rev. W. M. Downey, rector, was in charge. Superintendent A. E. Faber, Jr., looked after the Sunday-school and he was assisted by the teachers of the school. The presents received by all were appreciated, and several special presents were received by officers and teachers, as well as the rector.

WENT TO GET CASH; BUT GOT BLACK EYE.

ASSAILANT WAS HALED TO COURT.

New Mode Answer to Grand Jury for Hitting the Installment House Proprietor.

Meyer Leichtentritt, of Central avenue, who sells clothing on the installment plan, appeared in Justice Mosher's court last Thursday as complainant in an assault and battery case in which Henry Vandeveer, colored, of 508 West Third street, was the defendant.

Leichtentritt went to the above address Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock to see Mrs. Maggie Taylor about a bill she owed him, and which his regular collector had been unable to collect. He says that while talking to the woman, Vandeveer came up and ordered him from the house, at the same time administering a blow on Leichtentritt's left eye. The blow sent Leichtentritt through the door and out into the street, and after an unsuccessful search for an officer he went home.

Francis J. Blats represented Leichtentritt, and proved to the satisfaction of the Court that Leichtentritt had been assaulted, so Vandeveer was held in $100 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. Robert M. Clark was Vandeveer's attorney, and tried to prove that Leichtentritz first struck Vandeveer. Mrs. Taylor did say that, but Justice Mosher refused to allow the defendant to be put on the witness stand, and held him for the Grand Jury.

Leichtentritt's left eye was badly blackened, and he had other marks on his body as the result of the skirmish. Vandeveer is a more powerful looking man than the other, and must be strong according to Leichtentritt's description of the easy method he employes to eject unwelcome visitors.

DIED SUDDENLY AT BREAKFAST TABLE.

John Brooks Passed Away Thursday Morning.

WAS AN ACTIVE WORKER.

PROMINENT MAN IN THE PRINTING PRESS INDUSTRY.

Has Been Suffering From Heart Trouble for Some Time—It Finally Caused His Death—Was Government Inspector of Rifle Manufactories During the War—Served Twenty-five Years at Potter's.

After sixty years of active life, John Brooks, one of the leading workers in the printing press industry of the country, died suddenly in the breakfast room at his home, 517 Watchung avenue Thursday morning. While it has been known that he was suffering with heart trouble, the end came suddenly and unexpectedly.

Mr. Brooks has always been a very active man and has attended constantly to his business with much success. While well beyond the prime of life, he appeared in good health and spirits and showed no signs of feebleness. Tuesday evening he was compelled to go to New York on business and returned home late in the evening. The confinement in the hot, stuffy car and then the sudden change to the cold night air, brought on an attack of the nature of those of which he had previously suffered. He recovered from it with apparently no evil results.

Dec. 29th, he went to business as usual. Thursday he dressed and came down stairs to breakfast at 7:30 o'clock. He seated himself in a chair to await the arrival of the meal when he suddenly became faint. Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cooley, the latter of whom is his daughter, reside at the house with Mr. Brooks and his wife. They hurried to his side and then Drs. Hedges and Hallock were summoned.

The attack was of a more serious nature than any of the preceding ones and he never recovered consciousness. Before the physicians could reach the house he fell back in the chair dead after a struggle of short duration.

Mr. Brooks celebrated his sixtieth birthday last September. He was born at Bristol, England, and early showed a taste for mechanical works. After receiving a good education he was apprenticed at the business. He was employed in the Government armories and was a young man he came to this country.

His first efforts were directed to the manufactory of rifles, cannon and other fire-arms. When the war broke out, he stood so well that he was made government inspector of rifle manufactories. He afterwards turned his attention to the printing press and made many improvements in the rotary press.

He lived at Norwich, Conn., and afterwards went to Wyoming, Pa., from where he moved to Plainfield twenty years ago. For the past twenty-five years, until a year ago, he was connected with the Potter Press Works and was for many years superintendent of the same. His latter years there were devoted to many various improvements to the Potter presses. He had an inventive turn of mind and took much interest in the improvements.

Last January he left the Potter Press works and took a position as general manager of the Aluminum Plate and Press Company. He was one of the directors of that company. He continued with that corporation until the time of his death. He prepared a special kind of rotary press for use in the aluminum system.

He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. E. J. Cooley, of Watchung avenue, and Mrs. L. R. Schofield, of Kensington avenue. He was a Free Mason and a member of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar. He was an attendant at the Grace P. E. church.

New Drug Store?

It is reported that a drug store is to be opened at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, now occupied by Sigmund Frucht.

The foods we eat furnish energy for the body just as burning coal makes steam for an engine.

The experiments of Prof. Frankland, Ph. D., of London, shows that cod-liver oil yields two and one-half times more energy than starches or sweets.

Scott's Emulsion is pure cod-liver oil combined with hypophosphites of lime and soda. It forms fat, gives strength, enriches the blood, invigorates the nerves, and repairs tissues.

IN AGONY OF LOCKJAW A YOUNG LAD DIED.

Malady Brought On By Rusty Nail Piercing Foot.

LAST MOMENTS TERRIBLE.

SUFFERED EXCRUCIATING PAIN FROM THE DISEASE.

Victim Was Otto Hanagen, the Eleven-Year-Old Son of Contractor Fred Hanagen, of Grove Street—Stepped on the Nail a Week Ago Last Friday—Gave Him No Trouble for a Week.

Otto Hanagen, the eleven-year-old son of Contractor Fred Hanagen, of Grove street, died last Saturday evening from the effects of lockjaw. He suffered excruciating pains and his death was a terrible one.

One week ago last Friday young Hanagen was playing about his home when he accidentally stepped on a rusty nail that was fastened in an old piece of wood. The nail inflicted a small wound, but the lad paid little attention to the injury. In fact it gave him no trouble until last Friday morning. He then began to suffer terrible pains. His mother at once called Dr. Buchanan and the latter did all in his power to save the boy's life.

All efforts were useless, however, for the malady had been allowed to go to far. The doctor remained with the boy a good part of the time after he was called and he staid with him all of Friday night. On Saturday he was also with him, and was obliged to give the sufferer heavy opiates to overcome the terrible pains.

Toward night the worst came and and young Hanagen passed away. His parents are grief-stricken over the sad death of their son, who was taken away so early in life. They realize that all that medical skill could do was done for their son, but they are heart-broken.

INSTALLED THEIR OFFICERS.

Hand; assistant recording secretary, Michael Armstrong; financial secretary, Miss Alice Scribner; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah A. Mattox; conductor, William E. Koyer; assistant conductor, Mrs. David Bush; inside sentinel, Harry Martin; outside sentinel, W. E. Koyer; chaplain, Mrs. Nestor Corwin.

The usual New Year's Day "at home" was held in the Y. M. C. A. building Monday afternoon and evening. A large number of men were present. A gymnastic entertainment was given in the gymnasium in the afternoon and another entertainment in the hall in the evening.

PYTHIAN HONORS FOR LATE ALONZO AYERS.

SERVICES HELD IN HOPE CHAPEL.

Perseverance Lodge Conducted the Funeral Rites—Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral services of the late Alonzo Ayers, of Grant avenue, were held Sunday afternoon from Hope Chapel at 1:30 o'clock. Considering the weather there was a large attendance of friends and relatives. A large delegation of members from Crescent Division, No. 13, U. R. Knights of Pythias, and Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and Exempt Firemen's Association was present and the funeral service of the K. of P. order was carried out during the services. The services were in charge of Rev. O. Kennedy Newell, pastor of the chapel, they too was assisted by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

After the remarks the officers of the Knights of Pythias took charge and conducted their service according to the rites of the order. This service was very impressive. The display of floral offerings was beautiful and large. Among those who attended the service were many prominent in business and political circles.

Interment was at Hillside. There was no service at the grave on account of the severe cold weather, although the members of the Knights of Pythias accompanied the remains to the last resting place.

SIPPED TEA AND CHATTED.

Miss Patterson Gave an Informal Affair to a Few of Her Friends.

Miss Patterson, of Central avenue, gave an informal but very pretty tea Saturday last. She was assisted in receiving by her guest Miss Harvey, of Wilmington, Delaware. Mrs. George D. Mellick and Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson presided at the tea table, which the Misses Katharyn Wood, Bowen, Pierson and Schuyler were assidious in their attentions to the guests. Notwithstanding the severe storm the attendance was quite large and the company had a merry time.

Where are the Lights

The people living on West Fifth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue, are complaining because the electric lights which the Council ordered placed on that street have never been put in position. They say that the Council ordered the lights in October. The poles were erected last month, but nothing further has been done with them.

Miss Glenn Sang.

The special Christmas service was given at the First Presbyterian church last Sunday evening and was rendered in a meritorious manner. Miss Glenn, soprano soloist, sang the solo parts, and Frederick Schilling, organist, was present, having fully recovered from his recent illness. Owing to the bitter cold weather, the attendance was not as large as hoped for.

Train Was Too Heavy.

An unusually long freight train was obliged to stop in this city last Sunday evening owing to the fact that the engine could not proceed with such a heavy train. Another engine was sent for and the train was divided. The difficulty was occasioned by the intense cold weather.

FACING THE THIRD YEAR.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES OF THE MONROE AVENUE METHODISTS.

Celebration Commenced With a Watch Meeting Saturday Night—Former Pastor Spoke—Large Growth of the Society

The members of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal church have entered on the third year of their existence as a church, and beginning last Sunday they will continue to celebrate their second anniversary the remainder of this week. The anniversary exercises began Saturday night with a watch-night service, which was continued all day Sunday.

The storm Saturday night interfered with the attendance but little, for despite the gale there were a good many present for such a service. It began at 9:30 o'clock with devotional exercises and closed just after the birth of the new year.

The annual report, a historical sketch by the pastor, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, Ph. D., was one of the features of the evening. Beginning where the late James McGee, who was the last historian, had left off, and quoting the closing words of Mr. McGee's paper, which were, "Who can tell to whom death will come in this coming year of 1898," Mr. O'Donnell said that the death of James McGee was the one occurrence that overshadowed them. One hundred and thirty-nine members were enrolled on the church books at the April conference, including full members and those on probation.

The pastor read the financial reports of the different organizations attached to the church.

The Sunday-school received $304.19 during the year, spent $265.35, and has a balance of $38.84 with which to start the new year on. The Ladies' Aid Society raises money for the current expenses of the church. They raised $1,291.88 last year, paid to the church treasurer $1,159.06, and have a balance of $87.85, after deducting enough for their own expenses.

A King's Daughters Circle, known as "Mizpah Circle," has been organized as the result of a hint given in the last report by Mr. McGee. The pastor alluded also to the loss by death of Mrs. William C. Burt and Mrs. Taft.

During an intermission, cake and coffee were served, and a chance given the people to converse with one another until 11 o'clock, when Mr. O'Donnell began a review of the important events in this country's history during the year just past.

This was followed by a love feast led by Rev. W. C. Nelson, of the borough, and was continued until a few minutes before 12 o'clock, when the singing of hymns was begun and kept up until after midnight, so the old year was sung out and the new year greeted with songs of praise.

The services Sunday were of a congratulatory nature. In the morning a communion service was held and seven new members, one from probation and six by letter, were received. At 3 o'clock the anniversary sermon was preached by Rev. Herbert B. Munson, a former pastor of the church, when it was only a chapel, but who is now pastor of the Methodist church at Amityville, L. I.

Mr. Munson preached from Isaiah, "And the man shall be as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." In his sermon Mr. Munson alluded to Mr McGee in tender terms.

A WONDERFUL PIE.

Children Pulled a String and Out Popped a Present.

Instead of the customary Christmas tree the little folks at Al Soule' church were treated to a surprise Monday in the shape of a Christmas pie. A large pie made of pasteboard, paper, etc., was placed on the table around which the children sat. From the middle of the pie and running to each one's plate was a ribbon which, when pulled, drew forth from the depths of the pie the present intended for that one.

The entertainment was a novel one and a great success. The gifts were useful ones, books, games, etc., and the entertainment lasted from 4 until 7 o'clock. The parents of the children were treated to ice cream and cake, and all had a share of candies. Much credit is due to E. Barr Smith, the superintendent of the Sunday-school, and the teachers for the success of the affair.

Sermon by Prof. B. Bush Rhees.

Rev. B. Bush Rhees, of the Newton Theological Seminary, Massachusetts, preached a deeply interesting sermon Sunday morning in the First Baptist church. From the text "The Stone Which the Builders Rejected the Same has Become the Head of the Corner," he deduced many practical thoughts, claiming that our pride in Christian civilization and our hopes for a more thoroughly Christian civilization are proofs of the acknowledged supremacy of Christ.

A Year's at Home.

A pretty at home was given Monday afternoon at 39 Somerset street by Miss Kate and Miss Sadie Blimm, assisted by Miss K. Florence Brown, Miss Olive Brown and Miss Sadie Brown.

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

time to time, upon consideration of questions of grave importance, invited these men and others to give to the Council and its committees the benefit of their views. The message of the proposed reorganization of the fire department impressed me as one upon which a similar course might properly be taken, and I recommend the plan for consideration to your Honorable Body.

SEWERAGE.

The recommendations of the Street Committee in its report of December 29th last, I strongly approve. Besides the obligation imposed by law upon the city to exercise a high degree of care in the management of the city's sewerage system, there is a special moral obligation resting upon the city and owing to the owners of property most contiguous to the sewerage beds, and to that section of the city nearest to them and to our municipal neighbor at Dunellen, to make this public improvement as little objectionable as it possibly can be made. Such a spirit has governed the action of the city authorities up to this time and will undoubtedly continue so to do. The suit for ten thousand dollars damages brought by one of the nearby property owners against the city for alleged injuries by reason of the maintenance of the sewer beds is one of the most important suits which the city has been called upon to defend for many years, and the city's rights should be defended to the utmost, both because of the large damages claimed and the danger that if plaintiff should succeed, it would be but a signal for many other like claims against the city, and the further danger that upon recovery of several verdicts in such cases, the Court of Chancery would perhaps have power to grant injunction to prevent the further maintenance of the city's sewerage system. The city has taken a firm stand in this matter, claiming to have acted strictly in accordance with the law and to have exercised due care and skill in the performance of its duties. As suggested in the report referred to, the city should go even further than this, and if it errs at all it should err on the side of too much care.

POLICE.

I heartily approve of the wisdom of the ordinance that will become a law in a few days, whereby regular policemen of Plainfield will be given a tenure of office during good behavior, efficiency and residence in the city. The present police force is finely disciplined and has reached most efficient service. The enactment of the ordinance giving them an independent tenure ought so, and doubtless will, stimulate them to maintain in all respects their present standing, and on the other hand no instance of willful misconduct should be permitted to pass unnoticed.

LICENSE.

Under the amendment to the liquor license ordinance approved July 13th last, those who at present hold license and who have not heretofore been convicted of violating any city ordinance or any law of the State may be granted a renewal of their present license without first presenting any recommendation of citizens or freeholders. Inasmuch as the first proceedings under this ordinance will doubtless be brought before the Council early in the year, it is proper to direct your Honorable Body's attention to the fact that the granting or refusing of such an application for renewal is, by the ordinance, made expressly discretionary with the Common Council, except in case the applicant shall have heretofore been convicted of violating any city ordinance or any State law. If any applicant has been convicted as aforesaid, he cannot be granted a license under the amendment in question, but must needs make application as heretofore.

GARBAGE.

There has been presented to me a petition subscribed by many prominent citizens and tax-payers requesting that the city undertake, under a recent law, the collection and removal of garbage and ashes at the general expense. The respect due to the signers of that petition impels me to submit the matter for such action by your Honorable Body as, upon due consideration, shall be deemed wise, and the petition in question will be filed with the City Clerk.

TIME FOR PAYMENT OF TAXES.

By reason of the fact that taxes in this city do not become delinquent until the 20th of December, although payable on the first day of October, the city has been required to borrow large sums in anticipation of tax collections. Two methods of reducing the amount required to be borrowed have been suggested. The first method was to change the fiscal year, so as to make taxes payable in the spring, or, at any rate, much earlier than October 1st, and to correspondingly advance the date on which taxes should become delinquent. It would seem, however, an insurmountable objection to this plan that the terms of office of members of the Common Council would not then be coincident with the fiscal year. It would seem to be practicable, however, to make the date of delinquency a month or more earlier than at present, and I recommend adoption of an ordinance with that end in view. The other method referred to consists in providing for a slight discount upon taxes that shall be paid earlier than the date on which they become finally payable. This method is already in use in several municipalities in this State, and as is well-known, in the city of New York and elsewhere. No statute, however, has been found which authorizes such a practice in this city. The charters of several cities in this State expressly confer such power upon their respective city governments, but there is no such provision in our charter, and therefore I recommend that the Common Council petition the Legislature to pass a general law under which the benefit of such a practice may be obtained by Plainfield.

For many years, the conduct of municipal affairs in this city has received commendation from Judges and other prominent citizens throughout the State. Without doubt, the city has gained such enviable reputation not merely because of the high character of our public officials in the past, but in large measure because of the rule so constantly applied here that the Mayor and Common Council ought to be governed in their official action by the same principles which they apply in successfully conducting their own business. I stand ready to co-operate with your Honorable Body on those principles during the coming year, and invite the freest interchange of opinion in order to secure harmonious action looking to the public welfare.

George W. Rockfellow, Mayor.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules said: I have known Dr. ——— for many years, and I assert that if one wished to become a philanthropist and do a benefit deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Tabules. Compiled in the Materia Medica of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a lozenge and distributed among the poor.

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co., on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who stood near by at the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constantly increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of them. Enough to recommend any article. Enough of them. I take great pride in my friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are used a recommendation is unnecessary. The consumer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the best advertisement. Ripans Tabules are of them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I was ill, but found at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules highly recommended highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have not employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were any less dollar." At the time of this interview the reporter noticed two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which would appear in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and if so I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling of my case in the papers will induce some other person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, on hearing the facts about the benefit she had received, I decided she was quite right.

AFTERMATH OF WRECK.

A Tragic Story Of How An Eloping Couple From Mt. Carmel Met Their Death.

LATE DEVELOPMENTS ABOUT THE DISASTER.

MORE OF THE DEAD VICTIMS IDENTIFIED AND SENT TO THEIR LATE HOMES.

With the Exception of Engineer Rick and the Borreca Baby, the Injured Passengers at the Hospital Will Probably Recover—Great Excitement at Shamokin When Survivors Arrived Home—Express Had the Right of Way, It Is Said.

In the aftermath of the great disaster on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Greenbrook "tanks," Monday afternoon, there comes the story of a quiet little romance suddenly cut short by the awful catastrophy. The young man, known by the initials on his cuff-buttons, "J. J.," who died at the Muhlenberg Hospital early Tuesday, was yesterday identified as Jacob Joseph, Jr., of Mt. Carmel, Pa., who was on his way at the time of the accident to New York to be married to Miss May Schminskey, of Mt. Carmel. Late yesterday afternoon the body of the young woman at the Bound Brook morgue, whose head was crushed beyond recognition, was identified by the clothing as that of the soon-to-be bride.

Young Joseph and Miss Schminskey have kept company for two years. They were the children of reputable families in Mt. Carmel. The parents objected to the marriage, believing that the young people were too young for such a step as yet. The marriage laws in Pennsylvania are very strict, making it difficult for young people to marry without the consent of their parents. New Jersey offers the same objections. When the chance of a cheap excursion to New York came, the young people decided to take advantage of it and the more liberal laws of New York, incidentally seeing the great metropolis on their wedding tour.

So they bought tickets for the business men's excursion and took the third section of the Hazleton express with the other excursionists. They occupied a seat together forward in the first car of the train.

It is evident that she turned toward him when the crash came, for the head is turned toward one side and horribly crushed. The features are almost indistinguishable. She was killed instantly. She wore a grey plaid shirt, a red plaid waist and a black coat. She is said to have been quite pretty.

He was taken from the wreck unconscious. Most of the clothing was torn from the body. There was a deep wound right between his eyes and his nose was cut. He suffered from concussion of the brain. He had a smooth face and dark hair and was a handsome man. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he died at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Yesterday morning his body, together with those of A. Allgier and H. E. Weikel, who also died at the hospital from injuries received at the wreck, were brought to A. M. Runyon's establishment.

Yesterday afternoon, a delegation of citizens from Mt. Carmel and Shamokin, Pa., came to Plainfield under the direction of H. S. Smith, of the Lehigh Valley detective force. They viewed the body of the young man which was promptly identified by B. F. Davis, a relative. The bodies were placed in caskets and shipped home from South Plainfield late yesterday afternoon.

Tuesday passed quietly at Muhlenberg Hospital. With so many patients to look after, however, Miss Moss and her corps of nurses are kept busy all the time. Edward W. Rick, of Bound Brook, the engineer of the Bound Brook local, is in a very critical condition. The ribs on his left side are broken, the jagged points of them having penetrated the lungs. His wife, who is only a mere girl, and two little babies are at his home on East street, Bound Brook. There is little change in the condition of little Henry John Borreca, and it is feared that he cannot recover.

The other patients at the hospital are all doing well and the physicians in charge are confident in the belief that they will all recover. Decided improvement is noted in the condition of many. William Cheshire, firemen in the engine of the Bound Brook local, is much better. His injuries are not as serious as was first believed.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

Engineer Pendergast Was Following Instructions When Collision Occurred.

There are countless rumors afloat regarding the cause of the Lehigh Valley railroad disaster. A story, that eminates from an apparently trustworthy authority, throws some light on the matter. It is alleged that when the third section of the Hazleton express reached Bound Brook and was switched to the west bound track to pass the freight wreck, a despatch was given to Engineer Pendergast, of the express, instructing him to take the west bound track from Bound Brook to New Market and proceed to the latter place at once. There is a switch at New Market where he might have returned to the east bound track again. He was, it is claimed, following out these directions when the collision came.

The message from the train despatcher at Easton, containing these alleged directions, is said to have been in Pendergast's pocket when the accident occurred. It is known that when Pendergast recovered consciousness at the Muhlenberg Hospital late Monday afternoon he particularly requested that the papers in his working blouse be carefully preserved for future reference. They were removed from the pocket and locked up in a safe place by the hospital authorities The important message, which, if as stated will completely exonerate Pendergast, is alleged to be one of these papers.

If the facts concerning this message are correct, as they have every semblance of being, it throws the responsibility on the train despatcher, the operator at South Plainfield or the engineer of the Bound Brook local.

PREACHER'S STORY.

Rev. John Harris Goes Back to the Coal Regions on Sad Errand.

Shamokin, Pa., Jan. 10.—A special train brought home Rev. John Harris, of Mount Carmel, who was in the terrible wreck Monday on the railroad at Dunellen, N. J. He was sent by the Lehigh Valley officials to give information as to the killed and injured, many of whom were from this locality, Mr. Harris' clothes were stained with the blood of victims he had helped to take from the wreck. It was part of his work at the scene of disaster to identify those carried out, and to fasten their names on slips of paper to their clothing.

An excited crowd fairly bore him from the train at Mount Carmel and went with him to his home. Then they packed in around him while he told the sad story.

"All the passengers killed were struck by flying seats, and their heads mostly suffered the fatal wounds, while the injured sustained broken legs and other fractures, and injuries from seats driven by the force of the engine. The last man caught in the wreckage was Attorney L. S. Walter, of Mt. Carmel. He was two seats ahead of myself and pinned down. While in that position he heroically directed the saving of others. When extricated Mr. Walter's left ankle was found to be broken and his right foot badly sprained.

"My escape was remarkable, the tank having stopped in its desolating track two seats in front of the one I occupied. The great shock threw one dead body against me and I was covered with blood."

CURIOSITY SAVED THEM.

New Market Man Sat in Rear Car so as to See the Freight Wreck.

William Coriell and Stanley Day, of New Market, were two passengers in the ill-fated local train in the wreck Monday. Both of them got off without serious injuries. They got on the local at New Market, and at first were going forward in the smoker, but thinking of the wreck that had occurred in the morning, they changed their minds and took seats in the rear car, with their backs to the engine. They sat near the door, so as to see what remained of the wreck when they came to it. When the shock came both men were thrown backwards with terrific force.

Coriell's legs, arms and back were strained and stiffened, and Day's arms and face were cut. Day wore a derby hat, which, when it was picked up, was found to be all smashed and cut

Day thinks that he owes his whole skull to that hat, for it took the force of the shock instead of his head. The shock threw both men back over three seats, and the force with which they came down, broke the iron arm of one of them.

One of the eye-witnesses of the accident on the Lehigh Valley Monday was John J. Killian, of Elizabethport, a section hand of Foreman Thorn's gang. He was working on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad. He related his experiences to a reporter Tuesday afternoon. He says that when the engines were twenty yards apart the engineer of the westbound local jumped backward from his cab. Then the locomotives met, reared up into the air and fell over. Killian was hurried to the scene and assisted in the removal of the dead and dying from the wreck.

AT BOUND BROOK.

Bound Brook, January 11.—The grewsome evidences of the Lehigh Valley Railroad disaster are fast disappearing. Last night a special train on the Lehigh Valley road bore off ten of the bodies, enclosed in caskets, from the undertaking establishment of DeMott & Edgerton. They included the bodies of two of the women who were identified late in the afternoon.

A committee of citizens from Mt. Carmel identified the body of the young woman as Miss May Schmisskey, who had eloped with Jacob Joseph, Jr., who they had previously identified in Plainfield.

Two young lads came here from Shamokin during the afternoon and identified the body of the elderly woman with the rings as Mrs. C. Parrish, of Shamokin, Pa., their mother.

It seems probable that there will be no coroner's inquest over the disaster According to the laws of the State, it is not necessary to hold an inquest when the blame for the accident lies so manifestly with the railroad officials.

Coroner Moke has not yet received any instructions from County Physician Long, of Middlesex, with whom the responsibility of calling the inquest lies.

The Middlesex county authorities believe it better to let the matter go direct to the Grand Jury which will fix the responsibility.

ANOTHER LEHIGH FATALITY.

Train Carrying People to Identify Victims of Wreck Kills a Carpenter.

Bound Brook, Jan. 11.—A special train yesterday brought a delegation from the mining regions in Pennsylvania to Bound Brook, with the object of trying to definitely identify the unrecognized victims of Monday's wreck near West Dunellen.

While the train was passing over the bridge near Bound Brook it ran over and killed James Bond, who was employed by the Lehigh Valley as a carpenter.

FINE BUSINESS OFFICES.

Prudential's Business Expands so as to Require More Room.

J. Elston Woodland, superintendent Plainfield branch of the Prudential Insurance Company, has added to the beauty and usefulness of his offices over the City National Bank, by the addition of new office furniture and partitions, in polished oak. A portion of the large unused hallway in the building has also been thrown into the offices which gives more much needed room for his force of employees. Mr. Woodland justly feels proud of the fact that a grand banquet will be served in Plainfield to him and his staff by the officers of the company, at some place yet to be announced on Tuesday evening, January 31st, in recognition of the increased business that has come to the company the past year under the management of Mr. Woodland and his assistants.

Rev. F. E. Peterson, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, and Rev. A. E. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city, will exchange pulpits Saturday morning.

No Smoking Allowed.

The work of improvements is now complete at the North Avenue station, and several signs are noticed in the men and women's waiting room warning persons not to smoke.

SERMON ON THE WRECK.

THE RAILROAD DISASTER SUGGESTS THOUGHTS OF CHRISTIANITY.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass Pointed Out the Unexpected Danger for Which all Should be Prepared—Text Given to the Hospital.

The second one of the union services was held in the First Presbyterian church Tuesday. Seven of the ministers connected with the churches were present, and almost all of them took some part in the services.

The meeting opened with a short service of song led by L. H. Bisbow, Jr., Rev. Dr. Richards read the Scripture lesson and offered prayer, and then Rev. A. E. Main read the story about the good Samaritan before the offering was taken up. Rev. Mr. Main explained in a few words why it was that Muhlenberg Hospital deserved financial aid just at this time, and said that the offering taken would be sent to the hospital to reimburse them for the expenses they have been under, due to the wreck at West Dunellen.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass preached the sermon, in which he likened the attraction of a pebble to this earth of ours to the attraction between the Christian and his God.

In his discourse the speaker related an incident connected with a railroad journey he took over the Alleghany mountains some time ago, and how the engineer drove his train over the rocky road at what seemed to be reckless speed. The passengers grew frightened, until one of them, who seemed very much alarmed, asked the conductor who the engineer was. At the mention of the man's name she grew calm, for it seemed he was a neighbor of her's and was considered the best engineer on the road.

While Rev. Mr. Snodgrass related this little incident the church was as still as could be, and it was interesting to notice with what evident feeling the congregation listened to its recital. The memory of Monday's accident was so fresh in their minds.

After the sermon an after meeting for prayer was held to which many stayed. No union meeting was held last night as it was not the committee's intention to interfere at all with the regular Wednesday night prayer meetings, but this evening they will be continued and Rev. Dr. Richards will preach.

The collection, when counted, amounted to $30. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell was appointed to count it and to carry it to the hospital today. Anyone desiring to add to the amount can do so through any of the pastors of the churches.

PROTEST OF PROPERTY-OWNERS.

Hearing of the Objections to the Union County Boulevard Scheme Postponed.

Elizabeth, Jan. 11—The property-owners who object to the award of the commissioners in the matter of the Westfield avenue boulevard were on hand in force in the Union County Court yesterday morning, when the matter came up before Justice Van-Syckel for a hearing. The objectors were also well represented by legal talent, and it was evident that they were prepared to put up a formidable fight against the proposed taking of their lands for the new boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield. The objectors who appeared yesterday were from Union township alone.

Justice VanSyckel said that on account of having to attend to important matters in Trenton, the hearing of the objectors would be postponed until Monday, January 23d, when the Court would be prepared to listen to all objections in the matter.

HE TARRIED TOO LONG.

Netherwood Man Delivered His Cordwood and Then Imbibed Freely.

Fred Burlsteder, aged fifty years, a resident of Netherwood, came to Plainfield Tuesday afternoon and delivered a load of wood to a man on Second street. The purchaser of the wood not being home he was unable to receive his money. Burlsteder drove across the brook with his team and began to visit saloons. About 1:30 o'clock this morning Marshal Winn found a team of horses with a wagon wandering about the borough. The owner, who was Burlsteder, was trying to get into the wagon, but his condition was such he could not. The officer arrested him and placed the rig in the stable at Dreyer's Hotel on Somerset street. This morning the prisoner was arraigned and fined $10, which was paid by his brother-in law.

An Article By Mrs. Bulkley.

In The Forum for January there appears a strong article on "Social Ethics in the Schoolroom," written by Miss Julia E. Bulkley, formerly principal of the Plainfield High school, now assistant professor of pedagogy in the University of Chicago.

DEVELOPMENT OF NATION

PROF. MACE MADE A GOOD PICTURE OF BY-GONE DAYS

Reviewed the Beginning of Organized National Existence, With Strong Word Portraits of Washington and Jefferson.

The history of the United States is a favorite subject with loyal Americans, and, at the close of a year when the country's history has been making so fast, is especially appropriate that the lectures in the University Extension movement should arrange for a series of lectures on "The Development of the Nation." Such a series of lectures was begun Tuesday, the lecture being given, as before, in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the lecturer being William H. Mace, Ph. D, professor of history and political science in Syracuse University.

Mr. Mace looked more like a business man than like the typical student. He was an easy and business-like speaker, however, and made the picture of by-gone days very real to his audience. In beginning his lecture he spoke of the great importance of the study of history, and begged all the University Extension students to make the lecture course of as much benefit as possible to themselves by careful reading on the subject, and by the writing of papers on the topics given in the appendix to the lecture syllabus.

The first lecture told of the beginnings of organized national existence. At the close of the Revolution there was no national organization. There were indefinite national boundaries, the population was small and scattered, the people were largely farmers, there were no ocean steamers, no railways, stages were the most rapid means of transportation, and the knowledge of science possessed by the most learned men was less than that now possessed by those who live further from the centres of culture.

All these matters were briefly dwelt upon by Mr. Mace, who then turned to the political situation. Strong portraits of the two great actors in the post-revolutionary drama, Washington and Jefferson, were drawn. The first election was described, with its childlike stratagems for obtaining the desired result. Washington's policy, the chief events of his administration, the anti-Federal party, the election of Jefferson, and the surprising policy adopted by him, formed the larger part of the lecture. Mr. Mace's treatment of the "critical period" of American history showed him to be thoroughly conversant with the subject, and a clear and logical thinker along historical lines.

ADMIRAL DEWEY PENS A LETTER TO SI DRAKE

THE MAYOR USES THE HERO'S NAME.

The Lincoln Man Gets a Nice Epistle From the Admiral Stationed at Manila.

Lincoln, January 11.—Silas D. Drake Mayor of Lincoln, wrote Admiral Dewey, at Manila, last October, that he had appropriated the latter's name to represent the "D" in his cognomen, as the middle letter had been given him a child and he never knew what name it represented. It gives me great pleasure to assure you of my appreciation of the compliment. As a slight token I am instructed you to know that I had a cousin, now dead, by the name of Silas Dewer Place. With kind regards,

Yours very truly,

UNION COUNTY WELL TREATED AT TRENTON.

Her Assemblymen Placed on Important Committees.

LEGISLATURE CONVENED.

SENATOR REED WAS DULY ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

Oath of Office Administered—Officers Elected and Committees Appointed—George W. Cooper, of Somerville, Made Bill Clerk of the Senate—The Shore of the Union County Men—Reed's Speech. (By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, Jan. 11.—Trenton has once more become the centre of interest in State affairs. Yesterday saw the opening of the winter sessions of both branches of the New Jersey Legislature. They were convened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and the customary organization formed, as related in yesterday's Daily Press, while the usual convening ceremonies occupied the balance of the afternoon.

After the Assemblymen and newly-elected Senators had taken the oath of office, the list of officers agreed upon at the Republican caucus were elected. First, of course, was the election of David O. Watkins, of Gloucester, to the Speakership of the House, after which he called Assemblyman Squier, of Elizabeth, to the chair and retired to the executive chamber, leaving the Union county man in charge. Among the other officers was William Kline, of Plainfield, who was made a doorkeeper.

In the appointment of Assembly committees Union has been well remembered. The chairmanships of two important committees and one of lesser importance have been distributed in that delegation, together with the three chairmanships in the Assembly joint committees.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield, promises to be a prominent figure in the Assembly this winter. He has been appointed chairman of the committee on banks and insurance, chairman of the joint committee on the Industrial School for Girls, and a member of the committees on riparian rights and on towns and townships.

Assemblyman George W. Squire, of Elizabeth, will be chairman of the committee on corporations, a member of the committee on supposed bills and revision of laws, and a member of the joint committees on State prisons and treasurer's accounts.

As the share of Assemblyman Robert Houston, there is the chairmanship of the committee on stationary, chairmanship on the joint committee on federal relations, and membership in the committee on education and on labors and industries.

Somerset country, having a new representative who is not well acquainted with the workings of the House, did not receive anything startling in the committee appointments, although well treated. Assemblyman John Cooper, of Warrenville, was a member of the committees on claims and revolutionary pensions, militia, and unfinished business, and chairman of the joint committee on sinking fund. Under the present state of affairs in the country, the membership on the committee on militia is by far the most important and is quite an honor for the new Somerset man.

In the Senate the lalgor of the oath, the election of officers, the appointment of committees and the address by President Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, occupied the afternoon.

Senator W. M. Johnson, of Bergen, nominated Senator Reed for President of the Senate, and he was elected by a party vote.

In the election of the officers, Geo. W. Cooper, of Somerville, was made bill clerk with a salary of $600. Mr. Cooper has been prominent in Somerset county affairs as a supporter of Senator Reed against Chancery Clerk L. A. Thompson, and was Reed's candidate for the nomination for surrogate against N. B. Spencer.

Although a new member of the State Senate, Senator John Cross, of Elizabeth, the Union county representative, was well remembered in the arrangement of committees. He was made chairman of the committee on Boroughs and Townships, a member of the Senate committees on Revision of Laws and Elections, and a member of the joint committees on Passed Bills and on the Reform School for Boys.

On being elected to office, President of the Senate Reed made a short speech in which he thanked the Senate for the honor conferred upon him. He made the suggestion to the com-

THE COMING STYLES.

PLAIN, SLIM EFFECTS ARE ORDERED BY DAME FASHION.

Skirts of Anatomical Fit—Chances for Women to Adapt the Modes to Their Individual Needs—The Tunic Princess—Changes in Sleeves.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

Within certain limits this is a sort of a go-as-you-please, wear-what-you-please season in modes, for there is every kind of coat between a bolero and a redingote, every conceivable variety of trimming, with a greater variety in skirts than ever. One of the most telling secrets of distinction in dress is some combination of materials and colors which is entirely novel. So if you can originate some quaint idea like you can add the desired chic appearance to your gown.

Every woman has her pet conviction as to her infallible judgment and superior taste, yet very few master the subtle art of adapting the fashions to individual needs. A Frenchman's rule for success in becoming dress is that the face should be younger than the costume, remembering always that if you ignore your defects other people will not be so charitable.

Dress is a strong influence in a woman's life which she cannot afford to overlook, but it is the ethical side of the question which has no place in a fashion article, that is most interesting. It is astonishing how quickly we become accustomed to new fashions, how soon the old modes lose their charm. One fashion is hardly established in fame before another is thrust out for approval, and so it goes on through incessant changes until it would seem that they must crystallize into some point just back of novelty.

It was only a short time ago that we were forewarned that all our skirts must be flounced, or trimmed generously in some other way, and now it is announced that the latest and most fashionable skirt is quite plain, fastening invisably in front or buttoning down the back. In theory this is much the same skirt that came to us early in the season, but the latest edition is so very plain, so extremely anatomical in cut and fit, that ease and convenience are not on the list of its virtues. From the knees down it has a pretty flare, supplemented at the back by a round pointed train, very much like a bride's tail in shape.

Again, it is only the slim, well rounded figure that can hope to adorn this plain skirt, so the usual modifications are to follow in its wake. The fitted bounce is losing ground, and the pretty flare is given by shaping the seams. Most of the skirts yet in sight have some sort of trimming, one of the prettiest in cloth being waved bands overlapping one another from the knee the skirt proper and, while religiously tight fitting and close as possible down to the knee, the fact that it is loose at the edge and a separate garment from the skirt gives it a more graceful effect. It requires a perfect form to be a success and an expert dressmaker to master the difficulties of fitting it. The surest way of carrying out this fashion is to trim the skirt in the form of a tunic, and with a narrow belt at the waist the effect is very good.

The cloth gown made with a redingote is one of the season's favorites and gains popularity. The skirt is cut with a deep circular flounce, and the redingote, also cut circular and quite close fitting around the hips, reaches nearly to the hem of the skirt at the back and rounds in front or at one side, where it fastens. The velvet portion is interlined with flannel, so that it is quite warm enough for street wear except in the coldest weather.

Brown seems to be one of the leading colors among the new gowns, which, trimmed with bands of cloth in a much lighter shade and bands of sable fur, are very stylish.

The difference between the latest mode in sleeves and those of three months ago, to say nothing of last season, is very noticeable. It is a simple matter to discriminate, since the really new sleeve is quite innocent of any gathers at the top.

Boas are of various lengths, trimmed with many tails, and shaped around the neck so they can be worn standing, like a high collar, or flat on the shoulder cape and a fur jacket being very slight in some instances. Mink and sealskin, seal and sable, and seal and chinchilla are very fashionable combinations. One very odd cape of Alaska sable has a Persian lamb yoke, very carefully fitted and finished with tully six tails on each shoulder. High fur collars, faced on the inside with fulled cream lace, which continues down the front in a jabot or ties like a scarf, are very becoming.

A little pointed cape meeting the sleeve on the shoulder, made with long stole ends, is very stylish, but there is simply no end to the novelties in fur. A muff with the head of an animal at one end and the tail at the other is shown as new, which it certainly is, but the usual muff is large and round, with or without a row of tails across the front.

Woman should not be tempted by the display of fancy kid gloves to be seen by many. They are simply hopelessly bad form. The Parisians are the best gloved women in the world, and the style of wearing suede gloves in white and delicate shades of tans, grays and browns prevails among them from year to year.

Long coats are more worn this winter than they have been in years. Unless it is of fine material, well cut and better fitted, it is about the cheapest looking garment. When it has the right fit on the right figure, it is simply stunning.

Fancy muffs are far finer than ever before. The prettiest are made of a combination of marabout feathers, chiffon and velvet. One of the muffs but a muff of mosquito netting, unlined at that, would serve just as well so far as keeping the cold out goes.

The latest fad is for a crush belt of broad velvet ribbon of brilliant hue, such as burnt orange, yellow that would shame a ripe lemon, bullright red and blue that makes Yale blue pale before it. These belts, unfortunately, are only suited to very slender girls, because they are put around the waist in front, crossed in the back and fastened in front with a fancy buckle. Velvet has a tendency to make the waist look larger, and crossed in this way actually makes a thin girl look plump.

Imported French fans are quite small, made of the finest of fine parchment in most cases and decorated by the finest fan painters in Paris. Flowers take the lead in their decoration, and one covered with wide-open American Beauties and buds is stunning. Even the sticks are painted.

Many women wear low shoes throughout the winter. Doctors say that such women are wanting in common sense.

Pastry for Mince Pies.

A light, rich pastry can be made with half a pound of butter, and six ounces of lard to every pound of flour. Rub the lard into the flour, adding a little salt; make into a smooth dry paste with cold water. Flour the pasteboard, roller, and hands, then roll out the pastry into a long oval shape. Place a third of the butter on it in little dabs, dredge with flour, fold in three, and roll out again. Use another third of the butter, and proceed as before. After the last portion of butter has been used, put away the pastry on ice, or in a cool place, for half an hour, before the pies are made. For these, grease the tins, which should not be too small; roll out the pastry to the thickness of the eighth of an inch, line the tins with it. Partly fill with mincemeat, wet the edges, put on the cover, and make a hole in the top to let out the steam.

Husband—I have just had my portrait taken. What do you think of it?

Wife—Beautiful, dear; I wish you would look like it sometimes.

"I wonder why it is said that rumors fly?"

"Well, they usually have no ground to stand on."

A QUICK SURRENDER.

BY HAL FOSTER HARRINGTON.

Amy Willis took up her assignment slip, and read, "Go to South Carolina; get a story of the storm of the 5th, from inhabitants of rice plantations on the C— River."

At 6 p. m. she was comfortably settled in a south bound car. In her heart was unalloyed pleasure. First, she was returning to her home and people; second, it was a professional honor to be chosen to go on this mission. Perhaps her hard work was to bear fruit at last. Third, she was pleased to be rid of a certain importunate wooer. She was sure he would take the first train. Yes, she had written him only yesterday, as final, and it would be a relief to both of them to be out of each other's way for a time.

It was a glorious winter day in the South. Crisp, fresh, inspiring.

Down the old avenue of oaks came a quaint one-horse, lookin' wagon. Four boards on four immensely high wheels surmounted by a shaky seat, composed the "dog-cart" as its owner called it. Why, she alone knew. It was drawn by a gaunt white plough-horse, who fell over himself at every step.

Sitting on the shaky elevation was an old lady, wrapped in a green plaid shawl. On her head was a bonnet known in that part of the country as a "chicken." It resembled a shaker's headgear. She sat as firmly erect as Miss Betsy Trotwood of stately memory.

By her side, looking like a blithe young robin in suit of brown and red, sat Miss Willis—special correspondent for the Times. She held the reins and appeared lost in contemplation of the horse. She completed the trio. A small darkey sat in back of the vehicle. He presented a unique appearance. Arrayed in a profusion of rags many sizes too large for him, he sat with his bare shinny legs dangling from the "dog-cart."

Suddenly there was a dull thud. Presto! the darky boy flat in the road.

"What's the matter?" asked the stately lady. She was a trifle deaf. "Oh, dear! you ought not to mind him; he always goes to sleep, and falls out."

"What do you do then?"

"Oh, nothing. He picks himself up and runs after us. The sand is so deep he can't hurt himself. I'm sorry, dear, I'm afraid you will find it hard to start Martha."

Martha was the horse.

"Why?"

"Oh! she always takes a nap when she's stopped."

"What do you do then?"

"Oh! I generally bring my knitting, and then it is pleasant to watch the pines nod to each other. It's so peaceful."

"Well, you're a peaceful lot, Sam and Martha sleeping, and you blessed thing, you watching the trees," muttered the reporter with a groan and a laugh.

She was due in an hour's time for an interview with the owner of a plantation four miles away. At this rate of progress she would arrive a week hence.

"Go on, Martha Washington," she commanded. Martha was obdurate. Interviews and irate editors were beneath her notice. The journalist screamed herself hoarse.

"Don't get so excited," begged her companion. "Martha will wake up soon; she always wakes up, doesn't she, Sam?"

Pired by this timely compliment, Martha gave a lurch which sent Sam flying out on his head, and jogged heavily on. Amy grew hopeful. She had forgotten at the end of a mile, her companion was to be left at a friend's house. This necessitated Martha's stopping for so long that she fell into a sleep which promised to be eternal. Miss Willis groaned and prayed alternately.

Just as hope became extinct, the white animal roused again.

Another mile was traversed. Amy's hopes aroused once more. Perhaps Martha would arrive at their destination without "falling asleep" again. Vain hope. Just then the quadruped stopped with a resolute heaving. "Oh! on, you shall go on, you must!" shrieked the newspaper maiden in high staccato. Martha was oblivious to threats.

Amy was in despair.

"What will make this horse go, Sam? Tell me and I'll give you a four-bladed knife with a saw."

Sam was not above bribery.

"Ef you won't tole missus, I'll tole yer, mebe, whar de pin in dat hoss, dat mek him go, sure."

"Sam, you are a wicked boy. I'll try it. Everything must be sacrificed to a story."

She took her hat pin, and kneeling down, gently began to probe the sleeping animal. A shout of laughter aroused her. Glancing in the direction of the sound, she saw a young man emerging from the woods. She dropped the pin, and she asked. Her tones were not conciliatory. He did not notice that fact. He advanced to the side of the vehicle.

"I beg your pardon, but if I mistake not I read an article in the Times a few weeks ago under the head of Cruelty to Animals. It moved me to tears. It was signed A. W. I am pleased to note that you practice as you preach, Miss Willis."

Miss Willis did not smile. She spoke plainly. "I was so happy this morning. I might have known it could not last. What in mercy's name, brings you to these parts?"

"I am hunting the deer," answered the audacious youth.

"Deer are apt to frequent the highway." This with great dignity.

"Exactly, so I notice, in these parts. But may I ask what you, this fiery steed, and your outrider, are doing here? Are you on business or pleasure?"

"Oh! business, if I ever get there. Mr. Hood was to meet me at three o'clock to-day to describe to me the breaking of the rice banks."

"The very man I'm after. Suppose you take me along," suggested this wily creature.

"You may get in, I suppose, if you really have business with him. Not that it will do you any good. I expect to sit here until Gabriel awakens Sam and Martha."

"I'll readily keep you company until then."

He climbed in and took the reins. Martha no sooner felt a masculine control than she roused up, and took to her heels. To the astonishment of Amy, and ecstasy of Sam, the old horse fairly flew.

Another mile was quickly traversed. "Why! the road is covered with water, it's a mill branch, surely," suddenly wailed Amy. "Oh! dear, troubles never come singly, first you, and now this."

"Don't be rude, Miss Willis. You may yet live to bless my appearance on the scene. Shall we proceed?"

"Yes, go on. I must get that story."

Into the water went the horse and vehicle. Sam remained on dry land. His little mind was more valuable than others. It was more so to him. He was soon asleep. In an instant he was aroused by a woman's shriek, a man's muttered imprecation, and the noise of reading wood. He stood up to see Martha walking from the water with the shafts and dashboard of the "dog-cart" behind her. Miss Willis was left in the remainder of the vehicle, in the centre of the stream.

Nothing could be seen of the young man but his boots. He had taken a header into the water.

He emerged in an instant, mad and dirty. At sight of him, Amy's grief was turned to joy.

"What a joke! wait a minute till I sketch you. Oh! won't the story for the Times. Great head lines. The editor of our esteemed contemporary, the Evening Screamer, on an investigating tour of the mud washed up by the recent Southern storms."

The young man waited patiently. His turn may come and he knew it.

"When you are through with your sketch and laugh, Miss Willis, will you kindly tell me how you expect to get out of this place? Your perch to say the least is insecure."

She glanced at the muddy water. It would come to reach to her waist. She blushed furiously.

"I am sure I don't know. You, being a man, are supposed to come to the rescue, are you not?" she answered with an attempt at her usual insolence.

He smiled a little.

"You flatter me in mistaking me for a saint. For years you have metaphorically kicked and buffeted me about. My day has now arrived. Before I take you from your perilous position, tell me, was that 'No,' you sent me a week ago, final?"

"Certainly," this with all the dignity compatible with the situation.

"Your reason pray?"

"I prefer my liberty to anything else in the world."

"Ah, I admire your independent soul. Adieu, Miss Willis. May your loved liberty avail you much."

With a melodramatic flourish, he departed.

"Come back, oh, take me out of this," she wailed.

"Certainly not, I have been well brought up. Nothing would induce me to take any woman but my affianced wife in my arms I assure you. You surprise me."

She was angry, amazed, but above all, plucky.

"Go, your ungentlemanly conduct will make another story for our paper. I will write a scorcher this time."

She gathered her skirts together. He felt the day slipping from him.

He played his last card.

"My! what quantities of watersnakes," he remarked with deepest interest. His ruse was a trump. With a shriek she sank back.

"Snakes! Tom, please, please, dear Tom come back."

He was there in a flash. He held out his arms.

"Will you marry me?"

"Yes, oh, yes."

"Not if you dislike me."

"I don't dislike you and—and you know it."

He promptly bore her to land.

He placed her on the ground he murmured dreamily,—

"You ought to read up on snakes. It seems to me that as a youngster I learned that they hibernated in winter."

Victoria Pudding.

Victoria pudding is a dish very common at English tables, and is made from boiled potatoes. Pass them, while hot and in the mealy stage, through a sieve, and mix with them a little butter, sugar, two eggs to six mediumsized potatoes, three tablespoonfuls of cream, and the grated rind of a lemon. A pudding-dish is buttered and preserved plums or peaches spread on the bottom. The potato pudding is poured over and baked in a moderate oven. Serve hot with powdered sugar sprinkled over the top.

ELLEN'S STRATEGY.

BY MINNA STANWOOD.

Mrs. Angier, often said she really did not know how she ever came to take Ellen, and those who knew them both wondered too. For Mrs. Angier was sharp, prim and elderly, and Ellen was—well, the last girl in the world that one would suppose could suit Mrs. Angier. When Ellen stood before her with her great frame drawn to its full height and fired her expressionless blue eyes on her face, Mrs. Angier said she never knew what to do. More than once she had been a novel mental condition for Mrs. Angier who had always ruled her household, which had hitherto consisted of her daughter and her one maid, with a nod of iron.

"I get the meals, I wash the clo'es, I clean up, clean up, clean up. What more you want? I ain't no slave to work all the time!" blazed Ellen, one afternoon when Mrs. Angier attempted to expostulate with her for sitting so coolly in the kitchen crocheting her endless cotton lace. There was a flush red in Ellen's high, bare brow, and Mrs. Angier retreated from the kitchen with barely a trace of her usual prim dignity.

One morning Mrs. Angier, with a letter in her hand, entered the kitchen where her maid was busily washing dishes. Although Ellen had never broken or even chipped a dish each click of the china touched a tender spot in Mrs. Angier's soul, and she spoke sharply,—

"Ellen, I wish you would be more quiet."

"Ain't I quiet?" demanded Ellen, facing around.

"Oh, yes, you are. But about the dishes, I mean," faltered the mistress, avoiding the eyes. "Oh, Ellen, I came to tell you that I have received a letter from my daughter, Mrs. Morrill, saying she is coming to make me a visit. She will be here to dinner. I wish you to get her room ready."

Ellen had resumed her dish washing and made no response.

"Did you understand, Ellen?" questioned Mrs. Angier, fearing the girl was displeased with the news.

"Ma'am?" returned Ellen; lifting her head.

The tone implied such perfect comprehension that Mrs. Angier left the room without further remark.

When the station carriage containing Mrs. Morrill stopped before the Times Mrs. Ellen appeared, quietly put little Mrs. Angier aside, went down the walk and relieved the visitor of her travelling bags.

"That feller on the waggin's dumb!" she remarked, casting a wrathful look at the driver, who regarded the two girls with cheerful interest from his seat on the box. "Or perhaps he ain't got no legs," she added, scornfully.

"He never was very attentive to his passengers," returned Mrs. Morrill pleasantly.

The lady smiled fearlessly into the eyes and answered, "yes."

A dull flush slowly mounted to Ellen's brow, as she said,—

"Why, you are blonde, and she's—ask!"

Ellen stood by and watched almost greedily while the ladies embraced, and followed awkwardly when they entered the house with their arms about each other.

"Would you take them up to my room Ellen, please? One at a time if they're too heavy for you."

"I could take you, too," returned Ellen, starting on.

"How odd she is, mamma. Where did you ever get her?" exclaimed Mrs Morrill, dropping wearily into a chair

Mrs. Angier closed the door softly, took a chair beside her daughter and poured out her tale of woe.

There was something so extremely ridiculous in the idea of her determined little mother living in subjection to that raw-boned, gawky girl, that Mrs. Morrill's mirth routed several times during the narrative.

"I never heard of anything so funny in all my life. But don't fret, mamma, dear, such an unnatural state of things can't continue. Affairs will adjust themselves, somehow, see if they don't."

"But you haven't an idea what she is," objected Mrs. Angier, pathetically, whereupon her daughter laughed again.

Mrs. Morrill became an object of intense adoration to Ellen, who let slip no opportunity to show her regard. The house was kept in perfect order, and Mrs. Morrill's room received many extra touches that kept it in a delightful state of daintiness. But it was upon the cooking that Ellen expended her supreme efforts, and each successive meal had some unusual delicacy to surprise the guest.

Mrs. Morrill received the girl's attentions good-humoredly and spoke many words of kindness and sympathy which never failed to bring to the girl's face that unpleasant flush which always appeared when she was much moved.

One evening Ellen knocked at Mrs. Morrill's door, and without waiting to be bidden entered the room.

"I knowed you was crying," she said, hoarsely. "What's the matter?"

"Ellen!" exclaimed Mrs. Morrill, angrily.

"Don't be mad," said Ellen, calmly "You cry every night you do be here."

Mrs. Morrill raised her tear-stained face and regarded the girl with a mingled look of amazement and terror.

"Is it her?" demanded Ellen.

"Her?"

"You her!" repeated Ellen with an energetic jerk of the thumb toward her mistress' room.

"Mamma? O, no!"

"Then tell me!" cried Ellen, flinging herself to her knees before Mrs. Morrill, and clasping her arms around her. "Tell me who's the dumb thing tills I kill um."

"You frighten me," exclaimed Mrs. Morrill, recoiling from such violent sympathy.

"I won't hurt you. But I'm gotta' to settle your hash. Who is it now? Will I have you sitting roun' crying out those eyes? You what spoke words kine to me. You only two. I guess not. Is it I'm dumb?"

"You are very kind, Ellen, and I thank you, but my unhappiness you can't do anything to lessen," spoke Mrs. Morrill, sadly.

Suddenly Ellen stood, and demanded sternly,—

"Where's your man?"

"My man?" repeated Mrs. Morrill, in amazement, "Oh, you mean my husband? I haven't any now—I fear."

"What's that?" with a thrust of the hand toward a photograph on the bureau.

"Yes, that's Mr. Morrill. But—why, really, Ellen you have no right to catechise me in this way."

"Les I have. Go on! Go on!"

But Mrs. Morrill arose and threw herself at the bedside in a passion of weeping.

Instantly Ellen was beside her clasping in those great arms the quivering form of the woman she loved.

"There a, there a, there a, there a, there a," she said soothingly. "Nothing's vorth it. No, no, no! No, no!"

And because she didn't know what else to do Mrs. Morrill held out on that broad breast the whole story of her misery. How with the love of her happy girlish heart she had married her husband, and had tried, for his sake, to live with his people, who despised her simple, unfashionable ways, and treated her coldly; but at last, thinking her husband, too, had turned against her, she had left them all and came home to stay. How she had never told her husband her intention, and had not the courage to tell her mother, and how wholly miserable she was.

"You shut up now, and go to bed. There's a girl of the name Ellen got a hand on this. You find it out!" and with these extraordinary words the girl left the room.

Presently she put her head in the door and asked,—

"Name Tom?"

"Why, Ellen, what difference can it make? His name is Thomas G Morrill."

"Tom. All right. Go to bed."

The next morning the youth in the elegantly appointed law office of Morrill & Gates, headed the senior partner a telegram addressed to "Tom Morril."

The superscription so surprised Mr. Morrill that he raised an inquiring glance at his clerk, on whose face the look of amusement quickly gave place to one of concern.

To Tom Morril:

Ma west is left is dying. Come to huston.

Ellen.

The remarkable nature of the message admitted of no delay, and Mr. Morrill started for the next train, with all speed.

When he stepped from the train at Houston he was approached by a woman of massive proportion who said in decided tones,—

"You're him! Her man."

"May I ask your name, madam?"

"Vy, of course! I'm Ellen."

"I really can't say that I'm much the wiser for that information," replied Mr. Merrill, who began to think himself the victim of some practical joke.

"Don't be mad. Come along," responded the girl, cheerfully, taking possession of Mr. Morrill's satchel. "No, I lug it. Vat you tink? She dying? I said that to make you come. She might could die. She might could cry those eyes out, an' spoil that pooty face. You care?"

"If you mean my wife, certainly I care. But I confess the whole thing's a secret to me," replied Mr. Morrill, regarding Ellen suspiciously.

"You'll find out. She runned away an' then got sorry again. How you let all them wimmens sass her? Pooty capers if the do be rich mugs."

"Run off? Of whom are you talking?"

"Mis' Morrill. A pooty one like her ain't going to stan' a pack o' cats clawin'. you find it out. Here take your truck. I go this way."

The intimation that his wife had run away from him was a great surprise, and altogether alarming, and caused Mr. Morrill to take a review of his brief married life as he walked slowly toward the home of his wife's girlhood. Although he thought her choice of a confidante in rather questionable taste, and while he could see no cause for a different course, he was forced to admit that his mother and sister were rather trying, and he found himself saying, "Poor little girl," as he turned into the familiar path to the house.

He was not surprised that Ellen should answer his ring, nor amused by the ceremony with which she ushered him into the parlor and asked the name, for he began to be touched by a reflection of his wife's misery.

Mrs. Morrill was so overcome by Ellen's announcement that her husband was in the parlor waiting for her that she would not control herself sufficiently to go down. With deft fingers Ellen touched up the bright hair, and slipped a fresh handkerchief in her belt, then drawing Mrs. Morrill's hand through her arm, took her down to the parlor. As she softly closed the door, she heard Mr. Morrill say with a world of tender reproach in his voice, "Lucy!" and her face mantled red as she said to herself, "That'll fetch her. T'would me. It's all right now. Ole cat don't fine it out."

The outcome of it was that young Mr. and Mrs. Morrill had a home of their own in which Ellen served a beloved mistress and a still more beloved master, warm heart. Mrs. Angier heaved a sigh as of a slave set free when she saw the carriage door close upon Ellen's broad back, and descended upon Ellen's successor.

SOUR DOCK HAS ITS USE.

Canaigre Is Its Name and It Will Revolutionize the Tanning Industry.

Canaigre—you pronounce it "kahnah-gray," and it means the weed known as the sour-dock—has recently been found to possess an important economic value, and its employment in the tanning of leather bids fair to revolutionize that industry.

Until the discovery of the properties of canaigre there had hardly been any real improvement in tanning agents in a hundred years.

So far canaigre tanning and bark tanning are identical, but while the hide must remain for three months in the vat in the bark solution, being removed, drained and repeatedly pulled many times in the process, the canaigre acid tans it in twelve hours.

The tannic acid extracted from canaigre has a peculiar quality which indicates that nature intended it for preservative purposes. It is impossible for worm and destroy leather in its solution, and it is very easy to do with a solution of tanbark too strong for the hides, and the cells of the substance to be tanned will absorb enough to complete the change and then will take no more, and no alteration in the tissue takes place afterward. In a few hours, varying with the sort of hide to be tanned, the acid of the canaigre has done its work, and the saving of three months' time and a vast deal of human labor in the production of leather indicates that eventually the whole leather using world is to be the beneficiary of this valuable plant.

The cost of an acre of canaigre, including the planting, cultivating, irrigating and harvesting, it is estimated, is $16.50. The returns vary from $65 to $75 per ton, sliced, and the yield is from twelve to twenty tons to the acre on land not above high, with cultivation. The drying shrinks the product two-thirds, but the producer can count on a clear gain of $200 to the acre.—New York Herald.

A LITTLE TOO QUICK.

The Official, in His Zeal, Swallowed Dirty Statistics.

Numerous complaints had come before a certain public official in regard to food served to the inmates of one of the public institutions, and he determined to investigate for himself, in order to see whether the matter really required attention, says the New York Journal.

Making his way to the particular buildings in question just about dinner time, he walked straight over to where the kitchen was located. At the very door he encountered two muscular looking men carrying a huge, steaming boiler.

"Put that kettle down," he ordered brusquely, and the men at once obeyed.

"Get me a spoon," he next commanded.

The man that brought the spoon was about to say something, but was ordered to keep silent.

"Take off the lid," was the next command; "I'm going to taste it."

The two men were utterly cowed by the official's brusqueness, and wonderingly watched him gulp down a good mouthful.

"Do you mean to say that you call this soup?" the official demanded. "Why, it tastes to me more like dirty water."

"So it is sir," replied one of the men, respectfully. "We have just been scrubbing the floors."

How an Old Man Was Converted.

"This here speculatin' in wheat on the Stock Exchange is gamblin' pure and simple," said the farmer, who was a deacon and a strict disciplinarian, "an' the Lord won't prosper them that wins by it."

"Well, father," replied his son, "I'm sorry to hear that, for I placed that money you gave me and made $900 by the deal."

The old man coughed, wiped his glasses and then said:

"Well, well! Providence does work in mysterious ways! The parson was sayin' last week that the church needed paintin'; an' besides—that's a message on the farm that order be filled, an' one or two other little accounts that's got ter be squared. Well, Well!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Shaking Mountain.

Dshebel Naibo—"The Shaking Mountain,"—called the Algerian peak, is now only about 300 feet high, and is known to be slowly but surely disappearing. In the time of the Cæsars it was nearly twice its present height. Near the "shaking Mountain" is a large, clear lake, into which flows a small, cold stream, in which a large city that sank in the year 400 A. D.

A curate introduced his somewhat insignificant looking wife to the great lady in the parish in the words of Autolycus: "A poor thing, madame, but mine own." The wife, who did not want for spirit, retorted, indicating her disagreeable husband: "A poorer thing, madame, but mine owner."—Household Words.

KITTY'S INTERVIEW.

"A lady to see you, sir." Jeremy Grigson used very unparliamentary language, but taking into consideration the fact that his visitor might be close at hand, in compliment to her sex his anathemas were uttered in German.

"Madam," said Jeremy Grigson with a severe bow, "I have an excellent memory, but I cannot recollect having made the acquaintance on any previous occasion."

"You have an excellent memory? Thanks." She made another note. "May I sit down? I am rather tired."

"Certainly, madam." Jeremy placed a chair for her.

"I am from the Weekly Chatterer," she said. "Can you let me have a photograph to go in with the interview?"

"Never had one taken in my life," said Jeremy. He was not a handsome man, for there was something in his face better than good looks.

"Not even when you were a baby? Almost anything would do."

"Not even then."

"Allow me one question: What have I done that I should be interviewed?"

"Don't you know that the whole town is talking of your book?"

"I don't know anything about it," he said, savagely, "except that I sold the copyright for twenty pounds, and that the twenty pounds is spent."

She had got hold of an immense fact but she dropped her pencil and her flippant, inquisitive air with it.

"What a shame!" she said; "what a wicked shame. Your publishers will make hundreds and thousands out of that book. It is creating a furore. Such a case should not be possible, and especially when a man really needs the money."

He looked attentively at her for the first time. He had seen already that she was young and pretty; but he noticed now that there was a worn, pinched look about her small, very pretty face. He had seen the same look growing on other faces in Bohemia; it had grown upon his own; and he knew the meaning of it.

"You understand about needing money?" he asked her.

"I should think I do," she answered, sharply. "Do you suppose I should be here now if I didn't?"

"Sometimes people work at a trade because they like it."

"If it were a trade I liked, everything would be different. I aspired to literature once, but I could not even make dry bread by it. Ever since I have been obliged to do the shirts of journalism, and sometimes there is a great deal of mud on them. If you only knew how people treat me now and again when I go to interview them! You may thank your stars and your genius for having placed you above all that, at any rate."

"Are they often as brutal as I was?" he asked, gently. "I am awfully sorry; won't you forgive me?"

"Don't mind about it," she said humbly. "I know very well what I must have seemed to you—an impudent, brazen, bold wretch. I am horribly nervous by nature, and I put all that side on just to cover up the fright, and impress people with the idea that I intend to get any information I want, no matter how much they try to ba. Often they tell me more than they intend—as you did just now—merely to get rid of me, because they think I am writing down a whole lot that they don't want said about them. I should stand a bad chance if they only knew that I am quite as anxious to get away from them as they are to get away from me.

"If this interview is any object to you," he said, in an awkward, shamefaced way, "I will tell you all you want to know. I am not quite such a churl as I pretended to be. Only—well, I am proud as well as poor, and suppose there is no need to make the details of my poverty public?" His glanced first at the meagre furnishing of the room, and then at his threadbare clothes.

"I see. It was actually a little cry of pain. "Do you think so badly of me as that still? I will go now. I wish I had not come."

She turned very white as she rose, and caught at her chair to steady herself.

"For heaven's sake, don't faint!" cried Jeremy, desperately. He made a stride toward her, and, without a word of apology, he caught her by the arm and pushed her back into the chair. "What did you do it for?" he asked, with a show of indignation. "What is the matter with you?"

"I couldn't help it," she said. "If I had gone on walking I should have been all right, but the short rest finished me. I am very tired, and—and—She gave a little gasp, and her eyelids fluttered.

Jeremy dived into a wall cupboard, and came forth with a brandy bottle. There was very little in it, but enough for the purpose. He stood over her in a threatening attitude until she consented to a teaspoonful. He tried to insist on a second.

"I cannot, really," she said. "I dare not. It would go to my head at once, because—because—"

Jeremy Grigson knelt down beside her and took her hand.

"Is it because you have had no luncheon?" he asked.

"Yes," she said; and her color began to return. "Do you know how it feels?"

He nodded with sympathetic gravity.

"Been there dozens of times," he said; and he did not let go her hand, neither did she withdraw it. "Possibly you have walked the whole way from the Chatterer's office to this house?"

rowed, Miss Windram. Anything else?"

"Hasn't it gone into six editions?" she cried in a tone of accusation.

"I don't deserve the blame for that," I said, in a way that was meant to show her that I felt the injustice of her accusation. "Blame the public, if you wish. The public are invariably idiotic, the editor of the Universe announced in connection with that book of mine. He was right, though the fact that the public steadily refused to buy the Universe points in the other direction."

"Oh, it's all very well to try and throw the blame on the public," said Miss Windram, with a shrug. "But is that quite generous of you, Mr. Glyn?"

"Perhaps it isn't. Was it on account of the book you avoided me so carefully?"

"Oh, there were other things. The Geographical Society gave you a gold medal, didn't they?"

"They were right there. They couldn't get out of it."

"I dare say. That may be all very well, but people who get gold medals conferred on them can't expect to be treated as ordinary people."

"That's quite a side-issue. I decline to discuss it."

"And that's all?"

"All? all? Heavens! what did you expect?"

"Sense—that is, a moderate amount of sense; reason—that is, a modicum of reason; frankness—that is, a soupçon of frankness. Supper? Oh, let them go to—to supper."

And she let them.

We sat down practically alone.

"Are you engaged to any man for supper?" I asked of Miss Windram.

"Yes," she replied.

I believe that I detected a mournful tone. If I had not detected that note it would have left her side. I did not leave her side.

"And I am engaged to some woman. Let us get to some place together," said I.

The reasonableness of the suggestion —that is, the modicum of reasonableness—seemed to strike her.

We found a table at the same time. I look growing on other faces in Bohemia; it had grown upon his own; and he knew the meaning of it.

THE BRAVEST BATTLE.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not:
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or musket or pike;
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From mouth of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled up woman's heart—
And there shall you find it not,
But bravely, silently, bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield.

No marshalling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave;
But oh, these battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

Joaquin Miller.

THE TIME OF ROSES.

"Why have you so persistently avoided me ever since—since—well, ever since Lady Barkston's garden party?" I inquired of Miss Windram, by which I succeeded in elbowing my way through the dead wall of Mrs. Bennett Wyse's guests who stood between us.

The result of a brief calculation, entered on the next morning, was to convince me that, during the six minutes it took me playing the part of a pick, in order to reach Miss Windram, I made as many enemies as I had made during the thirty years of my life preceding Mrs. Bennett Wyse's "At Home."

"Have I avoided you, Mr. Glyn?" she asked, opening her eyes very wide and—but this was doubtful—very innocently.

"The question is not if you have done it, but why you have done it?" I said with some measure of severity.

"Suppose I deny that that is the question?" she suggested rather pleasantly, though without quite such a show of innocence as had been associated with her previous inquiry. It is quite possible to speak pleasantly without any particular exuberance of innocence.

"Suppose you deny it? Well, in that case you will have—have denied it," said I. "But it so happens that you won't deny it, Miss Windram."

"I'm not so sure of that. If any one would make it worth my while I might."

"No one will make it worth your while. There is nothing left for you but to speak the truth."

"Great heavens! Is it come to that?"

"What have you avoided me? We were good friends up to that day—I have put a blue mark opposite that day in my diary."

"Yes, we were good friends; good friends are those who have a sound quarrel every time they meet. I suppose?"

"Precisely; friends whose friendship is strong enough to survive a quarrel."

"Did we quarrel that day?"

"We certainly did not. Where would society be if a man and young woman quarreled because, when he asked her—"

"Is there any need for you to tell every one in this stifling room what one (your) scientific foolish young man asked a certainly idiotic young woman?"

I felt that there was something in her question. I had not, however, been speaking louder than usual; it only seemed so because of a sudden diminution in the volume of sound proceeding from the two hundred guests of Mrs. Bennett Wyse, who had all been speaking at the same moment. I tried to explain this to her; and then she asked me what I thought of Signora Duse as an interpreter of emotion as compared with Madame Sarah Bernhardt, and if I held that an actress who was an admirable exponent of the strongest emotions might be dependent on to interpret the most powerful passions.

"It's a nice question," I felt bound to say. "Let us clear out from this ruck, and I think I'll be able to tell you all that I know regarding the higher emotions. Then people are not to be depended on; one minute they are talking fortissimo; they next they are pianissimo."

"Would you have them rehearsed, Mr. Glyn?"

"And a conductor with an ivory baton? There is something in that, I admit. Your idea is that they should become forte when you are speaking, as an accord is sort of background for your wisdom."

"Wisdom? What man with the least pretence to wisdom would come into a crowd like this for the sake of talking to a girl who has persistently avoided him for the past year and a month?"

"What man, indeed?"

"And this brings us back to the original question. Why have you so persistently avoided me, and, in fact, did everything that was in your power to make me believe that you were sincere when you told me, at the command of your mother, that you had never heard anything more ridiculous than my suggestion that we should love each other; and that you hoped I would not think it necessary to regret anything so absurd. You have failed in your aim, Rosamond; you did not make me believe in your sincerity. Was I right?"

I am certain she gave a sob; but she did not take her hands down from her face.

"Look at your feet," I said suddenly. She was startled, and glanced down quickly. Her gloves I perceived, were soiled. "Look at your feet. Which is to be my future—our future, Rosamond—which? The wrecked rose or the other?"

She picked up the complete rose and handed it to me.

I kissed it, and then—

Then a man came up and said that we would do well to hurry into the supper room if we wanted a bite of anything.

"I had no choice. This represents my whole fortune until such time as I am paid for the interview."

She pulled three half pence out of her pocket, and showed it to him lying on the worn palm of her little gray glove.

Quite involuntarily he lifted to his lips the hand he was holding. Then she drew it away and tried to return to her former manner.

"Just tell me where you were born," she said, "and how the central idea of your book first occurred to you, and I will go."

"You will do nothing of the kind," said Jeremy, firmly. "I am just going to have my luncheon, because I am a homely sort of fellow. I will not tell you another word unless you stay and share it with me."

"But I have to write up the interview now at once. It must be put into type to-night."

"Very well. You can do it here while our outlets are being cooked. You will find plenty of paper, pens and ink on my writing table, such as it is. Here are a few notes for you." He lifted half a sheet of paper quickly, in small, clear hand. "Now I shall leave you for half an hour to your work, if you will solemnly promise me not to run off while I am away."

"I don't want to run off in the very least," she said; and she looked away from him to hide the tears in her eyes, as he drew them all the same.

When he came back he was accompanied by a waiter laden with material for a feast brought from the nearest restaurant, and he had lectern in his hand, because he had encountered the waiter in the passage on the doorstep.

She wanted to help him to spread the tablecloth and arrange the food, but he said it would make him ill if he did not wait on himself, because he was not used to doing it. So she read her manuscript aloud to him instead, which was as well as he stumbled about with plates, knives and forks.

They took their meal together in merry, picnic fashion, like children who had known each other all their lives, and when hunger was satisfied they exchanged places, and finished dances. They were both alone in the world, both dependent on their pens, although in vastly different lines, and they were both young, notwithstanding the fact that Jeremy's hair had a sprinkling of gray in it. Her name was Kitty, and he told her that had been his mother's name. She was very glad, although she scarcely knew why.

"I have several literary irons in the fire," he said, presently, "and those interests me the most. Shall I open them? Thanks. Then, if the news is good, you will be the first to congratulate me; and if it is bad, it will be some consolation to hear you say, 'Poor dev'—I beg your pardon, I mean 'poor fellow.' I have not spoken to a girl for three years."

"Nothing succeeds like success," said Kitty. "Open the next."

He did so.

"Bother them!" he exclaimed. "I applied for a post just vacant on the staff of the Pulverizer. It means three hundred a year for a weekly column of criticism. The last man was a great swell, and he gave it up because one of his own books was smashed to atoms by mistake in another part of the paper. Well, I have got the post."

"Splendid!" she cried. Now the last one."

"Best of all!" he cried, as he glanced through it. "Because it shows human nature in a regrettable light by publishers inclose a check for two hundred pounds in consideration of the phenomenal success of 'The Book,' and they will be happy to allow me to make my own terms for the next one. Kitty, I am waiting to be congratulated."

He had called her by her Christian name quite unconsciously.

She sprang to her feet, blushing furiously, and began hunting for her gloves.

"I can't say half I mean about it," she stammered. "Wont you take for granted how glad I am? I must go now; the evenings are long, but they don't last forever. I want to thank you for all you have done for me."

"When may I come to see you?" he asked, retaining her hand again.

"Oh, never! I live in such a wretched place, and you are among the great ones of the world now, you know."

"Of course," he said, coolly, "it does n't matter in the least whether you give me your address or not, because I am going to escort you home, and then I shall find it out for myself. Are you ashamed of me, Kitty, me? We could stop at a tailor's on the way, but there would be certain drawbacks to that compromise."

"My clothes are infinitely worse than yours," she said, humbly.

"Quite so; different in degree," he assured her. "I believe you would look well dressed in a 'gunny sack.'"

Then they set out together. He did not offer to take a cab. An hour earlier he would have done so, but he was, comparatively speaking, a rich man now, and he dared not run the risk of seeming to patronize her poverty. She understood, and liked him all the better for it.

This was a day to be remembered in both their lives

Three months later there was a much talked-of little wedding breakfast, at which most of the guests were literary celebrities, but another interviewer "wrote it up" for the Weekly Chatterer.

Jeremy had married Kitty.

CHARLIE MARO.

"About four years ago the cruiser on which I was serving shipped a boiler maker while we were on the Mediterranean station," said a chief petty officer of the navy, on leave of absence. "Our former boiler maker's time expired while we were at Gibraltar, and as he was not in good physical shape he wasn't re-enlisted, but took his discharge and shipped aboard of us for the United States by a mail steamer. So the ship was shy a boiler maker, a very important and necessary petty officer down below in the engineer's department, and when the ship pulled into Naples harbor the chief engineer went ashore to see if he couldn't dig up a boiler maker to ship at the rate. There's a clause in the enlistment regulations permitting commanding officers to ship necessary men on foreign stations in short-handed emergencies. The chief engineer brought back to the ship a Greek named Charlie Maro. The man couldn't speak any English—to speak of—but he was a good man with a boiler during business, and he was duly shipped aboard of us for three years. He was a wild, hairy-looking lot, Maro was, and he got a good deal of a laugh at the hands of the crew, especially the younger fellows, for some time after we got over the side. The derision his queer appearance and his extraordinary attempts at English excited among the men forward often got Maro going during the first few months of his service, and he would be set to work on an old story, and the men gradually let up on him. Maro thought that there wasn't any other country on the map except Greece. He thought that the 'Grecka man' was the hottest kind of a Yankee when it came to mixing up by land or sea, and, after he got hold of enough English to make himself understood, he used to take some of the young apprentice boys up into the eyes of the ship and tell them, with many gesticulations and choice words, the different kinds of car Greece would knock out of Turkey if the two countries ever came to an open rupture.

"The ship was around on the Pacific station when the war broke out between Greece and Turkey more than two years ago. When the news of the outbreak of the war got to Maro, our boiler maker, he like to have had heart disease and a whole lot of other sudden things from excitement. I says:

"'Da Greeka man wilia him! bim! bim! da Turka man,' was Charlie Maro's way of putting it, and he didn't see that the Turks had a ghost of a show. All hands forward encouraged him in his belief that Greece would win, in expressing the belief to Maro that Greece would simply eat Turkey up. Then a bo'sun's mate who knew how to crack the most impossible kind of steers with a face as solemn and wooden as an Indian's took Charlie in hand and told him some things. He told Maro that the United States was so much in sympathy with Greece in the struggle with Turkey that the Navy Department had decided to turn over all of the ships of the American navy to Greek commanders.

"'Here's a big chance for you, Maro,' the bo'sun's mate told Maro. 'You just wants to work your cards. Here you are already shipped on this cruiser, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if you ask for the command or this ship, in order to take her over to Greece to mix it up with the Turks, you'll get it, hand down.'

"That idea impressed Maro a heap. He asked the bo'sun's mate who he'd have to apply to to get command of the cruiser.

"'Why, to the commanding officer, of course,' was his reply.

"Maro was tremendously important for a day or so while he let this huge idea grow within him, and he bullied the men detailed to work with him down below in the boiler room a good deal. The bo'sun's mate was watching him up to it, and finally Maro appeared on deck one morning, togged out in his very best mustering suit of blue jacket clothes (when he ought to have been in dungarees ready to begin work) and, rolling out the bollers after a run), and went up to the officer of the deck and asked permission to see the commanding officer at the mast. The officer of the deck was rather surprised to see Maro, and, finally, at the mustering togs when all hands were at work, but, as he is obliged to do when an enlisted man requests permission to see the commanding officer, he sent word to the skipper, who soon appeared on his cabin and appeared at 'the stick.'

"'Well, my man?' said the skipper to Maro, who stood bold upright and saluted with a flourish.

"'Sare,' said Maro to the skipper, 'I hava da honor to here-a-by taka da command-of-a da ship.'

"'Hey?' said the commanding officer putting his hand at his ear and looking as if he hadn't heard aright.

"'I'ma said,' repeated Maro, 'I'ma-a da navee-of-a Hellas—da Greeka navee—I hava da honor to taka da command.'

"All hands among the enlisted men were up on the to'gallant fo'cas'le, taking in the scene, and they let out a roar that you could have heard five cable lengths' distance. Maro heard it, and, suspecting that his confidence had been abused, got red and flabbergasted. He nearly bolted for the engine room hatch and made his way below, and it took three marines to drag him aft to the sick bay, where the surgeon at the skipper's command, gave Maro a half hour's examination as to his sanity. Maro was game enough to decline to give the name of the enlisted man who had told him he was eligible for the command of the ship upon its being sold into the navy of Greece, but the thrashing he gave that bo'sun's mate when he got him 'on the beach' was certainly savage."—Washington Star.

THE REALM OF WOMAN.

Odds and End Ends of Timely and Taster Interest.

Paper vests can be bought now in place of chamois skin. They cost a quarter as much as the chamois, are equally warm, and less bulky.

There is a hygenic way of dancing as well as of doing other things. A dancing teacher says that to make a good dancer it is necessary to breathe properly. No one will dance gracefully who does not throw out the chest and take long, deep breaths and a long step.

There is a wealthy, stylish, pretty woman living at one of the big New York residence hotels who has worn a hoop almost ever since she can remember. She has them made for her now, small ones, and no one would imagine she wore them, but they are there just the same. She is a plump woman, and her idea is that she is a little more satisfactorily and modestly dressed with the crinoline.

A woman physician says she believes that the first and most important step in education should be a knowledge of fundamental physiological laws, as ignorance and disregard of which bring about conditions of body which hinder or prevent entirely a perfect performance of the duties of life or an enjoyment of its pleasures. Rules for health and self-preservation are given out by workers in many lines of sociological work among the poor. Such physiology, the doctor believes, should be taught thoroughly—not the number of bones in the human body, but a general knowledge of the laws by which it is governed.

The New York Cooking School was founded in 1876 and incorporated two years later. In 1887 the school had only one teacher. The last report (1897) shows ten teachers and one superintendent (Miss Huntington). The rooms in the United Charity building are well suited to the work and the furnishings are neat and attractive. According to the report the courses of lessons include classes from thirty-two different churches, missions, schools, or clubs, besides two classes in Brooklyn, three for hospital nurses and several classes for outsiders. The school has sent out a teacher to the South, where successful classes have been established among the negroes. Practice classes for women in plain and fancy cooking, children's classes in invalids' cooking are special features of the work. Visitors are welcome to the practice classes every Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A Handsome Bodice.

A dainty blouse, to be made entirely in chiffon, mounted over a silk or satin foundation; or the foundation part made in plain or fancy silk, or whatever material is employed for skirt, with sleeves and yoke of chiffon, the frills being of lace. Pattern is arranged with a lining foundation, the darts in which stitch up, then cover front with the full material front, which joins in plain with shoulder, armhole, and under-arm seams, but gather scored figure also at waist to lining size, the fronts hooking invisably down centre, and on either side of fastening is gathered a lace frill. The foundation yoke is to be cut in chiffon, plain silk or satin, and covered with the full yoke of chiffon, which is gathered along lower edge back and front, also over shoulders. The sleeve is arranged over a lining foundation, which can be cut in chiffon or silk. The full sleeve is twice folded down centre to form two tucks, which run along and draw up to length of lining sleeve, to which the fullness could be caught invisibly here and there to retain it in position. Quantity of 42-inch chiffon, 2 yards; 36-inch foundation silk, 3 1-4 yards; lace, 6 yards.

Recipes for Custards.

Slice four or five bananas very thinly, lay them in a glass dish, and sprinkle plentifully with sugar, and a few drops of water. Make a custard by beating four eggs with three tablespoonfuls of caster sugar, and mixing them gradually with a pint of milk, which has been boiled but not boiled. Pour this mixture into a jug, stand the jug in a saucepan of boiling water over the fire, and stir continually the same way round until the custard thickens. Remove it from the fire, and continue to stir at intervals, until it is quite cold. It may then be flavoured as desired. In this case, a few drops of essence of almonds, and two or three tablespoonfuls of brandy, will be the best.

A NEW OCCUPATION.

A place of uncommon interest to women is a signless, nameless, reserved-looking establishment on a crosstown block, where things never seen nor dreamed of in shops are sold and ordered and planned for weeks, even months, ahead. The woman who conducts it is not a house decorator, tapestry hanger or designer of furniture, but her province is to provide feminine contrivances and knickknacks.

"I make it a rule to have everything done in the best, most attractive way possible," said the proprietor; "but if I get hold of a piece of work that shows originality I write immediately to the sender, stating my demand for ideas and encouraging her to further effort. It is originality of design that I am on the lookout for, and I can get plenty of stereotyped, lasting work at here at very cut rate suggestions. Any little entertaining concert that will give brightness and individuality to a room sells rapidly once it is introduced. Now, these pincushions, for instance, made by tacking through the watermelon rind, a New Orleans girl does those, and they ring true. She sent six as a sample and I have ordered 200 more. They take first hand. It was her own idea entirely, the frame is part of the colored cardboard. The battered hat and ingenious face grinning from the pink rind is comical, and would light up any dreary corner.

"Any business to be successful nowadays must be inventive," went on the genius. "There must be constantly thought out new things to sell. Fashion was not so restless and fidgety some years ago as she is now, and people did not live on a round of approved modes and combinations. Time was when in fancy work. If the pattern was pretty and executed neatly, the materials used of the best, and the article when finished had the stamp of prevailing fashion, it was a success every time. The last report was only pretty or tasteful, but it must excite surprise and interest.

"I assure you that creative genius is as much prized and as much paid for as ever it was in the days of Raphael and entered so in a comparatively small way blossoms into fame. I rarely sell anything over $30 and the majority of knickknacks are less than $10 and in large meaning or aesthetic enterprises. The list of things that luxurious people surround themselves with is long to set out, and it would be useless if it is customary to have them, is probably as full and complete now as it ever can be, but the shapes, sizes, kind of materials employed and ways of employing them in the making up are constantly changing, with a remarkable field for originality and one that repays effort."

Decorative art is too set and too large suggesting a term to apply to this specific subject, and "fancy work" is too trivial, but the creative genius comes annually to the surface up in the thousands; and mistresses of households here in town, over in Boston, out in Chicago, and just across on Long Island, count their main holidays as a work of matters, from a children's fancy ball or dancing party to practical spring and fall refurnishing and the selecting of favors for a birthday party or Christmas or New Year's celebration.—New York Sun.

SERVANTS IN GERMANY.

How Women Compare With American Girls—The Wages Paid.

It is only within the past two years that there has been any intimation of a servant problem in Germany. Up to this time the market was so overcrowded that maids especially could afford to be very fastidious in regard to the work required or the arrangements made for them. The stream of girls from the country has now been warned against coming into the cities by the police, and instead of there being a dearth of servants, girls who were formerly content to be cooks now leave good places in order to hire out by the day as "assistan." or helps, because of the greater liberty to be enjoyed in this way. Although these do not suffer, it, the difficulties here, in comparison with American conditions, are inconsiderable. The average cook or maid-of-all-work is content with a wage of $5 a month, while a housemaid usually receives from $6.75 to $8.50. A very experienced cook, "eine perfekte hoch-in," as she would probably dub herself, may draw $7.50 a month. Such wages are, however, comparatively rare.

Although wages are low, it is always expected that they will be supplemented by the fees and gifts. Tipping is carried to absurd lengths in Germany. If the streetcar conductor helps you on the train or changes a gold piece for you you are expected to present you with from 5 to 10 pfennings (1 1-4 cents) for his pains, and in return will touch his cap most respectfully to you and wish you good-day when you leave the car. It is also quite usual to give him the change from a fare if it does not amount to more than 5 pfennings. If a maid delivers a note at your door she expects at least 10 pfennings (2 1-2 cents), and the postman frequently seizes the opportunity for obtaining fees is given butlers and housemaids by the Berlin custom of locking the street doors and extinguishing the gas on the staircase at 10 o'clock. After that hour guests must then be lighted to the door and the servant who performs this office often makes several marks from an evening party.—New York Tribune.

Senator Reed's New Honor.

The decision of the Republicans of the incoming State Senate to elect Senator Reed to the president's chair is a distinguished honor for the gentleman from Somerset. He well deserves it and will undoubtedly make use of it in a way to reflect credit upon the constituents whom he is chosen to represent.

Senator Reed's ascension to the second highest office in the State has not been accomplished by the application of political power from a Boss, but has been won in an open free-for-all contest between himself and his colleagues who also desired the honor. At the outset, United States Senator Sewell, who is recognized as the all powerful factor in Republican politics in New Jersey, announced his intention of keeping his hands off the fight and letting the best man win. Even when he made the announcement he frankly stated his preference for the selection of a candidate other than Senator Reed. This immediately led the thoughtful to conclude that while ostensibly Senator Sewell would not use his open influence to aid any one of the aspirants, he would secretly do what he could to bring about the defeat of the Somerset county man. Such opinions have been proven to be worthless, however.

Senator Reed's two years service in the upper house of the Legislature has put him in close touch with the holdover Senators for this term, and to the new members of the body he has become personally and favorably known. By both experience in legislative affairs and his natural personal qualifications Mr. Reed is splendidly adapted for President of the Senate. Senator Reed, in his everyday life, has a happy, pleasant manner about him that will certainly be reflected handsomely towards his colleagues on the floor of the Senate.

We predict that Senator Reed will retire from the Senate with the record of having been one of its best presiding officers.

A gentleman bearing the euphonious name of Mr. Rink, who resides in New Brunswick, claims to have perfected perpetual motion, and he promises startling things in the world of power. He seems to think it only a question of a short time before steam, electricity and other methods of making things run will be superceded by his contrivance. As an idea to Mr. Rink, we suggest that he apply his wonderful invention to running the politics of Middlesex county. Politics is the nearest thing to perpetual that we know of in Middlesex, and we are confident that if he can provide some relief for those engaged in the business he will gain not only the high appreciation of his neighbors but as well the deserved renown of the whole world.

The jack tars motto throughout the late unpleasantness with Spain, "Remember the Maine," still seems to be omnipresent as a lively subject rather than a historical fact. The latest incident refreshing the memory of that tragic occurence is the effort of a Havana editor to prove that the persons culpable for blowing up the Maine were an attorney, Zacarias Bresnes, and three assistants. So far he has alleged only that Bresnes is guilty of other felonies and treacheries, which make it "morally certain" that he was the miscreant.

In view of the very important recommendations made by Mayor Rockfellow in his first message to the Council with reference to the municipal ownership of the water supply system for the city, it will be interesting to note that the Irvington Town Council has concluded the terms for the purchase of the plant and system of the Irvington Water Company. The town will pay $ 3,000 for the system, and will operate it at the lowest rate consistent with good service to the patrons.

In physical appearance our own Senator Reed, who is to preside over the State Senate, is the opposite of his namesake in the presiding chair of the House of Representatives at Washington. The New Jersey Reed is tall and slim while the Maine Reed is of medium height and extremely corpulent. But when occasion requires both can be humorous, and therein is represented one of the essential characteristics for a successful presiding officer.

More of Bayonne's Beauty.

Editor Luby, of the Jersey City News, may not have a poetic name, but he certainly is a true chant and observing critic of sonnets such as his brother journalist, Col. Page, of the Bayonne Herald, writes. A few days ago we copied one of the Colonel's rhymes, in which he lauded the beauties of Bayonne's scenery, and supplemented it with the comment that considering the material the Colonel had to work on—the panorama of goats, oil tanks and saloons that Bayonne presents to us every time we whirl through that place—he must be a thirty-third degree laureate. Editor Luby seems to think we have done the Colonel an injustice in referring to the fact that the goats we observe in Bayonne feed on tin cans. He says in retaliation of our comment:

> The goats of Bayonne do not browse upon tin cans. They do not have to. The supply of posters, which adorn the posts and fences in the neighborhood of Salter's Grove and Treasure Island, both amusement and joint, and he would be a goat of depraved taste indeed who preferred the oily salmon receptacle or the biscuits tomato tin to the twinkling rear's end of a Parisian artiste who make life joyous for the unregenerate as they dance alongside of dull reality on the dizzy theatre of Mr. O'Meslie's fill boards.

We can see the Plainfield editor is jealous, not only of the Bayonne poet's muse but also of the pleasures of Bayonne existence. Cradled between the twin bays, of slumbers from year's end to year's end with a "rocked-in-the-cradle-of-the-deep" sort of intensity which not even Philadelphia can surpass. In winter it hibernates to the strains of the west wind as it sweeps from the Newark meadows to the sea. In summer it dozes under the magic influence of the mosquito's song.

We have no high a regard for the truth to attempt to defend our position in the face of such a statement, and especially at the hands of friend Luby. We always considered the Bayonne goat as slightly inclined to be frisky and insedate, but in the ignorance of the diet the Billies and the Nannies feed on we attributed such unruffled conduct to the inspirating breezes that blow from the Kill von Kull. Now, of course, we shall always look at the funny papers picturing goats browsing on tin cans as base caricatures upon the elite tastes of the noble animal. But beyond defending Bayonne's beauties and her mammiferous quadrupeds, The News man takes this parting shot at Plainfield:

> It is not like Plainfield, however, to let it rains the luckless residents have to turn out in their nighties four or five times a year, man, woman and child, to bale out the Bartlan with tenement and wash-boilers, in order to keep it from washing the town off the face of the map.

Of this last, we have to say of Luby It is to laugh! Plainfield is as far from the Raritan or any other raging stream as Luby is from reforming Jersey City.

A Senatorial Aspirant.

We acknowledge the receipt of an epistle from Mr. Benjamin S. Gratz, of Jobstown, N. J. It seems that this gentleman has a strange buzzing in his head which leads him to aspire to be the next United States Senator from New Jersey. He sets forth his political principles and makes an appeal "to the Honorable, the Senate and the Members of the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey" to choose him as the successor of Senator Sewell. We presume that in favoring us with a copy of his appeal the Jobstown statesman proposes to overcome with his arguments and enlist our help in prevailing upon the members of the Legislature to consider his claim in a favorable light.

It is with profound regret that we convey to him the answer that we can not see our way clear to do it. It would be treason of the highest degree for us to attempt to deprive Mr. John K. Kean of the coveted honor at this late day. Mr. Kean is our neighbor and whatever glory he attains from the honor of representing the State in the highest legislative body will be ours in part, too.

It is obvious that the aspirations of Gratz have been nurtured too quietly. He should have sprung his canvass somewhat earlier to have succeeded. Until there are other selections of United States to be made, and we advise the Jobstown man to bottle up whatever hopes he has left after Mr. Kean is made Senator by the august Assemblyman and Senators of the State, and trim his sails so as to be on hand and well prepared for the election of 1900 when New Jersey's other National representative, Senator Sewell, will have completed his term and necessitated the election of a successor.

Meanwhile we shall ever hold in fond remembrance the name of Benjamin S. Gratz, of Jobstown,

Leading newspapers throughout the State acknowledge that Senator Reed's selection as President of the Senate is a fitting one, and that he is undoubtedly the best man for the position that could be picked out of the incoming Senate.

THE ENDING YEAR.

The weeping year is sobbing to its end:
Neighbour, what cheer?
What have we done, dear friends, to mar or mend
Throughout the year?
Did we, while wandering over life's rough ways,
Find some astray?
And lift, and up to higher levels raise,
Then point The Way?
Pour'd balms of healing on each open sear?
Spoke cheering words?
(Some words can cheer, while some cut deeper far
Than two-edged swords).
Or, when some poor wretch, shiv'ring in the cold,
For help did pray,
Pass, like the canting Pharisee of old.
The other way?

Did we, when there was some sore wrong to right,
Through praise or blame
Stand true and firm and faithful in the fight
Till victory came?
The deeds we dreamed of at the last New Year
Are scarce begun.
And now the mists and frost its end draws near.
What have we done?
How swift the years speed past us! It doth seem
But yesterday
Since this began, now like an ended dream
Fading away.
How many haunting forms have passed beyond
Our blame or praises?
How sound they sleep, the faithful and the fond.
Beneath the daisies.
Let us be brave and faithful at our posts;
Our pilgrim way
Leads on and up to join their wandering ghosts
In endless day.

Soon swift as arrow speeding to its mark
Death's dart will fall,
And from the glory hid behind the dark
God's votes will call—
Fight the good fight; be ready when you hear
The passing bell.
Then goes in a feast and have no fear
For all is well.

The years into Eternity keep flowing.
Our good and evil deeds before us going;
Be sure that we shall reap of our own sowing
Then we have done
With all the grieving and the sore deceiving
Beneath the sun.
But till the number of our days be told.
And we are here,
Let's welcome Christmas as we did of old
And glad New Year.

Curb the Trusts.

There is unquestionably a popular feeling in New Jersey against the State being made a legal asylum for all the great combinations of capital and enterprise in the country, but some regard the plague of trusts that have taken up their legal abode in New Jersey as mitigated to a great extant by the big incorporations fees which the organizers pay into the State treasury. This sentiment is not shared with the people in general, however, as has been evidenced within the last year in the great outcry against the State being made a refuge for capitalists to line themselves to for the purpose of escaping onerous and almost prohibitive laws that other commonwealths have enacted to control and curb the disposition to put the regulation of price of certain commodities into the hands of the wealthy few.

New Jersey's leniency with trusts has brought deserved odium upon the State, but the trend of affairs now is for the commonwealth to redeem its fair name by enacting such legislation as will result in a general cleaning out of these grasping, unfair monopolies dignified by various high-sounding titles. To that end it is expected that among the first bills to be introduced into the Legislature, which formally convened yesterday, will be one to put a stop to the wholesale formation of trusts under the State laws

Under the proposed law every trust is declared unlawful, against public policy and void. For the enforcement of the law it is provided that quo warranto proceedings may be taken. Any foreign corporation violating the law is to be denied the privilege of doing business in the State. Such violation is declared a conspiracy against trade, and any person who shall as principal, manager, director, agent, or servant, or in any other capacity, knowingly carry out any of the purposes of such trusts or furnish any information to assist in carrying out any such purposes shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $5000 or be imprisoned for not less than six months nor more than one year, or be punished by both fine and imprisonment.

The character of the trust may be established by proof of its general reputation.

In addition, any person who shall be injured either in business or property by any violation of this act, shall be entitled to sue and recover double the amount of the damages sustained and the costs of the litigation.

A New Jersey Democrat in Washington says that a movement is on foot to prevent Senator Smith from getting the complimentary nomination of the Democrats for the Senatorial honor at the approaching election to be held by the Legislature. Even if such a movement should succeed it would be no great loss to Senator Smith, but it is not likely that the gossiping Democrat in Washington will hear of any such thing transpiring in the Democratic party at this time.

Fix the Responsibility.

The second thought of the wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad Monday noon immediately suggests the question: Who was responsible for those two trains coming together with such frightful results?

The cause of this accident cannot be attributed to an unforeseen defect in any mechanism of the railroad system or to a combination of circumstances which could not be prevented. It is obvious that some man was criminally negligent in his duty of exercising care and caution for the safety of the lives of the passengers on the two trains that came together. Of course, it lies between the train dispatcher at Easton, who exercises control over the running of the trains on that section of the road, the telegraph operators at South Plainfield and at Bound Brook, and the engineers of the two trains.

If the train dispatcher had notified the operator at South Plainfield or the one at Bound Brook to hold either one of the trains at their station or to notify one of the engineers to sidetrack between the two points until the other train had passed it, the next turn of responsibility would fall upon the operator who received the instructions. The operator who received such instructions would necessarily have to furnish the engineer and the conductor of the train with the information. Or, if he failed to do so, the responsibility for the catastrophe would be on his head. But if he performed his part of the duty in delivering such instructions, as it is obvious should have been promulgated to have avoided the accident, the responsibility would fall upon the engineer to whom they were addressed.

Each of men to whom the responsibility for the accident may be due naturally disclaims the liability for the occurence. We have no doubt but that the Coroners of Middlesex and Somerset counties, in whose bailiwicks the responsibility for the accident must first be fixed, will exercise a thorough investigation, insofar as their powers extend, to determine who is to blame for the immense loss of life and maiming of the survivors. It should be so.

The only view that can be taken of the cause of the accident is that it was due to gross and criminal negligence on the part of some man connected with the railroad company, and it merits a searching investigation.

Hospital's Splendid Work.

The work that the medical staff and the nurses at the Muhlenberg Hospital have done in caring for the unfortunates who were victims of the terrible catastrophe on the Lehigh Valley Railroad Monday, is magnificent. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon them.

With the hospital already filled to its utmost capacity with local patients, and the attendants' time completely occupied in caring for them, when the urgent call came for the admission of the wreck victims the response was quick and liberal. The sudden admission of so many poor human beings, crushed and maimed, many in their dying hours, necessarily turned the hospital from the routine ways, that ordinary patients involve into emergency ways and means to provide room and proper treatment for them. But the hospital staff and all connected with the institution did nobly under the circumstances.

The sympathetic treatment that was received by the survivors of the disaster undoubtedly prolonged many a life to the point where it will result in the prevention of death. Praise of such work and under the circumstances that prevailed in the wards, but is appreciated in the silent and inexpressable thoughts of the mind.

It is announced that at the union service of the churches this evening, which will be held at the First Presbyterian church, a special collection will be taken for the aid of the hospital in view of the special needs that have been imposed on the institution by the frightful accident. Such a collection should appeal to deep sympathies and great liberality. It is well known, in fact, frequently referred to in The Daily Press, that the finances of the hospital are always at low ebb, but at this time the physicians and nurses should not be handicapped for a single moment by the lack of any article which will aid to relieve the pain and agony of the poor wreck victims. That collection should be a big one.

With the exception of Senator Stokes, all of the able men of the Legislature are lawyers. On the Republican side they are Senators Johnson, of Bergen; Pitney, Cross and Reed, and on the Democratic side, Messrs. McDermott, Martin and Van Cleef. In the House the Republican lawyers are Speaker Watkins, Mr. Jones, of Essex; Messrs. Bell and Wakelee, of Bergen; Mr. Wood, of Mercer, and Messrs. McKee and Lewis, of Passaic. With the exception of Mr. Blackwell, of Hunterdon, all the Democratic lawyers are from Hudson. They are Messrs. Abbett, Benny, Marks, Murphy, Marnell and Walscheid.

Senator Reed's Apt Word.

Senator Reed entered upon his duties as presiding officer of the State Senate by delivering an address that was typical of the man. The Senator did not indulge in airy persiflage, but was brief and to the point. His remarks were of a common-sense nature, aiming briefly to outline his ideas of what the Senate should accomplish at this session.

Of course, there was a touch of humor in his talk, for it would not be the Honorable Charles unless he made at least one laugh. The reference to Hobson was woven into his remarks so happily and adroitly that had he passed it over without a reference to the latter-day hero of the same name we should have considered the Tall Sycamore as slightly frustrated by his new honors.

But the cleverness of his words were there in the same old way, and the Senator's friends at home can depend upon it that he will leave the President's chair at the end of the session with the reputation of having made an admirable record.

Reed May Be Governor.

The Trenton correspondent of the Philadelphia Record says:

> There are a good many lawyers and bright politicians who believe that as soon as Chas. A. Reed is elected president of the Senate Tuesday he will become Governor. It is held that the recent decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the resignation of Acting Governor Voorhees and the authority of Speaker of the House Watkins in the exercise of the functions of that office also made plain the fact that the incoming president of the Senate must needs become the Acting Governor until the actual Governor takes the oath of office the first of next week. That would make Reed Acting Governor for a week. On the other hand, however, it is contended that under the Court's interpretation of the constitution the New Yorker Watkins must come in act as Governor until the regularly-elected Executive is inaugurated. It is generally understood, however, that the Speaker will continue as the Acting Chief Executive until Voorhees takes the chair.

Another Still Alarm.

A still alarm was turned in at fire headquarters Tuesday afternoon. The fire proved to be in the chimney at Mrs. Ferdinand Brown's house, 127 Webster place. The fire was high up on a level with the attic floor and a hold had to be cut through the chimney and three extinguishers used in putting it out. The damage is trifling.

Wanted a Wider Walk.

Residents in the vicinity of Somerset street and Craig place will very soon ask the Borough Council to replace the walk now laid across Somerset street at that point with a wider walk. The present walk is too narrow.

WRECK KILLED SIXTEEN.

Thirteen Taken Out of Debris and Three Died in the Muhlenberg Hospital.

TWENTY-FIVE PASSENGERS SERIOUSLY HURT.

COMPLETE AND CORRECT LIST OF DEAD AND BADLY INJURED.

Collision Was Due to Someone's Blunder—South Plainfield Operator Disclaims Responsibility—Great Work at the Muhlenberg Hospital—Interviews With Survivors.

Two passenger trains on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, each loaded with men, women and children, crashed into each other near the Greenbrook tanks Monday afternoon at 12:45 o'clock, dealing death and injury on every hand. It was one of the most disastrous wrecks chronicled in the history of New Jersey and by far the most frightful witnessed in the vicinity of Plainfield during the memory of the present generation.

The Daily Press told Monday in its columns of the awful disaster and gave, in a few words, the manner in which this fatality occurred. There was a wreck at Bound Brook in the morning on the Lehigh Valley tracks. A break in a freight train blocked both tracks for a time. Before noon, however, traffic had been resumed on the west bound track and, between Bound Brook and South Plainfield, the road was run as a single track line.

A business men's excursion had been gotten up in the Pennsylvania coal regions by the Lehigh Valley. The Hazleton express, No. 93, brought the excursionists on their way to New York for a few days outing. The number was so large that the train had to be run in sections. It was about 12:30 when section two of the train, made up a number of coaches and a Pullman car, left Bound Brook, drawn by engine No. 485, Engineer James Pendergraph, of Easton. The fireman was Oliver Schaffer, of South Easton, Pa. The conductor was Harry Riddle, of Easton, with a crew of brakemen, Freeman Snyder and Charles Dalrymple, of Easton, and Newsagent William Kelter, of Easton.

About the same time one of the Bound Brook "scoots," as the locals between Bound Brook and New York are called, left South Plainfield, west bound. It was drawn by engine No. 309, with E. W. Rich, of Bound Brook, as engineer, and William Cheshire, of Bound Brook, as fireman. Leon Price, of Bound Brook, was the conductor of the local. Ralph L. Reed, of Bound Brook, the baggagemaster, and Daniel Sullivan, of Bound Brook, the brakeman.

The Hazleton express was crowded with the happy excursionists, all looking forward with eager anticipation to their arrival in the metropolis. The train was moving rapidly and had just left the cut near Lincoln and prepared to round the curve at the right by the "tanks," when the local loomed up ahead. Both trains were running on the westbound track. There was no time to stop for the woods at the curve bid the trains from each other until they were close together. Then came the crash.

The locomotives reared up in the air as they came together and then fell on the south side of the track, the engine of the express twisting about so that it faced the direction from whence it came. Both locomotives were totally wrecked.

The first car of the express was crowded, many of the passengers being women and children. The forward truck was knocked from under it, and the tender of the engine was forced right through the end of the car and half its length. One side of the car was split off. The back trucks were derailed, but remained under the car.

The sudden shock and the advent of the tender through the car drove the passengers into a heap. It was here where most of the fatalities occurred, the rest being confined to the occupants of the two cabs. Engineer Rick jumped and the others were thrown. The rest of the cars of the express were not damaged in the slightest.

The baggage car on the local was derailed but that was all the damage to that train except to the engine. None of the passengers in the latter train were seriously injured although all were severely shaken up by the collision.

Some of the injured were able to walk out of the wreck of the passenger coach. The remainder were carried out on the seat cushions and the doors taken from the cars. The dead were also removed. They were horrible sights although not excessively mangled.

A number of the injured were assisted and carried across to the Jersey Central tracks that run parallel with those of the Lehigh Valley at the place, and brought to this city. They were then taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. A number went on to Jersey City to be cared for in the hospitals there.

The dead were laid on the ground near by until it was arranged to take them back to Bound Brook in the Pullman car that formed the end of Hazleton express. They were placed on the seats and taken back to Bound Brook where part were removed to the freight house.

The dead and wounded being removed from the wreck, the work of removing the debris began. Aside from the two locomotives there was very little for the host of sightseers, that assembled, to see. The cars were removed and the two large steam wreckers from Packerton and Easton soon opened the tracks. The wreckage was all removed late last evening and the rails repaired.

One of the first acts of the railroad officials on learning of the accident was to telegraph to the surrounding towns for physicians. The Jersey Central placed a special engine at the service of the Plainfield medical staff. Drs. Fritts, Buchannan and Zeglio, Mrs. J. A. Haynes, with a stock of bandages, and a Press reporter, were hurried to the scene of the disaster in the engine. Dr. J. F. Hecht, of Raritan; Drs. F. A. Wold and C. B. P. Fisher, of Bound Brook; and Dr. W. J. Nelson, of New Market, also answered to the the call. Six physicians arrived from Flemington but too late to render any assistance.

THRILLING EXPERIENCES.

Press Reporter Talked With Survivors Soon After the Collision.

J. T. Triscurt, of 371 North Seventh street, Newark, was one of the half dozen passengers on the Bound Brook local going west, none of whom were injured. Mr. Triscurt had a thrilling experience, but was not injured in the slightest. "Our train," said Mr. Triscurt to a local reporter, "was composed of the combination baggage and smoker and one passenger coach. The few passengers there was on the train were in the last car. I was reading a paper when I heard the whistling of the engine, but thought it was probably to warn someone off the track. Suddenly there came the awful shock of the collision. I went flying through space over several seats and landed up against a window. The pane of glass was broken, but the sleeve of my coat prevented my getting cashed. The other passengers were not hurt, either, and we all disembarked to witness the scene of the catastrophe."

David Hand and Lewis Corell, of Shamokin, Pa., were among the Pennsylvanians who were on their way to the metropolis to enjoy the three days' visit allowed by the excursion tickets they were riding on. They occupied a seat together four seats from the rear end of the car. While watching the railroad employes and others who were on hand assisting to carry out the dead bodies from the car they occupied, Hand and Corell were congratulating themselves on a miraculous escape from a horrible death. Corell was rubbing his back from the sprain he received in the collision when seen by a Daily Press reporter. He told the following story of his experience:

"My friend Hand and myself were going to New York to see the sights, as they say of us people from up in Pennsylvania, but we are seeing sights now that were not down on the programme, and which I hope we will never see again. It is a providential act that we are able to do this, though. We had just passed the scene of the wreck of the freight cars a short distance east of Bound Brook and were talking of the sight when I heard the locomotive of our train whistling in a terrific manner. I looked out of the car window and saw the stretch of track ahead after the road makes the curve. I noticed the local train coming towards us, but for the moment thought that it was on the other track. Before I could think again, however, I felt an awful jar and was sent sprawling across three seats in front of me. For a moment I was dazed, and I seemed totally paralyzed. I attempted to move and I fell in a heap between the seats.

"There was a hideous hissing of steam, and, not yet realizing what had really happened, I instinctively put out one of my hands to help myself to rise. It makes me creep to think of where that hand landed. It was in the mangled face of a woman, who had been occupying a front seat and had been thrown to the spot where I lay by the force of the collision. I was horror stricken, but got up and what a terrible sight met my eyes! There was the tender of the engine jammed into the front of the car while the aisle was strewn with bodies, some writhing in agony and others lying motionless—instantly killed.

"Almost crazed with fear I picked my way between the dead and half-dead bodies of the passengers who had been further forward than I and got out on to the platform and jumped to the ground. For a brief time I felt as though the very next minute I was going to die from something of which I can give no description. Finally, however, I became myself again and I commenced to look around for my friend Hand. I found him setting up on the bank rubbing his sides from the strain that he received, but otherwise he was all right. It was certainly a miraculous escape that we had, for from what I could see we were about the only ones in the car that were not either killed or severely injured. Every seat in the car had two passengers in it."

AT THE HOSPITAL.

Hasty Preparations to Care for the Injured—Splendid Work Done by All.

The wounded began to arrive at the hospital soon after 1 o'clock. The superintendent, Miss Moss, had been notified prior to this, and every available cot was prepared and every unoccupied part of the building was emptied and made ready for the injured. All the nurses were called to duty, and as many more young women from the outside as would volunteer to help. As many of the physicians as were left in the city hurried to offer their services, but with all the bustle and hurry an air of order reigned over the whole institution.

The wounded ones were brought to this city on the Central Railroad trains. The trains were stopped at the scene of the wreck, as many injured people put aboard as were ready to be transferred, and carried to the station here. The ambulance was not sufficient to carry them all, so express wagons were called into service, and the wounded carefully laid out on clean straw. In this way many were transferred with as little discomfort as though they had ridden in the ambulance.

Several of the trains stopped at Plainfield avenue, near the old freight-house, and the wounded were taken to the hospital on stretchers across the fields. As the wounded were carried in some were unconscious, while others groaned loudly. They were first hurried into the operating room where their broken bones were set and their wounds bandaged. Then they were trundled into one of the wards and placed on cots.

Every one who witnessed the work done at the hospital by the physicians and nurses, was loud in his praise of their coolness and skill. The institution is poorly equipped to handle so many serious cases as this on short notice, yet after the physicians had arrived and the wards were prepared to receive the wounded, order was restored, and Boardsman Flynn and Officer Higgins put on duty at the door with orders to allow none but physicians, nurses and those connected with the hospital staff inside.

Many pathetic scenes were witnessed at the bed sides of the hurt and dying. Many families were separated on the train, the women and children being in the forward cars, while the men were in the rear, smoking.

By 4 o'clock the hospital began to be beseiged with anxious husbands and sons, who came to see their wives, mothers or sisters. In every case where the visitors were related to the ones they desired to see admittance was not denied, but Miss Moss drew the line sharply and allowed no one else inside.

One family consisting of mother, an aunt and two children called to see a dying husband and father. It was a sad scene, indeed, around that little cot, shut in with the white curtains, and even the physician, schooled to witness such sights, could not keep back a tear or two. Another party of four came to see their friends in the hospital. They were from Mt. Carmel, and had been travelling together in the first car, but at a point along the line these four had gone into the rear car and thus were saved.

The physicians who offered their services here were Drs. Long, Probasco, Ard, Garman, Buchanan, R. W. and B. Van D. Hedges, Jenkins, Tomlinson, Endicott, Murry, Davis, Zeglio and others.

Mrs. J. A. Haynes, of North avenue, accompanied the physicians to the scene of the wreck on the drill engine, and armed with bandages and lint, did excellent work among the wounded. When she could do no more there she went to the hospital and assisted the nurses and doctors until the wounded had all been cared for.

Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, of Hope chapel, Harry Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and Oscar Rogers, president of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, were among the dying offering what consolation they could. Fathers Smyth and Westman, of St. Mary's church, were granting absolution to the Catholics there.

WHAT OPERATOR SAYS.

Telegrapher at South Plainfield Declares He Got No Orders to Hold Local.

Harry Butland, who is operator at the South Plainfield station of the Lehigh Valley, was seen by a reporter Monday night. He said: "I came on duty at 12 o'clock this noon and will work until 12 o'clock midnight. When I came on duty I looked over the train records for the morning, and found that the Bound Brook local was forty-six minutes late. It left South Plainfield at 12:36 o'clock noon. Myself and the leverman in the block tower, John Mohansey, obeyed every train order we received. We did not receive an order to hold the Bound Brook local. So far as we knew no orders from the train dispatcher the local had the right of way over the track. I received no orders in reference to the Hazelton express."

ARCANUMITES FARE WELL.

Local Lodge Prompt to Give All Aid Possible to Unfortunate Brothers.

Charles K. Stevens, of Perth Amboy, Regent of the Royal Arcanum there, telephoned last Tuesday morning to D. W. Littell, of Plainfield Council, No. 712, Royal Arcanum, asking him to look after Engineer Edward Rick, who is a member of the Perth Amboy Council. Rick is the man that ran the local train and is now confined in Muhlenberg Hospital.

At the meeting of Plainfield Council last Monday a resolution was adopted unanimously in which the members decided to look after all members of the Arcanum who are found to have been in the wreck.

NO INQUEST YET.

All But Three of the Dead Have so Far Been Identified.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Bound Brook, January 10.—Traffic on the Lehigh Valley railroad has been resumed once more after the fearful disaster of Monday after noon. The tracks were cleared late that night and repaired sufficiently to allow the resumption of traffic. This morning, steam wreckers are still at work, removing the debris of the locomotives and the telescoped car from the side of the tracks.

Superintendent W. O. Spriggs's private car was sent to Bound Brook last night, and a field telegraph office established there. The Superintendent and his assistants were up most of the night. This morning, the list of killed and injured was completed and Superintendent Spriggs gave a Press reporter the entire list.

The thirteen bodies brought to Bound Brook from the wreck were transferred from a Lehigh Valley passenger coach and the Hutchinson to the morgue of DeMott & Elger on during the evening. Coroner Henry Mole, of New Brunswick, arrived here during the evening and viewed the bodies.

Ten of the thirteen bodies were identified all but one positively. The Coroner granted burial permits in these cases and the remains will be shipped in caskets to the places where they belong. The three unidentified, all women, will remain at the morgue until some clue is gained to their identity.

The formal inquest will then be held in Middlesex county, probably at Dunellen or New Market.

TWO CARS LEAPED THE EMBANKMENT.

FREIGHT CARS DERAILED.

ACCIDENT CAUSED BY THE BREAKING OF A JOURNAL.

Happened Just East of the Bound Brook Station—Fifty Feet of Track Torn Up—Seven Cars Derailed—Two Went Over the Bank and Scattered Their Load of Grain Over the Ice.

Bound Brook, Jan. 9.—A broken journal and axle on an east bound freight train on the Lehigh Valley railroad, early this morning, resulted in the derailing of seven cars and the blocking of both tracks just east of this place. No one was injured.

The freight train loaded with grain was bound for Perth Amboy under the charge of Conductor Lawrence Dufffin, of Easton. Ambrose West, of Easton, was the engineer of locomotive No. 258, which was pulling the train. At 4:45 o'clock the train was approaching the Bound Brook station when the journal broke. The ties were cut and the ground ploughed up for a hundred feet west of the station. The woodwork on the bridge over the road was partially torn up. Then the broken car began to rip up the ties and rails for a distance of some fifty feet. The seven cars following were derailed, some upset and two of them pitched over the high embankment and scattered their load of grain over the ice below.

The east bound track was torn up and the west bound track was blocked by the wreckage. Freight traffic was suspended for the time while the important passenger trains were switched over to the Jersey Central railroad at the Port Reading crossing and went over that road to Central junction, near Roselle and there returned to the Lehigh Valley.

Superintendent W. O. Spriggs was early on the scene and hustled through the opening of the tracks. The wrecking train came from Perth Amboy, early in the morning. The steam wrecker from Packerton arrived at 9 o'clock and an hour later, the west bound track was cleared. The other track will be ready this afternoon when the rails will be relaid.

BLORE GETS VERDICT BY THE JUDGE'S ORDER.

CASE TAKEN TO HIGHER COURT.

Judge VanSyckel Wants Certain Law Question to be Reviewed by Higher Court.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—"Does the counsel wish to talk?" asked Justice VanSyckel, when Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the Board of Chosen Freeholders in the case of ex Jail Warden John G. Blore, against that body for salary for services rendered, closed his case.

"I just want to say," added the Court, "that it is of no use. I have made up my mind in the matter. I have decided to charge the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff."

The Court directed the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff for $491.84, including interest. This action was taken by the Judge because he wants a higher court to review the law questions of the case. An appeal was taken.

Blore is a vetran of the Civil War. He was appointed jail warden of Union county February 1st, 1893, and his term was fixed at five years. Failing to be re-elected last February, and acting under the advice of counsel, he refused to surrender the office to his successor. He continued to hold the office until June 31st, when served with a writ and copy of a decision of the upper court, declaring the act of 1897 unconstitutional. Then it was he brought suit against the county to recover the wages due him, from February 1st to June 21st.

MANY CONSECRATED IN CHURCH.

Impressive Service Held in All Souls Church Monday Morning.

The services at All Souls' church Sunday morning were especially interesting from the fact that seven young people, two men and five women, presented themselves for the service of consecration and to be welcomed thereafter as members of the Christian church. It was a very earnest company of young people who responded to the pastor's words, and the impression left on the minds of all present must have been serious and ennobling. The names of the new members who were welcomed as making, for the first time, a religious profession, are Helen Wright Andrews, Viola Percy Conklin, Edward Cohen, Laura M. Walker, Philip C. Wells. While as associate members, having already united with Unitarian churches elsewhere, the pastor welcomed Caroline A. Barber and Cora A. Perry.

Edwin T. Douglass, of Washington Park, left Friday for St. Augustine, Fla., partly on business and partly on pleasure.

DEBT WAS WIPED OUT.

METHODISTS OF SOMERVILLE GIVE UP TWO DAYS OF REJOICING.

Mortgages and Notes to be Burned—Rev. J. E. Bryan Largely Responsible for the Anti-Bindebtedness of the Town Contributed.

Somerville, Jan. 9.—The First Methodist church of Somerville are having days of rejoicing.

The cause of all this rejoicing is the entire extinguishment of a long-standing debt on the church and parsonage property.

Rev. Dr. J. E. Bryan is pastor of the church. When he assumed charge last spring there was an indebtedness of $6,100. At the first quarterly conference he told the official boards of the church that the debt must be lifted if the church would be prosperous. They were inspired by his energy, and during the summer about $2,000 was raised. The members of the congregation sacrificed their personal comforts to aid in lifting the debt.

J. B. Duke, the president of the Tobacco Trust, who has a residence here, offered a liberal subscription, which he has since paid. Many other friends outside the congregation have assisted in a most liberal manner.

Yesterday morning a sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. George Smith, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, who resides in North Plainfield. Dr. Bryan occupied the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Dr. John Krantz, presiding elder of the Paterson district, and formerly a pastor of the church.

This evening after the services the mortgages, bonds and notes will all be cremated. The women of the congregation will serve a collation in the church parlors between the services.

FIRST SEVERE SENTENCE

JUDGE RUNYON GIVES PHILLIMORE A BIG DOSE OF PUNISHMENT.

Prisoner Has a Record of Being Arrested Three Times in Three Days—He Pleaded Hard, But it Did No Good.

Arrested three times in three days. That is the record John Phillimore, of North avenue, Netherwood, has made for himself. The first two times he got off easily, but when he came up before Judge Runyon Monday morning he was given a sentence that will keep him in the county jail at Elizabeth for the balance of the winter.

Phillimore is a Britisher and his ways were arraigned before the City Judge for stealing coal from the Central Railroad. Phillimore was fined $3 and allowed to go. Later in the day he was locked up for being drunk, and the next morning sentence was suspended upon him, with a warning not to come there again.

But Phillimore did not heed the warning and after fortifying himself with two quart bottles of whiskey, went up to Frank Hollenbeck, his son-in-law, on North avenue, and began to abuse him, calling him names and shouting loudly to the annoyance of the neighbors. Hollenbeck went to the City Judge's office and swore out a warrant for Phillimore's arrest, and Officer Saunders locked him up.

This morning, when arraigned in court, the prisoner was in a penitent mood. He denied being drunk, denied being disorderly, and even denied being at Hollenbeck's house until confronted with evidence that he was. Then he said it was because he wanted to put him out of the way so that he could get the insurance money, and ended with promising the court to leave town at once if he would only suspend sentence on him again. But Judge Runyon said he had been troubled enough with Phillimore already, and gave him fifty-nine days in jail and a fine of $100.

TROUBLE IN THIRD REGIMENT.

Charges Made by Officers and Men May Cause a Lively Row.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—The officers of the Third New Jersey Regiment, now located at Athens, Ga., are indignant at unfavorable criticisms of them which have appeared in several New Jersey papers and complain bitterly that they have been unfairly attacked. They have written letters to their friends in this city denouncing the attacks as not warranted by the real facts. Threats are made in the letters that when the regiment returns from the south some libel suits will be instituted. On the other hand it is claimed that letters received here from several of the rank and file, and also from some of the company officers, make serious charges of incompetency against some of those higher in command.

The indications are that there will be some lively scenes here when the regiment returns home and then the real truth will have to come out.

Lack of Support.

In consideration of want of appreciation and support from the Christians of Plainfield, the Branch of the Christian and Missionary Alliance organized a few years ago, for the purpose of supporting a missionary in Palestine, has discontinued its meetings.

Julius Williams, of Elmwood place, is very much improved from a severe attack of tonsilitis.

UNION COUNTY G. O. P. AT THE INAUGURATION.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR THEM.

A BRASS BAND TO ACCOMPANY THE POLITICIANS.

Assurances Treat It Will be the Largest Delegation That Has Ever Left Union County for Trenton — Representatives Expected to Go From all Parts of the Bailiwick — Reduced Railroad Fares.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—Details for the visit of the representatives of Union county to Trenton Tuesday, Jan. 17th, to attend the inauguration of Governor Voorhees are nearing completion, and the committee having the matter in charge have received assurances that the delegation will be the largest that has every left Union county to go to the State capital.

It is anticipated that fully 1,000 persons from all parts of the county will join the party that will participate in the inaugural ceremonies that will induct into office the first Republican of Union county ever elected executive of New Jersey.

While the Governor is not in favor of a demonstration upon his inauguration, he will in a measure give way to the wishes of his friends, and his townsmen and the citizens of this county are preparing to go to Trenton and "whoop things up" on the occasion of his taking charge of the executive office of the State. The delegation will go on special train or trains, as the size of the party may need. These trains will leave Elizabethport at 7:55 and the main station at Elizabeth at 8 o'clock, and will make stops as far as Plainfield, running then directly to Trenton.

The train probably will start from Elizabethport, or if occasion should require, a section may be run from Newark, but steps will be taken so that the Union county delegation will have cars together in one section. It is likely that a lunch car will be attached to the trains so that the party may enjoy all the comforts of the trip. The special trains will leave Trenton on the return at a late hour yet to be fixed.

Tickets for this trip, and which will also be good to go on any train on Monday, January 16th, and good for return until January 18th, inclusive, have been fixed at the following rates: Newark, $1.44; Elizabethport, $1.33; Elizabeth, $1.28; Roselle, $1.23; Cranford, $1.38; Westfield, $1.36; Fanwood, $1.21; Plainfield, $1.11.

The Union county delegation will be provided with handsome badges and canes, and will probably meet at Republican headquarters in the Dix building. From there they will march to the railroad station, headed by a brass band, and board the special train. In Trenton they will march to the Taylor Opera House, or to such point as may be assigned to them in the inaugural parade. It is expected that this delegation will be the guard of honor to Governor Voorhees in case he consents to participate in a parade, although the Frelinghuysen Lancers, of Newark, which organization is arranging to attend the inauguration, is endeavoring to secure that honor.

$150 Diamond Ring Missing.

James Connely, of West Third street, has reported to the police the loss of a diamond ring belonging to his wife and valued at $150. The police are investigating the case and think that the suspected thief is in Philadelphia. Mrs. Connely had the ring but a short time before it was stolen. A boarder in the house is suspected of making way with it, for he used often to admire the ring on Mrs. Connely's finger. The loss was discovered Christmas Day, and at the same the boarder disappeared.

License Time Again.

MASTER PIGGY WON FOR THE BENEDICTS.

Deciding Match Rolled on Park Club Alleys.

VERY LITTLE EXCITEMENT.

THE MARRIED MEN HAD EVERYTHING THEIR OWN WAY.

The Pig Occupied an Exalted Position Over the Score Board—Benedicts Had a Great Team—F. B. Matthews Was Not There, So W. H. McCutchen, Yale, Acted as Captain for the Bachelors.

Ten married men and a pig. Who could expect to defeat such a combination? Certainly not the Bachelors of the Park Club. Then to try to buck against the president of the State Senate. Even the "tall powerful" boss of Somerset county, L. A. Thompson, couldn't down Senator Reed, so what could be hoped for the poor little Bachelors of the Park Club.

Saturday night the deciding match between the Bachelors and Benedicts was rolled on the Park Club alleys. Everybody says it was the pig that did it. At any rate the Benedicts completely wiped their opponents off of the score board and won by 96 pins. There wasn't a time when the reputation of the pig as a successful mascot seemed in danger.

The pig was a delightful little porker, loaned for the occasion by J. H. Howell. The excitement of the match was evidently too much for Master Piggy, for he never said a word. Steward Jones had him in a nice little wooden cage that he had hoisted over the score board and kept there during the game. There was some doubt as to which team the mascot belonged. There needn't have been any, however, for Mr. Howell bowled on the Benedict team, and he was not for turning such a valuable contribution to good luck over to his opponents.

Peter Matthews wasn't home, so Will McCutchen left his "Y" jersey at home, and appeared decked out in all the regalia of the marshal of the unmarried forces. Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy was a valued addition to that team. Young Arthur Peck rolled well as did several other of the Bachelors who were such from force of circumstances rather than preference.

As to the game, there isn't much to say about it. The Benedicts had things pretty all their own way and increased their lead as high as 128 pins. Then they gave up trying to do anything very remarkable. Councilman George T. Rogers made his mark at the windup with two strikes and eight, his final score being equal to that of that masterhand, Former Councilman J. C. Peck.

Last winter the Bachelors won the series in two straight matches. This year the Benedicts are victorious two out of three.

The individual scores follow:

OLD MAN DESTITUTE AND ALONE IN CABIN.

PITIABLE PLIGHT OF "WEE WEE."

Living by Himself He Has Been Sick and Only Had a Slice of Stale Loaf of Bread to Eat for Over a Week.

Westfield, Jan. 9—P. H. Chevantner, a well-known character of this town and called "Wee Wee" has been missed from the streets for the past week. Yesterday two young men in taking a walk passed his cabin, which is situated near the railroad track between Westfield and Fanwood, and went in. They found the old man, who is 62 years old, sick. The room in which he was is devoid of furniture with the exception of a stove, a chair and a few bed clothes which he had spread on the floor for a bed.

Chevantner came to Westfield 33 years ago with his wife but he had only been here a week when his wife ran away and since that time the old man has lived alone in the little cabin which he owns. He said he had been sick for a week and in that time had had nothing to eat but a loaf of stale bread. He has a son who is a plumber in Long Island City but the old man will not allow anyone to write to him as he says his son is married and cannot be expected to keep him in addition to his own family.

POWER FOR COLLECTOR TO MAKE EXEMPTIONS.

STATE LAW IS FOLLOWED.

MAYOR APPOINTS S. J. SHREVE MEMBER OF BOARD OF HEALTH.

Councilman Valiant Reports Borough Finances in Good Condition, and a $1,500 Note is Ordered Paid Before It is Due—Mayor's Suggestion for a New Crosswalk is Not Accepted, Valy Acted as Captain for the Bachelors.

A good share of the Borough Council meeting last Friday was taken up in discussing matters pertaining to taxes, especially in relation to the exempt firemen, several of whom have applied to the Council for the exemption usually allowed them, and for which there seems to have been no provision made this year. Exempt firemen living in other localities have also communicated with the Council, and want exemption on property they own in the borough.

The difficulty was finally removed by the Council passing a resolution authorizing the collector, George F. Brown, to allow a reduction to exempt firemen according to an act recently passed by the Legislature, and recorded upon the statutes, upon the exempt firemen certifying to the Council their name and address.

Councilmen Bell, Woolston, Rogers, Valiant and Burtis were present. Councilman MacLaughlin was absent on account of illness. William B. Krewson sent in his resignation as a member of Warren Engine Company, which was accepted. The term of Newton B. Smalley as a member of the Board of Health having expired, the Mayor and Council appointed B. J. Shreve in Mr. Smalley's place. The term is for four years.

The Mayor suggested that the cross walk at Somerset street and Craig place be taken up and a new four-foot walk be laid in its place, and the old walk, which is only two feet in width and so low that it is always under water when it rains, be put down across Washington avenue at Park place. This suggestion did not meet with the approval of the Council so it was dropped.

Councilman Woolston reported the expenditure of $43.87 upon the streets during the past month for carting snow and stone, cleaning crosswalks and sidewalks, trimming trees, etc.

Councilman Rogers offered a resolution that a new contract just drawn up to be signed by the Council and the Electric Light Company, be executed, and it was passed. The new contract is strong and binding, a great improvement over previous contracts with the same company. The borough agrees to pay $14.50 per lamp per year, and the Electric Light Company to furnish free lights around the engine house and the jail.

The Council confirmed the act of the Mayor and Council in drawing up warrants for the special school fund in December. Councilman Valiant said that he found, after all bills were paid, that he had enough money in the treasury to pay a note of $1,500 not due until February 9th but he made a motion that a warrant be drawn to pay the note with interest to date, $1,536.10, and thus save some interest. The motion was carried.

The clerk's financial report ending December 31st, 1898, was as follows: Deficit, $447.92. The following monies were collected since last report: Catherine Obits, Rockview avenue, $23 80; A. E. Mulholland, Rockview avenue, $30.03; T. E. Curris, Summit avenue, $15; Lizzie Swackhamer, Summit avenue, $19.20; W.B. Codington, Summit avenue, $8.50; J. B. Mills, Summit avenue, $7.60; C. B. Pope, Summit avenue, $7; W. B. Thorn, Summit avenue, $10; G. W. Bird, Summit avenue, $3.80; Plainfield Street Railroad Company, repairs to streets, etc., $25.83; Plainfield Street Railroad Company, license, $200; fines, Long, $25; total, $274.35; dirt sold, $35; total, $309.35.

Taxes collected during December, and interest, $27,948.94. Balance on hand December 1st, $7,968.41; receipts, $42,543.69; disbursements, $18,312.52.

TOOK PITY ON HIS FAMILY.

Prisoner Said He Had Wife and Seven Children—Judge Let Him Go.

Officer Flanagan found Fred Sanderson, of Samptown, drunk on West Third street Saturday night and locked him up. In the City Court Monday the prisoner stated that he has a wife and seven little ones dependant upon him for support. City Judge Runyon suspended sentence on him. Sanderson works for the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company as an ice cutter.

A Bad Fall.

Miss Try Mattox, of Webster place, had a bad fall Monday on the ice at the corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues. She slipped and fell, striking the back of her head against a sharp stone and lay there unable to rise for several minutes. Miss Mattox was assisted to her home and will be obliged to be quiet for a day or two.

A MANLY FELLOW DEAD

HOWARD W. CORLIES SUCCUMBS TO AN ATTACK OF PNEUMONIA.

He Had Been Sick Only Ten Days and But Few of His Friends Knew of His Serious Illness—Prominent in Society.

The unexpected death of Howard W. Corlies, of Boad Ending, which occurred Friday evening, was a severe blow to the host of friends of this popular young man, many of whom did not know of the seriousness of his illness. Death was due to pneumonia from which the young man was a sufferer for about ten days. Mr. Corlies had not been real strong since he had an attack of appendicitis about two years ago, and his constitution was not the strongest. Dr. Murray was the attending physician and everything know to medical skill was used to save life.

Mr. Corlies was a person of rare devotion to his mother. In a large circle of friends he was a great favorite. In society he was a prominent figure and was a leader. He attended the Crescent Avenue church constantly and faithfully. He was also an active member of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and was very popular among all the members. In other channels his manly influence, kind ways and genial disposition won for him the admiration of all who knew him.

He was associated in business with his uncle, Howard Wright, who is connected with the Standard Oil Company. A mother and three sisters survive him. The sisters are Miss Edmee Corlies, Mrs. Harry C. Adams and Mrs. J. Parker Mason, all of this city.

JURY DECIDED THERE WAS NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

THIRD TRIAL OF CASE AGAINST HAND.

Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company Claimed He Collected Money He Was Not Entitled to.

Friday for the third time a jury was drawn to Justice Moffatt's court to try the case in tort of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company against Fred W. Hand for $71.16 which they claim Hand owes them on money collected by him after he had sold out his ice business to them. The jury, after being out three hours, brought in a verdict of no cause of action. Notice of appeal was given at once.

The first jury was drawn fully six weeks ago, but owing to some difficulty in the boards of assessors and the court, the jury were discharged, and the case adjourned. The next time the case came up it was tried, but the jury disagreed. This time the case was fought on the same lines, but it took the men from 1:30 o'clock until 4:30 to agree upon a verdict. Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiffs, and S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, was for the defendant.

The jurymen were Isaac Randolph, James R. Clarkson, J. S. Garretson, P. A. VanFleet, Nathan C. Pennington, Charles G. Rose, I. P. Larew, Thomas Gray, J. W. Anderson, L. C. Sheppard, J. N. Wyckoff and Robert Walker.

LICENSE FIGHT LED BY ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

SUDDAY SELLING OVER IN SUMMIT.

The Great Reformer Puts His Detectives to Work in a Union County Town.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9—Anthony Comstock is putting up a strong fight against the granting of saloon licenses in Summit. Saturday he drove two applicants out of the field and had the applications of two others held up until the Grand Jury could investigate charges that Mr. Comstock's detectives stand ready to make.

William F. Hennessey, of Park row, New York, in a sworn statement handed to the Court of Common Pleas, testified that Sunday, September 24th, he, accompanied by H. B. Kimball, entered the saloon of John J. Shea, in Summit, played several games of pool there, and had some drinks of whiskey; and also that Sunday, October 16th, they got into Pierson's Hotel, in Summit, drank whiskey and saw about ten men in the place, all drinking.

Judge Vail said if this was the case, the proper place for the witness to go was before the Grand Jury, as Sunday selling was an indictable offense. He would, in the meanwhile, hold up these licenses until he saw what action would be taken by the Grand Jury. The licenses of John J. Shea and Frederick Bedelt consequently were laid over.

Lawyer Twombly appeared in the court as the representative of Mr. Comstock, and made a strong argument against the granting of any more new licenses in Summit.

Licenses were granted by Judge Vail to Terrence Dunn, of Linden; John Tafelski, of Linden; Michael A. Huber and Nicola Orchietti, of Westfield.

Mrs. Hobbs, of Pearl street, is critically ill at her home.

SOCIETY DEFIES GRIP AND BAD WEATHER

Successful Reception and Dance at Home Of Col. Tyler.

ELABORATE DECORATIONS.

GIVEN IN HONOR OF TWO NEWLY WEDDED COUPLES.

They Were Nephews of Mrs. Tyler—At the Last Moment Rev. Frederick S. Wright Was Taken Ill With the Grip—Many Local Society Folk Were Present—A Dance in the Evening.

The grip and disagreeable weather conspired to overthrow the well laid plans of Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler for the charming reception and dance held at their spacious home on West Seventh street Friday afternoon and evening. But it wasn't easy use. The affair was a great success and eminently a social triumph. The grip waylaid two of the principal participants, however, while grip and the weather kept many of the invited guests at home.

The affair was given in honor of Dr. and Mrs. George H. Wright, of New Milford, Conn., and Rev. and Mrs. Frederick A. Wright, of Stamford, Conn., both newly wedded couples. The young men are nephews of Mrs. Tyler and have often visited in this city where they are well-known. Dr. and Mrs. Wright were on their bridal tour. At the last moment, a telegram was received stating that the other couple would be unable to attend as both were ill with the grip.

A reception was held from 5 to 6 and was attended by some 125 guests, principally from Plainfield, Col. and Mrs. Tyler and Dr. and Mrs. Wright were assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. R. P. Lincoln, of New York city, and Mrs. George William Wright, of New Milford, Conn., mother of the grooms. The rooms were profusely decorated, the prevailing color being pink.

The table was an elaborate arrangement in the prevailing colors. At the table Mrs. S. A. Ginna, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Wm. G. Wright and D. H. Rowland. They were assisted in serving the guests by the Misses Annie Murphy, Daisy VanBoskerck, Ethel VanBoskerck, Bessie Ginna, Helen Lincoln and Katherine Stewart.

During the evening, from 9 o'clock until 12, a dance for the young people was held, to which there were some hundred guests in attendance. The table was removed from the dining room and placed in the kitchen, which was also decorated. Refreshments were served there at a late hour.

The supper was served by Mazed, of New York. Rogers furnished the music for the dance. There were 600 invitations issued.

Managers of Young Women's Club to Introduce New System of Dressmaking.

The management of the Young Women's Club are about to introduce another system of dress-making, in addition to the Kellogue system, now being taught Monday evenings by Miss Isabel Scarborough. This is the McDowell system, which will be taught Wednesday afternoons and evenings by a teacher from the McDowell school in New York. The price of this system in New York is $20, but arrangements have been made by which club members may obtain the course, consisting of the system and ten lessons at $9. The afternoon class for non-club members will cost $15, in advance. This is considered an unusual opportunity and it is hoped many will take advantage of it. Names should be sent at once to Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., 225 Madison avenue.

Funeral of Late Mrs. Willard.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Stephen Willard were held Thursday afternoon from the First Baptist church at 2:30. Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the church officiated, and spoke kindly words of the life of the departed. There was a large attendance of friends. Interment was in Hillside, and relatives of the deceased served as pall bearers.

Who Should Pay the Taxes?

Previous to the meeting of the Borough Council last Friday the members informally discussed a subject in reference to the taxes levied on Dr. Cooley's "Brookside Retreat." It appears that when Dr. Cooley and Dr. Davis dissolved partnership former swore off $6,000 for debt and the latter did the same thing. The matter will be investigated at an early date.

TO CONNECT SUMMIT WITH PLAINFIELD.

A Trolley Line Proposed Through Passaic Valley.

WAY OF WASHINGTONVILLE.

LINE TO WASHINGTONVILLE SOON SEEMS VERY PROBABLE.

Assemblyman Cooper Wants It Extended Out Smalleytown County Road to Passaic Valley and Thence to Summit—Street Railway Favors Trolley Through Gap and to Inn on Mountain.

The granting of the franchise for the Scotch Plains extention of the lines of the Plainfield Street Railway seems to mean even a greater advance of that company's lines than is apparent on the surface. For two years some of the residents of Washingtonville have been working to get the company to extend its lines in that direction. The plan proposed was to extend the Somerville line through the gap to Washingtonville and thence up the north side of the first mountain to the Mountain Park Inn.

The trolley capitalists were willing to make the addition but they did not consider it of sufficient importance to their own interests to bring the necessary labor here just for that one branch. So they told the people of Washingtonville that the projected line would go forward when the Scotch Plains extension was made as the labor would then be here and the work quickly accomplished.

There was no opposition to the trolley road from property owners along the line of the proposed extension but they have now come out in favor of the line to Washingtonville. As Chandler Riker, one of the prominent stockholder in the Plainfield Company, is also interested in the Mountain Park Inn, he is naturally interested in connecting it with Plainfield by trolley. The people of Washingtonville have agreed to assist in the preparation of the roadway for the line. The necessary permission from the North Plainfield township committee can be had, it is confidently stated, for the asking as all the members of the committee are heartily in favor of a trolley for Washingtonville.

The latest development in the trolley extension movement has been started by Assemblyman John Cooper, of Somerset county. He lives in Warren township, back of Washingtonville. He is now agitating the question of a trolley road from Washingtonville over the Smalleytown road to the Passaic Valley and thence on to Summit. That road has just been designated as a county road and will be cared for as such. It is his plan to have the trolley road at the side of the road, and he has been at work securing consents from the interested property-owners. He is working on that part of the line from Washingtonville through Warren township to the Passaic Valley bridge which marks the county line.

This proposed line would undoubtedly be of great value to Plainfield, as well as to the territory through which it would pass, for besides bringing in a large amount of trade to this city it would serve as a connecting link between Plainfield and Summit which, though in the same county, can only communicate by rail by the way of Elizabeth and Newark, a rather roundabout way.

IN A SHAM BATTLE.

Third Regiment Boys Enjoy an Artificial Taste of War.

A letter has been received from Frank Haurand, who is with the Third Regiment at Athens, Ga., in which he sends an interesting account of a sham battle which was fought on Georgia Hillside last Tuesday between several regiments, including the Third New Jersey. The account is taken from the Athens Banner, and is thrilling. It speaks of the way in which the New Jersey boys were forced to retreat, and had there been bullets in front of the powder there would scarcely have been a New Jersey left to tell the tale. The battle was witnessed by three thousand people, and not an accident occurred to mar the event.

Dr. Jenkins' Horse Ran Away.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins' horse ran away Friday afternoon on Elm place and upset the buggy. Dr. Jenkins was inside a house attending a patient, and the colored driver attempted to turn the horse around. The harness broke and let the horse loose, but he was caught before he had gone far. The contents of the buggy were scattered all over the street, and the colored man was left behind with the overturned buggy.

Installed Officers.

Columbia Lodge, No. 68, A. O. U. W., met last Friday and installed the new officers elected last month. The installation was in charge of Past Master Workman G. T. Dunham and Bauersachs. Three new members were initiated and one old member was re-instated upon payment of back dues.

TROLLEY MEN ACTIVE.

APPLICATION FOR TROLLEY FRANCHISE MADE AT ROSELLE.

Another to be Made to Elizabeth City Council for Franchise Through That City—Some Other Trolley Talk

Now that the trolley magnates, known in Plainfield under the name of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, but through the rest of Union county as the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, have secured the necessary franchises for this end of the line, they are opening a campaign in Elizabeth. The company has announced that it will apply at the next meeting of the City Council of Elizabeth for a franchise to operate its railroad through Jersey avenue to West Jersey street, to Board street, to the Central Railroad tracks. This company is the corporation that first sought to operate a trolley over the Westfield avenue route, which franchise was sold to John Dean for $250,000. It is expected that this route will be in operation before the Kean road, as its promoters have secured the entire right of way from Westfield to Elizabeth, and will use the north side of Westfield avenue and cross the Central Railroad and Westfield avenue by a bridge at Garwood, just west of Roselle. Electricity will furnish the motive power.

Trolley at Roselle.

Roselle, Jan. 7—From the city line of Elizabeth through to Plainfield the franchises for the line of the proposed trolley road of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company have been secured with the exception of the one from the Roselle borough. Last night at the meeting of the Borough Council of this place the trolley company in question presented their application for a trolley line through Roselle. The corporation was represented at the meeting by Secretary E. W. Hine and A. A. Gaddis. The date for the public hearing was set for Tuesday evening, January 24th, at the Borough Hall. The building of the line will be started as soon as the franchise is granted.

WALTER SCOTT'S FATHER.

He Has Just Retired From Thirty-eight Years in One Pasterate.

Walter Scott, of East Front street, has received an article published in the "Ayr Advertiser," Scotland, December 15th, 1898, which gives an account of the retirement of his father, David Scott, aged 87 years, from the Parish Council from Girvan, after a service of thirty-eight years. At a meeting of the Parish Council suitable resolutions were adopted in connection with Mr. Scott's retirement in which the deep and sincere regret of all the members was expressed. Mr. Scott's devotion to duty, his ability to quickly grasp and deal with matters of detail, his firmness and decision of character, his stern adherence to everything good and true, his earnestness of purpose, his uniform amiability of temper and charitable disposition, all combined to make him a tower of strength.

That honor will come to your party from your election as president of the New Jersey Senate, I have no question. Again I ask you to accept congratulations.

Respectfully,

MUST COME A CHANGE IN FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Present Members Are All Exempt By Law.

TWO PLANS ARE PROPOSED.

CHIEF DOANE EXPLAINS THEIR COMPARATIVE COST.

Only a Few Volunteer Firemen Now Attend Fires—Outsiders Often Help—The Details of the Proposed "Call" System—Re-organization on Old Lines Would Necessitate 120 New Firemen

A peculiar state of affairs exists in the Plainfield Fire Department today. The term of service of every volunteer firemen in the city has expired and one and all are now entitled to exemption. There are only a few of them who now turn out to fires and they do it from inclination. They seriously object to doing all the work, however, and ask that the city take some action to put the department on a different basis, or provide new material for the old companies.

By the State law, a volunteer fireman is exempt from the payment of taxes on $500 worth of assessable property and also from jury duty. At the end of seven years, the fireman becomes exempt and is entitled to withdraw from active service in the department. The benefits of exemption continue for life, however.

The situation is simply this. The fire companies are filled with men who are entitled to exemption, many of them have been so for a number of years. Most of them never attend fires but still pay their dues and continue their membership. When ever there happens to be a fire, there are a very small proportion of the volunteer firemen who turn out and they only go because they enjoy it. Then there is a class of young men in the city who always respond when they can and have now become quite expert firemen although not connected with the department in the slightest degree. When, however, the fire happens to occur in the outskirts or at some unseemly hour of the night, the department has only the few paid drivers and men to depend upon and has, in several cases, been somewhat handicapped by this lack of trained assistance.

Something has got to be done. Last Wednesday the last two remaining active members in the department, Frank Putnam and Alvin VanEyck, completed their seven years of service, and are now entitled to exemption. They were both members of Gazelle Engine Company. Out of thirty-one members on the roll of that company, there are not over four, two officers and two privates, who can be counted on to attend fires.

Alert Hose Company is practically disbanded or will be as soon as the city makes suitable provision so that the members can retire in a body. There are hardly over two or three of Alert's men who turn out, and at the last fire there was not a single man to assist Driver Townley.

No. 2 Engine Company has suspended a host of its members for nonpayment of dues, only six members now being left in good standing. Most of those usually attend the fires if they are not too far away.

There are some 18 members on the roll of the Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company. Of these there is an average of four or five that turn out for a fire.

A reporter interviewed Chief Doane Thursday afternoon regarding the remedies possible to obviate the present state of affairs. The Chief said that he could only see two plans that could be reasonably adopted. One was to reorganize the present volunteer system and the other was to adopt the "call" system as he recommended in his annual report. The latter method, he believed, would be far better and in the end much more economical to the city.

There are now four fire companies in the city with the prospect of another being formed in the West End. According to the calculations of the Chief and other members of the department, it would be necessary to have at least thirty members in each company. According to ordinance now, the number in engine companies should be sixty, in truck companies fifty and hose companies forty. It would obviously be necessary to enroll 120 to 150 new firemen if the volunteer system was reorganized. Then most of the new men would have to be instructed in the art of fighting fire.

The "call" system, as proposed by Chief Doane, would include eight men to each company. They would not be exempt from taxation, but would receive a yearly compensation of not over $40 a year, or about 65 cents for every fire. Each man would be expected to attend every fire unless he could present as an excuse illness or being out of town. Otherwise he would be fined and the fine deducted from his pay. No fireman under the "call" system would be allowed to leave town without permission from the department. While such permission would be granted except on special occasions, it would enable the department to know just how many men it could count on.

It is rather difficult to compare the cost of the two systems with any degree of certainty. At the present rate of taxation, if each of the proposed 150 new members was exempted from the payment of taxes on $500 worth of assessable property each, it would cost the city $12.10 per man, or $1,452 in all per year. Now it might be possible that each of the new firemen would not own property valued at that amount. But it is to be remembered that each firemen is entitled to exemption from taxes to that amount through his term of service and if he passes that without losing his membership in the company, the exemption goes with him for life. This would more than make up for the average cost of the department to the figures named.

Four companies of eight men each under the "call" system would cost the city $40 each or 1,280 in all per year, showing a saving of $172 over the other method. Such estimates are and can not possibly be made perfectly accurate as there are many influences that would change the figures and circumstances. Chief Doane believes that these are sufficiently accurate to show, however, that the city would lose nothing in the end and probably gain by it if the "call" system was introduced. Then the department would have the advantage of being composed of trained men who would always respond to the alarm, and the fabled destructiveness of the novice at the fire would be a thing of the past.

TO SETTLE LOSS ON THE THOMPSON BUILDING.

A PLAN FINALLY SETTLED UPON.

Mr. Thompson and Insurance Companies to Choose Superintendent Each—Third is to be Disinterested.

At last A. D. Thompson's loss by fire on North avenue is to be settled by the insurance companies. For some time past the companies and Mr. Thompson have been trying to form some plan whereby the matter could be settle satisfactory, but it seems that all efforts have failed. The plan adopted for settlement is that the companies appoint one man, Mr. Thompson another and a wholly disinterested party a third man to compose a board of arbitration. This plan meets with the approval of all concerned.

Mr. Thompson appointed James Manning, of this city, as his representative. The companies appointed a second man, while an outside party who is an expert in such matters was asked to appoint the third member, which he did. The board of arbitration met recently and investigated all matters of interest pertaining to the fire as directly interesting Mr. Thompson, and this week the members will meet in New York to state figures for settlement. The decision of the board will be accepted as final by the insurance companies and Mr. Thompson.

Physicians are Busy.

The prevalence in Plainfield of what is known as the grip is keeping all of the local physicians on the jump. There does not appear to be any decrease in the malady.

COMPANY FORMED TO ESTABLISH SILK MILL

It Will Be Known As the Watchung Silk Mill.

LOCAL CAPITAL INVESTED.

$25,000 WILL BE THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF CAPITAL STOCK.

Meeting of the Interested Ones Was Held in the Board of Trade Rooms Last Night—$21,000 Paid In—Permanent Business Men Interested — Mill Will be Located in Scheffin's Block.

Plainfield has a silk mill company now, for January 4th at the Board of Trade rooms one was organized. The name of the corporation is to be the "Watchung Silk Company," and it has a capital stock of $25 000. One thousand is paid in. The organization begins with January 9th which will give the new company time enough to have themselves incorporated. The limit of the charter is fixed at 50 years. The new company will manufacture broad silk and ribbons, and will be located in Scheffin's building on West Front street.

So much was decided upon at last night's meeting, but it was not until nearly 10 o'clock that the gentlemen who are to form the company got down to business. The time previous to that was spent in discussing the advisability of going into the scheme, and in listening to Messrs. Young and Bullock, the two gentlemen from Paterson who are promoting the enterprise.

H. C. Runyon said that he had taken both Young and Bullock to Edward White's dry goods store to look at his silks, and that Mr. White, although skeptical at first, was told the quality of the goods he showed them, the cost of manufacture, and the price he paid for them wholesale.

The company expect to start off with twenty looms. An outlay of $4,000 will be required to start everything upon a business like plan. When the looms are running they claim that each loom will net $1 60 per day and that the enormous profit of 60 per cent and 70 per cent will be made yearly on the money invested.

Messrs. Young and Bullock are familiar with every detail of the work, and offer to manage and look after everything connected with the business for $25 a week each, and one third of the capital stock, which every one believes last night, ought to think a fair proposition. The twenty looms can be purchased for $900, and $700 will pay the cost of transportation and establishing.

The silk mill will bring to this city a good class of workmen. Weavers get paid by piece work and earn a dollar a day. An experienced weaver can operate two looms at once and thus double his wages. Girls will be employed at the looms and the positions in the factory will be eagerly sought for as good wages will be paid. Good warpers earn $20 to $25 a week.

There are now 192 shares of the stock sold as follows: J. C. Pope, 10; E. M. Laing, 10; G. T. Dunham, 10; M. F. Elderton, 5; F. C. Lounsbury, 5; H. C. Runyon, 2; Henry Lierke, 10; Boice, Runyon & Company, 10; J Fred MacDonald, 10: J. H. McVey, 5; C. arles H. Hand, 10; W. R. Oddington, 10; J. F. Hubbard, 10; Bullock and Young, 40; A. D. Thompson, 5; Moses Schloss, 4; L. B. Woolston, 5; A. M. Griffee, 4; Ira Stansbery, 2.

It was late before the meeting was over and during the three hours they were together everything that could be thought of connected with silk manufacture and the management of a silk mill was discussed.

Some dissatisfaction existed at the close of the meeting in regard to the terms which Messrs. Young and Bullock agree to conduct the business, so they have consented to present another proposition. It is that they receive for their services $25 a week and take one-third of the profits until after the stockholders have received from the company's profits the amount of money they have invested. Then Young and Bullock propose to take one third of the capital stock as their own. This new proposition will no doubt be more favorably received.

GIFT TO SUPT. DOBBINS.

A GOLD-HEADED UMBRELLA PRESENTED BY SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

He Has Been Fourteen Years an Superintendent of the School—Presentation at the Christmas Exercises Thursday.

Among the last of the many Christmas entertainments was that given last Thursday in the Mt. Olive Baptist church, when the members of the church and Sunday-school gathered in large numbers and enjoyed a well-rendered programme of recitations and music. Those who gave recitations were Mary Coles, Pearl Webster, Florence Webster, Noland Henry, Ella Phillips, Ethel Henry, Laura Scudder, Mary Mills, Bessie Mitchell, Iva Henry, Rachel Randolph, Edward Bain and Florence Randolph. There were songs by Robert Gran and Cynthia VanNest, and dialogues by Anna and Willie Connett, and Iva Henry, Florence and Pearl Webster. A vocal duet was also given by Ethel Bogardus and Pearl Webster.

During the evening a selection was given by R. W. Barnes, M. C. Dobbins, violins, and Clifford Braider, piano. Much credit is due to Miss Maynard for her efforts in drilling the scholars for the entertainment, while Miss May E. Howlett also deserves particular mention for her work. In connection with the celebration there was a large tree filled with presents. Clifford Braider took the part of Santa Claus in a very acceptable manner.

As unlooked for feature was the presentation of a handsome gold-headed silk umbrella to Superintendent M. C. Dobbins, who has been connected with the school for fourteen years. Rev. Mr. Jackson presented the umbrella on behalf of the officers and scholars of the school, and the recipient accepted the gift with a few well chosen words of thanks.

BULLETS SHOT OFF BY A TRUCK.

Bullets were flying thickly around North avenue yesterday morning. It sounded at first as though a small Spanish war had broken out. Some one went along that street and dropped part of his loaded cartridges in the middle of the road. One of Hand's trucks passed by a little later and the wheels of the truck struck the cartridges and exploded them, sending the bullets and mud in all directions.

Fortunately, all but one or two of them flew harmlessly up in the air. One of them struck the door of William E. Rogers' store and left its mark in the woodwork. Fred Sebring, the manager, stood looking out at the time, and if the ball had gone a little higher it would have gone through the glass and struck him. Another one threw up some mud on the large plate glass window, but must have struck the brick work above as there is no mark to be seen on the woodwork.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CONSULTATION.

New Council Committee Meets Board of Engineers Informally.

A consultation was held at Fire Headquarters last Thursday between the members of the Board of Engineers, President F. H. Andrews, of the Council, and the members of the fire committee, Messrs. Mellick, Miles and Buckle. They looked over the apparatus and houses and the Councilmen seemed well pleased with what they saw. Then followed an informal talk that lasted until after 11 o'clock when the points brought out in the interview with Chief Doane, to be found in another column, were discussed.

Grand Jury Would Not Indict.

The case of Rev. Mr. Coster, formerly pastor of a colored church in this city, and who was charged with misappropriating funds, was considered by the Grand Jury, at Elizabeth, Thursday. The evidence was not strong enough to present and indictment and the case was thrown out. Mr. Spangenberg, of this city, was present to watch the case, but was disappointed inasmuch as the colored preacher was not held.

Midwinter Business.

The monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held Thursday at the home of the Misses Runyon, of East Second street. After the usual routine of business was transacted games were played, and a good social time was enjoyed. Refreshments were served before the gathering dispersed.

Another Industry to Prosper.

Percy C. Obi, of this city, has been communicating with a New York company with the purpose in view of securing the location of their plant in this city. The company has large capital and manufactures automobile vehicles, etc. Mr. Obi feels almost sure that he can induce the company to locate here.

Another Live in the Borough.

In a few days S. B. Joseph and family, of this city, will move to the borough in a house recently purchased. Mr. Joseph is impressed with the idea that the borough suits him and his folks better than the city.

TIGHTENED ITS GRIP ON SECOND PLACE.

Park Club Won Three Games January 14th.

DEFEATED NEWARK BAY

THE LAST GAME WAS LOST ON A SPLIT FOR NEWARK BAY.

Three Games in Central Journal Bowling League Rolled on Park Club Alleys—No Very Startling High Scores Made—Hibbard Did Star Work for Parks—The Individual Scores Made.

The grasp of the Park Club upon second place in the Central Journal Bowling League was considerably strengthened January 14th when the Park bowlers captured three straight victories from the Newark Bay C. C. The games were rolled on the Park Club alleys.

The first game showed the Parks in the lead at the start. They lost it by four pins in the sixth frame only to gain it in the next and win out by 56 pins. The next game showed a rather easy thing for the Parks. They rolled well, while the visitors were in deplorable form. The last game was the closest of the three. The Parks opened with the lead and held it, but toward the close the Newark Bay men braced up and made things lively. The wind-up was positively soul-stirring. Hall closed with two strikes and nine, while Davies, his opponent, rolled three strikes. It was nip and tuck all down the line. When Bodine, the last on the visiting team came up, he had a chance to win the game. Eleven pins would tie the score and twelve would win. He rolled a good straight ball and got a split. He took eight on the first ball, but the remaining pins were too far separated and only one went down on the second ball, giving the Parks the game by just two pins.

Hibbard did the star work for the Parks, rolling high scores in every game. Young Boone made a good showing and Captain F. C. Ball bowled steadily, although he did not make any phenomenal scores.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.

	1st.	2d.	3d.
F. H. Ball	137	126	171

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

CAN'T FIND THE HORSE.

MUCH-INVOLVED CASE GROWING OUT OF SALE OF $25 STEED.

Charles E. Drake Bought the Horse But Did Not Pay for It—Monday Morning Animal Suddenly Disappeared

Early in December Chas. E. Drake, of the borough, signified a willingness to purchase from John Becker, Sr., of Somerset street, a horse which the latter owned. An agreement was made whereby Drake was to become the owner of the horse for the sum of $25. It was a verbal agreement, but later Mr. Becker wanted Drake to sign a contract to pay so much for the horse on the installment plan. This Drake refused to do. A few weeks elapsed when Drake called on Becker and offered him $3 as first payment. It is said that the latter refused this amount.

Since that time there has been more or less trouble about the horse. Last Monday evening the horse was taken from Becker's stable, and Edward Becker, grandson of the former owner of the horse, was suspected of taking the animal. As a result he was arrested and taken before Justice Thomas last Monday.

Lawyer Newcorn represented the plaintiff, while Lawyer George W. Bird represented Becker. After the Justice heard the case he decided that young Becker could not be held for the Grand Jury as was the wish of the plaintiff, so the case was dismissed. There is now a search warrant out for the horse, but the animal cannot be found anywhere, and is therefore inoperative. The outcome of the case will be watched with considerable interest.

The Silk Mill Enterprise.

The American Silk Journal says: "F. P. Zimmerman, W. J. Young and Thomas Bullock, of Paterson, are negotiating with the Plainfield, N. J., Board of Trade for the establishment of a silk mill in that town. It is proposed to organize a stock company with a capital of $25,000, one third to be held by Paterson parties. Mr. Young stated that he has orders already promised amounting to $100,000, and that 'two plants could be bought in Paterson, one for $3,200, and the other for $2,400.' It was claimed also that the silk mill would pay a dividend of from 70 to 75 per cent. annually.

Justices and Constables Organized.

Like their Plainfield judicial brethren, the Justices of the Peace and constables of Monmouth county have organized to retain control of the offices already held and secure legislation in their favor. The Legislature has of late passed laws that affect the fees of Justices and constables, and the "combine" purposes to make a united effort toward preventing the further enactment of laws that are antagonistic.

Small Noonday Fire in the Borough.

A small fire occurred in the borough at 12:30 Tuesday in the wood yard belonging to E. P. Gavin, of Maple avenue and West street. The fire is supposed to have originated from either a spark from the boiler or from the great heat caused by the same being too close to the side of the building, and setting the weather boards on fire. Julius Stahl put the fire out with an extinguisher. The damage was $50.

GOOD BASKET BALL WAS SEEN IN Y. M. C. A. GYM.

THE "BOWERY BOYS" MET DEFEAT.

Plainfield Team Played Together in Great Shape—First Half Particularly Hard Fought.

An excellent exhibition of good basket ball playing was witnessed in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last Monday when the regular team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. defeated the team from the New York Institute, the "Bowery Boys," by a score of 27 to 6 The Plainfield team was all present and played together in great shape. Their team play was remarkable and there was a noticeable improvement in accuracy in goal throwing.

The first half was particularly hard fought, the score at the end being 7 to 4 in favor of the home team. The game played by both sides was fast and spirited and honors were fairly divided. In the second half, the Plainfield boys continued the same game but the visitors could not stand the pace. They became winded, lost heart and then the home team rolled on score after score with increasing rapidity.

The team lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		NEW YORK INSTITUTE.
Moraller, E.	Right Forward	Swatz
Young	Left forward	Grutzner
Egan	centre	Whitehal
Smith	right guard	Kruecker
Moraller, M.	left guard	Gimmer

Score—Plainfield, 27; New York, 6. Goals from the field—Smith (3), Long (2), Egan (2), E. Moraller (2), M. Moraller (2), Swatz, Grutzner, Whitehal. Goals on fouls—Long. Fouls—Plainfield, 3; New York, 4. Referee—C. F. Ackerwood. Umpire—Dr. Lewis, of New York, and L. I. Vanderpool, of Plainfield.

Union Church Service.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes preached at the union meeting held in the Presbyterian church last Monday. The text was "I also am a mar," and in his discourse the preacher referred to Peter standing before Cornelius and declining to be worshipped. Rev. A. E. Main, chairman of the committee from the ministers' association, who have these union services in charge, led the after meeting which was devoted to prayers for the unconverted. The sufferers in the wreck were remembered in the prayers.

An Illustrated Lecture.

Prof. Albert H. Smyth, professor of English in the Philadelphia High School, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Land of Shakespeare" in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The lecture will be for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the church. Prof. Smyth was one of the lecturers in the University Extension course, and his discourses were found particularly interesting by Plainfield audiences.

Death of Mrs. James M. Billings.

Mrs. Julia H. wife of the late James M. Billings died suddenly of pneumonia Saturday evening, January 7th. Her funeral took place last Tuesday, at her late residence, 34 Gramercy Park, New York. Mrs. Billings was the mother of Mrs. Irving Howard Brown, of Central avenue, and was well-known and highly esteemed by many Plainfield friends.

Critically Ill With Pneumonia.

The eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo W. Weseman, of East Sixth street, who is critically ill with pleuropneumonia, is reported today as being slightly improved, but not out of danger. A consultation between Drs. Probasco, Murray and Hedges has been held.

BIG BOUQUET FOR REED.

THE TALL SENATOR RECEIVES LOTS OF HANDSOME FLOWERS.

Trenton, January 10.—The Legislature was formally organized at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the election of Senator Reed as president of the Senate, and Acting-Governor Voorhees as Speaker of the Assembly. Quite a number of Senator Reed's friends are on hand to see him inducted into the second highest office in the State.

Mayor Wilson and the members of the Borough Council of North Plainfield remembered Senator Reed with a very large set piece of American Beauty roses. The Park Whist team did the honors in a similar way. The members of the Park Club ordered a very large and handsome display of flowers and they appeared in a prominent place in the Senate chamber. These flowers were in charge of W. Wilder Bowley, of North Plainfield, who was deputized by those who furnished the flowers to do that work.

Speaker Watkins was sworn in with the rest of the members of the Assembly, and, upon his election and qualification as Speaker, he will surrender the chair to Assemblyman Squires, of Union, and will officiate as Acting-Governor until the inauguration of Governor-elect Voorhees, on Tuesday of next week.

After the organization of the Legislature a joint caucus of the Republicans will be held to elect a candidate for United States Senator, to succeed James Smith, Jr. Ex-Congressman John Kean will be chosen, without opposition.

The Republican Assemblymen caucused last night and ratified their action taken in December, when the offices were allotted. The caucus was again open to reporters. The caucus decided to have the House today adopt the rules of the last House. This was done in order to maintain the rule which authorizes a majority of the members to order the previous question. Essex county refused to give up the bill clerkship or any other of her allotted offices to Cumberland, and the caucus decided to give Cumberland county two pages.

Senator W. M. Johnson, of Bergen county, will be the Republican leader in the Senate and Wood McKee, of Passaic, will be the leader in the House. Senator Pitney sent his resignation as Congressman to Acting Governor Watkins this morning. He is here and will take part in the organization.

PARKS VICTORIOUS ON STRANGE ALLEYS.

THE SUBSTITUTES ROLLED WELL.

Parks Won Two Out of Three From The N. J. A. C. Last Night. —Individual Scores.

Bayonne, Jan. 10th—The bowling team from the Park Club, of Plainfield, rolled three games on the alleys of the New Jersey Athletic Club last evening and won the series, two out of three. The home team was in fine form for the first game and nearly reached the 900 mark. There were 159 pins that separated the two teams. Then the New Jersey boys fell down and lost the other two games by easy scores.

Two of the regular Park Club bowlers were absent and Arthur Peck and W. J. R. Thiers were substituted. For both it was the first match game rolled, too, on strange alleys. Peck is a young fellow of 18, but he made an excellent showing. Thiers rolled a particularly good game, never falling below 152. Hibbard was a little out of form in the first two games, but improved in the last.

The individual scores were as follows:

Claim Against Lehigh Valley Settled.

Codington & Swackhamer have just succeeded in obtaining a settlement of the damages sustained by a resident of Plainfield on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The company preferred to settle the case upon the terms proposed by the claimant's counsel rather than to stand trial.

THIRD COMING HOME LAST OF THE MONTH.

Muster Out Date Fixed for January 31st.

DISCHARGE CEREMONIES.

MUSTERING OUT TO TAKE PLACE AT ATHENS.

The Men Will be Allowed to Come North as They See Fit—They Will Receive Mileage Money From the Government—Preparations to Welcome the Boys Home—Served Over Eight Months.

The date for the muster out of the Third New Jersey Volunteers has at last been set, and January 31st the officers and men will be officially disconnected with the army of the United States, after a service of over eight and a half months. The regiment will be mustered out at Athens, Ga., where the regiment is now stationed in camp with the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, and it is said that the men will receive their discharge papers there, and be permitted to come home any way they select, either in bodies or singly. The Government will not send them home, so it is said, but will simply give them mileage money and let them spend it as they choose. In addition to the mileage they will receive a month's pay in lieu of furloughs.

When the First and Second New Jersey regiments were mustered out, they were sent first to Sea Girt and then given furloughs of thirty days. Upon their return to camp they were paid off and discharged. That plan did not work with the best of success, as the officers found it difficult to get the men together after the furloughs. The plan of mustering out the men where they are in camp and of allowing them mileage and one month's pay has been adopted as a much more satisfactory one, and will be used with the Fifteenth Pennsylvania as with the Third New Jersey.

There seems to be present to be an idea that the Third will not come north together. The men have learned of the intention to muster them out at Athens, and to let them go whither they will, and many of them are planning for their tripe home. One party, which includes a large number of men and some of the officers, expects to go to Savannah and come north by boat. Others are planning to visit points of interest on their way north, and do not expect to arrive home until a week or two after they are mustered out.

Although the headquarters of the Third are in Elizabeth the indications are that the command will not come here as a body. It is likely that an effort will be made to have the two Elizabeth companies, C and E, come home together, in which case they will undoubtedly be given a rousing reception. The other companies are said to be arranging to proceed directly to their home towns, where receptions will be tendered them by their fellow citizens.

STILL ALARM OF FIRE.

A Defective Flue in Rev. Mr. Yerkes House Caused Fire to Woodwork.

A defective flue in the chimney at Rev. Dr. Yerkers' house on West Seventh street caused a fire to break out in the woodwork under the main stairway in the hall on the first floor yesterday. The doctor tried to put out the blaze with water, but it got in back of the wainscoating in the kitchen and was getting the better of him, so he sent a telephone message to fire department headquarters.

Five or six extinguishers were used before the blaze was put out. The trimmer beam was burned through and the woodwork was damaged. Altogether the damage will amount to $75.

Clothesline Thieves.

There is a band of thieves in this vicinity that are making special effort to rid families of clothes that are hung on lines in their yards. Very recently these midnight prowlers entered the yard of George Sterling, No. 123 East Sixth street, and stole valuable clothing which amounted to about $40. Last Monday between 5 and 6 o'clock thieves entered the yard of a family living on Putnam avenue and stole clothes to the value of about $20. All of the clothing taken is costly and is a heavy loss to the owners.

Westfield Friends Surprised Her.

A party of twenty-five young people from Westfield gathered at the home of Miss Mabelle Smith, of South avenue, last Tuesday and tendered her a surprise in a most pleasing manner. Miss Smith had not the slightest idea of the fact and was taken wholly unaware. The party was arranged by the Misses Bryce, of Westfield, who suspected it to be her birthday, but were just one month too early. Games and dancing were the features of the evening.

Annual Meeting Postponed.

The annual meeting of the Sanitary Company was postponed Tuesday for five weeks, and will be held February 14th, in the Union County Country Clubhouse.

mittees that it would be well to report bills referred to them as soon as possible and not wait until the last days of the Legislature when improper bills might be rushed through for lack of proper deliberation and discussion. He also pointed out in conclusion that while the Senators were not all of the same political opinions, that all had the welfare of the State at heart.

A joint caucus of the Republican Senators and Assemblymen was held and ex-Congressman John Kean, of Elizabeth, was chosen for United States Senator by acclamation. The caucus was very tame. Senator Johnson, of Bergen, presided, and although Assemblyman Starr, of Passaic, formally presented the name of Congressman Stewart, he withdrew it again before a vote was taken and Mr. Kean got every vote. The election of United States Senator occurs on Tuesday, January 24th.

GRAPE HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.

THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.

Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro: Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.

Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines

are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. FOR SALE BY Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1878, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New Churches for communion service.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and at the same time died—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescriptions. Such is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules sell was told that a dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them one day if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their names as a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be others suffering just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If anything about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I am most glad." The documents, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Rockland Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, called to see one of the writers of this for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion, but he failed to help me at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found that they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $50 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them one day if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their names as a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be others suffering just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If anything about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I am most glad." The documents, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

THE GRIP EPIDEMIC IS LOSING ITS HOLD.

Number of New Cases Is Rapidly Diminishing.

IN COUNTRY DISTRICTS NOW.

THE EPIDEMIC WAS FIRST FELT IN NEW YORK.

Then It Spread to Plainfield and Other Suburban Cities—Now It Is in Force in the Country Villages—State of Conditions at German Valley—Most of the Cases are Not Considered Severe.

During the last month there has not been a household in Plainfield that has not felt the ravages of the grip. That obstinate little disease has managed to get a foothold in almost every home, and in some cases every member of the family has fallen victim to it. Just a week ago, however, the grip seemed to loose its foothold. There were scattering cases here and there, of course, but there was a noticeable decrease in the number of new cases.

Regarding this decline of its power, a prominent Plainfield physician pointed out the facts. There was no doubt, he said, that the epidemic of the disease in Plainfield was over. The grip had made its first appearance, he said, in the great centres like New York. There it was felt severely. Two weeks after that it made its appearance in the nearby suburban cities and towns, like Plainfield. Two weeks later, the country regions began to feel the grip. In the country towns and villages the grip epidemic is now prevalent, whole families being ill with the disease. The physician referred to German Valley, a little place in Hunterdon county, where there is illness in every family at present. In some cases, every member of the family is ill and there is none left to wait on them.

It was evident that the grip followed the lines of trade. Plainfield, being in constant communication with New York, soon found the grip prevalent among its citizens. Then the farmers caught the infection and transferred it to their homes where it has gradually spread. The disease has not been severe in most cases and has only resulted seriously where the sufferers took chances and exposed himself or herself too soon after recovery.

GRAND JURY PASSES IT.

Hans Segal Case Will Not be Considered—Her Unproved Age the Reason.

Elizabeth, January 18.—Unless Miss Rose Segal can prove that she is 21 years of age the Grand Jury will not bring in a true bill against her father, brothers, Norton and the Cohens. It is said on good authority that the Grand Jury has decided to pass the Reiner-Segal cases until the question of Miss Segal's age is decided by Chancellor McGill. This question will not come up for final hearing until next Monday in Jersey City, and before that time the present Grand Jury will have been discharged. It can not be taken up again until the May Grand Jury.

Miss Segal's attorney, Samuel Schleimer, says he has all the necessary documents from Warsaw, Russia, where she was born, to prove that she was born on the eighth day of the month of Kisliv in the year 5630, which would make her 21 years last November.

SCHOOL BONDS SOLD

Somerville Financial Institution Bids Lowest in Bound Brook.

Bound Brook, Jan. 18.—At a special meeting of the Board of Education held last Monday, the proposals for the bonds for the new schoolhouse were considered and the award made. The bonds are numbered one to fifteen, one falling due each year. They are dated, February 1st, 1899. They are to pay four per cent. interest, payable semi-annually.

The bids for the bonds were received from bankers and financial institutions in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and elsewhere. They were finally awarded to the Somerville Dime Savings Bank, whose bid was $15,541 for the entire issue of $15,000. The next highest bidder was the New Brunswick Savings Institution, with a bid of $15,469 for the lot.

Sued by the Sprague Company.

Elizabeth, Jan. 18.—The Sprague Electric Company, Limited, began a suit in the Union County Court yesterday for $10,000 against the John Stephenson Car Company for materials furnished in the construction of the big Elizabeth and Linden car building plant. The suit will be tried at the next term of the court.

WORK OF BABY CAMP.

HEALTH-GIVING TRIPS TO MOUNTAIN FOR LITTLE ONES.

Those in Charge Urge That Enough Money Be Contributed to Carry on the Work Next Summer—Every Little Sum Helps.

At the last meeting of the Baby Camp committee a motion was made that a report of the work done during the summer should be published so that the people of Plainfield would learn mere about this worthy object.

The Camp was in readiness from July 1st, but there were no little ones to be taken there until the last of the month.

During the summer there were sixteen trips made and from twenty-five to thirty babies cared for. Out of this number there were only two deaths.

Our expenses were quite heavy and in order to meet them several appeals were made in the papers for contributions.

These were promptly responded to and we wish to thank our kind friends for their hearty and liberal response. This amount enabled us to carry out our work to the satisfaction of the committee.

We trust that more people in this city and nearby towns will not forget this work and remember that the time is fast approaching to open the Camp again. This cannot be done without more money, as the balance in the treasury is very small.

We would like to have the children become interested in this work and try and raise money by holding fairs and entertainments to help our cause along. They are always so successful in their undertakings.

This last summer there was a fair held by the "Sunbonnet Club," at which they realized almost $6. This was enough to pay for two trips to the camp, and even though it seems a small amount to us it means a great deal to the poor little sick babies.

It would give the committee great pleasure to have more of our people of Plainfield visit the camp during the summer. We feel sure their hearts would be touched by these little ones and they would fully realize the need of this work.

Much credit is due Miss Hartranft who is in charge of the camp. We all feel that we can't speak too highly of her on account of the wonderful work she is doing among the poor our city. She never tires of her duties and is always ready to lend a helping hand to some poor suffering soul.

The committee trusts that the contributions toward this greatly-needed work will begin to come in early so they can make their plans for the coming summer and there won't be so much anxiety about their finances as last year.

HONOR FOR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE

William Ellery C. Leonard Will Teach Latin in Boston University.

A former Plainfield boy and pupil from the High School, William Ellery Leonard, receives a pleasant notice in the Boston Evening Transcript in its column of late college news. That papers says he has been appointed for the current term to take the place in Boston University of one of the professors of latin who is temporarily filling another chair. The Transcript adds, "Mr. Leonard, who is now taking post graduate work at Harvard, was of the class of '96 and won a name for thorough scholarship during his four years in Boston University. His selection as instructor in that institution is regarded as a fitting expression of the estimate which the faculty are known to have placed upon his ability."

The Same Commissioners Named.

Elizabeth, Jan. 18—Ex-Judge Gilhooly, representing many property-owners on Westfield avenue, in Union township, objected in the Union Court Monday to the appointment of the same Commissioners to assess damages on his clients' property that had already acted on that portion of Westfield avenue which had been opened. Judge VanSyckel, however, overruled the objections, and appointed the same three Commissioners to continue the work. Ex-Judge Gilhooly then filed a formal protest with the Court.

Swallowed a Five Cent Piece.

A young son of William Goff, of 511 South Second street, swallowed a nickel Tuesday. Its mother saw the child put the piece of money into its mouth, and catching it up gave it several blows on the back which dislodged the coin from far down in the throat and made the little one cough it up.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Mallison, of Watchung avenue, has also recovered from a critical illness.

EXCITING TESTIMONY OF CHURCH TRUSTEE.

Lawyer Called Him a "Liar" and Lawyer Termed a "Stinker."

JOHN GOODWIN HAD HIS SAY.

TRIAL OF THE SUIT AGAINST THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Rev. Benjamin Hand Claims That He is Unable to Collect $70 That He Has Loaned the Church—Minister and Church Pillars Heard in Court—Lawyers Sum up in Great Style, But Jury Couldn't Agree.

A portion of the numerous troubles that have for sometime past been brewing in the First Church of Christ were thoroughly aired Tuesday afternoon in a suit brought before Justice Mattison by Rev. Benjamin Hand, formerly lay preacher of the church, against the church for the recovery of $70, which sum Mr. Hand claimed was part of $183.53 that the church owed him. It appears that sometime ago Mr. Hand loaned the church the above amount to help them out of financial trouble, and that the trustees promised to pay him back. After the trustees had given several notes in an attempt to liquidate the debt, Mr. Hand retired from the church and John Goodwin was elected to fill his place. It was then that the payments on the notes ceased, and Mr. Hand sought legal advice. He secured the services of Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman and a suit was instituted. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer was secured to represent the church, and the case was tried Tuesday afternoon before Justice Mattison and a jury of twelve men, consisting of A. J. Winckler, A. B. King, John Case, Thomas McGann, Francis Whiteley, D. W. Beard, Charles Emmons, Elias Allen, J. D. Anderson, J. H. Cranston, J. J. Stahl and R. H. Dalley.

Among the witnesses called for the defense were Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the church, trustees John Ackerman, John Goodwin and treasurer, Joseph Shultise. Mr. Hand did not call any witnesses.

The case throughout was exciting. The chief witness was John Goodwin. He wanted to have his say and he had it. When he was on the stand he made some remark that did not suit the plaintiff's lawyer, and the latter gave expression to his feelings by calling the witness a liar. The witness replied by saying "You're a stinker!"

The point in question seemed to be as to whether the church should be held responsible for promises made by the trustees or whether the trustees should be sued for the promised asked for by the plaintiff. The defendants claimed that they had not received value. The church claimed that they could pay the amount asked if the plaintiff would submit an itemized bill. Mr. Hand claimed that there was an itemized bill in possession of one of the officers of the church, but that they would not produce it. There were lots of books offered in evidence to show that everything was kept straight, but that once itemized bill was missing.

After the witnesses were examined and everybody had enjoyed themselves the lawyers began to get in their fine work. Mr. Swackhamer pictured vividly how dear this suit was to the heart of Pastor McKane and his flock, and how cruel it would be to make them pay the amount asked and thus cripple the church.

Mr. Angleman, for the plaintiff, followed. He at once began to show that the defendants were trying to shirk the payment of an honest debt. He thought that the church should stand by the actions of the trustees. He cited numerous cases in print that showed the strength of his statements that the church should pay its debts.

Mr. Angleman then turned his attention to Mr. Goodwin and remarked that he made trouble for everybody. He referred to him as a gust of wind, and said that everything went along smoothly until he became a member of the board of Trustees of the church, and then the trouble began.

After the lawyers had concluded Justice Mattison charged the jury

GOVERNOR VOORHEES' INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

New Chief Executive Enunciates His Ideas of Government.

BRIEF AND TO THE POINT.

EXPRESSES A HIGH VIEW OF THE OFFICE HE HAS ASSUMED.

He Says That Except in a Few Notable Instances the Legislature Will Have to Deal With Matters Mainly Local in Character—Urges a Satisfactory Codification of Municipal Laws—Tribute to Soldiers.

Trenton, Jan. 17.—The following is the complete text of the inaugural message delivered this afternoon by Governor Voorhees:

Gentlemen of the Senate and General Assembly:

The duties of the office upon which I am about to enter are assumed with a deep sense of all that is implied in the words of the oath just taken. I shall strive to observe it both in letter and in spirit.

Although chosen through the favor of my fellow citizens as representing one of the great political parties of the state, I am not unmindful of the obligation to devote my services to the common good of all. I have no apology to offer for being a partisan. Under a republican form of government parties will of necessity arise. A people free to learn and free to think for themselves can only find in organization the instrument to enforce their wishes respecting government. Political parties should not be considered as unmixed evils. Their existence is an evidence of active interest in public affairs. Their adherents are quick to assert their individual rights and to exact a full and faithful performance of every public duty. Through their agency the ends of government are best to be secured. Governments do not exist merely for the sake of parties. With public power comes the duty to exercise it for the public good. Viewed from a selfish standpoint, I believe that they best serve a party who in the conduct of their office pay heed to the interests of the greatest number. This duty is imperative upon me as the executive by the oath of office which he takes. In his acts he is not to seek partisan advantage only. He is to promote the peace and prosperity of the state and maintain its lawful rights. He is to see that its laws, civil and criminal, are enforced alike for all and against all. He is to secure to every citizen, rich and to poor. Violators of the law are to be punished without distinction. He must demand honesty and economy and obligate himself to give a faithful and efficient service. Personal prejudice or passionate partisanship has no place in the discharge of his duties. On the contrary, everything which will promote the honor, the happiness and the common welfare of the state is to be the object of his solicitude and care.

Such, in brief, are the views I entertain of the office which I now assume. At all times and under all circumstances I shall, to the best of my ability, endeavor to conform with these views, indulging the hope that to the commonwealth which I serve there may come no harm and that its happiness and prosperity may be increased.

The limitation which custom has put upon an address of this character prevents me from entering more than a brief reference to policies or measures which I think should especially engage legislative attention. As occasion may arise it will be my duty to communicate to the legislature special recommendations upon those subjects which I may deem worthy of consideration.

It is fortunate that the interests of the state that there are no subjects of a purely partisan character likely to present themselves. Matters can be considered entirely on their merits, without party bias, and all can claim an equal share in the credit and responsibility for what may be done.

The reforms inaugurated within recent years have removed many subjects which formerly called for and received legislative action.

The policy, so recently begun, of managing our state institutions upon a non-partisan basis has during the short time of its adoption demonstrated the wisdom of those who favored it. It has received the emphatic approval of the public and cannot now be abandoned without injury to the public service. Legislative interference with local self government is contrary to the spirit of our institutions, and the fate of those who have attended in this regard in the past warns us against future violations of our duty. In these days, when independence of thought in characterizes the average voter, when party allegiance is quickly shifted, when those who prefer good government to success or party can by their action decide the results of an election, higher considerations than those purely partisan must influence the lawmaker if he would win public confidence or deserve for himself and those whom he represents.

Except in a few notable instances, the legislature will have to deal with matters mainly local in character and without political significance.

The recommendation of the distinguished governor who immediately preceded me in executive office—that he should be restricted—has been wisely followed. It is known and observed by all that the volume of laws has notably decreased without prejudice to the interests of the general public. For the most part such measures only have been enacted as were demanded by some pressing and general necessity. The reform thus auspiciously begun in our own state and so urgently recommended in others has the approval of all irrespective of party. I trust that

TWELVE FREIGHT CARS MADE A BAD WRECK.

Broken Axle Cause of Accident on P. & R. R. R.

THE ROAD IS BLOCKADED.

PHILADELPHIA TRAINS GO BY A ROUNDABOUT ROUTE.

Wreck Occurred Early Wednesday Near Hamilton Station—No One Was Injured—Roadbed Torn up for Half a Mile—Wrecking Crew Hard at Work—Passengers Had to Walk Around Wreck.

Bound Brook, Jan. 18.—A disastrous freight wreck occurred about three o'clock this morning near Hamilton Station on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, not far from Belle Mead. A heavily laden fast freight train, east bound, had passed through Belle Mead and was making fast time when an axle on one of the cars in the centre of the train broke. In a few minutes the heavy cars were piling up on each other, and the contents, steel tubing, sheet iron, etc., were being scattered in all directions. Twelve cars were wrecked, and the tracks and roadbed was torn up for a distance of nearly a half mile. The debris was thrown in all directions, leaving the road in a very bad condition.

Word was sent back to the nearest telegraph station and all eastbound trains were either held or sent through to New York by the way of Bethlehem, Pa., where the North Penn Railroad connects with the Central Railroad.

Very luckily no one was injured in the wreck, and the only damage was to the roadbed and the cars and contents. As quickly as possible word was sent for a wrecking crew and the work of clearing the tracks has been progressing rapidly.

A local train was run from this place to the nearest point to the wreck and passengers from Trenton were transferred from the other side. The passengers were obliged to walk about a half mile to get to the train that brought them through.

Lawyer Wm. Newcorn, of Plainfield, who was in Trenton last evening, secured passage as far as the wreck, and he, together with several other passengers, walked a half mile, where they secured a train that brought them home.

All of the freight was consigned to New York, and the value of the damage to it is not yet fully known.

HOUSE VAUDEVILLE.

Clever Way of Entertaining Arranged by Mrs. and Mrs. Carney.

Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carney, of 40 Craig place, tendered a reception to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ritter, of Brooklyn. A large number of friends were present. A miniature stage was erected, and a feature of the evening was Prof. Sherwood in his tricks of legerdemain. Then came Master Richard Henry Ritter, who delighted all by his amusing recitation. Miss Edna Sebring, in her usual happy manner, rendered a soprano solo. Master Philip Ritter then recited "In the Meadow." Photograph selections by George Yoder were given. Then came "Uncle Jack" Carney, who, in his original songs and sayings and in the character of an emigrant, more than amused all by humorous talk. A cornet solo by Prof. Guttman, as usual, was highly received. A solo by Mr. Stewart brought the entertainment to a close. Light refreshments were served, and then all departed for their homes.

Horse is Still Missing.

Another chapter in the somewhat famous horse case of Becker against Drake has been enacted. This time a search warrant was issued for the finding of the horse on the premises of Levi Bird, but when the search was made the animal had vamoosed. It is said the much involved equine was recently seen in the barn of Becker, but it is not there anymore. It is said that no more search warrants will be issued to gain control of the animal.

Progressive Mt. Olive.

The Clerk of the Mt. Olive Baptist church recently reported the financial condition of the church for the past seven months, beginning June 5th, 1898 and ending January 3d, of the present year. In all $1,042.95 was received during that time. The balance of the debt, $254, it is hoped will be paid within the next sixty days. The entire debt was $1,296 95, and all thus far has been raised without the aid of charity books or agents.

Mrs. William Wheeler, of LaGrande avenue, who has been very ill, is somewhat improved.

JURY ACQUITTED HIM.

ANDY MATHENSCHEK CLEARED OF ALL COMPLICITY IN THE AFFAIR.

Came Up in Middlesex Court at New Brunswick Yesterday—Charged With the Wrecking of a Trolley Car.

New Brunswick, Jan. 17—The trial of Andrew Mathenschek, of New Market, before Judge Strong and a jury in the Court of General Quarter Sessions of Middlesex county was held yesterday. The charge was malicious mischief and it was alleged that Mathenschek was one of a gang of young men that wrecked one of the Brunswick Traction Company's near Dunellen by placing a telegraph pole on the tracks.

Mathenschek was represented by Lawyer Robert M. Clark, of Plainfield. The witnesses for the defendant testified that the prisoner had left Taylor's Hotel the night of the row his before the rest and had gone directly to Maier's Hotel without having anything to do with the trouble. The jury acquitted him.

Waldron, of New Brunswick, who was to come up on the same charge, had his trial set down for Jan. 25th.

VICIOUS ATTACK ON FARMER.

Desperate Farmhand Was Evidently Bent on Robbery.

Mr. Mellick, father of Dayton Mellick, the milkman, who lives in the vicinity of Mt. Pleasant, had an exciting experience a few days ago with a hired man. The employe, who was a foreigner, had completed his work and Mr. Mellick had paid him all that was due. The next day the hired man wanted more money, but Mr. Mellick told him that he would not give him any more and that he could quit if he was not satisfied.

This was the last seen of the foreigner until early the next morning when Mr. Mellick was at work near his barn. While trying to open the double doors he was almost knocked insensible by receiving a heavy blow on the head with the butt end of a blacksmith. Mr. Mellick had presence of mind enough to put up his hand in self-defence, and as he did so warded off another blow.

As soon as the hired man learned that he had not knocked Mr. Mellick insensible he fled and has not been seen since. Mr. Mellick is sure the man intended to murder him for his money, for he acted in a very desperate manner.

The whereabouts of the man is not known, although every effort is being made to find him. The man is about 40 years of age and quite dark. He does not dress well and is rather uncouth in appearance.

ANOTHER VICTIM CAPTURED.

Harry Connett Said to Be Man Who Escaped Police Raid.

The man who escaped the raid of the police Monday night on the establishment in the Manning flats was arrested Wednesday while on his way to work. Harry Connett, sometimes known as Harry Hartpence, was arrested by the police and charged with being disorderly. When arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning he pleaded guilty, but explained that he lived in that building and was just on his way to his room. The police tell a different story. The officers who made the complaint were not present, however, and so Judge Runyon reserved his decision until he could hear their testimony. Connett was then allowed to go on his own recognizance.

For Junior Workers.

The Junior superintendents meet with the primary teachers' union February 6th, and the State Superintendent of Junior Christian Endeavor work will meet with them and give a short address on "The City of Child Soul and its Conquest." All Junior workers and primary teachers should avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Rev. Mr. Bennett, as he is thoroughly at home in his work.

Primary Teachers' Union.

At the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union held Monday, Mrs. Frank Jones led the devotional exercises, and Miss May Howlett taught the lesson. Next week Mrs. Clark, of Orange, will teach the lesson and a full attendance is desired.

Permanent Pavement.

At the next meeting of the Borough Council the question of a permanent pavement for Somerset street will be introduced and discussed. There seems to be a strong feeling in favor of the block pavement.

The Last to Become Exempt.

Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, is the last man belonging to the fire department that will soon be exempt from duty. His time expires in a very short time.

TRINITY CHURCH MORTGAGE CANCELED.

Generous Gift of $4,500 Made by B. A. Hegeman, Sr.

CHECK WAS PRESENTED.

DONOR'S LOVE FOR THE CHURCH PROMPTED HIM TO DO IT.

He Was Treasurer of the Sinking Fund Established to Pay Off the Mortgage, Which Was Assumed to Raise Money to Pay for the Alterations Made on the Edifice a Year and a Half Ago.

B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, is one of the few wealthy men who believe in not leaving all their bequests of money for good purposes till they have passed away, but instead to give liberally while they may yet appreciate, with those who are to be helped by their beneficiaries, the great good that the gift is to accomplish. And so it is that through Mr. Hegeman's generosity and intense interest in good work, Trinity Reformed church is today cleared of the debt it incurred about a year and a half ago in making some extensive improvements to their edifice.

In September, 1897, it was necessary to put a mortgage of $4,500 on the church property of that society in order to complete the alterations of the building then in progress. While the payment of the interest on the amount was not particularly burdensome to the members, it was nevertheless tactily understood by the supporters of the church that everyone should aid as much as possible in reducing the amount of the mortgage from time to time, thus saving the interest that was constantly accruing on the loan, and to finally wipe out the whole debt.

With this end in view a sinking fund was established and Mr. Hegeman was made treasurer of it. All the members of the church then set to work to add small amounts to the fund, realizing that through the aggregate efforts and results of the many the debt would gradually melt away under the careful supervision of Mr. Hegeman. The frequent contributions that were made to the fund impressed Mr. Hegeman with the thought that the Lord loves a cheerful giver and helps those who help themselves.

And so it was that a few weeks ago Mr. Hegeman came to the conclusion that he would cancel the mortgage debt on the church and start the society free of obligations in a financial way. Consequently he drew a check for $4,500 and handed it to the treasurer of the church, George Gayle, Wednesday. After its receipt as church funds Mr. Gale in turn drew a check for the same amount in favor of Mrs. J. W. Perry, of Brooklyn, the mortgagee, and later in the morning J. Fred MacDonald, who negotiated the loan on the church, went to Mrs. Perry's home in Brooklyn and liquidated the indebtedness. In addition to the amount of the principal and interest Mrs. Perry was paid interest until February 15th next, so that she would not lose the use of her money for the month that it is calculated it will take to put it out on loan again. Mr. MacDonald left New York with the mortgage Wednesday p. m. and stopped at the County Clerk's office in Elizabeth, where he had the record cancelled, thus completing all formalities of securing the complete benefits of Mr. Hegeman's generous act.

The matter has been kept a secret, no one but Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, and two members of the church being aware of Mr. Hegeman's intentions, but now that the desire of his heart has been accomplished the fact is made public for the first time. Mr. Hegeman is one of Rev. Mr. Schenck's ardent admirers and supporters, and it was partially through his desire to see the latter unhindered in his work by the debt hanging over the church that he decided to make the liberal contribution.

It is due to the memory of Mrs. Hegeman, who recently died leaving a $5,000 legacy to the church, to be paid after the death of her husband, to state that the gift of the latter is in addition to the bequest made by her.

Wreck Victims Improving.

No change for the worse is noticed in any of the patients at Muhlenberg Hospital, and it is confidently believed that all will soon recover. No new cases have been received recently, and none have been discharged since Wm. Chesire, of Bound Brook, went out yesterday.

Fred Eodress, the butcher, is much improved from his tedious illness.

G. M. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, has gone west on a business trip.

A PAPER ON GUARD.

Oh, little playboy, still circling over
Your nest in scheme, your peace of heart,
Sure none dare harm it and none alarm it
While you are keeping your watch above.

"I'm she doth love you and well approve you,
Your little love-bird so gray and so coy.
If hawk and falcon swept down above you,
I'm she would trust you the twain to meet.

Now let me pass, sir, a harmless lass, sir,
With love in clover and wind the rover
To waft the message all to his love so gray.
The showers so sunny and sweet as honey
Have power to trouble his anxious breast.
Now alight and nurture new love or money!
That watchful heart and that pleasant nest!

STORY OF A SCAR.

Our yacht was running free from the coast. Dick Duncan, Max Lyon and I lay upon the low roof of the house, or cabin. A little silence which had fallen was broken by Max, who turned to me and said,—

"Major, how about that scar across your forehead? You promised to tell me how it was caused some time. This is a good opportunity. Let us hear it."

"Yes," cried Duncan, throwing away his cigar and rising to a sitting posture, "major, tell us all about it."

"Ten years ago," I began, "I lived in the city of San Francisco, and was cashier for the Northern California Land Company. The association owning two hundred thousand acres of land in that section of the State.

"We were continually engaged in the purchase and sale of lands, and such transactions necessarily brought large sums of money into our possession, mainly gold coin.

"In order to protect this money, and to avoid the necessity of being obliged to deal exclusively with the bank, I had built a vault in the side of my office, constructed of solid masonry, and closed by an enormous chilled-iron door, held within which stood a small but exceedingly strong safe, with a time-lock. In this safe we stored our gold when not desiring to deposit the same. The vault generally remained open during business hours.

"I am thus particular in my description of this vault that you may understand the remainder of my story.

"I had been cashier of the Land Company two years, when we arranged a very large sale of property in Humboldt county, and received the pay for the same. You remember that the amount was about forty thousand dollars, and all paid in gold.

"The bullion arrived by the steamer on the morning of Saturday, and I was busy for several hours, so that when I completed the task of counting it for dinner, which I always did personally, it was too late to deposit, and I was obliged to place the same in the inner safe spoken of until Monday.

"I had done this, and executed a receipt for the gold to the special messenger who came with it, and was about to close the outer vault door when the messenger spoke to me.

"'Do you keep that money here?' said he, in some surprise.

"'Oh, yes,' I replied. 'We consider this as safe as a bank safe. I shall deposit Monday, however.'

"'But the bank has a guard over Sunday,' said the man, 'and you do not. Your vault might be blown open to-morrow, in this desolate part of the city, and no one be the wiser until Monday.'

"I laughed as I closed the outer doors and locked them.

"An hour later I closed the office of the company and went to my hotel.

"I think the theatre drew me that evening—certain is is that I was engaged with nearly midnight and it was not until I was again in my own room, prepare to retire, that the conversation of the afternoon flashed across me. As it did I became instantly worried.

"As the messenger had said, our offices would be vacant until Monday morning, and were located in an unfrequented part of the city. The possibility of robbery became almost a probability as I ruminated.

"'I must go down there now and see that all is right,' I suddenly exclaimed.

"Re-dressing myself, I placed a revolver in my overcoat pocket, took my hat and cane and left the room. As I passed through the hotel office I said to the clerk—

"'I may be gone until breakfast time.'

"Out into the night, clear and starlit, but cold, I walked. The streets were comparatively empty, and I met no one whom I knew as I journeyed toward our offices.

"When I reached the building I paused. Was it worth while to go in? I examined it closely from without. The shutters were all closed. the door evidently fastened. I went up the steps and tried the door.

"'Locked all right,' I said to myself, 'but I think I will go in.'

"I did so, closing the door and fastening it behind me; then passing into the inner office, I lit the gas and looked about me. Everything was just as I had left it last night. I listened and heard no noise but the moan of the wind, and the puffing of a far-away tug upon the bay.

"'What a fool to have this walk at midnight because I grew a little nervous!' I growled; 'but one thing, I won't walk back now,' I continued, throwing my overcoat on a chair. 'Here's a good sofa, and I'll sleep until morning,' and suiting the action to the words, I turned out the light and lay down.

"In three minutes I was asleep, and not until the rattle of the carts without disturbed me did I awake.

"I sprang up and pulled out my watch.

"'Half-past eight! Here's a nice go!' I exclaimed. 'I'll not go to the hotel for breakfast now, but wait and do a little writing and get an early dinner.

"With this resolve I lit a cigar, opened two of the upper blinds, unlocked the vault doors, and took out some of the books and began to busy myself.

"A half hour passed, when, as I paused a moment in my labors I imagined I heard a step behind me. I turned quickly, half-rising, but not quickly enough, for at the same instant I was struck a tremendous blow upon the head, and sank unconscious in my chair.

"'Sir, if that's not the manner by which I got the scar. That came later. How long I remained insensible I do not know, but when consciousness returned I found myself lashed to my chair before my desk, while opposite, working at the door of the inner safe, was a man. As I groaned—for my head pained me terribly—he turned and I recognized him.

"'It was the messenger of the day before.

"'Hello, you fool!' he growled. 'I caught you, didn't I? Do you know that I stirred you up on the danger of leaving this money here alone in order to bring you to the office to-day, so that I could force you to open the outer doors? I knew the smaller safe was protected by a time-lock, but I am going to explode that. If I'd been obliged to risk two explosions, one on each door, I might be taken. I've been hiding all night for you, and saw you when you came. Now don't make me lose trouble, I'm excluded,' turning again toward the inner safe, 'or I shall have to hurt you. I am preparing to blow this door open. When I do, and get the gold out, I'll bid you good-day; if you raise a row I'll tap you on the head again. Remember.'

"He knelt within the outer doors, and began again to charge the other hole.

"Suddenly, as I moved uneasily, my foot touched an electric button under my desk, which had been so arranged that by pressing it it would shut the outer door.

"'There!' said the robber, at length, half rising. 'Now for a match!'

"And he prepared to light the short fuse he had made. I slid my foot on to the electric button. I saw him lean closer; I heard the fizz of the match and the fuse; I saw him rise and step back, and I pressed the button.

"Silently, but swiftly the great door began to move, and the next instant had crushed him, with one arm and one leg within the opening, where writhing and screaming in pain, it held him with its mighty weight.

"'Open the door—open the door! Quick, for Heaven's sake!' he gasped. 'The mine will explode!'

"I saw the blue smoke curling up behind the man, and then a dull roar filled the room. When I opened my eyes it was to find my friends about me. The man who sought the gold was a crumbled mass of humanity at my feet. My head had been cut by a flying bolt, and that is how I came by my scar."

Rufus's Valid Excuse.

On one of the country plantations were employed, among a score of other colored field hands, a couple of typical darkies. They were man and wife. The man, in addition to his work in the field, was called upon to attend to the horses and do chores about the house. He was well on in years, but was one of the most faithful of his race that ever followed a plough or curried a horse. His wife officiated as cook and helped with the housework.

One day the aged negro did not appear in time for work, and, as the master had counted on his early presence about that time, he sent Rebecca to task for the tardiness of her spouse.

"Hev to 'scuse Rufus dis mawnin', boss; hev to 'scuse him——"

"What's the matter with him? Why ain't he here on time, eh?" the master put in testily.

"Hev to 'scuse him dis mawnin'. Rufus died jes' for sunup, boss."

The quaint manner of her putting the matter and her faithfulness to her work acted somewhat on the master's good qualities, and, quickly telling her she could have a holiday, he turned away, possibly to conceal his feelings.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Generosity.

Teacher—Well, Billy, did you give any Christmas presents this year?

Billy—Oh, yes, lots. I gave papa a train of cars, mamma a Jack-in-the-box, grandpa a kite and grandma a rocking-horse.

Teacher—Did they seem to enjoy them?

Billy—Well, I guess they did. You ought to have heard them laugh when I said I'd let them keep their things in my nursery.—Harper's Bazar.

"But in time the bills for them will come in."

A RICH MAN'S VIEWS.

MILLIONAIRE TELLS HOW HE EARNED $50 A MONTH AND SAVED.

Says the Poorest Man in the World To-Day Is the One who has Nothing but Money. Duty to Earn all Possible. But it must be Obtained Honestly.

"Who is the poorest man in the world to-day? The poorest man I know is the man who has nothing but money—nothing else in the world but money—only money."

It was a man with iron gray hair and an iron gray mustache who spoke the words, and he repeated the last ones with emotion.

The man who spoke has endowed the University of Chicago with millions upon millions of dollars. He is John D. Rockefeller, who in the parlors of the New York Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, addressed the young men's Bible class.

Mr. Rockefeller held in his hands a cheap looking little yellow backed account book.

"This is my ledger," he said. "My first business training was in keeping a ledger. It was at the time when I began to spend my first earnings in my first struggle to get a footing.

"It was a very hard struggle. When I put my head on my pillow the contents of this little ledger then kept running in my mind until I awakened the next morning.

"Besides the accounts I kept in this book there were memoranda of occurrences. In forty-two years I found it. I kept it more than forty-two years ago. In deciphering some writting on the back of here, I see that I called it Ledger A. I place great value upon this little book."

Mr. Rockefeller's hands trembled as he turned the pages of the little volume which he had taken from a big envelope in his inside pocket.

"It was important for me to be particular at that time about items of receipts and disbursements," he continued. "I hope you young men are all careful. I believe it is a religious duty to get all the money you can, get it fairly, religiously and honestly—and give away all you can.

"I would not dare to let you read this book. My children read it, and said that I didn't spell toothbrush correctly. I haven't seen this book for twenty-five years. You couldn't get it from me for all the money in New York and what they all would bring in.

"It reports what I received and paid out for several years, Here is an item: Income from December 26, 1855, to January 26, 1858..... $50

"And I lived within my income. Out of that I paid my washerwoman, the lady with whom I boarded, and I saved a little and put it away.

"I see that I paid in the Sunday school every Sunday one cent. It was all I had to give. I had a large increase $25 a month.

"I was as independent in those days as Mr. Astor. But when I got that increase I felt guilty. I felt like a criminal—like a capitalist. We had no trusts or millionaires in those days.

"I remember the clothes I bought. I didn't patronize a fashionable tailor. I bought my clothes from a cheap clothier. The clothes were good and such as I could pay for. Let me give you all a word of advice:—'Live within your means.'"

Curiosity prompted Mr. Rockefeller here to ask all those to raise their hands who had come to New York from the country. Nine-tenths of the audience raised their hands, to the evident pleasure of the speaker.

"City men haven't had the struggles we had who came from the country," he said. "Two days ago I had a talk with a carpenter who was going to make a building comfortable for which help was going to sleep. There were two big spaces he closed with mineral wool, so the damp wouldn't come in. he said. Then on the next floor he closed me two spaces he was also going to fill with wool. 'No, no, that,' as he expressed it, "the sleeper there, a housemen, would not have to hear the rain drops fall upon the roof.'"

This seemed to afford Mr. Rockefeller infinite amusement.

"Why," he said, "the carpenter's suggestion made me think of my own experiences when sleeping under the roof. I know that I heard the rain fall, and when I looked up I could see the shingles, and in one place a big crack through which the sky was visible. It was pretty hot there in summer, but I preferred summer on the whole.

"I think I was better for that sort of experience, and my head is full of sadness as I contemplate the condition of a number of my fellows that I know in this city. Their fathers have plenty of money, but the boys have not the ghost of a chance in competing with you who came from the country. They'll go down and you'll take their places.

"What is success? Is it to get money? Well, is that success? The poorest man I know is the man who has nothing but money. If I had my choice to-day, I'l be a man with little or nothing but a purpose in life.

"It's not the money itself that is so miserable, but the good it does if you know how to use it. Let me give you a little word of counsel. Know just what you receive and how you spend it. Write down just what you do with it and don't be ashamed to let your fathers and mothers see what you have written down.

"In a year or two I managed to save nearly $1,000. Here is an item as to clothes. My clothing from November, 1855, to November, 1856, cost me just $9.00. Here is one bit of extravagance which had quite escaped my memory, 'pair of fur gloves, $2.' Here are other items:

Mittens	8 shillings
Given away	$5.50
Missionary cause, November 25	.15
Ministerial student	.10
Night Society	.75
Sabbath School	.05
Present to Sabbath School Superintendent	.25

"I was living in Cleveland then, and I must have felt sorry for New York. Here is an item:—Five Points Mission, 12 cents.

"We had a little paper published by the Sunday school called the Macedonian. I subscribed to that. There was a venerable teacher of my class, a Scotchman, and a great Bible student. He is dead now. He taught me for twenty-five cents.

"All these little things helped me to come into sympathy with many undertakings, both religious and philanthropic. My opinion is that no man can trust himself to wait until he has accumulated a great fortune before he is charitable. He must give away some money continually."

LINCOLN IN THE FIELD.

His First Visit to General Grant and His Horse-back Ride.

One Tuesday a White river steamer arrived at the wharf, bringing President Lincoln, who had come down to Chattanooga to visit for the first time the armies under General Grant's immediate command. As the boat neared the shore, the General and several of us who were with him at the time walked down to the wharf, in order that the General-in-chief might meet in distinguished visitor and extend a greeting to him as soon as the boat made a landing. As our party stepped aboard, the President came down from the upper deck, where he had been standing, to the after-gangway, and reaching out his long, angular arm, he wrung General Grant's hand vigorously, and held it in his for some time, while he uttered in rapid words his congratulations and expressions of appreciation of the great task which had been accomplished since he and the General had parted in Washington. The group then went into the after-cabin. General Grant said: "I hope you are very well, Mr. President." "Yes, I am in very good health," Mr. Lincoln replied; "but I don't feel very comfortable after my trip last night on the cars; I was rough, and I was considerably shaken up. My stomach has not yet entirely recovered from the effects." An officer of the party now saw that an opportunity had arisen to make the scene the supreme moment of his life, in giving him a chance to soothe the digestive organs of the Chief Magistrate of the nation. He said: "Try a glass of champagne, Mr. President. That is always a certain cure for seasickness." Mr. Lincoln looked at him for a moment, his face lighting up with a smile, and then remarked: "No, my friend; I have seen too many fellows demolish ardors from drinking that stuff." This was a knockdown for the officer, and in the laugh at his expense Mr. Lincoln and the General both joined heartily.

General Grant now said: "I know it would be a great satisfaction for the troops to have an opportunity of seeing you, Mr. President; and I am sure your presence among them would have a very gratifying effect. I can furnish you a good horse and will be most happy to escort you to points of interest along the line." Mr. Lincoln replied: "Why, yes; I had fully intended to go out and take a look at the brave fellows who have fought their way down to Petersburg in this wonderful campaign, and I am ready to start at any time."

General Grant presented to Mr. Lincoln the officers of the staff who were present, and he had for each one a cordial greeting and a pleasant word. There was a kindliness in his tone and a hearty manner of expression which went far to captivate all who met him. The President soon stepped ashore, and after sitting awhile at headquarters mounted the large bay horse "Cincinnati," while the General rode with Colonel Rawlins. The rest of us of the staff accompanied them, and the scenes encountered in visiting both Butler's and Meade's commands were most interesting. Mr. Lincoln wore a very high black silk hat and black trousers and frock coat. Like most men brought up in the West, he had good command of a horse, but it must be acknowledged that in appearance he was not a very dashing rider. On this occasion, by the time he had reached the troops he was completely covered with dust, and his black coat and silk clothes had changed to Confederate grey. As he had no straps, his trousers gradually worked up above his ankles, and gave him the appearance of a country farmer riding into town wearing his Sunday clothes. His stretch on horseback is always an odd sight in the midst of a uniformed army, and the picture presented by the President bordered upon the grotesque.—General Horace Porter in Century Magazine.

MEN'S WAYS.

HER THEORY.

The house party at Westwood were dawdling over their coffee on the moonlit piazza. It was a merry crowd: everybody knew everybody else, and there was much laughter and talk, but suddenly a silence fell. Then it became patent to all that the couple seated on the steps leading to the lawn were engaged in a quiet but bitter altercation. The girl's listless air was in striking contrast to the man's eagerness.

"Your idea is an absurd one," he exclaimed.

"Oh, fie!" she said, "to speak so rudely to a woman."

"It is not rudeness but truth."

"Then they are apparently synonymous."

"I can't help it; it exasperates me to hear an intelligent girl like you—"

"Now, where," she broke in, "did you pick that up? I am not the least bit intelligent! If I were, I would know better than to argue with you; it is so perfectly hopeless—sighing—and you do get so excited."

"And who wouldn't—listening to such impossible theories!"

"What is your theory, Kate?" called out her cousin.

"One you have heard me express thousands of times before."

"Shall I tell him, Miss Doane?"

"Certainly."

"She says that a man doesn't like to feel too confident of a woman's affection; that it is the element of uncertainty in a woman that makes them interesting; that he enjoys being puzzled and played with, and that a clever woman has only to appear indifferent to first pique and then attract him."

"Heresy!" exclaimed a chorus of manly voices.

"Stewart has omitted a very important clause," said Miss Doane. "I added that to do this the woman must necessarily be good to look at and not lacking in this world's goods."

"Oh, Kate, Kate!" sighed her cousin, "would you insinuate that the masculine fancy is influenced by worldly advantages?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"I have stated my case; you can make it what you choose."

"The hostess, who had been listening idly, now put in a word.

"The trouble with you all is that you analyze too much," she said. "Why not take things as they come, without worrying over their possible causes? It is so much simpler and pleasanter."

Miss Doane turned around.

"Isn't Madge charming?" she said, amiably. "To hear her you would suppose that she had never seen the inside of a drawing-room. She always gets like that when she comes to the country; something in the air, probably."

"And you," said Stewart, when the laughter following her speech had died away; "has it no effect on you?"

"The country? Oh, yes, it makes me—if that is possible—more indolent than usual," and she leaned her head against the pillar and looked, not at him, but past him to the stretch of rosy sky.

"What an actress you are!" he said. "You are not the least bit indifferent, really, but you pretend you to be, just as much so long now it has almost become second nature."

"Still wrangling?" asked Carl Ainslie, lounging down the steps. "My dear young friends, it grieves me to the heart to see such a display of uncharitable feelings. 'Let dogs delight to bark and bite.'"

"Blame Mr. Stewart and not me," said the girl. "You know, Carl, that I haven't the energy to quarrel with any one, especially in this weather."

"Oh, of course not. Miss Doane only says the things that make other people want to row."

"A charming character you have given me, indeed. I think I will abandon the field to you. Come, Carl," with a quick change of manner, "Let's go down to the lake for a row."

Stewart watched them with wrath in his heart—the girl was talking gayly, but not with a single touch

HOW TO SKATE FAST.

INSTRUCTION BY THE JUNIOR CHAMPION OF AMERICA.

He Shows the Advantage of the Long, Straight Stroke—Once in Motion, Assume a Slightly Stooping Position—Ankle Straps Are Not Favored.

Skating bids fair to regain its old-time popularity, the only drawback to the sport being weather uncertainties. With this in view, the following remarks by Le Roy See, champion juvenile skater of America, will be read with interest. The methods of acquiring speed in ice skating, he says, differ somewhat according to the individual. There are several styles of fast skating, and each has its advocate among the fastest men on ice. I won fifteen scratch races, five interscholastic championships and am now the undefeated junior skating champion of America. This record is surely sufficient to show that my methods of skating are not entirely wrong.

Boys who fancy the exhilaration of ice skating may profit by my instruction. Perhaps they may discover that they possess speed qualifications that have been hitherto unthought of. In the first place, let me impress on them the importance of general development. Gymnastic work is of great assistance. If indulged in during the Fall by the time Winter and ice arrive there will be less difficulty in getting into good skating shape.

Before I attain my speed I always do several weeks' work at a moderate pace. I skate two or three miles daily, gliding along with as little effort as possible. Gradually my wind begins to improve, and before I know it I am able to move faster without losing my breath. It is an instinct. Every day I increase my speed, until I attain racing form. But little practice suffices, as most of my skating is from that time done in actual competition.

In a race other conditions being equal, it is the stroke that counts. There are almost as many strokes as skaters, but my favorite is the long, straight sweep, so gracefully used by John Donoghue. This is a directly forward stroke, with the weight of the body on the entire foot. It leaves almost a straight line behind and saves the distance lost by the side angular stroke. In starting off, do not swing the forward leg. Just shove straight ahead, pressing to the side with the opposite foot. As the skate shoots forward, the other skate is gradually raised from the ice, the front point being the last to leave. On the start the stroke of necessity must be short. But, once momentum has been acquired, the length of the stroke should be increased. This is best done by thrusting the foot ahead powerfully and pressing with the ball of the other foot against the ice.

A mistake made by many is to start the stroke with a jerky hip motion. This must be avoided. It is not graceful, nor does it permit one to glide ahead as swiftly. Once in motion, bend forward from the hips at about the same angle as a racing cyclist assumes. Join the hands behind the back and keep the eyes straight in front. This is the position introduced in this country by Alex. Paulsen, the old-time Swedish skater. It reduces the wind resistance, and is far less exhausting than the more common position with swinging arms.

The body must be kept as rigid as possible. At no time are we swing the body muscular exertion is used up which could have been better applied if concentrated in the leg muscles. While moving along raise the idle leg just high enough to clear and always have it poised for the next stroke in case an unseen obstacle should hinder the progress of the former stride. Keep in mind always to have the pressure of the foot even when the stroke is finished. Then, as it dies out, you will naturally lift the heel first, and as you plunge ahead for the next sweep the toe is assisting you in getting into full motion.

In rinks where there is only a short stretch, you cannot adhere to these instructions. The constantly circling motion forces you to keep arms stretched out to preserve balance. And, besides, the frequent turns limit the extent of your straight, long sweeps. It is on the turns that outdoor skaters have the good in the rink races. Not being accustomed to them, they cannot get around rapidly. The way I make the turns is to use a short, choppy stride, known to skaters as "grinding." I skate almost entirely on the inner edge of my right skate and the outer edge of my left skate. My body is inclined inward, and I give my skate but little forward motion, relying on a side pressure. One foot crosses the other every yard or so. This is a knack which requires practice. The legs must be swung one in front of the other in quick succession. All the while you must be moving ahead and at the same time swinging around the sharp turns at good speed. A skater having mastered these details is quite apt to receive a gain in his speed on the ice.

Before closing I wish to say two things. One is that a skater should not make the mistake of getting accustomed to ankle straps or supports. Training alone strengthen the ankles, and fi good-fitting shoes are worn they will never give way. A skater using straps stops the circulation of the blood and frequently is not up to his standard for this reason.

The other injunction is the necessity of taking precautions on catching cold or growing stiff after a race. Always have a good warm robe handy and never dress without a rub-down and hanging head to keep the muscles supple.

Although some skaters wear racing *skates with blades as long as twenty-*four inches, I do not favor runners over sixteen inches in length outdoors and for indoor work fourteen inches is long enough.

THE STRONG HAND.

How Actor Pumpadour Jim Was Beat at His Own Game.

"I was playing at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, a few summers ago, and we got up a ball game, en costume, between the men of 'the Sinbad' company, which was playing at the Chicago Opera House. We wore the rigs or understudies of them, that we used in our performances, and the proceeds of the gate went to Chicago charity. Jim Corbett struck Chicago while the arrangements were progressing, and he was asked to pitch for the opposing team. Tommy Hengman, the Chicago prize-fight promoter, introduced Corbett to all of us the day before the game. I noticed all of the fellows wincing when Corbett shook hands with them, and I saw that he was giving them the hard, chesty handsqueeze, in order that they'd know that he was really strong, you know. Now, I had the trick—it's only a knack—of stalling off the hard handsqueezer and of giving him a dose of his own medicine, and when it came my turn to have my hand mashed into a pulp I gave it to the Pumpadour. I suppose he was astonished to meet sometimes as strong as I was or am, but any how, if it knows the trick, can give the hugest kind of a strong man that pained feeling in a hand shake. Corbett looked at me in surprise, and in a jig of a beat, at that. But he couldn't say a word, as much touch as he had been cracking the bones of all the rest of the fellows with his 'Ain't-I-a-strong-thing' handshake. Corbett got back at me in the progress of the game when I was at the bat. He took deliberate aim—I am positive he took aim—and pitched a ball to me on the left ear with a ball that made me see all kinds of meteoric showers for a week. That's the reason I am as happy as a man in a basheesh dream when I hear that Corbett's conceit gets a polar plexus blow."

WILL SWIM THE HELLESPONT.

McNally Will Out-Do All the World's Historic Swimmers.

Peter S. McNally, the noted Boston swimmer and life saver, is to make another European trip next summer, with the idea of covering the Old World swimming courses made famous by Leander, Byron and others. He will go first to Rome, where he will give the modern Romans an exhibition of Horatius at the Bridge, but instead of landing on the opposite bank as the old-time hero did, McNally will swim on down the Tiber to the Mediterranean, sixteen miles away. He will then go on behind to the ancient Hellespont, the Dardanelles, and will not only emulate Leander and Byron, but will go them one better by swimming the Straits in their widest part. He will next visit the Bosporus and the Suez Canal, and then he has planned a fifty-mile trip down the Rhine, from Frankfort to Cologne. Returning to America McNally proposes to swim from Newport, R. I., to Block Island, twenty-five miles, and later, from the Battery New York, to Coney Island.

Some of McNally's long swims in the past are as follows: Down the Kennebec River in July, 1884, twenty miles, in 6 hours and 51 minutes; from Charlestown to Brookline and return in July, 1886, sixten miles, in 6 hours and 57 minutes; from Newport to Narragansett Pier, August, 1896, rounding Brenton's Reef Light, fifteen miles, in 4 hours and 57 minutes. In July, 1897, McNally set out to swim the English Channel from Dover to Calais. He covered twenty-five miles in 15 hours and ten minutes, getting within three miles of Cape Grisnez on the coast of France.

It is as a life saver, perhaps, that McNally is best known, having a record of 120 persons rescued. He has medals from Congress and from the Massachusetts Humane Society.

A National Cycle Show.

The only cycle show of National importance to be held in the near future will be the exhibition beginning January 21 and running for one week, at Madison Square Garden, New York. The principal manufacturers of wheels as well as the makers of accessories and parts, have secured space. During the week several important conventions will be held in the concert hall. The League of American Wheelmen will hold a two days' meet, and Gen. Roy Stone has been invited to take charge of the meeting to start a movement for the better-

AS THE SUN WENT DOWN.

Two soldiers lay on the battlefield
At night when the sun w at down.
One held a look of duty high
And one held a look of brown.

One thought of his sweetheart back at home,
Happy and young and gay,
Dead and gone away.

Each in the thought that a woman cared
Murmured a prayer to God
Lifting his gaze to the blue above,
And one kissed a look of duty,
And one kissed a look of brown.

THE MARCHIONESS.

It was in Normandy last year, during the shooting season. I had had a long morning's sport and soon found my footsore and weary in the vicinity of an old mill, somewhere between Mortagne and Conde-sur-l Huisne. It was a comfortable looking place and I determined to solicit the owner's hospitality.

The miller received me very courteously and I was soon stretching my legs under the table and partaking of the most exquisite dejeuner that was ever placed before a hungry sportsman. There were trout from the mill stream and partridges from the neighboring moor, cooked to a turn and accompanied by some really excellent wine, not the "petit virt" of Normandy, but good mellow Bordeaux. This somewhat surprised me, but when at dessert the miller invited me to visit his gallery of family portraits, I was perfectly bewildered.

"What," said I to myself, "a picture gallery in a mill!"

Of course I accepted his invitation, and found that the pictures really existed and were fine ones, too. There were a dozen of them, representing Louis XIV., courtiers and marquises, and marchionesses of the times of Louis XV and Louis XVI., the series being closed by a buxom-looking farmer's wife in a white sun-bonnet next to a delicious little marchioness.

Stopping before the two latter portraits the miller said:

"These are mother and daughter."

"Yes, sir, this country woman is my mother, and that pretty little marchioness smiling there is my grandmother. It is a strange story. Everybody round about knows it, and I may as well tell it to you.

"As you have probably surmised from the age of these portraits the story is laid during the Terror. The father, mother and elder sister of you little marchioness were arrested, and soon afterward tried and executed. The little marchioness, my grandmother, sir, found safety only in flight. The poor orphan took refuge with one of the farmers on the family estate, whom she knew she could trust. This farmer was a widower with a son about thirty years of age. He had known the little marchioness from her babyhood, and was devotedly attached to her. In fact, to be frank with you, sir, in his heart of hearts he loved her. Now, sir, you can easily touch on the perilous position in which her presence placed him, but he could not turn the poor child away to be massacred by the savage revolutionists. He hid her in the cellar and the mob vainly scoured the whole country in search of her. But a neighbor, a ferocious Jacobin, had marked the farmer's trouble, and suspecting the reason for it denounced him to the revolutionary committee.

"In a few minutes the house was surrounded by a horrible mob bowling for the death of the hated aristocrat. They battered in the front door and poured into the place. Ah! sir, it was a terrible moment."

Here the miller paused and mopped his brow, while his eyes glistened with excitement.

"The first room was empty," he went on. "They smashed everything in it they could lay hands upon, and were about to break open the door of the next room when it suddenly opened and the marchioness stood before them, beside the farmer, who was half dead with anguish and terror.

"For an instant the mob stopped short. But it was only for an instant. Shrieks of 'Down with the aristocrat! Kill her! Away with her! Burn her! Tear her to pieces!' arose, and the blood-thirsty brutes were about to rush forward, when the little marchioness was suddenly struck by an inspiration. 'Hold, sir,' it must have come from on high. She made signs to them that she wished to speak.

"Citizens, she began.

"Unaccustomed to hearing such an appellation from the mouth of a dainty aristocrat, the mob stopped. She profited by the pause, and continued:

"'Citizens, what do you want with me? Why are you incensed against me? What have I done to you? I am one of you—I am your sister!'

"Murmurs of approval and of protest were heard, but in the main the mob appeared to be astonished and suspicious.

"'She's fooling us, the aristocrat,' shrieked a woman, who, with her disheveled hair, flushed face and crooked fingers, looked not the delicate girl's type out, looked like one of the Furies let loose.

"'No, no,' exclaimed the marchioness earnestly. 'I swear to you that I am no longer an aristocrat, but a woman of the people. In proof of it, here is my brave husband,' and she pointed to the farmer, who, too overcome to utter a word, would have bent his knee to the brave young girl, but she prevented him.

"Her remarkable presence of mind was their salvation. The fact that she was willing to marry a simple citizen caused a complete revulsion of feeling, and the wreeches who a moment before had been lusting for her blood, now applauded her.

"'We must be married under the Tree of Liberty,' she added, 'and, citizens, we invite you all to the wedding.'

"Another burst of applause followed this invitation. Friendly hands seized the little marchioness and the farmer, and they were straightway shouldered and carried in triumph to the Tree of Liberty, escorted by the cheering mob, waving their pikes and scythes.

"The marriage took place, and the crowd, joining hands, danced the Carmagnole frantically around the newly-made husband and wife, and the festivities with eating and drinking, were kept up till nightfall, when those of the revelers who were not too intoxicated escorted the couple back to the farm.

"As soon as they were alone the assumed familiarity of the farmer immediately vanished. Doffing his hat, he bent the knee before the marchioness, and with tears of gratitude in his eyes, exclaimed:

"'Mademoiselle, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Your sacrifice was our salvation. I beg you to pardon the liberty I took in the position in which we were placed compelled me to take. It is, of course, my duty to render you your liberty, and I do so.'

"'Sacrifice! Liberty!' said the marchioness, 'but I am free, and I have made no sacrifice. Don't you then understand that I love you?'

"'And thus it was," concluded the miller, "that the little marchioness became a poor farmer's wife, and the grandmother of an honest Norman miller."

A BUNCHGRASS SHEPHERD DOG.

Left With 2,500 Sheep, He Had 6,000 When His Owner Got Back.

A bunchgrass shepherd dog of eastern Oregon is the hero of this tale. The name of the dog was Jim, and his owner was called Bob Thompson. This story dates back to 1878, when sheep were sheep and wool was wool; when a good sheep dog was worth more than a horse; when horses were horses and sheep were sheep.

Every sheep camp had its crack pack of dogs, and in Thompson's pack there were thirty. At the time of the Bannock uprising Thompson and his men were herding sheep ten miles from Pendleton. One morning a messenger rode in in hot haste, warning the shepherds to flee for their lives, as the Indians were on the warpath. The shepherds fled. Only the dogs and sheep were left. For the next few days the dogs came straggling into Pendleton one by one, and within a week they were all present or accounted for; all but Jim. At the end of a month the Indian uprising had been put down and Thompson went out to look for his sheep. He had left 3,000 thousand and he found six thousand, all quietly feeding together. As he rode near he saw, perched on a tall butte, a black object that turned out to be Jim, who gave his master a frantic welcome and then proudly started with him to inspect the band.

Single-handed, Jim had taken care of those sheep for thirty days, driving them to fresh pastures each day. Every stray band that he met he had chased into the drove, and he became the leading herder of the bunchgrass country. Hard work had agreed with him, and he was as fat as a possum in persimmon time. He was too smart to go hungry, and had picked out the fat of the flock whenever he wanted to make a meal. Jim is gone now, but his memory is respected by every wool puller in Umatilla county.—New York Sun.

Duped the Burglar.

Bythe dim light of the dark-lantern the burglar read the following inscription on a card tacked to the outside of the window he was about to pry up with a jimmy:

TO MIDNIGHT CALLERS:
Do Not Ruin the Fastenings of this Window

The Rear Door of the House is Always Unlocked.

"The card is dusty and covered with cobwebs," he said to himself. "It has been there a long time, but I'll just go around and see if that door's still unlocked. If they'd rather have me go in that way I think I'll humor them."

Whereupon he stole softly around to the rear door, opened it, and a man in one of the sleeping-rooms upstairs, awakened by a burglar-alarm, came down and shot at him.

DOROTHY.

BY JAMES WORKMAN.

The judge had dined, and was enjoying an after-dinner cigar before turning to a pile of papers that lay on the table at his elbow. Yet even as he watched the flickering fire and puffed dreamily at his cigar, luxuriating in a little relaxation after a hard day's work in close and crowded court, his mind was busy formulating the scathing sentences in which he intended to sum up a case that had been tried that day. There could be no doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner, who had been accused of a most impudent fraud, and though it was a first offence, the judge intended to pass the severest sentence which the law allowed.

The judge was no believer in short sentences. He regarded leniency to a criminal as an offence against society—a direct encouragement to those who hesitated on the brink of vicious courses, and were only restrained by fear of punishment. The well-meaning people who go up to the bar and agitate the sentence upon a justly convicted thief or murderer were, in his eyes, guilty of a mawkish sentimentality. There was no trace of weakness or effeminacy in his own face, with its straight-cut features, close-cropped gray eyes, thin lips and massive chin. He was a just man, just to the splitting of a hair, austere and unemotional.

He had conducted the trial with the most scrupulous impartiality, but now that a verdict of guilty was a foregone conclusion, he determined to make an example of one who had so shamefully abused the confidence placed in him.

Stated briefly, the situation was as follows: The prisoner, Arthur Maxwell, was cashier to a firm of solicitors, Messrs. Lightbody and Dufton. The only surviving partner of the original firm, Mr. Lightbody, had recently died, leaving the business to his nephew, Thomas Faulkner. Faulkner accused Arthur Maxwell of having embezzled a sum of two hundred and fifty pounds. Maxwell admitted having taken the money, but positively asserted that it had been presented to him as a free gift by Mr. Lightbody. Unfortunately for the prisoner, the letter which he had stated had accompanied the check could not be produced, and Faulkner, supported by the evidence of several well-known experts, declared the signature on the check to be a forgery. When the check-book was examined the counterfoil was discovered to be a blank. The prisoner asserted that Mr. Lightbody himself had taken out a blank check and had filled it up and signed it at his private residence. He could, however, produce no proof of this assertion, and all the evidence available was opposed to his unsupported statement.

"Arthur Maxwell," soliloquized the judge, "you have been convicted on evidence that leaves no shadow of a doubt of your guilt of a crime which I must characterise as one of the basest—"

The clattering of voices in the hall brought the soliloquy to an abrupt conclusion. The judge required absolute silence and solitude when he was engaged in study, and the servants, who stood in considerable awe of him, were extremely careful to prevent the least disturbance taking place within earshot of his sanctum. He jerked the bell impatiently, intending to give a good wigging to those responsible for the disturbance. But the door was thrown open by his daughter Mabel, a pretty girl of twelve, who was evidently in a state of breathless excitement.

"O papa!" she exclaimed, "here's such a queer little object wants to see you. Please let her come in."

Before the judge could remonstrate, a little dark-haired, pale-faced girl of between five and six, in a red hood and cloak, hugging a black puppy under her arm and a brown paper parcel under the other, trotted briskly into the room. The judge rose in his chair, but his expression failed to cajoled his daughter to vanish with remarkable celerity.

"What on earth are you doing here, child?" he asked irritably. "What can you possibly want with me?" She remained silent, staring at him with round, frightened eyes. "Come, come, can't you find your tongue, little girl?" he asked more gently. "What is it you want with me?"

"If you please," she said timidly, "I have brought you Tommy."

Tommy was clearly the fat puppy, for as she bent her face toward him he wagged his tail and promptly licked the end of her nose.

"I've brought you other things as well," she said, opening the brown paper parcel and revealing a doll with a very beautiful complexion, large blue eyes and hair of the purest gold, a diminutive Noah's ark, a whip, a woolly sheep, a box of crayons, a pen-knife, a broken-bladed knife, a small paint box, a picture book or two, and what bore some faint resemblance to a number of water-color sketches. She seemed particularly proud of the last-named.

"I painted them all by myself," she explained.

"Well," he said, "it is very kind of you to bring me all these pretty things, but why do you want to give them to me?"

"I—I don't want to give them to you," she faltered.

"Come," he said with a quiet laugh, "that's honest, at least. Well, why do you give them to me if you don't want to?"

"I'll give them to you, and Tommy, too," with a very wistful glance at the puppy, "if you'll promise not to send poor papa to prison."

A silence, such as precedes some awful convulsion of nature, pervaded the room for several seconds after this audacious proposal. Even Tommy, as though cowering before the outraged majesty of the law, buried his head between the judge's coat and vest and lay motionless except for a propitiatory wag of his tail.

"What is your name, child?" asked the judge.

"Dorothy Maxwell," faltered the little girl, timidly, awed by the sudden silence and the perhaps unconsciously stern expression upon his lordship's face.

"Dorothy Maxwell," said the judge, severely, as though the little figure before him were standing in the prisoner's dock awaiting sentence, "you have been convicted at the close of the nineteenth century of the almost unparalleled crime of attempting to corrupt one of her majesty's judges, to persuade him by means of bribery to defeat the ends of justice. I shall further order upon the enormity of your crime. Have you anything to say why sentence should not be—no, no, don't cry. Poor little thing! I didn't mean to frighten you. I'm not the least bit angry with you—really and truly. Come and sit on my knee, and show me all those pretty things.

"This is very like concealing a criminal offence," thought the judge with a grim smile, as he wiped the tears from the child's face and tried to interest her in the contents of the brown paper parcel.

But the thoughts the tears aroused did not vanish with them. Arthur Maxwell was no longer a kind of impersonal representative of the criminal classes, to be sent to jail for so many years as the law allowed in the interest of society in general. He was the father of this soft, plump, rosy-cheeked, golden-haired little maid, who inevitably would have to share now or in the future her father's humiliation and disgrace.

At this moment the door opened, and his wife, a slender, graceful woman, considerably younger than himself, with a reined, delicate face, came quietly in.

"Ah," exclaimed the judge, with a sudden inspiration, "I believe you are at the bottom of all this, Agnes. What is this child doing here?"

"You are not vexed, Matthew?" she asked, half timidly.

"Hardly that," he answered slowly; "but what have you to do? It is impossible to explain the situation to this poor little mite. It was cruel to let her come on such an errand. How did she get here?"

"It was her own idea—entirely her own idea," said her mother brought her, and asked to see me. The poor woman was distracted, nearly frantic with grief and despair, and ready to clutch at any straw. She was so dreadfully miserable, poor thing, and I thought it was such a very good idea, I—I couldn't refuse her, Matthew."

"But, my dear," expostulated the judge, "you must have known that it could do no good."

"I—I knew what the verdict would be," said his wife, "I read a report of the trial in an evening paper. But, then, there was the sentence, you know—and—and I thought the poor child might soften you a little, Matthew."

The judge's hand strayed mechanically among the toys, and to interest the child he began to examine one of the most vivid of her pictorial efforts.

"You think I am very hard and unjust, Agnes?" he asked.

"No, no," she answered, hurriedly; "not unjust, never unjust. There is not a more impartial judge upon the bench—the world says it. But don't you think, dear, that justice without —without mercy is always a little hard? I am sure Mr. Matthews never spoke to you like this before. I wouldn't now but for the poor woman in the next room and the innocent little thing at your knee."

The judge made no reply. He bent still more closely over the scarlet animal crayoned amid emerald fields, and burnt umber trees of a singularly original shape.

"That's a cow," said Dorothy, proudly. "Don't you see its horns?—and that's its tail—it—it's a tree. There's a cat on the other side. I can draw cats better than cows."

In her anxiety to exhibit her artistic abilities in their higher manifestations she took the paper out of his hands, and presented the opposite side. At first he glanced at it listlessly, and then his eyes suddenly flashed and he examined it with breathless interest.

"Well, I'm blessed!" he exclaimed, excitedly.

It was not a judicial utterance, but the circumstances were exceptional.

"Here's the very letter Maxwell declared he had received from Lightbody along with the cheque. His reference to it, as he couldn't produce it, did more harm than good; but I believe it's genuine upon my word I do. Listen," he dated from The Hollies, Lightbody's private address:—

"'My dear Maxwell:—I have just heard from the doctor that my time will be very short, and I am trying to arrange my affairs as quickly as possible. I am, therefore, anxious to be ostentatious, but thorough and entirely satisfactory, manner in which you have discharged your duties, and as some little and perhaps too tardy recognition of your long and faithful services, send you a token of my personal esteem for you, I hope you will accept the enclosed two hundred and fifty pounds. With best wishes for your future, believe me, sincerely.

"THOMAS LIGHTBODY."

"What did you think of that? I'll send it round to Maxwell's solicitor at once."

"Oh, Matthew, then the poor fellow's innocent, after all?"

"It looks like it. If this letter is genuine, he certainly is. There, don't look miserable again. I'm sure it is. If it had been a forgery, you may be sure it would have been ready for production at a moment's notice. Where did you get the paper, little girl?"

Dorothy blushed guiltily and hung her head.

"I took it out of pa's desk. I—I wanted some paper to draw on, and I took it without asking. You won't tell him, will you? He'll be ever so cross."

"Well, we may perhaps have to let him know about it, my dear; but I don't think he'll be a bit cross. Now, this lady will take you to your mother, and you can tell her that papa won't go to prison, and that he'll be home to-morrow night."

He kissed her, and his wife held out her hand. But Dorothy lingered, with hanging head and twitching lips.

"May I—may I say good-by to Tommy, please, and the others?"

"Tommy's going with you," said the judge, laughing kindly. "I wouldn't deprive you of Tommy's company for Tommy's weight in gold."

Dorothy eagerly pursued the fat puppy, captured it after an exciting chase, and took him in her arms. Then she walked towards the door, but the corner of her eye rested wistfully on the contents of the brown paper parcel. The judge hastily gathered the toys, rolled them up in the paper, and presented them to her. But Dorothy looked disappointed. The thought of giving them to purchase her father's pardon had been sweet as well as bitter. She was willing to compromise in order to escape the fate that befell the enemy and the doll and the paint-box and other priceless treasures would have inflicted, but she still wished—poor little epitome of our complex human nature—to taste the joy of heroic self-sacrifice. She looked so pathetic that the judge might after all refuse to pardon her father if she took away all the gifts with which she had attempted to propitiate him.

She put the parcel on a chair and opened it out. Holding the wriggling puppy in the crook of her arm, she put treasures, trying to make up her mind which would be sufficiently valuable in the judge's eyes to accomplish her purpose. Finally, she selected the sheep, and presented the luxuriously woolly, almost unnaturally meek-looking, animal to the judge.

"You may have that and the pretty picture for bein' kind to papa," she said, with the air of one who confers inestimable favors.

He was about to decline the honor, but, catching his wife's eye, he meekly accepted it, and Dorothy and the puppy and the brown paper parcel disappeared through the door.

"Well, well," said the judge, with a queer smile, as he stroked the fluffy white sheep on the mantlepiece, "I never thought I should be guilty of accepting a bribe, but we never know what we may come to."

Arthur Maxwell was acquitted and assured by the judge that he left the court without a stain upon his character. The following Christmas Dorothy received a brown paper parcel containing toys of the most wonderful description from an unknown friend; and it was asserted by his intimates that ever afterwards the judge's sentences seldom erred on the side of severity, and that he was disposed, whenever possible, to give a prisoner the benefit of the doubt.—The Strand Magazine.

Balloon Lifeboats.

The big ocean greyhounds will soon, it is thought, be equipped with balloons harnessed to balloons, so as to be practically unsinkable. Cylinders filled with compressed gas will be placed in compartments of the lifeboats, and from these the balloons, which will be inflated with coal gas, a hollow mast connected with the cylinders, is inflated. The mast, which is from tubing, is adjustable, and, when turned forward, the big balloon acts as a sail, onto pivoting quite unnecessary. The combination, it is said, doubtless prove of the greatest service in saving people far out at sea. In a recent test it was shown that, even with the boat filled with water to the gunwales, the buoyancy of the balloon prevented the craft from either sinking or upsetting.

Result of His Call.

Sweet Girl (anxiously)—Did Fred—I mean Mr. Nicefellow—call to see you to-day, papa?

Papa—Yes, and to oblige him I consented. I suppose time hangs heavy on his hands.

Sweet Girl (mystified)—Why—why, what did he say?

Papa—He requested the pleasure of a series of games of chess with me. The first ones we will play this evening, and after that every other evening during the winter. I hope, my dear, you will keep out of the library as chess is a very absorbing occupation.—New York Weekly.

Papa's Opinion.

Tommy—What kind of a store is that one, papa, where they have three colored glass jars in the window?

Papa—That's an apothecary shop, Tommy.

Tommy—And that place next door to it that has three balls in front of it?

Papa (with a sigh)—Oh, that's a hypothecary shop, Tommy!—Judge.

What Perseverance Can do.

To those young fellows who think that they are having a hard tussle with the world, with but slim chances of "getting there," we recommend a perusal of the life and attainments of Albert J. Beveridge, who has just been elected United States Senator in Indiana. As an example of pluck and perseverance prosecuted to a successful end and under the greatest barriers, Mr. Beveridge stands on a high pinnacle and sheds an encouraging light to every young man in the country, though he be as poor and as insignificant as a church mouse.

Reared in poverty, put to work on a farm before he was in his teens, and made a drudge of till he was almost out of them, Beveridge has in a little over a decade arisen to a foremost position in the public world of this great country, and is now booked by the august Indiana legislators to make his appearance in the United States Senate as its youngest member. His career has not been a meteoric one, but studded throughout with hard knocks and great difficulties to overcome. A less ambitious and perserving fellow would have "fell by the wayside" long ago, but not so of Beveridge.

From farm to railroad, from railroad to lumber camp, and from lumber camp to college, then overwork and a period of cow-punching on the western plains, and finally a law student in Indianapolis—that's Beveridge's career up to the time he entered his manhood years. From that time forward his advance has been steady, and now he sees himself honored as but few are honored.

The young man who is struggling along and barely able to make both ends meet in a financial way, enjoying but few or none of the pleasures of the world, should read a few pages of Beveridge's life before the Indiana statesman was twenty-five years of age. It will prove a great incentive for facing all the trials and tribulations with an encouraging view of life.

Big Reward at Last.

This seems to be a great year in New York and Jersey for paying off long standing debts in party politics. The selection of John Kean by the Republican legislators for the United States Senatorship comes as a final reward for the Sage of Urinso after many years of "turn-downs," both in conventions and at the polls. Yesterday the Republican members of the New York legislature named Chauncey M. Depew as their candidate for United States Senate, and, of course, that is equivalent to an election. Depew's name has been before the Republicans for two or three decades every time there has been a big office to be filled, but somehow he always failed to be in on the windup until this year. The value of the plum both are getting now is compensation for all their past disappointments and humiliations.

The Governor's Secretary.

The Elizabeth Daily Leader is authority for the statement that Editor Charles McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, will probably not be Governor-elect Voorhees's private secretary. The Leader fails to state the why and wherefore of such a decision on the Governor's part, but if the rumor is true pressure of other political claims is doubtless the cause of Editor McBride's failure to "get there." It has been largely through the splendid editorial efforts of the genial Elizabeth newspaperman that Voorhees has reached his present high place, and if Mr. McBride really wants political preferment it is probable that the Governor will see to it that his editorial friend gets it before all the good things are gone.

Asbury Park has decided that the presence of prize fighters, who do their training for their mills by the sad sea waves, is a detriment to the town. Consequently the Board of Trade has passed resolutions inclined to insult the gentlemen of pugilistic attainments or aspirations, whichever it may happen to be. The tradesmen want to be careful or the fighters will let loose on them with their flow of words, and then the former will be sorry that they ever spoke.

Mr. Tom Platt is doing business at the same old stand—just the same as all the political bosses are.

An Argument for Consolidation.

In the natural course of events when there is any detail about a postoffice that can be remedied by Washington officials the man expected to bring about the desired change is the Congressman representing the district in which the office is situated. But as in many other matters resultant from a place divided in municipal, county and Congressional lines, Plainfield presents a condition widely different from the usual run.

Though Plainfield is in Congressman Fowler's district, and the postmaster is virtually named by him, the postoffice serves a large and influential portion of another Congressional district—North Plainfield, whose representative at Washington is Congressman Howell. Now it happens that this particular section of Congressman Howell's district is aroused and full of complaint about the postal service allotted them. But differing from other problems of a similar nature that may confront his constituents, Congressman Howell can not work effectively for the former without encroaching, to more or less extent, on the custom of one Congressman not meddling with affairs in a district represented by another—especially if both are of the same political affiliation.

Inasmuch as the postmaster is one of the political perquisites of Congressman Fowler, observing the ordinary rule would bring all complaints concerning the local office to him. But for the people of another district to address their fault-finding to him, when they have a Congressmen of their own, presents another unusual phase in the way things run at Washington. Thus it is that the Plainfield office develops a contradictory state of affairs. When we look at the matter in a purely theoretical light of what a Congressman's duty is, Mr. Fowler is not supposed to bother himself with the complaints of people living in another district. Mr. Howell on the other hand is violating an unwritten law among his colleagues when he tries to affect a change in an office in a district not his own. However, if Mr. Fowler did not bother himself about North Plainfield's needs in a postal way, and Mr. Howell kept mum because the office that serves that district is in the former's bailiwick, then the borough would be in a sad plight, and in this particular case practically without representation at Washington. Of course, we do not suppose that Messrs. Fowler and Howell are coming to daggers points about the arrangement of the postal service in Plainfield and North Plainfield, for, as a matter of fact, they are working in unison to adjust the difficulty to the best advantage of their respective constituents. But the facts herein rehearsed emphasize strongly the need of a consolidated city, and the obliteration of all governmental lines of any kind between city and borough when they are so essentially one in all other details now.

Should Be Repealed.

The second bill introduced by Assemblyman Murray into the Lower House of the Legislature was one that is doubtless the outgrowth of the Assemblyman's active participation in the trolley franchise agitation in this city. It provides for the repeal of the trolley act of May 18th, 1898, which extends the time for completing nearly all the street railways in New Jersey to 1901. This law is unquestionably a pernicious one, and was enacted through the influence of the trolley capitalists.

The effect of it is that if a municipality grants a franchise for the construction and operation of a street railway within its limits and the terms stipulate that it is to be finished at a certain time, this State law becomes antagonistic to the local act and permits the corporation to finish the road at its leisure, only so that it keeps within the provision of the legislative enactment.

It is a law that should never have been enacted, and Assemblyman Murray ought to be able to secure its repeal, though he will receive, no doubt, the active opposition of the Third House in such an attempt.

It is evident that Assemblyman Murray proposes to follow the advice of President of the Senate Reed and introduce his bills early in the Legislative session. The Plainfield Assemblyman has the honor of introducing bill No. 1 in the present session. However, it is not expected that the rule of "first come first served" will be followed out religiously by the Legislators.

The history of the war department is blighted in many places by jealousy that has prevailed between its high officers since the Revolutionary times and which has led to many a disgraceful episode, none more so than the present one between Alger et al and Miles et al. But notwithstanding we get there just the same.

The Evening Post speaks of the dissensions between Generals Egan and Miles as "An Army Muddle." From the amount of mud that has been flying through the air it looks as if it was more of a puddle than anything else.

The Board of Trade seems to be in a lingering condition again. At the annual meeting, when officers were elected and many other matters of vital interest to the success of the organization should have been enthusiastically discussed, there was just eleven members present out of a total of ninety-one—and it was necessary for the faithful few to tarry for over an hour to get the needed quorum together. The present Board of Trade is the liveliest organization of its kind that Plainfield has seen in a good many years, but it is far from the success it should be. Its energies seemed confined to the enterprise of a very few, while the great majority—men who could do excellent work if they would only bend their mind and efforts to it—fail to take even passive interest in the affairs of the Board. Plainfield's experience with a Board of Trade seems to be the same as most other towns, though, for it is a fact that there are few places supporting Boards of Trade that do much else than merely exist.

It was through the blunder of the engrossing department of the State Legislature that the county trolley law had such a rocky road to travel before it became enacted as a State statute, and as Assemblyman Squire, of Union county, fathered that law, he realizes the little worth that the department possesses to law-makers. As a result of his sorry experiences Assemblyman Squire believes that the engrossing department may as well become one of the bygones of the State, and he proposes to be instrumental in relegating it to the rear. He proposes that New Jersey follow the plan of New York and use printed bills only. This, he claims, will not only assure correct bills, but expedite matters, for it often happens that the Legislature has to wait on the engrossing department when business gets heavy. It will mean a saving of $5,000 a year to the State, too.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Miss Susan B. Anthony have addressed to President McKinley an open letter, asking that suffrage may be granted to the women of Hawaii upon the same terms as to men. The Mesdames Stanton and Anthony are well-meaning, but they would do more good if they taught the Hawaiian damsels how to dress right before they vote.

Now that Mr. Voorhees has had the sweets of a Gubernatorial inauguration he will have the bitter side of his cup by trying to make one office satisfy a score or more of aspiring politicians, upon everyone of whom, of course, depends the future existence of the Republican party.

Newark is getting nearer and nearer to dollar gas. The Essex and Hudson County Gaslight Company promises to furnish the illuminant for $1.10 after April 1st next, but they hold out a rosy promise for genuine dollar gas after 1900.

Admirers of Mayor Wilson, of the borough, are beginning to talk about his renomination at the approaching borough election. Mayor Wilson has been one of the best chief executives the people "across the brook" have ever had.

A good many men who were "be hind" President McKinley after he got in the late unpleasantness with Spain are now running as fast as they can to get in front and head him off.

Senators in Texas are allowed to buy five newspapers daily at the public expense, provided the total daily cost does not exceed fifteen cents.

By a unanimous vote the Minnesota Senate has declared in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people, which is as it ought to be.

The gentlemen who are supposed to be devising ways and means for the making of a Greater Plainfield seem to be losing time.

A THOUGHTFUL PRISONER.

Didn't Want to Make the Police Any Trouble so Gave Himself Up.

A more inoffensive looking man than Berhard Epstein it would be hard to find. And the Plainfield police marvelled when the borough authorities sent a warrant over for his arrest, charging him with trying to batter in another man's head with a brick. When Epstein heard that he was wanted, he hurried to the lock-up and gave himself up at once so to save the police any trouble. Sergeant Kiely hadn't the heart to lock him up so Epstein remained a silent visitor at the morning court of City Judge Runyon.

Failing to find a borough marshal, the Sergeant let Epstein remain at the shop of a friendly cobbler while waiting for the borough authorities to send for him. He was finally turned over to them. The complainant is the case was Kussel Sacher.

GREAT MEN DIFFERED.

PROF. MACE TALKS OF NATIONALITY AND DEMOCRACY.

Nearly All of the Early Statesmen Had Widely Differing Plans of How to Make a Great Nation of United States.

Prof. Mace continued his lectures in the University Extension course on American history Tuesday in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Before commencing the lecture the speaker spent a half hour asking and answering questions concerning last week's lecture, and in this way impressing what he had said upon his hearers.

"The Mutual Approach of Nationality and Democracy" was the subject of the discourse, and it covered a period from 1803 1820 "Alexander Hamilton," said the lecturer, "believed in a strong National Government by the educated classes, but distrusted the plain people. He was right in the first and wrong in the second, but thoroughly honest in both. Thomas Jefferson trusted the common people, but feared a strong National Government. He was right in the first, wrong in the second, and honest in both.

"In 1801 Jefferson faced a hard problem, how to make his administration a success by diminishing the power and influence of the Nation and by magnifying the authority of the States. He tried this in his domestic policy by cutting down the Army and Navy and by repealing the excise tax and the stamp duty. This saved many millions each year, but foreign affairs spoiled his plans.

"The War of 1812 forced Madison and his party to exercise every power of the Nation, stated or implied in the Constitution, which would bring the war to a successful end. That the party of Jefferson was rapidly becoming Federalist was seen in the measures it proposed and carried out after the war closed.

"The Federalist party was fast becoming a States-Rights party. It opposed the War of 1812, held the Hartford Convention of 1814, and defended its conduct by an appeal to the very doctrines which Jefferson and Madison had embodied in the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions. This killed the Federal party, and with the naturalization of Democracy brought in the 'Era of Good Feeling.'"

THE SAD STORY OF A NEW JERSEY DOGBERRY.

DEFENDS THE JUSTICES OF PEACE.

Paterson Man Says They are Poorly Paid and Terribly Abused by Unthinking People.

Paterson, Jan. 18.—Martin H. R. VanHovenberg, president of the State Association of Justices and Constables of New Jersey, has made public a statement of the objects of the organization. He declares that justices and constables are the most abused and most poorly paid class of officials in the State. The remedy for this condition, he says, "is to be found in the appointment by the Governor of a commission, consisting of justices of the peace, to be named by the association, to draft a coherent, moderate and reasonable bill, for relief, covering all the points at issue, to be presented to the next (not the present) Legislature for approval.

"I hold," the letter says, "that although we have been unnecessarily and unmercifully crowded, for the benefit of the District Courts, to the great detriment of poor suitors, yet, that there need be no unnecessary antagonism between such courts and the courts for the trial of small causes, the District Courts, now being courts of record could constitute an intermediate tribunal, to which an appeal from the justices' courts could be easily and inexpensively taken when circumstances seemed to require.

"The office of justice of the peace being a constitutional one, must continue to exist, at least for the present, and as long as it does to emasculate it in various ways and to deprive justices in cities of all civil jurisdiction whatever, is to offer a direct premium to incompetency and dishonesty in the administration of the office, and to such unwise enactments the present and disgraceful and unsatisfactory state of affairs is directly chargeable."

A GREAT VICTORY AT BASKET BALL.

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Defeated Greenpoint Y. M. C. A.

THE FAMOUS RUBBER FIVE.

BY MAGNIFICENT TEAM WORK AND ACCURACY THE GAME WAS WON.

Plainfield Defeated One of the Best Teams of This Section by a Score of 20 to 16—A Closely Played Game Throughout—Visitors Braced Up in Second Half and Began to Gain—Lead Too Much for Them.

Plainfield's basket ball experts scored their greatest victory of the season last Monday by defeating the famous "Rubber Five," of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A., in a closely played game. Plainfield won by a score of 20 to 16. The game was played in the gymnasium of the local association, and was witnessed by an enthusiastic audience numbering about 100.

The "Rubber Five" has made a great reputation for itself in the metropolitan district by its fine team play and general lively work. The team is considered one of the best in the district, and divides the honors of Brooklyn with the team from the Eastern District. The victory of the Plainfield team, after so many repeated trials, is all the more prized.

There wasn't anything slow about the game. That was apparent at the very start. Plainfield had its strongest combination on the floor and the boys were at their best. Now the critics have said that all Plainfield lacked to make it a winning team was accurate goal throwing. And they were right. In the first half Plainfield clearly outclassed the visitors in accuracy. It was nip and tuck at the start and then there came three goals for Plainfield in rapid succession. It was good, clean playing that won them and it continued through the first half.

Both sides played a hard snappy game but the home team showed up together better. Smith and Long did some excellent ball blocking. Smith had a faculty of following the ball that counted well although it was a trifle rough. Eric Moraller played with a desperation that was remarkable and kept his opponent somewhat in awe with him.

The second half showed a relaxation in the pace of the Plainfield boys. They didn't keep together as well as before and the visitors began to get more openings for the goal. The score had stood 16 to 6 at the end of the first half. Greenpoint began to score. Two points were rolled up before the ball was over, while Plainfield made but four. The good playing of the first half gave too great a lead to overcome, and Plainfield won by a slim majority of four points. Had there been ten minutes more of play the result might have been different.

In the second half the "Rubber Five's" appeared in red jerseys instead of white as in the first half. The Plainfield boys had been wearing red, but they made a change on learning of the visitors' intention. It is one of the "Rubber Five's" favorite tricks to rattle their opponents by wearing the same colored jerseys.

It was altogether an excellent game and too much cannot be said in praise of the local players who so distinguished themselves. It wasn't a case of individual work, but the best kind of team work, combined with accuracy and quickness, and every member of the team is deserving of great credit.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		GREENPOINT.
Long	right forward	Burk
Chevalier	left forward	Wolf
Read	centre	Meakin
M. Moller	right guard	Ryan

LONG DELAYED ENTERTAINMENT.

Planned to Give It Before Christmas—Took Place Monday Night.

The entertainment which was to have been given by Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, before Christmas, finally came off last Monday, having been postponed two times. The first postponement was on account of the grip, which had attacked over half the members. The second postponement was on account of a bad storm, and last night the atten ance was interfered with again by the weather.

The programme consisted of an address by Benjamin Hand, recitations by Miss Westphal and two dialogues, "Pull backs" and "No Cure, No Pay," by several ladies.

THERE IS A CLASS OF PEOPLE who are injured by the use of coffee. Recent years have developed in all the groceries a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it with as much benefit as coffee. It is not a cereal coffee, but is prepared from grains and has the snap and go of coffee, but is entirely free from all its injurious properties. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15c and 25c per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

THE BOARD OF TRADE ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Eleven Out of Ninety-one Members Attend the Meeting.

MR. LOUNSBURY PRESIDENT

QUORUM WAS NOT PRESENT UNTIL AFTER 9 O'CLOCK.

Several Members Resigned From the Organization—E. M. French, Secretary of the Transportation Committee, Makes a Report on Trolley Extension—What the Board of Trade Has Done

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade came near not being held after all Monday because a quorum was not present until long after 9 o'clock. A few of the members met at 8 o'clock, then spent the balance of the evening waiting for the others. Out of the ninety-one members of the organization, eleven finally got together, and at 9:30 o'clock the meeting was called to order by James C. Pope, first vice president, in the absence of the president, Fred C. Lounsbury.

One new member, E. D. Barrett, was elected, and the application of Oscar S. Rogers was referred to the committee on membership. Maze Edwards, L. Q. Packer, Frank W. Bunyon, E. V. French and B. A. Hegaman, Jr., sent in their resignations as members of the Board of Trade. All being members in good standing their resignations were accepted.

The election of officers for the new year followed. W. B. Codington, E. M. French and W. A. Woodruff were appointed judges, and H. C. Runyon and E. M. Laing inspectors of the election. For president Fred C. Lounsbury and Fred W. Dunn were nominated, and balloted for. Mr. Lounsbury received the vote. James C. Pope was elected first vice president; L. B. Woolston, second vice-president; Harry C. Bunyon, secretary; and E. M. Laing, treasurer.

The terms of E. M. French, Charles Hand and W. A. Woodruff as trustees expired, and they were re-elected. L. B. Woolston, also a member of the board of trustees, was declared ineligible by the presiding officer on account of having been chosen to hold a higher office, so Horace Sherwin was elected to fill his place. W. B. Codington was re-elected counsel.

E. M. French, secretary of the committee on transportation, was called upon to give a report of their work in regard to the trolley to Scotch Plains. Although called upon unexpectedly, he gave a clear statement of what the committee had done towards getting the Common Council and the representatives of the street railway together to agree upon a franchise.

The secretary's report showed that the organization numbered 91 members. Th-re were 84 charter members and 20 new members had been added during the year. Thirteen were lost through death or resignation, leaving a total number of 91 members on their roll.

Inclosing his report the secretary mentioned a number of things which the Board of Trade has done for this city during the past year. They succeeded in lowering insurance rates; secured storm sewers for Plainfield avenue and Richmond street, and a drain pipe for Clinton avenue; revised the building ordinance; got the stores to close early; fought the Margin Act; secured the trolley for Scotch Plains, and persuaded the Chichester Chair Company to locate here. Before acting on a report of banks was extended to The Daily Press and the News for leaving free copies of their papers at the rooms each day.

POLICE RAIDED A FLAT.

THREE DISORDERLY CHARACTERS WERE ARRESTED THERE.

One Man Escaped—The Women Were Sentenced by Judge Runyon to Pay a Fine of $50 and go to Jail Fifty Days.

Monday the police raided a disorderly establishment in the Manning flats, West Front street. Two young women and one man were arrested. Another man made his escape when the police entered the place. Tuesday morning the three offenders were sent to the county jail by City Judge Runyon.

The offenders were the same ones who were driven out of the borough two weeks ago by the persuasive powers of Mayor Wilson. They then came across the brook. The rooms were rented by Miss Susan Stephenson and her married sister. Their father boards at a local hostelry. A week ago Sergeant Kiely, now acting-chief, warned Miss Stepenson that they must leave the city as well as the borough. They refused and the raid followed.

Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Tolton entered the Manning building Monday at midnight. They gained entrance to the Stephenson apartments at the exit of a man. He escaped, Miss Susan Stevenson, Miss Annie Nelson and E. F. Titus were arrested. Titus was formerly a resident of the borough where he conducted a bakery. He has lately been employed at Wilmington, Del., and was home on a visit.

The prisoners were arraigned before City Judge Runyon Tuesday morning charged with being disorderly. They pleaded guilty. Titus was visibly affected. Miss Stephenson wept throughout the trial, while her companion glanced diffantly about the court room. The Judge sentenced the women to pay a fine of $50 and go to jail for fifty days. Titus was sentenced to pay a $50 fine, which he did.

FAKE RUMOR THAT WILL DARLING IS ARRESTED.

ECHO OF A COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

Report That the Murderer Has Been Caught in the West Lacks Verification.

New Brunswick, January 17.—A report has been current for more than a week that William Darling, of Plainfield, the murderer of Henry Dunham, who was killed at New Market about three years ago, had been captured in Nevada or California. Prosecutor Voorhees, however, when seen said he had not received any information to that effect and thought the report was groundless. Detective Oliver, who was at work on the case, was of the same opinion.

Briefly the circumstances of the murder, which was a cold-blooded one, are these: Henry Dunham, whose home was in Hornelsville, N. Y., while visiting friends at New Market, in August, 1895, became acquainted with Darling. They got into a quarrel while playing pool at Dunn's hotel, which ended in Darling drawing a revolver and shooting Dunham through the heart. Darling returned to his home and rode on his wheel to South Plainfield where he boarded a train and made his escape. The wheel was found a South Plainfield pond.

The authorities were on his track for some time and at one time thought they had him. He, however, succeeded in escaping

A Surprise Party.

Want a Crosswalk.

The residents of Codington avenue, while not of a complaining nature, would like to have a crosswalk laid across their avenue at the corner of Somerset street. The people on that avenue all pay their taxes and they feel as though they deserve a walk.

Stop rely to Imported Wines.

Dr. S. F. Rowland, of 29 West 42nd St., New York, says:

"I can say empharically that I like Speer's wines far better than any of the imported wines. His Claret and Sauterne are superior dinner wines. His Port beats the world for invalids and weakly persons.

VOORHEES IS MADE JERSEY'S GOVERNOR.

Great Times at the Inauguration Tuesday.

BIG CROWD AT TRENTON.

PRESIDENT REED OF THE SENATE PRESIDED AT OPERA HOUSE.

Plainfield Had a Big Representation in Trenton—Many Politicans There—Will Kline, Doorkeeper, Was Admired—Senator Reed Had a Word-Enthusiastic Reception to Governor.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, January 17.—The trainload of enthusiastic Union county Republicans arrived here this morning, just in time to hurry to Taylor's Opera House for the first scene of the inauguration ceremonies. The city is thronged with politicians from all over the State and everybody looks happy. The Trenton House has been the headquarters for the visitors but many have been at the capitol where the Assemblymen and Senators have had their hands full looking after their constituents who have come here to see the fun and incidentally to make plans and pull wires.

Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, the new President of the Senate, is in busy man, indeed, and is cornered a whole army of visitors during the morning hours preceding the opening of the Legislature. He didn't fall, however, to have a kindly word for all his friends and neighbors.

Roger F. Murray, Plainfield's Assemblyman, was running about, buttonholing and being buttonholed.

Will Kline, now the smiling doorkeeper of the Assembly Chamber, is a hero in the eyes of his friends and backers about the city. There was a host of them Plainfielders here, but they are so scattered about the city that it is almost impossible to give any estimate as to their numbers. Among those who have been noticed by the writer during the morning are Postmaster E. H. Bird, City Judge Wm. N. Runyon, Councilman J. F. Buckle, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Commissioner of Appeals J. B.Coward, Former Street Commissioner Robert A Meeker, Surrogate Newton Spencer, Former Councilman P. A. Emmons, Former Councilman Andrew Lathe, Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, Freeholder J. Frank Hubbard, A. B. Beers, School Trustee J. B. Probasco, C. E. A. Haywood; L. I. VanAlstyne, Daniel Galbraith, W. W. Ocriell, Geo. W. Moore, Martin Lance, James Morrison, George J. Tobin, Justice J. E. Mosher, J. H. Tier, Jr., Thomas Doud, D. W. Littell, J. C. Pope, Garrett Dunham and many more whose names were not familiar.

At 11:30 o'clock the Legislature convened at the State House and, after roll-call, the members were taken to Taylor's Opera House, where seats were provided for them and the guests, including the State officers and judiciary, on the stage. The exercises at the opera house were called to begin at 12 o'clock. They were only a few minutes late. President Reed, of the Senate, acted as chairman of the meeting.

Then came the appearance of the Governor-elect, escorted by a committee from the Legislature and many friends. There was a wild demonstration in the opera house at his appearance, and the audience yelled itself hoarse over him. Voorhees took it all calmly and bowed and smiled in response to the loud cheering from every side. The noise finally quieted, and Rev. Francis L. Patton offered the opening prayer.

Then Chief Justice William J. Magie, of the Supreme Court, administered the oath of office, after which the salute of seventeen guns by the Camden gun detachment outside was drowned by the cheers of those within. Speaker Watkins next delivered the Great Seal of the State to the new Governor in a neat little speech, which was answered by Governor Voorhees in a few words.

Then followed the formal introductions of the Governor to President Reed and to the members of the Legislature, Governor Voorhees delivered his inaugural address which took the place of a formal message to the Legislature. The full text will be found in another column.

The exercises came to a close with the benediction by Rev. J. Richards Coyle, of Trenton, after which the enthusiastic Republicans again had a chance to yell and cheer.

Governor Voorhees was immediately escorted to the banquet ting hall of the Trenton House where dinner was served. There was no formal speech making but the man from Union county was congratulated on all sides and had to make a short speech. The reception to the Governor in the executive chambers began at 3 o'clock and will be followed by another this evening.

ELDER SUES A CHURCH.

BENJAMIN HAND SAYS FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST OWES HIM $70.

Case Brought up in Justice Mattison's Court—Church Will Fight the Claim, as They Say They Do Not Owe It.

Suit has been started in Justice Mattison's court by Benjamin Hand against the First Church of Christ. The amount involved is $70, the balance due on a note given by the trustees of the church to Mr. Hand July 18th, 1896.

The plaintiff in the case was formerly an elder in the church, and preached there regularly. The church got into financial difficulties, and Mr. Hand claims to have loaned the trustees about $90, $20 of which has been paid.

Counsellor Angleman represents Mr. Hand and instituted the suit which will be tried this afternoon. Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer represents the church. He says that the organization is willing to pay the debts if Mr. Hand will satisfy them that they owe it, and will give them an itemized account. They say that the note was given by the trustees for no consideration, and is therefore void. They also say that the note is one which the trustees are responsible for. The case will be tried before a jury.

FAST EXPRESS TRAIN CAME TO SUDDEN STOP.

DRIVING ROD ON ENGINE BROKE.

Accident Occurred Near Fanwood Last Night, But No One Was Hurt.

The New York express from Philadelphia, which leaves Plainfield every evening at 6:45 o'clock, narrowly escaped a disastrous wreck last Monday on its run to New York. The train had reached Fanwood and was traveling at a high rate of speed when the connecting rod to the drivers on the engineer's side broke, and the big driver was also wrecked. The accident resulted in much damage to the cab on the engineer's side, but fortunately no one was injured. The engineer quickly had the engine under control and the train was brought to a sudden stop. The passengers in the train were somewhat shocked, but the accident was handled so efficiently that it was some little time before they really knew what happened. The train was run on a side track and the passengers transferred to the train which leaves this city at 7:03.

It was two hours later when the disabled engine was removed and taken to the shops, where it will be repaired. The only cause assigned for the accident is that there must have been a flaw in the connecting rod, and in the breaking of this the damage to the big wheel resulted.

On the train were a number of Plainfielders who were on their way to Elizabeth to attend a meeting of the Order of Elks.

MRS. BRADSHAW'S FUNERAL.

Large Number Attended the Obsequies Yesterday Afternoon.

The funeral services of Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw took place Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, A. L. Force, 23 Duer street. The house was filled with friends and relatives who sought to thus show their respect to the memory of the deceased, who appeared, as she lay in her casket, as in a natural sleep, so life like was her countenance.

Rev. Dr. Schenck, her pastor, conducted the services and selected the beautiful text of the Psalmist, (127 2) "So He Giveth His Beloved Sleep" as the foundation for his remarks touching her life and death. The tender and comforting words he spoke were very soothing to all and helped to heal the aching hearts of relatives and friends.

The floral display was modest, but very beautiful, consisting of a wreath of green studded with English violets, lying on crossed palms, tied together with purple ribbon. A beautiful bunch of pinks, variegated colors, was sent by a neighbor, and a large bouquet of roses and pinks from Brooklyn relatives also lay on the casket.

Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the following friends and neighbors acting as pallbearers: L. E. Rockdew, Daniel VanWinkle, C. D. Carter, C. D. Dane, W. E. Shotwell and J. P. Ledre.

Exposure to a sudden climatic change produces cold in the head and pneumonia is apt to follow. Provided with Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh. Druggists sell it at 50 cents, or Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail the 50c or 10c. trial size. The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses and cures. Cream Balm quickly cures the cold.

Foreclosed Other Mortgage.

Herman Klinaman foreclosed a mortgage for $160 given by Elwin P. Titus, formerly a baker in the borough, and Monday afternoon the goods were sold. Murphy & Blatz had charge of the sale which was conducted by Auctioneer W. N. Pangborn at Spiegel's Hotel.

ANOTHER WRECK VICTIM LEAVES THE HOSPITAL.

MT. CARMEL MAN RETURNS HOME.

Other Patients are Doing Exceedingly Well—Borreso Child is Improving.

George Linuski, of Mt. Carmel, Pa., one of the victims of the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck, was discharged from the hospital, he being able to return to his home. His injuries consisted chiefly in a lacerated chin and a few bruises. He also suffered from shock.

All the other patients at the hospital are doing well. The Borreso baby is quite well today and those in charge feel quite confident that he will recover. Improvement is noticed in all of the other patients.

NO MORE DISCHARGES.

Third Regiment Boys Will Have to Stay in Service Till Mustered Out.

Washington, Jan. 18.—New Jersey Representatives have advised by Secretary Alger that no more discharges of men in the volunteer service will be granted, even though the discharge of the man may be recommended by the commanding officer of the regiment from which the men wish to be released. It is stated that this action is necessary to prevent the reduction of the regiments below the minimum strength fixed by law.

It will apply more particularly to the Third Regiment, now stationed at Athens, Ga., in which several of the New Jersey Congressmen are more or less interested, from the fact that the regiment is made up of companies from their respective districts. In this particular regiment the order will work no hardship on the men, but on the contrary it will be a decided advantage, since by keeping them upon the rolls until the regiment shall have been mustered out, which will be done within two weeks, the men will receive an additional month's pay, whereas their immediate discharge would deprive them of this slight recognition of their patriotism from the Federal Government.

Petitions from all parts of New Jersey are being forwarded to the New Jersey members urging them to support the Elis bill, which provides for the abolishment of the "canteen" in the army service. The petitions come from cities, towns and hamlets, and are numerously signed, indicating that the people of New Jersey are greatly interested in the morals of the army.

THE LAND OF SHAKESPEARE.

Interestingly Described in Lecture of Prof. Albert H. Smyth.

Prof Albert H Smyth, professor of English at the Philadelphia High School, who was so well received in the University lecture course, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Land of Shakespeare" in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Monday for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the Presbyterian churches. Owing to the storm, the audience was somewhat smaller than it otherwise would have been. Those who did brave the elements heard a very interesting discourse. The lecture was illustrated with a large number of views taken at and near Stratford-on-Avon, England, under the personal direction of Prof. Smyth.

An Afternoon Tea.

A pretty afternoon tea was given Saturday by Miss Katherine McClure, of Crescent avenue, which was largely attended by New York and Plainfield people. Miss McClure was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. W. K McClure. Mrs. M. S. Ackerman and Mrs. H. D. Wilcox, of New York, poured and the young ladies assisting were the Misses Freeman, of Metuchen, Miss Arens, Miss Borsum, Miss Darling, Miss McClure and Miss Edson, of this city. The decorations in the dining room were pink.

PURSUIT RACE IN ATHLETIC CONTEST.

Quarter Mile Run Contested in New Method.

IN THE INDOOR CONTEST.

EXCITING FEATURE OF CONTEST IN Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM.

J. H. Green, Jr., Won the Event, But Failed to Lower the Record. New Method Very Successful—Exciting Finishes—Raymond Carroll Broke Record in the Hop, Step and Jump.

Two more events in the indoor athletic contest for novices at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium were contested Saturday evening. Twelve contestants were out and made things interesting. The most exciting part of the evening's sport was the running of the quarter mile run. The contestants started two at a time in a sort of pursuit race, and the lively finishes that resulted aroused the audience into enthusiasm.

The runs were held on the running track gallery, which is not wide enough to allow starters to run together. So the contestants started from opposite sides of the gallery. The track was nine and a half laps to the quarter of a mile. With such short turns and so little straight away runs, it was impossible to make anything like good time.

The first two to start were Walter Dreier and Edgar Sheppard. They ran very evenly, Sheppard getting the lead at the start. Dreier ran rather heavily but pulled up toward the last and crossed his finish line the fraction of a second before Sheppard completed the distance. Dreier's time was 1 minute, 36 2-5 seconds, Sheppard's 1 minute, 36 seconds.

Berry Egan and Albert B. Meredith ran together. Egan gained on the start, but lost some by a collision with the wall on one of the turns. Egan won by a short distance. His time was 1 minute, 38 4-5 seconds, which gave him third place in the event. Meredith did the quarter in 1 minute, 39 4-5 seconds.

William Townsend and William Morgan had a lively finish. Townsend made a strong effort to lap his rival and was close behind him at the finish. Townsend's time was 1 minute, 39 3-5 seconds, Morgan's was 1 minute, 33 seconds. Townsend was fourth in the contest.

The race between J. H. Green, Jr. and Harvey Doane was expected to be quite exciting as both men have reputations as runners. Green set a fast pace from the start. Doane seemed afraid of the corners and his long stride, successful on a dirt track, was not adapted to indoor running on such a small course. Green caught him after seven laps but the two runners tangled up in Green's effort to pass. Green lost his whole Doane almost stopped. Both lost several seconds. Green continued, however, and finished in 1 minute, 35 3-5 seconds, winning the event. But for the trouble on the passing, he would have undoubtedly lowered the Y. M. C. A. record for the distance of ¼ minute, 32 3-5 seconds, now held by George Proctor Smith. Last year, Green ran to within 1-5 of a second to the record. Doane's time was 1 minute, 31 seconds.

Raymond Carroll and William Brokaw ran a lively quarter. Carroll turned his feet at one of the turns which lost him a little time. He finished in 1 minute, 27 1-5 seconds, however, getting second place in the contest. Brokaw's time was 1 minute, 30 seconds. The last match was between Walter Sampson and Henry Pierce. Sampson showed good form for indoor running and lapped his adversary, making the quarter in 1 minute, 30 4-5 seconds. Pierce's time was 1 minute, 36 4-5 seconds.

In the standing hop, step and jump, Raymond Carroll finished first, clearing 25 feet, 9½ inches, breaking the Y. M. C. A. record of 25 feet, 2 inches, made last year by George Proctor Smith. William Townsend was second with 23 feet, 10 inches. Hervey Doane third with 22 feet, 7 inches, and Berry Egan fourth with 23 feet, 6 inches. The other competitors followed is this order, A. B. Meredith, William Morgan, William Brokaw, Henry Pierce, Walter Sampson, J. H. Green, Jr., Edgar Sheppard and Walter Drier. C. E. A. Heywood and Walter L. Long acted as officials of the events.

Irregularity of the 8:38 Train.

Commuters are again complaining about the irregularity of the morning train to New York that reaches this city at 8:38 o'clock. It seems that this train is hardly ever on time, and it causes a great deal of trouble to business men who try to depend on it.

One of the Wreck Victims Leaves Hospital

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAIN-FIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Minnie Ward.

The humorous comedy drama, "Joshua Simpkins," accompanied by two bands and an excellent orchestra will be seen at Music Hall Friday night of this week. It is a rural play in four acts, found together by an interesting plot and produced with special scenery carried by the company. In the third act a realistic saw mill scene is introduced, when a real buzz saw is seen cutting through a real log at a terrific speed, upon which a human being has been helplessly bound by the enemies and left to his evident death. There is an abundance of comedy in the play, while there are many fine singing and dancing specialties incidentally introduced.

"A Runaway Girl," the attraction at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, will doubtless fill all of the fourteen weeks of the current season which Mr. Knowles has allotted Mr. Daly. The melodies in this musical play have become thoroughly popularized, and Miss Virginia Earle, Cyril Scott and James T. Powers have established themselves as favorites with theatre-goers.

Chauncey Olcott has made a hit at the Fourteenth Street Theatre as Dick Bonyane, the hero of "A Romance of Athlone," Mr. Pitou's new play. He has evidently entered on a long engagement. Thus far Mr. Olcott has drawn overflowing audiences and the demand for seats indicates that his new play is well liked by his admirers.

FUNERAL OF JOHN K. DALLEY.

The funeral services of the late John K. Dalley were held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Levi C. Kline, on Somerset street, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated. During the service prayer was offered by Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Another impressive part of the service was the singing by Elmer E. Runyon, who rendered "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," and "Nearer My God to Thee."

This morning at 8 o'clock the remains were taken to Readington, where a funeral service will be held in the Reformed church at that place. The interment will be in the family plot at Readington.

BRICK STRUCK HIS HEAD.

Carpenter Working in Hotel Grenada Building Had His Head Gashed.

Garret Mattis, a carpenter working in the Grenada hotel building on North avenue, was struck by a falling brick Monday, and cut on the top of the head. Mattis was working around the wall, and a loose brick on the top toppled off and fell on him. As he had his head down, and a derby hat set a little back, the force of the blow was broken, and only the scalp was cut.

Mattis went into Armstrong's pharmacy where the wound was dressed. William Claassen, the barber, was sent for to shave off the hair from the top of the head so that the wound could be dressed.

Trust in the Lord and be Prepared.

Sunday morning at the First Baptist church, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes preached a forcible sermon, in which he cited the recent wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen. The doctor deplored the disaster with an evident sadness, and he spoke at some length about safety in this world. He said that a person that places their trust in the Lord is the one that will always be safe. He said that under the circumstances the head-on collision could not have been avoided owing to the gross negligence and blunder of someone, but the Lord did take care of those who were in the wreck.

A SOCIETY GIRL WHO POSES.

How Miss Bradley of Washington Became a Professional Model.

Miss Kate Miekles Bradley, daughter of the late Col. George W. Bradley, U. S. A., has become a professional model, and her adoption of this rather unusual vocation has come about in a most natural way, and makes a pretty story.

A few months ago Miss Bradley and her mother returned to their home after eight years' absence in the West. At the time of her departure Miss Bradley was an almost helpless invalid, but during her sojourn West she seemed to have been touched by a fairy's wand and transformed into a perfection of physical vigor and grace.

Miss Bradley moves in Washington's most exclusive army and social circles, and her unique and beautiful "song pantomimes," in which she illustrated ballads by means of gestures, have been the feature of many entertainments given by the smart set during the season just closed.

Mr. Lucien Powell, the artist, was present on one of these occasions, when he was so impressed with the beauty of her work that he gave her a letter of introduction to Mr. Jerome Uhl, and another to Mr. Richard Brooke. Mr. Brooke, in turn, sent her with a letter to the Art League, where she was immediately accepted, and began her experience as a model by posing for the head and shoulders before the portrait class of the league. She then posed for Mr. Uhl's painting, 'A Morning Call," which was intended for the Paris exhibition, but was reported by the jury on selection as being too large.

The Bradley home is exquisitely artistic in its appointments, and numbers among its attractions a small but complete conservatory, Mrs. Bradley being as devoted to her flowers as her gifted young daughter is to her art.—Washington Times.

SHE GETS PHOTOGRAPHS.

A New Vocation which a Woman Pursues on the Fringe of Society.

The crude for illustration in the weeklies and monthlies and recreation and fashion journals of the day has created a new occupation, that of the photograph getter. The photograph getter accumulates a collection of rare photographs or rents them out at so much a head, to be used for illustrating articles. People who are known to be approachable are not worth so much in the field as those who are suspected of objecting to notoriety. The pictures of conspicuous society women who are frequently heard to declare that they would not give their photographs to anybody for publication are rated at $5, or perhaps as high as $10. Scores of women whose features have appeared once or twice in proximity to type bring only $2.50, but all have a value. Only pictures of professionals are valueless to the photograph getter. They are a drug in the market, no matter how fair of form and feature or how unique or artistic. The fact that the subjects go to the photographer on business and not for diversion spoils the pictures for the photograph getter.

The photograph getter, whether gentle or rough, old or young, fat or homely, must be a diplomatist of no mean pretensions in order to succeed at her task. It is also essential that she should be if not actually in the swim at least so close on the verge that she will know anything current reach her and she obtains more than a superficial idea of what is going on in mid-stream.—New York Sun.

BASE INGRATITUDE.

The Redbirds Assaulted the Saver of Their Young.

I got into a row with a pair of cardinals one morning, says Maurice Thompson, in the Atlantic Monthly, the whole proceeding on their part showing shameless ingratitude. Hearing some hubbubs making a great noise in the wild plum thicket not far from the tent, I took up my bow and went to see what was the matter for such a hubbub. A mob of jays had surrounded a little hawk, which I discovered in the middle of a plum tree, where he sat quite still, evidently afraid. He saw me, however, and made a dash to break the line of his enemies; but he could not go far, they worried him so. I ran to the rescue, and killed it at the recoil of the bow. Then came trouble. Both redbirds assaulted me, pouncing at me with vicious beak-snappings, almost striking me in the face. They seemed not to account it anything that I had killed a hawk, which no doubt have made a meal upon one of them or their tender nestlings. Such is avian gratitude.

Fairy Tales.

A chamber where camphor is manufactured is a veritable fairy palace of pure white crystals. Fac-similes of palms, ferns and masses of tropical vegetation droop in graceful festoons from the roof and cover the walls.

Dandelion Leaves.

Some one who has tried it says that if two or three dandelion leaves be chewed before going to bed they will induce sleep, no matter how nervous or worried one may be.

PRESERVING MILK BY FREEZING.

Can Be Kept an Indefinite Length of Time.

The ocean steamers all serve ice cream at dinner and buy a supply for the round trip in New York. The same is true of clams and oysters. They stow the shellfish away in a tank which is half full of rocks and seaweed. They draw off all the water every morning and refill the tank with a hose from the sea, so that it is perfectly easy to keep them in good condition for several weeks. They keep lobsters in the same way.

Ice cream is more difficult to handle. It takes about eighteen hundred pounds for the round trip for a passenger list of 250. It is put up in cubes of one quart each, which are wrapped in oiled paper. The boxes are then stowed away in the cans or chests which hold enough for a single dinner. These are sealed and piled up in the refrigerator, where the temperature is kept even the whole year around. The steward tells me that ice cream that is left over from one voyage is used on the next. He has known it to keep in good condition for two or three months.

In Denmark some one has discovered a process by which milk can be preserved in a similar manner by freezing it into blocks, and the process is said to be a great success. Fresh milk in cans cannot be kept longer than forty-eight hours without losing something of its flavor, but it is claimed that milk frozen by the new process may not only be preserved an indefinite length of time if kept in an even temperature, but is entirely free from disease germs, as if it had been boiled.

A company has been formed at Copenhagen with a capital of $50,000 to perfect this process and erect a plant capable of turning out 110,000 pounds a day, which can be shipped to any part of the world in vessels that have a refrigerator capacity.—Chicago Record.

HOW THE EMPRESS PAID HER RENT.

While traveling in Spain a number of years ago the writer was entertained at dinner in Jerez by an Englishman who was the owner of a fine hunting estate on the south coast of Spain, where he usually spent the summer months. In the spring of 1882 the American minister, Mr. D—, and said that his mistress, the Empress Elizabeth, understanding that he proposed spending the season in England, greatly desired to rent his place.

Mr. D— said he would not rent his place to any one, but he would feel highly honored if Her Majesty would occupy it for the summer.

When he returned with his family in the autumn his wife received a note from the Empress, saying that she would pass through Jerez on a certain day, and desired to breakfast with her. Her Majesty expressed her indebtedness for a delightful summer, and urged that she be allowed to make some compensation for the place, but the offer was gracefully refused. At length the Empress said:

"Is there nothing I can do to show my appreciation of your kindness and courtesy?"

"Well," replied Mr. D—, "if on Your Majesty's return to Vienna you will send me a small photograph with your autograph, I shall be pleased to possess it."

Several months passed without the appearance of the promised portrait, and both Mr. and Mrs. D— rather unwillingly arrived at the conclusion that the illustrious lady had entirely forgotten them and her promise, when a few weeks later an enormous box arrived, containing a finely framed full-length oil painting of the Empress executed by the Austrian Court painter, among the first artists of Europe.—New York Observer.

A Binding Chinese Oath.

We are accustomed to all manner of swearing—that is, of coarse, legal oath-taking—in this country; but we do not recollect hearing of so queer a method of attestation as a "guillotined black cockatoo." That is what the police of a country district in New South Wales had to provide the other day for a finishing Chinaman, who obstinately declined to swear on any thing else. Needless to say, fowls were brought, but in vain; even a black swan, a luxury surely for a Chinese witness, was declined. After many days a dead cockatoo of the required hue was discovered in a hut of one of the aborigines, and as they call the Celestials—who mulcted the officials 10s for a fast decomposing bird. Then the solemn and peculiar oath was duly administered, when the difficult witness declared that he knew nothing about the case, and sat down smiling.—London Chronicle.

BOYS OF THE THIRD WANT TO RETURN AS THEY LEFT

WANT TO BE MUSTERED OUT NORTH.

The Volunteers Prefer Leaving the Army in Elizabeth Rather Than Georgia.

New Brunswick, Jan. 16—Complaints is made by friends of the Third New Jersey Volunteers, now at Athens, Ga., against the plan of the Government to muster out the regiment at Athens, instead of allowing the command to return in a body to Elizabeth, where it was first mobilized. The volunteers do not want to be disbanded eight hundred miles from home, and be compelled to return as individuals, without equipment or arms. A petition may be prepared and sent to the War Department asking that the desire of the soldiers in this matter be gratified.

A committee composed of representatives of twenty civic organizations in New Brunswick is arranging for a reception for the members of Company D, 3d N. J. Vols., and for New Brunswick soldiers in other companies in the regiment, on their return to this city from Athens. The day will be observed as a holiday and factories, stores and schools will be closed. When the company leaves Elizabeth Chief Engineer Banker, of the fire department, will sound twelve taps on the fire alarm and the organizations will gather at the Pennsylvania Railroad station to receive the boys. There will be a parade, a banquet at Zimmerman's Hall, and in the evening a reception at Columbia Hall.

WIVES SECURED LICENSES

Two Clark Township Hotel Keepers Were Barred Under the Law.

Elizabeth, January 16—The thirsty inhabitants of Clark township who, since last October, have not been able to imbibe anything stronger than tea and coffee, can now rejoice, for Saturday Judge Vail, of the Union County Court of Common Pleas, removed the embargo he had placed on the sale of spirituous liquors in the township. The Judge did not go half-way in the matter either, but where only one license was expected, he granted two.

Under the license law, where an application is refused the applicant must wait a year before he can seek a license. In October George Andelfinger, formerly a chief of the Rahway fire department, and Albert H. Moffett were both denied permission by the court to conduct hotels in Clark township, Andelfinger's application was refused because he did not have a stable erected adjoining his new hotel, and Moffett's because he had a signer on his application who was not a freeholder in the township. There was only one way in which they could get out of the dilemma, and that was by their wives applying for a license. So the new applications were made in the names of Mrs. Anna M. Adelfinger and Mrs. A. H. Moffett.

Judge Vail said that he had intended to refuse both applications, but had changed his mind and he would not show any partiality.

MAD DOG KILLED SHEEP AND PIGS.

Washingtville Farmer Loses Live Stock Valued at $40.

Jerard Underhill, of Washingtonville, recently suffered a loss of sheep and pigs which will amount to about $40. A mad dog effected an entrance into his fields and viciously attacked Mr. Underhill's sheep. In some instances the ears were completely torn off, and they were otherwise horribly mangled. Several of the sheep lived only a short time, while others were killed outright.

The pigs fared worse for most of those attacked were killed on the spot. Not till after the damage was committed did Mr. Underhill learn of it. He then reported the matter to the township committee and the officials immediately made an investigation. It has thus far been impossible to learn what dog did the act, or to whom it belongs. On Saturday the committee went to Mr. Underhill's place and appraised the stock. They found that several hogs were also damaged to such an extent that they will have to be killed. In all Mr. Underhall's loss will fully reach $40.

STATE BOTTLERS ORGANIZE.

New Company Formed With a Capital Stock of $100,000.

New Brunswick, Jan. 16.—The New Jersey Bottling Association has been organized with a view to securing trade throughout the State to the exclusion of small local bottlers. Articles of incorporation were filed in Somerset county on January 2. David C. Bowne, of this city, is president of the association; J. Klotz, of Somerville, is vice-president, and Samuel Klotz, of Newark, secretary and treasurer. The headquarters of the company will be at New Brunswick, where the main establishment will be located.

The capital stock of the company has been fixed at $100,000. It is understood that the company intends to locate branch depots in every town and city in the State, and will in many cases issue stock to local concerns for the purpose of buying out their establishments.

INCH AS BIG AS A MILE.

BOUND BROOK OFFICIALS AFTER THE BRUNSWICK TRACTION COMPANY.

It is Claimed That the Railroad Company is Not Living Up to Its Contract in Laying Tracks on Main Street.

Bound Brook, Jan. 16—The Borough Council and the New York and and Philadelphia Traction Company are at odds over the laying of the trolley tracks on East Main street.

The Company was to lay the track twelve and one-half feet south of the centre line of the street according to ordinance, but in order to avoid filling in on the south side the borough officials claim the track in some places 20,000 Votes—Organization Non-Partisan.

One of the measures which it is proposed to pass at the present session of the New Jersey Legislature is one abolishing the office of justice of the peace, and substituting for it a system of recorders or district judges. A proposed requirement for the office to be created is that the man holding the position shall be learned in the law. It is proposed to give to these men powers greater than those now held by the justices of the peace, and to permit a wider range of judgment in dealing with cases. The bill will carry with it what will amount almost to the abolition of the office of constable.

Justice of the Peace is an old and time honored office in the State. Usually the "Squire" is a pretty big man in his community, and while he has knowledge of the law beyond what he takes from some hand book or gleans from his interpretation of the statutes, he wields great power. Some of the holders of the office at the present time have been Justices of the Peace for scores of years. Next in importance is the office of constable, the man who carries into execution the findings of the "Squire." How both the Justice and his man are to be abolished.

The justices and constables are not, however, going to go out of official existence without a struggle, and from end to end of the State they are organizing to fight the passage of the bill. They calculate that properly organized they can control votes enough to keep them in themselves a power in politics. They say they can control, at a low estimate, 20,000 votes among their friends and swing the State either way by controlling doubtful counties. The organization which is being perfected is to be non partisan and is to use its political influence only for and against man who will pledge themselves against any attempt to abolish the two offices.

The organizations have been effected in several counties and calls for meetings in others are out. In Somerset county every justice has enrolled himself in the association, which has effected a temporary organization, and which proposes to elect permanent officers February 6th in Freehold. Other counties are in a similar state of organization, but within a month it is expected at least fifteen of the twenty-one counties will be fully organized. Politically, the justices are nearly evenly divided, as they are elected by local districts and are not greatly affected by political contests.

THE ITALIAN MARVELED AT IT.

Arrested Last Night For Stealing Coal From His Employer—Was Fined $5 for It.

Tony Parello will buy coal by the ton hereafter. It's cheaper. He has been dependent on the cars of the Jersey Central Railroad to furnish the supply. Last night he picked up a pailfull. Monday morning he paid $5 into the city treasury. "One ton," quoth the son of sunny Italy as he counted out the greenbacks.

How Tony is in the employ of the Jersey Central railroad. His command of English is limited. Patrolman McCarty found him roaming about on the railroad tracks with his pail filled with coal that he had appropriated. McCarty arrested him.

This morning Tony was arraigned before City Judge Runyon with Patsy Christmas as an interpreter. Of course, he took the coal, Tony said. Then the Judge remarked $5 or ten days, and Tony marveled that he should have to pay for a ton when he only took a pailfull.

IN BOROUGH COURT.

Several Disturbers of the Peace Across the Bench.

There was quite a little court business Monday a. m. in the borough. James Cashen and Henry Burnett, partners in an outing last Saturday evening, were arrested by Marshals Wise and Schenck. The prisoners were guilty of causing a disturbance on Somerset street, and when told to keep quiet they continued to make more noise. Monday a. m. Recorder Long fined Cashen $5 and Burnett $10. The latter fine was paid and the other one will be.

Mike Bilcher and Antonio Doe, two Italians residing in the borough, engaged in a fistic encounter Saturday night while somewhat under the influence of liquor. The fight attracted the attention of Special Marshal Wyckoff, and he succeeded in arresting Doe. The other fellow got away, but was arrested Monday morning by Marshal Schenck. When arraigned they entered a plea of guilty and were both fined $10. As they are both employed in Washingtonville cutting ice no doubt their fines will be paid. Their services are needed very much at present.

LIKE MAYOR WILSON.

DEMOCRATS WILL PROBABLY RENOMINATE HIM AGAIN.

Leaders in Both Parties Are Showing Political Activity as the Time for Borough Election Approaches.

At the spring election to be held in North Plainfield in March at which time the Mayor and three Councilmen are to be retired and others elected to take their places.

The party managers are already conferring with the object in view of naming candidates for the places that will be vacated. Several active Republicans have been named as possible candidates for the Mayoralty by their friends, although there is no certainty yet as to who will receive the nomination. A. V. D. Honeyman, H. E. Needham, Charles Place and others have been prominently mentioned in this connection. Thus far the Democrats have not any one in mind except the present incumbent, Mayor John F. Wilson.

It will be remembered that Col. Wilson was spoken of as a probable Democratic candidate for Governor last fall. He stands high in his party's esteem and has made a good record during his administration.

The retiring Councilman are Messrs. McLoughlin, Woolston and Ball. Another matter of interest will be the disposition of the question of consolidation which will come up at the spring election. It will be presented to the people for consideration, but what form it will take has not yet been determined.

MORE CARRIERS PROMISED.

Postoffice Department Says that Plainfield Will Get Additions.

T. W. Morrison wrote to Congressman Howell sometime ago with reference to Plainfield securing more letter carriers, and Thursday Mr. Morrison received a letter from the Congressman, of which the following is an extract:

"With reference to the lack of carriers in North Plainfield I would say that I have been to the Postoffice department regarding this matter and was informed that more carriers would be allotted to Plainfield with the beginning of the new fiscal year in July next. The disposition of the carriers will rest with the postmaster, and if he is seen I have no doubt but that he will make a fair apportionment so that North Plainfield will have its share. Should this not be done I can take up the matter with the Postoffice Department again if advised."

KEEP OFF THE WAGON.

Mayor Wilson Says Boys Must Stay Off Fire Department Apparatus.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, has given a warning to all boys and young men not to jump on any fire apparatus in the borough or to interfere in any way with the firemen in the performance of their duty. If they persist in following up up this practice they will be arrested by the marshals.

The other day while the hose wagon was on its way to a fire a boy who was on the wagon was thrown fully twenty feet at the corner of Linden avenue and Somerset street and nearly killed. The Mayor is determined to break up this practice at once. There have been times when the firemen could not get on the apparatus owing to the great number of boys that have jumped on while on the way to a fire.

Entertained at Euchre.

Miss Etta Krymer, of East Fifth street, entertained the Thursday Evening Euchre Club at her home last Thursday, and a full membership of the club was present. During the evening there was instrumental and vocal music that helped to pass the time away. In the euchre play the first prize was one by Dr. Leonard, of Bound Brook while E. O. Clark secured second prize. For the ladies Miss Charlotte Messersmith won first prize and Miss Bertha Wheeler the second. The club will be entertained next time by B. M. Clark, of Jackson avenue.

WHERE OUR IMMIGRANTS GO.

Three Eastern States Absorbed About Two-thirds in the Last Fiscal Year.

Present immigration to the United States amounts to nearly a thousand a day. In the last fiscal year the total number of immigrants was 343,009 and the rate at which immigration is increasing makes it likely a total for this fiscal year of about 365,000 or 1,000 a day, though, of course, immigration is larger in summer than in winter, and varies according to the conditions of the times and the climate.

The general impression is that the great bulk of immigrants to the United States find homes "in the great West," notably those from England, Italy, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries. The contrary, however, is shown by the figures to be the case. The states into which immigrants go by preference are those on the Atlantic seaboard. Of 343,000 immigrants who landed in this country during the last fiscal year covered by the Treasury report, 127,000 meant to remain in New York state. Some 61,000 others had Pennsylvania for their destination, and 36,000 Massachusetts; so that these three states absorbed about two-thirds of the whole immigration to the United States. Minnesota, long a favorite among the Scandinavian and German farmers arriving in the United States, got less than half as many as went to Connecticut. For North Dakota, the number of immigrants was only 1,060; for South Dakota, 613; for Nebraska, 1,043; for Kansas, 690; for Montana, 920; for Wyoming, 226; for Utah, 206, and for Idaho, 138. On the other hand, nearly 3,500 immigrants found homes in Maryland, a state which has not been in previous years regarded as offering many inducements to immigrants. Indiana got 1,944 immigrants, and Missouri 2,485. Kentucky attracted only 330, and North Carolina only 87 immigrants. West Virginia absorbed 57, but the number that found homes in Florida was surprisingly large, 7,259. The explanation of this increase is to be found in the fact that consequent upon the hostilities in Cuba, there was an immigration of more than 6,000 Cubans from that country to the United States last year, and a large number of them found homes in Florida.

Among the states of the West into which there was a considerable movement of foreigners last year was Illinois, which got 20,000. Nearly 5,000 immigrants, many of them Italians, settled in California, and the population of Colorado increased 1,500 by immigration. In only one state of the union did the number of female immigrants arriving exceed the number of male immigrants. That was New Hampshire. Only 600 immigrants went to Arkansas and 38 to Oklahoma.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHTS.

The Smile of Greeting.

Why do we not always smile whenever we meet the eye of a fellow-being? That is the greeting recognition which ought to pass from soul to soul constantly. Little children in simple communities do this involuntarily, unconsciously. The honest-hearted German peasant does it. It is like magic and sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand and the left between strangers as they pass by each other, never without a smile.—Helen Hunt.

My Character To-Day.

"My character to-day is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thoughts I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystallized into the present moment. So that character is the quintescence of biography; so that anybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and thinking. Character is, for the most part, simply habit become fixed. —Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst.

"There We Must Jesus.

In various places and on many occasions does Jesus pledge us to meet Him in this life at the cross, in the sacrament, in the crises of joy and sorrow—and now once again He appoints us a meeting place. It is in the Valley of the Shadow, where, in its quietness and seclusion as in a lover's glade, He will expect us one day. Is there any spot on earth so common or so wild that it has not been transformed by love? Are there any places in our thoughts so hateful as those we've kept tryst with those that were dearer than life? So Jesus put a fair face on death, so that it becometh but His dark dream as He returneth to receive us home.—Ian Maclaren (Dr. John Watson.)

Private Morals in the Public Service.

The way to purify the public service is to improve the private morals of men. The time and place to begin is in childhood. In the home and the school be kept pure; and from these pure fountains will come forth pure streams. They may become defiled and unwholesome in spite of their origin, but they are not likely to do so. Water will keep pure unless polluted by that with which it comes in contact. As a rule, a child is trained up in the way he should go, he will not depart from it when he comes to maturity. But at the same time that child is safer not to come in contact with evil companionships. The greatest care should be taken to protect him from contaminating influences. Even those who have been vaccinated had better not expose themselves to smallpox. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—The Christian Instructor.

AIMS AND ASPIRATIONS.

THAT IS WHAT SHOULD BE CONSIDERED BY MEN IN LIFE.

Inspiring Points Made by Rev. W. R. Richards in His Talk About the Phantom and Sinner Who Went Up to Temple.

The union evangelistic meetings were continued again last night in the First Presbyterian church. The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Richards, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., took charge of the after meeting. A chorus choir, led by L. H Biglow, Jr., assisted in the singing, and there was more interest manifested Thursday in the meeting than before.

The Scripture lesson was the story from John's Gospel about the two men who went up into the temple to pray—the Pharisee and the sinner. This was read by Rev. C. E. Herring. Rev. Dr. Richards chose that story for his theme.

To illustrate the wide difference in the careers of men, he spoke of the different paths that two children, born amid the same surroundings, brought up with the same advantages and given the same opportunities, will tread. One will achieve honor and fortune; the other may end on the gallows. But the real interest to men, the speaker said, are not their conditions in life, but their aim and aspirations.

The two men in the parable seemed to go up into the temple of God for the same purpose, but one went there to insult the Almighty; the other to offer up his humble prayer.

But those self-righteous men did not die with the Pharisee of old. They are in the church of God today. The publican also is in the church today. He comes up to ask God for forgiveness, and goes home with the consciousness of a blessing from Him.

There are only two men spoken of in the parable, said the speaker. They represent the two classes, those who are saved and those who are lost. In closing Dr. Richards urged all present, who were yet undecided which of the two classes he or she belonged to, to make up their minds then and there, for, he said, there was no middle ground to stand upon.

SLEPT ON INTO ETERNAL LIFE.

Quiet and Peaceful Death of Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw.

Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw, mother of Mrs. A. L. Force, died Thursday evening at her home, 92 Duer street, after a short illness with paralysis. She was around her home as usual until Monday evening, when she was prostrated to the bed from which she never arose. She was perfectly conscious and a great sufferer until about 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Then she fell into a stupor from which she never aroused. All that medical skill and good nursing could do was done for her, but the fatal stroke came yesterday afternoon and she quietly slept away into the joys of Heaven about 9 o'clock.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Force, two sons, George and Robert, survive her. The latter resides in Newark. Mrs. Bradshaw was a member of Trinity Reformed church, which she regularly attended until too infirm to do so. She was a very active worker in the church as long as she was able to be, and worked very hard to assist in cancelling the mortgage debt which was paid off several years ago.

Her funeral service took place from her late residence Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Schenck officiating.

Mrs. Bradshaw was born in England, but came to this country when a mere child. She has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Force, for twenty-one years.

VISITORS WERE WINNERS.

Elizabethport T. A. B. Wins From Plainfield Catholic Club.

Last Thursday the famous T. A. B bowling team from Elizabethport came to Plainfield and went up against the team from the Plainfield Catholic Club. Before they left town they carried off the honors and went home with them. The home team was confident of over their defeat, for in the previous evening in practice large scores were made and every man felt sure of victory in the match game They were doomed to defeat and there was not a man on the team that could turn the tide. The team is not wholly discouraged, however, for they hope to retrieve lost honors at no distant day. Below will be found the scores of the game:

TELL-TALE PICTURE IMPORTANT WITNESS

WORTH ONLY $2 A WEEK.

GREAT AMUSEMENT AT TRIAL OF HASTINGS AGAINST OSBORN.

Has the Farmhand Wanted $1.50 Per Day—Picture Showing Him Seated in a Big Arm Chair Husking Corn Caused Him Case to Collapse—Jury Awarded Him $11—He Wanted $100.

There is sometimes a great deal of amusement to be had listening to the trial of cases in a justice's court, but probably the Hastings-Osborn case, tried before Justice Smalley and a jury Friday, furnished more fun and a greater opportunity for the lawyers engaged to bring out the humorous features than any case tried in this city for some time.

J. W. Hastings, of Newark, as was told in yesterday's Press, sued Mrs. Phebe E. Osborn, of Washingtonville, for $193, which he claimed as balance due him for work done on her farm last summer. Hastings, according to his account, thought he was entitled to $822 for four months work. He credited Mrs. Osborn with enough to leave a balance of $193, which amount he still said was due him.

Counselor S. S. Swackhamer was Mrs. Osborn's lawyer, and handled the case with consummate skill, so that after the jury had been out an hour they returned with a verdict of $11 in favor of the plaintiff.

The case was more like a farce in a play than anything, and Mr. Swackhamer, by his witty remarks, kept not only the spectators but the court and jurymen in a condition of mirth from start to finish. At times, in his summing up, they would burst out into roars of laughter. Hastings was made to appear as ridiculous as possible. Mrs. Osborn proved that he agreed to come out to her farm and work for her for $2 a week and board. He claimed to be a practical farmer, but an example of his practical ability was shown when he allowed three tons of hay to rot, and let the weeds in the potato patch grow so high that they had to be cut down with a grass scythe. Two barrels of potatoes were planted in this patch, but owing to neglect only four barrels were dug.

What capped the climax was a photograph of this "practical farmer" comfortably seated in a large arm chair out in the field husking corn, as Mr. Swackhamer said, "with the soft breezes of autumn blowing round his head, the birds singing and the golden rod waving in the wind." In that position this "practical farmer" succeeded in husking one bushel of corn a day, and for this work he demanded $1.50 a day pay. A magnifying glass was secured, and the jurymen given a chance to examine the photograph through that.

Mrs. Osborn admitted that she owed Hastings $9 and tendered him that amount in court before the day of trial. His books showed that she still owed him $13, according to the $2 a week plan, so the jury simply compromised and gave him $11. Robert M. Clark represented the plaintiff.

STREET WORK FOR YEAR

PLANS BEING MADE BY CITY OFFICIALS IN CHARGE.

Notices to Lay New Sidewalks Will Be Served on Many Property Owners—Park Avenue Storm Sewer Discussed.

A meeting of the street committee was held Thursday and the work to be done on the streets during the coming year was thoroughly discussed. It is so early yet that nothing can be attempted for a couple of months and more explicit plans will be made before work is begun.

The property owner principally on East Second and Third streets, West Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets. A few pieces of curbing that have been neglected will be ordered laid.

The needs of the various streets were discussed and it was decided to begin early and take steps towards getting the Park avenue storm sewer ready. The contract work on the macadamizing of Franklin place from Fifth street to LaGrande avenue, will also be pushed. This work is to be done by assessments, an ordinance to that effect having been passed late last fall

Red Man Confer Degrees.

Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men held a regular meeting last Friday. The warrior's and chief's degrees were conferred on one candidate. An application was received from Indianola Tribe, of Bound Brook, to have the Miantonomo team work the adoption degree on a number of candidates next Friday night. The application was granted.

LIVING BOOK TITLES.

LIBRARY TEA GIVEN AT THE HOME OF MRS. FRANK ROWLEY.

Quaint Devices for Representing Titles of Books—Some of the Best Prizes for Those Guessing the Most Titles Correctly.

A novel affair arranged by Mrs. Frank S. Rowley, assisted by Mrs. J. O. Stevens, was given last Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rowley, Sycamore avenue, for the benefit of the building fund of the Church of the Redeemer. It was called a library party.

Those who attended represented in some manner the title of some well-known book. Mrs. W. M. Downey represented "Never Too Late to Mend," with a torn kid glove, while "An Old Woman's Outlook" was represented by Rev. W. M. Downey, who carried a pair of spectacles on the back of his coat. "Pickwick Papers" was represented by Frank S. Brown, who carried a quilt toothpick tied with a lamp wick. "The Quick and the Dead" was interpreted by James Rogers. He had pinned to his coat a piece of a New York paper and another piece of a Philadelphia paper.

There were in all between forty and fifty guests present. During the evening there were vocal solos by George O. Stevens and Walter Arnold Hudson, while J. O. Stevens entertained the guests with a reading, all of which was greatly enjoyed.

Prizes were awarded to those guessing the greatest number of book titles. The first prize, a chocolate cake, was presented to Miss Clapp, she having guessed twenty-seven titles, while Rev. W. M. Montgomery, who guessed twenty-six titles received second prize, a box of Huyler's candy. The booby prizes, candy canes, were presented to Frank S. Brown and Miss Davis.

During the affair there was a successful sale of candies and the sum of $30 will be realized as profits from the entertainment.

BANQUET FOLLOWED INSTALLATION.

Foresters Start Their New Year in a Jolly Manner.

A memorable event in the history of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, was that of last Friday when the annual installation of officers took place. There was a large attendance of members and a number of high court officers. High Physician Dr. Ellis, of Dunellen, installed the officers, assisted by Court Deputy Joseph Berd and Bulkner. George Bold acted as marshal and conductor. The work of installation was performed in a commendable manner, after which in the good and welfare of the order the members enjoyed several songs and instrumental music.

The officers installed are as follows: Court deputy, John Allen; past chief ranger, G. Weber, Jr.; chief ranger, John J. Dunn; vice-ranger, James G. Hansen; treasurer, W. A. Reinmann; chaplain, LeRoy DeCamp; senior woodward, Harold Hansen; junior woodward, M. Westergaard; senior beadle, P. Nugent; junior beadle, H. Jorgensen.

After the business of the evening was concluded adjournment was made to McVey's Hotel, where a bountiful repast was served. Everybody did ample justice to the good things set before them and pronounced "Mac" a genial host.

Court Plainfield organized a few years ago with fourteen members and to day there are one hundred and twenty five on the roll.

ATTACKED BY A DOG.

Mrs. J. O. Stevens Frightened so That She Fainted Away.

Friday afternoon Mrs. J. O. Stevens, wife of Secretary Stevens, of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company, was attacked by a large and somewhat vicious dog while she was passing through Washington Park on her way to the home of Mrs. Frank S. Bewley, to attend the Church of the Redeemer affair. The dog tore Mrs. Stevens' dress and she was so frightened that she fainted away on the sidewalk. Residents at Harold Serrell's home, corner of Myrtle and Sycamore avenues, assisted Mrs. Stevens into the house and in a little while she came to and was able to attend the affair at Mr. Bewley's home.

Only recently this same dog attacked W. Wilder Rowley, of Sycamore avenue, and it was with difficulty that he escaped serious injuries. The owner of the dog should take every precaution to see that his dog does no damage.

Officers Installed.

Star of Plainfield Lodge, No. 95, Shepherds of Bethlehem, held their regular meeting in Grand Army Hall last Thursday evening, and officers for the ensuing six months were installed. Sir David Bowden was the installing officer, assisted by Sir. Saraman. There were ten applications for membership received at the meeting. They will be acted upon at the next meeting.

To Heighten the Pulpit.

Mrs. W. S. Lowry, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is soliciting money from the members with which to purchase artificial flowers for the pulpit.

HIS BETTER SEVEN-EIGHTS.

A Kentucky Editor's Leading Article on His Wife's Morals.

Many of my friends have asked me, and a few strangers had the curiosity to write and inquire, "Why is it that you always speak of your wife as your better 7/8?" In this brief article I will endeavor to explain, and I use the personal pronoun that the readers of the Herald will the better understand me. In Christian fortitude she is as a fortress capable of withstanding any fusillade; I but a rifle pit with many unguarded gaps in comparison. Her faith is that of a healthy tree in full foliage and fruit; mine like a tree blasted, with an occasional sprout that lends hope of fruition, but so frail that the first cold wave of despondency darkens and withers it. As a neighbor she embodies those qualities expressed in the words of the Master: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you;" I am content to do by him as well as he has done by me, and too frequently fall short of the standard. As a mother she is a Sister of Charity reared in the Garden of Gethesemane or in a nunnery of Nazareth, shedding sweet sunshine through the sick room; I both impatient and irascible. Endowed with almost divine patience she is a living type of the busy bee; I, not so enriched, am too frequently a drone of disappointment. The day is never so dark but the bright light beyond beckons her on as a beacon of hope; despondency never clouds her vision and obscures from view anything favorable the future might show. Thus in all the nobler attributes of life she towers above me as the forest pine above the stunted fig bush. During a continuous companionship of over twenty-two years I have been sensible to these superior qualities, and I have been always honest enough to say so. She combines characteristics quintuple in quality, and in her affections assumes the place of mother, sister, friend. All in all, she is the apple of my eye, my best beloved in whom I am well pleased. Such is my wife as I see her and have known her all these years. She condones my faults, finds excuses for my errors, sympathizes with me in sorrow, and strengthens me in adversity. Hence I say "our better seven-eights; such she will ever be to me.—Hazel Green Herald.

THE WOOD ALCOHOL INDUSTRY.

It Makes Beautiful Dye Tints and is an Antiseptic.

It is not generally known that over 60 per cent of wood may be converted into liquid. A cord of wood weighing 4,000 pounds produces about 2,600 pounds of pyroligneous acid and 700 pounds of charcoal. The pyroligneous acid from one cord of wood produces nine gallons of 82 per cent crude wood alcohol, 200 pounds of acetate of lime and about 25 gallons of tar, besides about 32 bushels of charcoal.

After the pyroligneous acid is neutralised with lime, the wood alcohol is distilled off, the lime holding the acetic acid in solution. After the separation of the wood spirit, the remaining liquid is boiled down in open pans to a sirup, which is dried, and becomes the acetate of lime of commerce. Acetate of lime is used for making acetic acid. Fully three-fifths of all the wood alcohol and acetate of lime produced in this country are made in the United States. Fully 15,000 acres per year are cleared for this purpose. Wood alcohol affords a perfect substitute for grain alcohol for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, and at less than one-third the cost. It is used principally as a solvent in the making of shellac varnish; in making celluloid, photographic paper, etc. It makes many beautiful dye tints. It is antiseptic, and much used for liniments and for skin rubbing in bath houses.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shoes and Handkerchiefs.

A lady is said to be shown by these two accessories of her toilet, and few people realize how much the styles in both vary.

The heavily embroidered handkerchief is quite unknown at present, however handsome it may be, and only the faintest touch of work is permissible, unless it be in a monogram, which is preferably large. The best handkerchief of to-day seen is of the sheerest linen cambric, a plain simple square, or bordered with real Valenciennes lace in a very narrow edge.

The spring shoe is round of toe, the point having left us, except for evening slippers. These are almost invariably made of silk to match the gown worn, or are of plain black or white silk or satin. No leather shoe, except a patent leather—and that seldom—is ever worn while dressed. The house is the place for silk shoes.

Tan shoes are as popular as ever, and they are made strongly and substantially for walking, with thick soles and round toes. The smart woman will not try to make a pretty, dressy shoe of her tan shoe. It is inconsonous. When she needs a pretty shoe, the patent leather is at her hand—or foot.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

HOLDER-MILLIGAN NUPTIALS CELEBRATED THURSDAY.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Performed the Ceremony—The Couple Were Unaccompanied—Wedding Trip to Washington.

Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride, No. 419 West Fourth street, took place the marriage of Miss Ella Pearson Milligan, daughter of Mrs. Esther L. Milligan, and Hubert Nevius Holder, son of John Holder, of Westervelt avenue. The wedding was a quiet one and was attended by only the immediate families of the contracting parties.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, who, thirty years ago, performed the wedding ceremony when the bride's mother was married.

In the parlor where the marriage took place the decorations consisted chiefly of beautiful palms banked up in one corner of the room. There were also similar decorations in the dining room, where a wedding dinner was served after the marriage.

The bride wore a dark blue traveling gown trimmed with dark blue velvet, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. A feature of the bride's wedding gown was the point lace collar worn. This collar was worn by the bride's mother when she was married thirty years ago.

The bride and groom were unattended, and following congratulations and the wedding dinner, they left the city for Washington, where they will spend the honeymoon. On their return they will reside at 419 West Fourth street.

The bride was employed for a number of years at Edward White's dry goods store, and her companions remembered her nicely in presenting her with a handsome buffet. There was also a large combination desk and book case, the gift of the groom's parents. Included in the presents was glassware, silverware, furniture, and many useful articles that give strong evidence of the popularity of the bride and groom in a large circle of friends and acquaintenances. The groom is engaged in the contracting business, and was formerly associated with Sheriff Kirk. He and his wife have the best wishes of their many friends for a prosperous and happy journey through life.

SECOND ARREST SCARES BONDSMAN

John Teeple Accused of Theft, Must Go to Jail to Await Grand Jury Action.

John Teeple was arrested last Saturday by Constable Mattox, on a warrant from Justice Nash's court, and held under $200 bail on a charge of stealing feed, flour and grain from P. M. French the Somerset street miller. The alleged thefts extend over a period from July 19th, 1898, to September 15th, 1898.

Teeple worked for P. M. French at that time, and it is said that he took the flour, grain, etc., and sold it, pocketing the money. The total amount alleged to have been taken is worth $25.

Teeple is awaiting trial now on similar charges, preferred several weeks ago, and was out on a bond furnished by F. Margentino, of Park avenue. When Margentio heard this morning of Teeple's second arrest, he asked to be relieved from the former bond, which was granted. Teeple was taken to Elizabeth Saturday afternoon.

STOPPED IN TOO MANY GIN MILLS.

And Now He is in the Somerset County Jail for Two Days.

John Sullivan, of Berkley Heights, no relation to the original "John L.," came to Plainfield Friday to help his employer out of trouble and succeeded in getting looked up in the borough before he reached home. He works for Mr. Mushrome, a hotel-keeper at Berkley Heights. Sullivan was sent to Justice Mosher with a doctor's certificate showing that he was not well enough to appear in court to answer to a suit brought against him by another man. The note was delivered, but Sullivan, in going home, stopped once too often. He finally became so intoxicated that Chief Wilson was obliged to lock him up last evening. His horse and wagon was placed in the stables at Drier's Hotel, and this morning Sullivan was sent to Somerville for ten days. The owner of the rig has been notified to come after his property.

THE CITY CLERKSHIP BONE OF CONTENTION.

Attempt Made in Council to Make a New Appointment.

CAUSED A BIG SURPRISE.

MR. LIEFKE THINKS THAT MR. MAC MURRAY'S TERM HAS EXPIRED.

After a Lively Discussion the Matter Was Laid on the Table—Mr. Barrows Introduced an Ordinance to Provide for Surface Drainage in Residence Section of City—Macadamizing of New Streets.

When does the term of City Clerk MacMurray begin and when does it end? This is a question that seems to puzzle the members of the City Council. It was thought that this question was settled at the first meeting of the new Council, but when Mr. Liefke offered a motion at the adjourned meeting last Monday that the Council go into nomination for a city clerk everyone looked in amazementat him. At first President Andrews declared the motion out of order on the ground that the opinion asked for and given by Corporation Counsel Marsh seemed to cover the point in question. Mr. Marsh's opinion was to the effect that the law which made the term expire last year was in his opinion unconstitutional, and the Council accepted the opinion without any voice on the matter.

Mr. Leifke's stand seemed to be well taken and in the main was agreed to by several of the members. He stated that he did not think that Mr. Marsh had any right to declare a law unconstitutional. It was for the Supreme Court to decide that matter.

Mr. Hetfield agreed with Mr. Leifke and also stated that Mr. Marsh could not legally declare a law unconstitutional and he did not think it was right for the Council to accept the opinion as final.

Mr. VanHerwerden said that inasmuch as the clerk's time expires this year, according to Mr. Marsh's opinion, he thought it would only complicate matters more if a clerk should be elected at this time.

President Andrews finally agreed to accept Mr. Leifke's motion, but Mr Barrows offered a substitute which resulted in the matter being laid on the table until the next meeting.

The Council received a communication from the members of Alert Hose Company, in which they asked the city to purchase their hose wagon. Residents of Grant avenue and Fourth street asked to have a fire-alarm box located at the corner of the above streets.

A petition was received from W. C. O'Donnell, W. C. Dobbins and H. C. McVoy, a committee from John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., asking the Council to appoint a committee of three from the Council to co-operate with the above-named committee for the purpose of securing for Plainfield the erection of a suitable soldier's monument. The Council voted unanimously to have such a committee appointed.

Mr. Coriell moved for the acceptance of the new engine house in the West End. Mr. Coriell stated that the fire and building committee together with the board of engineers and the building inspector, had thoroughly examined the new house and found it to be all right. The Council accepted the house unanimously.

Mr. Barrows introduced an ordinance to provide for the surface drainage of Park avenue, Front street and Somerset, and the ordinance was read for the information of the Council that the cost of the work could be merged into the sewer construction account and thus it would not appear as though the Council was issuing bonds for such a small amount as will be required to do the work.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the scheme and stated that he still felt as though it would be establishing a bad precedent. He asked to be excused from voting, but President Andrews called for his vote, and Mr. Hetfield voted in the negative as did also Mr. Leifke.

A very important step taken by the Council was that in regard to starting the work of macadamizing West Fourth street, between New street and Monroe avenue, and West Third street, between Madison and Monroe avenues, except in such places where the above named streets are already macadamized.

Mr. Barrows stated, by way of explanation, that the work would cost the city between $1,800 and $2,000. The work according to the ordinances, which were introduced by Mr. Barrows, has to be completed by May 30th.

Another important step taken by the Council was through the ordinance offered by Mr. VanHerwerden which provides for a change in time for the payment of taxes. According to the ordinance the time will be changed from December 20th to November 30th, and the Commissioners of Appeal will meet the fourth Tuesday in October of each year. This ordinance was laid on the table till the next meeting at the request of Mr. VanHerwerden, so that the matter can be fully discussed before adoption.

Mr. VanHerwerden also introduced the subject of purchasing a complete and more up-to-date set of city maps for the help and guidance of the Board of Assessors, and he then moved that the committee on assessment and collection of city taxes be authorized to purchase such a set of maps at an expense not to exceed $700. This motion was adopted.

The bonds of Constables John Gjetlesen, W. R. Mattox and Amos Moffett were received and filed. Mr. Buckle, chairman of the police board, offered a resolution that the sum of $50 be appropriated to clean the city jail. This resolution was adopted, and there being no further business the Council adjourned.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

the same spirit may continue to prevail and that favorable action will be limited to those measures only which are worthy of assuming the form of legislative enactment. Let us abandon the notion that in some form of law it is desirable to find means to remove every fancied evil or temporary inconvenience and to provide for every imaginary method of conduct. It is better that the laws should be fewer in number and comprehend within their scope objects of moment than that numerous enactments which are limited in operation and only temporary in importance should find place on the statute book. The evil effects and inconvenience resulting from legislation of the last mentioned character have made necessary the appointment of the several Commissions to codify the laws relating to various subjects. They have been obliged to harmonize provisions of numerous conflicting statutes, remove redundancies and correct obscure or careless forms of expression in order to embody in one clear, concise and explicit act all laws relating to the topic which formed the subject of their labors. It has required the exercise of great skill and care, and especial credit is due to these gentlemen who have gratuitously given their time and services in the prosecution of a work so advantageous to the state. There is need for a similar revision and codification of laws relating to other topics, and it is my intention in due time to appoint commis*sions for this purpose.*

In this connection one subject presents itself which by reason of the great interests involved calls for earnest and immediate attention. I refer to the laws governing cities and other municipalities. Scattered through many pages of the statute books and forming the subject matter of numerous chapters of laws are to be found the provisions relating to this form of government. They are conflicting, doubtful and obscure. They have frequently been the subject of litigation and have received judicial interpretation. At times they have received constructions seemingly contradictory. Few dare hazard an opinion as to the constitutionality of a proposed enactment, so great is the uncertainty in which the power of the legislature relating to this subject is now involved and so subtle and fine are the distinctions made as to the required tests of a valid act. I believe radical measures are required to remove the present unsatisfactory condition. Some general and uniform act for all cities is necessary if the present uncertainty is to be removed. A mere codification of existing laws will not relieve the trouble. It may be necessary to modify or repeal the provisions of some special charters if a general form of municipal government which, whether but limited in its application to this common good of all would be promoted at the possible expense of the few who might be temporarily affected. In such a revision consideration should be made for simpler and more effective methods for the administration of municipal affairs, the necessity for which is manifest to the general disatisfaction and desire for change which now exists. The advantages which would follow the adoption of some carefully devised law are manifest.

I think the legislature should appoint or authorize the executive to name a commission to consider the subject and prepare such a plan for the government of cities as they may think proper after a full investigation.

I will also call to direct attention to the growing surplus in the treasury. So prolific are the state's sources of revenue that its annual income during the next four years will exceed, no doubt $2,000,000, exclusive of the proceeds of the school tax.

Keeping pace with the growth of the people, the state fund balance has now reached a large amount. A deficiency existed in 1893, but this balance fund is now represented by about $1,000,000. The amount thereof will be increased, notwithstanding the fact that disbursements out of state and school funds have each year been larger and have increased in amount from about $1,500,000 in 1894 to that of the deficiency to more than $2,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

The increase in disbursements is partly to be accounted for by the sums required for the needs of a growing state and partly by the sums expended for educational purposes and in the construction and improvement of state institutions, including armories. In so far as the revenues of the state have been spent for these objects there is little ground for just criticism or complaint. Something of a permanent and useful character stands in place of the moneys expended, or benefits have been received by the public which fully compensate them for the disbursements. But one of the largest items of increase is to be found in the amount annually appropriated for charitable and reformatory purposes. This sum has increased from about $200 per annum to no more than $400,000 spent in 1898. The amount now annually disbursed represents about 17 per cent of the state's total yearly expenditure. This increase is so striking and has grown so rapidly as to suggest the inquiry whether there cannot be devised some means of replenishment without injury to those entitled to the bounty of the state. It may well be that many of the inmates of our institutions are now supported at public expense who are not rightly entitled to receive the help of the state.

There is little likelihood of further large demands for large, extraordinary expenditures in the immediate future except in one or two instances. If economy be practiced and the income received by the state shows no appreciable falling off, the state fund is not likely to decrease. It is more likely to assume proportions which will be far larger than those of the present moment. Its existence will prove a constant inducement to extravagance or unwise expenditure. The funds should be maintained in as large an amount as prudence and a due regard to the demands thereon, which may be reasonably anticipated, may suggest. Any sum in excess of this amount may be disposed of in relieving the burdens of local taxation. Already some measures in this direction have been adopted without endangering the state's interests or seriously affecting its balances. To what extent, if any, further distribution should be made requires very careful consideration. Many ways in which it can be done readily suggest themselves. There might be returned to the different municipalities that part of the income which is derived from taxes assessed against property therein located. This method is open to the very serious objection that the revenues of the state are uncertain in amount and vary from year to year, as do also the amounts required for legitimate objects of expenditure. A permanent diversion of a portion of its funds might seriously hamper the state and prevent it from meeting just and pressing demands. It is questionable whether this plan would bring about the local relief which those favoring it believe would come from its adoption. It is a matter of common observation that expenditures in municipalities are usually limited by the amounts subject to their disposal, and it is within the range of probability that means would be found to dispose of moneys thus returned without a corresponding reduction of tax rate.

It would be better, in my judgment, under existing circumstances, if any action is taken by the legislature, to devise some plan whereby the amount diverted should not be a fixed annual sum, but one varying according to the condition of the treasury and the claims likely to be made thereon. Appropriations could be made for objects for the support of which the people of the state are now paying direct taxes. In this way the amount now annually raised for the support of public schools could be reduced or some means might be devised whereby, upon an equitable apportionment, the expenses of the various counties for the support of their courts could in part be defrayed.

In this connection and as constituting one of the objects for which extraordinary expenditure may be needed I wish to call your attention to the incompleted buildings of the state reformatory at Rahway. From time to time there have been appropriated and expended on their account various sums, aggregating $185,000. Work on these buildings is now standing practically for more than a year at a standstill. In its incompleted form the building now partly erected stands as a monument of the folly with which the undertaking was conceived or to the lamentable lack of good judgment shown in not pushing the work to completion. There may be room for honest difference of opinion as to the wisdom of finishing the buildings in accordance with the extensive plans originally authorized. The sum estimated to be necessary for this purpose is a large one—in the minds of many larger than is warranted in accomplishing the objects of a reformatory. There is a need, however, for some new buildings in which to confine our criminals. Increased accommodations must be provided either here or elsewhere. From the annual report it appears that the state prison is again overcrowded, notwithstanding the recent addition to the number of its cells. Increased accommodation, however, is not all that is demanded. It is of the greatest importance that we should begin at the earliest possible moment a system of prison treatment which, wherever tried, has proved so beneficial in the reformation of criminals. Motives of humanity and selfish interest alike prompt such undertaking. It will be within the province of the legislature to determine whether the work shall be completed as originally designed or whether the present plans shall be so modified as to call for the expenditure of a less sum of money without interfering with the method of treatment of prisoners which I believe to be correct. These statements are not intended to impute a reckless extravagance in the past, for which I believe that the strictest honesty has characterized every disbursement. The buildings are models in simplicity of design, and there is no unnecessary finish and exterior ornamentation calling for useless expenditure. I hope that the legislature will give earnest attention to the matter in question, for millions of the state may be served and the inauguration of a great and beneficial work no longer delayed.

There is another subject to which reference can be appropriately made at this time, for it is one in the proper solution of which the public at large are greatly interested, and that is the great and increasing value of franchises possessed and exercised by corporations who render public services for pay. Ample proof of this value is to be found in the vast increase in the amount of interest bearing securities and stock issued by them. This increase in value is due to many causes. Among those that readily suggest themselves are the rapid growth of our cities, the diminished cost of constructing and extending quasi public works and inventions that facilitate and at the same time decrease the expense of operation. Corporations which supply public necessities in this state have been capitalized in recent years at many times the cost of their property and vastly in excess of what it would cost to reproduce them. It is admitted that the public have derived great benefit from the growth of these corporations in the way of better service and lower rates, but this benefit, it is asserted, is less than it might have been if obligations had not been unnecessarily created. The par value of bonds issued to represent the estimated value of the franchises enjoyed. It is not the policy of these companies to pay large dividends on their stock, but rather to find reasons from time to time for increasing issues of their bonds. These are often widely distributed among small investors, and therefore such transactions are rendered more secure. If the charges are true and there are good reasons why past proceedings of this kind cannot be undone, it is all the more important that they should be regulated in the future.

We all readily realize the importance of dealing with this matter in a conservative spirit. The prosperity of a state depends largely on the security which it gives to the capital invested therein. Those obligations, however, which are issued for the estimated value of a franchise do not properly represent capital if such value is based upon receipts from excessive charges made for public service. Popular discontent has led to much unwise and injurious legislation on the subject in other states. We should profit by the mistakes that have been made and devise some just and effective remedy, if one be needed. In some of the states maximum rates have been arbitrarily fixed by statute, but this is a crude method of dealing with the problem and often unfair in its application to the differing conditions of various localities. A rate that is reasonable in one place may be unreasonable in another. In other states commissions have been authorized by law to fix rates after a semi-judicial investigation of conditions in each particular case. Experience has shown however, that it is difficult or impossible such legislation and proceedings within rational bounds. In several instances rates thus fixed have been so manifestly unfair that the courts have been constrained to enjoin their enforcement in order to prevent confiscation. Such legislation draws into our courts questions that are not properly of a judicial character, and it would be unfortunate indeed if this state should be compelled to enact laws of the kind referred to in order to find a remedy for the alleged evil. If legislation be had or enacted, it should be only after a full investigation into all of the facts and should be free from the objectionable features which I have mentioned.

Events which have been most notable in the history of our country have transpired since the legislature last convened. A war has been waged and brought to an honorable and successful close. Victories on land and sea, the most splendid in the history of the world, have been won. Our brave soldiers and sailors knew not a single defeat. For them no odds were too great, no difficulties brought dismay. Important and lasting will be the influence of the contest thus waged. We are now as never before respected as a powerful and a just people—fearless in the cause of right, forbearing in time of victory. Henceforth our place is prominent in the councils of the nations. New conditions confront us, new problems demand solution, but we meet them courageously. A special significance is to be found in these momentous and swiftly passing events. Our national spirit has been quickened and our people united in sentiment. Old prejudices have disappeared, and old wounds have been healed. No section, no class, has yielded to another in display of loyalty and devotion. When the honor of the country was at stake and its safety was threatened, there came from all over this broad land an eager response to the summons to arms. Today, as citizens of one state, we can rejoice with the citizens of other states over the victories won and the honors achieved and gladly share with them the glory that belongs to all.

New Jersey has cause for special pride in the zeal and patriotism shown by its citizens. Quick and in numbers greater than allotted was their response to the call for soldiers, and bitter was the disappointment of those whose eager offer of service was refused. Whether on land or on sea New Jersey soldiers and sailors so demeaned themselves that honor was credit came to the state. For fidelity, for intelligence, for willing and patient service during trying times and under discouraging circumstances, they have eminently distinguished themselves and by their conduct won the commendation of all. To them is due all honor and from the people of the state full and just recognition of their valor and patriotism.

Many, if not all, of them have made unusual sacrifices. Their continued service has called for self-denial, and upon those dependent on them for their support unusual hardships and burdens. The compensation which they have received from the national government, limited as it is, cannot be expected to fully reimburse them for their financial losses. In what especial way, whether by state or by compensation or otherwise, the state shall make recognition of their sacrifices is for the legislature to determine. In the justice and the wisdom of the conclusions I have every confidence.

I desire on this occasion to renew my pledge to serve unselfishly and without fear the people of our great commonwealth. I shall to the utmost of my power and with earnest purpose endeavor at all times to guard their interests and promote their happiness. In my efforts I bespeak the generous aid and support of my fellow citizens and look for guidance and help to the Supreme Ruler of all nations.

GRAPE HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.

THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.

Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro; Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.

Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines

are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. FOR SALE BY Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1878, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New York churches for communion service.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, have it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. I repaired to that store there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling; bought a five-cent one and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constantly increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these through the generous action of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of its advertising. I think them especially suited in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the real value of the case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time I decided to try it to results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly by the New York World concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, having effected a saving of $2 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules will last me a month, and I would not be without them for a dollar." At the time of this interview there were three other tenders in the house, two of whom specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial, as she was known by name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "Where may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I am doing a kindness in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other sufferer to be relieved, I want to be as greatly benefited as I have been. I see no objection."

The daughter, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

JOHN KEAN IS NOW JERSEY'S SENATOR

Formally Declared so in the Legislature Yesterday.

ABBETT DON'T LIKE SMITH.

THE MINORITY CANDIDATE WAS NOT HIS PERSONAL CHOICE.

Little Business Transacted in Either House Yesterday—Senator Stokes Has a Plan for Doing Away With the Great Surplus by Aiding the Public Schools—Bill to Make Telephones Cheaper.

Trenton, January 25.—Balloting for a United States Senator was the first item of yesterday's session of the New Jersey Legislature.

The Senate balloted first, and the proceeding was quickly over. William M. Johnson, of Bergen, nominated John Kean, and Mr. Smith was named by Senator Martin, of Sussex. The voting proceeded quickly, and Mr. Kean received 14 votes to Mr. Smith's 6. Soon afterward Mr. McDermott, of Hudson, entered the chamber and requested to be recorded for Mr. Smith, which made his vote 7.

Promptly at noon the House took up the balloting. Wood McKee, leader of the Republicans, named John Kean, and James J. Murphy Mr. Smith.

Mr. Abbett's name was called first, and rising in his seat he said: "Mr. Speaker, in casting my vote I bow to the will of my party caucus and do not desire to be considered as giving expression to my personal preference for the office of United States Senator. I vote for James Smith."

Somehow during the roll call Mr. Marnell, of Hoboken, did not get recorded, but he hurried to the clerk's desk and had himself placed on record for James Smith. Mr. Smith received the full Democratic vote. Both Houses adjourned for the day when they had taken the vote. This noon a joint meeting was held, and when the clerks read the journals of their respective Houses, to show that John Kean had received a majority of the votes of both chambers, he was declared, by the presiding officer, to be the Senator in Congress from New Jersey for a term of six years, beginning March 4th next.

Little business was transacted in either house yesterday. The Senate concurred in the House resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the affairs of the new reformatory at Rahway.

In the House Speaker Watkins was presented with a gavel similar to that which President Reed, of the Senate, received last night. It was made by the same man, Joseph Jones, the eighty four year-old Republican, of Campen county.

Several bill of more than usual importance were introduced in both chambers. In the Senate Senator Stokes attempted to solve in a degree the surplus enigma, which is now keeping the Republicans guessing, with a bill providing that the Legislature shall annually appropriate whatever sum shall be deemed wise for the support of the public schools of the State, which sum shall be apportioned among the school districts, with a view of reducing the annual State school tax. The tax now is $5 per child, and the purpose of this bill is to cut down gradually that amount until the entire tax is wiped out, if the State Treasury from year to year will permit. For the present it is not expected that the legislative appropriation will permit of more than a partial reduction of the tax.

The House began early to attempt to regulate the affairs of corporations, and two bills of importance were introduced. Mr. Marnell, of Hudson, got in one fixing telephone rates at not more than $50 per year, and not over twenty-five cents for five minutes conversation between persons in different cities.

Mr. Horner, of Burlington, introduced a measure which he entitles "An Act to privide for the safety and comfort of passengers and to prevent accidents on trolley cars." Each car must be heated from November 1st to April 1st and have suitable safety fenders. It is provided that not only are the companies to be liable for damages to the individual injured, but for every person that is injured the company guilty must pay a fine of $100.

Mr. McKee, of Morris, introduced a bill making the salary of Prosecutors in counties having a population of fifty thousand and seventy-five thousand $3,000 annually.

Bowling was the first event of the evening. After each team won a game a supper was served and then followed singing and speeches. A dance ended the evening's enjoyment and lasted until 2 o'clock this morning.

HIS DAYS OF SERVICE ARE OVER FOR ALL TIME.

DEATH OF LETT R-CARRIER E. D. HANN

Ravages of Consumption Were Too Much for Him—One of the Oldest Letter-Carriers.

Edward T. Hann, of Somerset place, who died Tuesday afternoon, was one of the original letter carriers that Plainfield had and was appointed in May, 1886, by President Cleveland during his first term, when the late William L. Force was postmaster. Mr Hann was one of the best carriers. He was assigned to the business part of the town owing to his exceptional quickness in delivering mail. He served in that capacity for eight years, when his territory was changed and Carrier Gisenger was appointed to assist in the delivery of mail in the business section. This relieved Mr. Hann considerable, as the mail was growing heavier every day. Mr Hann served the Government continuously since his appointment until about a year ago, when his health began to fail. He took a vacation, covering a period of several months, during which time he seemed to grow stronger and his health was much better. He finally decided to go back to his position last summer. He held it till late in the fall when he was obliged to retire again. He did everything possible to regain his health, and all that medical skill could do was employed in his behalf Toward the last, however, the physicians would give little hope, and it was then known that the end was not far off. The end came peacefully Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Hann was very popular among those whom he served with mail, and among his fellow-carriers he was well liked. He had many qualities that made him popular, and his willingness to do what he could won for him many friends. The most of his life was spent in this city, although he was a native of Hunterdon county. A wife and three children survive him.

Entertained Young Friends

Miss Eva Estelle Wilkins, of East Fifth street, entertained a few friends at her home last Tuesday. The evening's pleasure consisted of games and music, after which cake and cream were served. The table decorations were pink carnations and smilax. Among the guests were Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Helen Hockridge, Miss Nellie Winckler, George Woodrow, Fred Ross, Frank L. Batson and Fred Phillips.

A Fine Turkey Supper.

Visions of a fine turkey supper are now floating through the minds of many Plainfielders, for they expect to attend the turkey supper to be given at Trinity Reformed church tonight and Friday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. The supper will be all right and it will only cost 35 cents. The profits will be used to pay the balance on the church furnishings.

JURY DECIDES THAT CHURCH MUST PAY.

B. W. Hand Wins on Second Trial of His Case.

GIVEN A VERDICT FOR $70.

NO EXCITING TESTIMONY GIVEN TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Case Occupied Several Hours in Justice Mattison's Court—Church People Claimed That the Trustees Had No Right to Sign the Note, as They Were Not Instructed to—No Appeal Case

For the second time the case of B. W. Hand against the First Church of Christ was tried Tuesday afternoon, and for several hours twelve jurymen listened to half a score of witnesses telling different kinds of stories in connection with some financial transactions between Mr. Hand and the church, in which three notes played an important part. These notes were given by the board of trustees of the church, whose names are signed to it, but now they claim that the church is not responsible for its payment, as the trustees have no power to pay bills without being authorized to do so by the church.

The sharp retorts and spirit of anger which pervaded the court room at the last trial of the case were absent yesterday, and the trial slumbered down to a plain everyday statement of facts as they were believed by both parties. The jury was given the case at 6:30 o'clock, and after being out an hour came back with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount sued for and costs.

As was told last week Mr. Hand is suing the board of trustees as representing the church, for $70 balance still due him for money loaned. Mr. Hand was the first and only witness for the plaintiff. He off-red the notes in evidence. One was for $90 given January 17 1894. April 18th $10 was paid on the $90 and a new note for $80 given. July 17th the last note for $70 was given, $10 more having been paid on the note. Just before the note became due the board of trustees, through the advice of John Goodwin, it was said, refused to pay the $70 unless Mr. Hand could give the board a bill of particulars of the money he claimed.

Mr. Hand said that he preached for the church at the rate of $5 a Sunday. In answer to cross questioning, Mr. Hand said that the church still owed him back salary, but that was not included in the amount being sued for.

Rev. Mr. McKane was the first witness sworn for the defense. His testimony was that the church had to authorize the payment of all bills before they were paid.

Joseph L. Shultiess, the church treasurer, said that he had authority from the church to pay such bills as for gas, coal, etc. He said that he signed the note because "he thought Mr. Hand knew all about it." He said that he didn't believe then that the church owes Mr. Hand $70. He admitted that when he handed in his reports to the church that he included in his statement a clause that Mr. Hand held a claim for so much against the church.

Mr. Goodwin, the last witness sworn for the defense, provoked a laugh as soon as his name was called. Last time the case was tried Mr. Goodwin answered an exclamation of W. S. Angleman by calling him a "stinker," and it was expected by those present that there would be a repetition of the scene, but they were disappointed. He and Mr. Angleman passed a few pleasantries, but that was all.

Rev. Mr. Clever, a former pastor, was also called as a witness. He threw considerable light upon the church government. He said he would be willing to do his share towards paying Mr. Hand, and ended by rising in his seat and saying that he desired peace, and held a love and regard for all parties concerned. His remarks brought forth a round of applause which even Justice Mattison, who presided, could not quell at once.

E. E. Brown and E. E. H. Conover gave testimony on one side or the other, then the lawyers summed up and the case given to the jury who were Edward Mundy, Theodore Stites, Lewis Smalley, Amos Stites, Charles William, A. S. Huff, Patrick McGee, William Jerolaman, Walter Smalley, Charles White, George Conover and O. J. Barrett.

The five trustees whose names were signed to the note were B. W. Hand, J. L. Shultiess, Edward Brown, H. Conover and J. J. Ackerman. W. S. Angleman appeared for the plaintiff and S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, for the de-

TROLLEY LINK IN USE.

DIRECT ROUTE TO NEW BRUNSWICK IN OPERATION.

Connecting Line Between Bound Brook and South Bound Brook Was Opened This Morning in a Ceremonious Manner.

Bound Brook, January 25.—The opening of the short stretch of track on the Brunswick Traction Company's trolley lines between the New Brunswick and the Dunellen-Somerville branches at Bound Brook was formally accomplished this morning with great eclat by the officials of the company, aided by the presence of a number of dignitaries from New Brunswick. Bound Brook, Lincoln and Dunellen. Car No. 111, which is called the 'old reliable" because of its partial parlor lig a number of similar cars monker, was used to run over the new connecting links, which now completes the lines of the Brunswick company.

Manager Badel, of New Brunswick, was on hand to supervise the event. He wore the famous white Alpine hat, which has been his headgear for all trolley openings that he has participated in. The first car passed over the new stretch of track at about 10:30, accompanied by the explosion of several torpedoes that had been placed on the rails to signalize the auspicious event in trolleydom. The car was run up East Main street to the tracks running between Dunellen and Somerville, and then continued on a trip to Somerville. As the car passed over the viaduct crossing the Central Railroad of New Jersey tracks a bottle of champagne was broken over the front dashboard.

After to day the skaze service for the accommodation of the trolley company patrons between Bound Brook and South Bound Brook will be discontinued. A new schedule for the running of cars has not yet been arranged, but it will be in a few days. During the summer months it is expected that through cars will be run between Plainfield and New Brunswick, if mutual terms can be agreed upon between the Plainfield Street Railway Company and the Brunswick Traction Company.

The two cars of the Brunswick Traction Company, used for the ceremonies of inaugurating connecting link at Bound Brook, were run to this city today at noon. Superintendent Rydel was at the motor, while Superintendent Adelmann, of the Plainfield line, was at his side. The second car was filled with a number of prominent Plainfielders who had been invited to take the trip. The cars were decked out in a gay manner with flags and bunting. It was quite a strange sight to see the blue-banded Brunswick cars in Plainfield, but before long it will undoubtedly become a familiar sight.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Baldwin Boys and Hartfelder Accused of Trespassing

George and Augustus Baldwin and William Hartfelder were arraigned before Justice Austin Tuesday charged by Sydney Colby, superintendent of the North Plainfield Poultry Farm, with trespassing on the property of the farm with gun and dog.

Francis J. Blatz represented the three defendants, who were held for the Grand Jury under $100 bail. Mr. Blatz objected to the Justice trying the case, and insisted that he could only hold them for the Grand Jury or else dismiss the complaint. After a deal of arguing on both sides Mr. Blatz carried his point, and the court decided to waive the right to try the case. Newton Smalley went the boys' bond.

Bad Weather Kept Away the Crowd.

Owing to the inclement weather last Tuesday the entertainment that was to have been given at Grace M. E. church was postponed to next week Tuesday evening. A few persons gathered at the church, but it was unanimously agreed that a postponement would be best. All persons holding tickets for last evening can use the same for next Tuesday evening.

New Officers Presided.

The new officers of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., presided last Tuesday for the first time since the election. Despite the storm there was a good attendance and the meeting was one of great interest. In the good of the order several excellent speeches were made by the officers and members.

An invitation dance will be given in Washington Hall, West Second street, this evening under the auspices of Wm. Insley, M. Brokaw and H. Ackerman. O'Reilly will play.

THE SILK COMPANY FORMALLY ORGANIZED.

Articles Of Incorporation Filed at Elizabeth Tuesday.

THE DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

STOCKHOLDERS MET TUESDAY NIGHT AND FORMALLY ORGANIZED.

Officers of the Watchung Silk Company Elected Tuesday Night—C. Pope Is President—Machinery Was Purchased Today at Paterson—Factory to be Located in the Schepflin Block

Tuesday marked the opening of the formal career of the Watchung Silk Company. The concern was regularly incorporated Tuesday at Elizabeth, and last night the directors and officers of the company were elected. Today the necessary machinery will be purchased.

The scheme of a silk mill for Plainfield, which was fathered by the local Board of Trade, has reached a successful culmination. Within thirty days it is expected that work will be done in the local mill.

Tuesday, W. R. Codington filed the articles of incorporation for the Watchung Silk Company with the County Clerk at Elizabeth. It is capitalized at $10,000. There are 400 shares at $25 each. Of these 133 shares are reserved for the two organizers, Bullock and Young, to be turned over to them when the profits equal the amount of the capital. The incorporators of the company are: Willis W. Vail, J. F. MacDonald, W. R. Codington, J. C. Pope, E. M. Laing, J. M. Higgins, M. F. Elderton, J. H. McVey, L. B. Woolston, Moses Schloss, Henry Liefke, J. F. Hubbard, A. M. Griffin, F. S. Runyon, A. D. Thompson, J. D. Runyon, Herman Weber, L. L. Manning, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, W. H. Combs, William Langer, Lewis F. VanNest and Allen W. Laing. There are now 178 shares subscribed. The promoters have no fear of disposing of the remaining shares.

Tuesday, a meeting of the stockholders was held in the Board of Trade rooms. There were 121 shares represented. The following board of directors was then elected: W. R. Codington, J. C. Pope, J. F. MacDonald, E. M. Laing, F. S. Runyon, J. H. McVey and H. C. Runyon.

The by-laws were drawn up and adopted after which followed a general discussion of the affairs of the corporation.

The Board of Directors held a meeting later and elected the following officers: President, J. C. Pope; vice president, J. H. McVey; treasurer, W. R. Codington; secretary, Harry C. Runyon; general manager, E. M. Laing.

E. M. Laing, the general manager of the concern, went to Paterson yesterday, accompanied by T. B. Bullock and W. J. Young, the practical workers of the company, to purchase the plant of Bannigan Brothers, at Paterson. The plant includes twenty looms and the accompanying machinery. The factory of the company is to be located on the second floor of the Schepflin building, West Front street. Floor space, 60 feet by 85 feet, has been secured. There will be room enough to accommodate forty looms. The power used will be steam, the boilers in the basement supplying an engine that will be placed on the second floor.

The machinery is expected to arrive in Plainfield in a week. Then it will be necessary to fit up the rooms and place the machinery in position. It is thought that that will occupy a period not exceeding thirty days. Then the factory will be ready to turn out silk fabric.

At the start, it is expected that 90 people will be employed. Of these, seven men will be skilled labor who will be brought here as there are none in Plainfield at present. The remainder will be boy weavers, women and girls. A few skilled ones will be brought here from Paterson and the rest will be local help who will soon be taught the work. Weavers are paid by the piece. A skilled weaver, running two looms, can make from $2 to $2 50 a day. An inexperienced hand can in a few days make $1 a day.

Minister to Go Abroad.

Saturday, Feb. 25th, Rev. Dr. W. E. Richards and Rev Dr. Rodman, of this city, will leave in company with A. V. D. Honeyman for an extended trip abroad, covering a period of three months.

—Summons have been issued in the contract case of Manafield Robenson against Charles H. Hand, returnable February 1st, in Justice Mosher's court.

BECOMING A GREAT LAND,

PROF. MACE DELIVERED AN INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE TUESDAY NIGHT.

His Subject Was "The Results of the Union of Nationality and Democracy"—Period From 1828 to 1840 Considered.

The third in the series of lectures on American history by Prof. William H. Mace, of Syracuse University, in the University Extension course, was delivered at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Tuesday evening. The subject was "The Results of the Union of Nationality and Democracy." The audience was rather small on account of the severe storm.

The first part of the evening was devoted to questions and answers on the preceding lecture. Three papers on various subjects discussed at that lecture were read. Then came the lecture.

The period in the history of the country between the years 1828 and 1840 was considered. The lecturer said how the new era in political affairs of the nation.

The growth of the spoils system began and had its effects on the methods of conducting the campaign and on the government. Even then the question of civil service reform began to be raised. State sovereignty entered a new phase and the controversy between the State and national authorities was growing. The government took a hand in regulating the banking system of the country.

Aside from the new era in political affairs, the speaker pointed out the intellectual and material development. There was an awakening in the old world that was felt on this side of the ocean. In literature new men sprang up. Then the modern newspaper began to have its effect on the country. Reforms of various kinds sprang up. The introduction of the steam engine and other machinery presented new industrial conditions. As a result of it all America began to rise in her own and in foreign estimation.

GENUINE THUNDER STORM IN MIDST OF WINTER.

BIG DOWNPOUR OF RAIN LAST NIGHT

Vivid Lightning and Peals of Thunder—Small Stream Flood Occurred.

A genuine thunder storm with all the usual accompaniments visited this section Tuesday evening. A heavy shower occurred about 8 o'clock in the evening, the rain falling in torrents, flooding streets and sidewalks while it lasted. Park avenue, between North avenue and Front street, was flooded from curb to curb. The water went down as soon as the heavy rainfall lessened.

Shortly after 11 o'clock another heavy shower began, accompanied by very sharp lightning and heavy thunder. There had been occasional flashes of lightning earlier in the evening. The storm lasted for an hour, flooding the streets again. It was accompanied by high winds.

As a result of the very heavy rainfall there was quite a freshet in Green brook. The stream was swollen far above its usual dimensions. No serious damage done by the freshet has yet been reported.

GEORGE BENSON DEAD.

Well-Known Painter Proved a Victim of Pneumonia Tuesday Morning.

Yesterday at 5 o'clock occurred the death of George Benson, of Duer street, who had been seriously ill with pneumonia but a short time. Mr. Benson was well-known in this vicinity. He learned the trade of painter with Woolston & Buckle and worked for them nearly thirteen years. He was a faithful workman and well liked by his employers.

He was born at Dunellen thirty years ago but came to Plainfield when a boy and resided here ever since. Several years ago he was married to a Miss Hull, daughter of Samuel Hull, and she and three children survive him. Mr. Benson's father now resides at Bound Brook. He also has a brother who formerly resided in North Plainfield. Arrangements for funeral services have not yet been completed.

Revival Continues.

There was a very small attendance at the Christian church Tuesday on account of the inclemency of the weather. Rev. Mr. McKane will speak upon the following subject to night: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto the things that are God's." Rev. J. B. Cleaver will speak this evening.

Only One Woman on Hand.

Tuesday afternoon was the time for the regular meeting of the Town Improvement Association, but as only one woman appeared the meeting was called off. The inclement weather was responsible for the non-appearance of the members.

MR MURRAY EXPLAINS HIS NEW LEGISLATION

Not on the Warpath Against City Clerk MacMurray.

WHAT HIS BILL PROPOSES.

IT WILL GIVE EACH COUNCIL THE RIGHT OF ITS OWN CHOICE.

A Misunderstanding Surrounds the Motive of Mr. Murray in Introducing Legislation—He Consulted Colleagues Before Introducing the Resolution That Caused Some Grumbling in the Assembly.

Trenton, January 25.—The Republicans of the State Assembly are beginning to realize that Assemblyman Roger F. Murray is going to be a prominent figure in the legislative halls this winter. Monday night saw a small squall over the introduction by him of a resolution providing that all bills passed by the Assembly shall be held twenty-four hours before they are sent to the Senate. The resolution was a surprise for Speaker and Republican leaderion the floor Murray then came in for considerable criticism on the ground that he should have submitted it first to the party leader in the House.

A Press reporter interviewed Mr. Murray on the subject this morning. The Plainfield Assemblyman explained that after drawing up the resolution, he presented it for the approval of the members of the committee on rules. A majority of them favored it and declared that they would back him up in it. He also saw some of the Assemblymen of both parties and found them all in favor of it. Under those circumstances he felt justified in bringing it before the Assembly. Had the measure taken the usual course he felt sure that it would have been held up.

Regarding the bill he has just introduced into the Assembly, Mr. Murray said that there was a general misunderstanding. The rumor that he was on the war-path against City Clerk MacMurray, of Plainfield, was utterly false. The bill was not aimed at that official, nor at any one else.

A mistaken idea has been obtained by a superficial glance at the title he said. The bill does not provide that the term of office of city clerks in a second class cities shall be one year. What it does permit is that any Common Council in a second-class city may, if it so desires, make the term of office of the city clerk one year.

The object of this bill, Mr. Murray explained, was to give every new Council the right to choose its own city clerk. It is only fair that every new Council should have the say as to whom its chief recording officer should be instead of allowing one Council to fix that officer for future Councils. The idea had found favor with several of Plainfield's prominent Councilmen, hence Mr. Murray's reason for introducing it.

Boroughites Change Residences.

Former Councilman Fred Slater and family, of Manning avenue, will, at an early date, move into their former residence on Jackson avenue, where Former Mayor H. E. Needham and family now reside. Mr. Needham and family will move to Craig place in J. O. Dyer's house opposite Duer street.

Three Fingers Crushed.

D. W. Brown, of Plainfield avenue, met with an accident while at work in the Pond Machine Tool Works Monday. He was working in some of the machinery when his hand was caught and three fingers were crushed.

Carl Anderson, of Raritan, spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Oliver H. Voorhees, of East Front street.

Mrs. John Clapp and her daughter, Miss Clapp, of Mercer avenue, are stopping in New York for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Johnson, of Newark, were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson, of the borough.

Miss Alice Barlow, of Prospect place, returned Saturday after spending several weeks with friends at Scranton, Pa.

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. Ella W. Hedges, of 743 Watchung avenue, for Thursday, February 8d and 9th.

Miss May B Anderson, of Newark, formerly of Plainfield, and George Reed, of Newark, were the guests of Plainfield friends Sunday.

One Way of Growing Tomatoes.

Sow the seed in window boxes about eight weeks before time of transplanting out of doors. Fill the boxes with good garden soil, worked mellow and free from lumps. After the seed is sown, place the boxes where they will receive plenty of sun and air. Give the young plants about as much heat and moisture as the average house plant. When they have four leaves, transplant the strongest ones to berry boxes, setting one plant in a box. For convenience in handling, place the boxes in a large shallow box. Tomatoes that have been transplanted several times will be more stocky and bear earlier. It is very essential in growing these early plants that the plants strong and as far advanced as possible before removal to the open air.

Before transplanting, the plants are gradually exposed to the outdoor air to be hardened. I am never in a great hurry to transplant. The last of May is early enough. When the time arrives to plant out of doors, and after a suitable hole is prepared for the plant, the tox is torn away, leaving the soil in a compacted mass around the plant. This is placed in the prepared hole and the soil drawn up around the plant and pressed down.

A Good Butter Box.

Many dairymen either put up their pound prints in the form of bricks wrapped in parchment paper, or in a broader, flatter, rectangular form, with quarter-pound divisions marked off in it. These are difficult to lift out of a box when once packed snugly in it. A handy plan is shown in the sketch.

The box opens at the side and has shelves to slide in and out. Each shelf has a rectangular opening in the center, so that when the row of "bricks" is laid about the opening, the edge of each brick will project a little over the opening. One can then lift out a pound of butter easily because he can get his fingers beneath it. A shelf can thus be removed from the box and carried to the customer's door and the customer allowed to pick up the number of pounds desired, or for the seller not to handle the butter at all in the presence of the customer, even though it be paper-covered.

How to Treat Smutty Seed Grain.

The hot water treatment for grains affected with smut is the most easily applied and the most satisfactory. It is as follows: Fill two ordinary wash tubs partially full of hot water. Place them on a clean barn floor and have ready several grain sacks—coffee sacks will answer nicely. In tub No. 1 the water is to be heated to 130 degrees Fahrenheit, and in tub No. 2 to 140 degrees. Fill the sacks with the grain to be treated and immerse them in tub No. 1 for the purpose of partially heating the grain. Lift the sack and let it drain for a moment, and dip in tub No. 2, leaving it there from five to eight minutes, turning and kneading the sack in the meantime, so that the grain will be all wet. Empty the grain on an airy floor in the sunshine or in a draft, and let it become thoroughly dry. This is the process in its entirety and is very simple. A supply of hot water must be kept on hand to replenish the tubs and keep up the temperature. In tub No. 2 the water should not get above 145 nor below 133 degrees.—American Agriculturist.

To Make the Farm Pay.

One of the greatest hindrances to profitable farming is the effort to go too fast at first and to purchase things we could get along without. The obliging agents tell you that you need not trouble about the money; your note will do just as well; but you will find that you must pay big interest for the privilege of going in debt, and you are always at a disadvantage to your creditor. Have the money ready to pay, and you can then make your hair of the bargain. Take good care of your farm and your stock and they will furnish the money for necessary outlays.

I will just say to young men who expect to make farming their occupation that they may expect hard work and plenty of it, and will not need to join any baseball nine for exercise; but if they take care of their health and habits it will not hurt them, for I have tried it for over sixty years and am today a well-preserved man.—John Larimor.

Watering Live Stock.

Most farmers do not give their stock enough water. Twice a day is hardly enough at any time, but particularly so in warm weather. I always make it a rule to water my animals about two hours after night feeding. It is a little trouble, but I find it pays. When stock is watered often they will not overload their stomachs, as when watered only twice a day.—J. B. Toncey, Union Co., N. J.

This year the Norwich (Eng.) show has for its president the duke of York, the grandson of Queen Victoria. The duke was an exhibitor, as were also his father, the prince of Wales, and his grandmother, the queen. These three generations of royal stock breeders carried off a number of prizes, the queen doing best in cattle, the prince in sheep, and the duke in pigs.

Spring Seeding to Grass Alone.

1. The land must be quite free from weed seed. If there are many weed seeds in the ground, these can be destroyed by summer fallowing or by freshing the ground several times before the grass seeds are sown. It positively will not do to sow grass where the ground is filled with weed seeds.

2. The land should possess at least fair fertility in order to produce early springing and rapid growth of the young grass plants from the very beginning.

3. The land must be very carefully prepared. In this there is nothing but gain to the husbandman by doing his work well. Every inch of the soil should be gone over again and again and the surface rendered as smooth as a table and as fine as an onion bed. We have been very careful in this past in regard to the proper treatment of grasslands and must improve in the future if we desire the heavy crops possible.

4. It is well to sow large quantities of grass seed—two or three times the usual amount. In seeding, the field should be gone over with a cultipacker, so as to insure entire absence of skips and breaks in the evenness of the young sward.

5. It is probably best, although we have not fully demonstrated the fact, to sow grass seed over seed very early in the spring time. Our returns for the past year, and those of some of our student correspondents, show the beneficial effects of very early seeding.

6. Finally, a matter of much importance is that of checking the growth of weeds, which will annoy more or less in spite of all precautions. When the weeds reach a height of six inches the mower should be put into the field with the cutter bar set about four inches high. Sometimes the mowing of the weeds must be repeated.—American Agriculturist.

A Case of Roup.

A. M., Fremont, Nebraska, says his fowls have swelling about the eyes, which finally closes them. There has yellow substance on the mouth with offensive smell. This is plain roup. It is caused by anything that lowers the vitality of the fowl, such as lice, filthy houses, exposure to wet and cold, especially when roosting on perches at night, and damp, paper-lined nests. Roup is a nasty, contagious disease. When a fowl contracts it, the best remedy is the axe and the carcass should be buried deeply, or burned. A. M. should immediately separate the sick fowls from the others, killing and burying all that are badly affected. Glycerine 3 parts, turpentine 1 part; mix, and with sewing machine oilcan squirt two or three drops into each nostril once a day. Keep birds in warm quarters and feed a laxative diet of soft vegetables. Don't let them out until completely cured.

Clean out the poultry house from top to bottom. Whitewash interior with fresh lime whitewash with carbolic acid in it. Spade floor in earth, remove four inches of surface and fill in with fresh soil. If wood, scrub with boiling suds and whitewash. Close house tight and burn a pound of sulphur in it. Put in new perches and nests. Close all cracks and chinks so as to prevent all drafts. If house is damp, place good lump of unslacked lime in a box and set inside, then scatter the soaked lime over perches and floor. Watch the fowls closely and promptly remove any showing slightest symptoms of disease. Drafts and cracked and damp houses are chief causes for roup.—Fred Grundy, Illinois.

Feeding Value of Apples.

We do not think enough of the orchard for feeding its fruits to the farm animals, especially horses, and as aid to the good digestion of other foods. The mild acid of them is excellent for the health of the stock and we all know how gratefully they will receive a feed of them at any time. For the cows they are especially desirable; a peck of them chopped and sprinkled with meal of any kind, will help much to add to the flow of milk of the cows. Horses love this fruit, and they tend to help in the shedding of the coat, by their natural effects. When the selection is made for the spring planting, a few of some of the sweet varieties, ripening from the summer to the winter, should not be forgotten for this use. We may begin with the early Sweet Bough for the first, then the autumn Sweet Bough and the old Pumpkin Sweet, and for later use there are the Talman Sweet and the Winesap, all productive sorts and unexcelled for this use as well as for market.

Wire Cloth Against Rabbits.

Five years ago I planted a young orchard and the rabbits began to girdle the trees as soon as set. I bought wire cloth, two feet wide, and cutting it into two-inch strips enclosed the trunks of the young trees with it. It has proved an effectual protection against rabbits ever since. The wire cloth will rust off at the ground but by using the two feet width it answers the purpose for several years. I am now using wire cloth that I applied five years ago. Two years since I planted five hundred peach trees and the wire cloth put on them at the time of planting is to-day as good as new and the expense is less than one cent per tree. I regard it far better than cornstalks.—J. S. Aiken, Sullivan county, Ind.

Are Wild Cherry Leaves Poisonous?

It is believed in many neighborhoods that live stock, particularly cattle, are occasionally poisoned by eating leaves of wild cherry trees or shrubs. In woods and pastures these cherry trees are sometimes cut off, then from the stumps grow innumerable sprouts. Cattle being pastured in these localities eat the leaves with what is thought to be fatal results.

To obtain some definite knowledge along this line the New Hampshire experiment station has conducted some tests. The wild black cherry, choke cherry, wild red cherry, the wild yellow or "horse" plum and the dwarf cherry were used. Investigations showed that the leaves of the last two varieties were perfectly harmless. The test then proceeded with the three first named. Of these three it was found that the leaves of the wild black cherry are the most poisonous, though all are dangerous.

There is a popular opinion that the cherry leaves are poisonous only when cut and later eaten in a wilted condition. Some hold that cattle may safely nibble at them when growing without danger. They are also considered quite harmless when dried. The investigations prove, however, that both the wilted and fresh leaves are poisonous while the dried are always to be regarded with suspicion. Vigorous young leaves from fresh shoots are most liable to be eaten by cattle and are more poisonous than the leaves from the mature tree or the stunted shrub. Leaves wilted in bright sunlight to about 70 per cent. of the original weight or until they begin to appear slightly limp yield the greatest amount of prussic acid, the poisonous element.

Antipathy of Trees.

A correspondent to The Country Gentleman says: "Some years since I learned a fact from experience which I presume is well known to experienced horticulturists, but may be of value to some one just commencing. Some trees have an antipathy for others of a different family. I planted an orchard of peach trees. In the field was a butternut tree eight to ten inches in diameter with spreading top. It was a good season and all the trees lived and made a good start, but the second year fifteen to eighteen of the trees around the butternut died, and many others showed much less thrifty than the average of the orchard. There was also a hickory nut tree left standing in the field, about twice as large as the butternut, and the trees around it did not suffer, but were almost as thrifty as the trees in the center of the orchard. Both trees were then removed and the space around where the butternut stood filled in with new peach trees, but they never grew or produced as well as the others. I was told that the leaves of the butternut killed the peach trees. Others thought the roots caused the damage. At any rate, after my experience, I should advise those setting peach trees not to plant them in the vicinity of butternut trees, for there is certainly no congeniality between them."

Care in Selecting Seed.

The selection of seed is the most important matter connected with the growing of a crop, for the reason that from each seed comes all the advantages or imperfections of a crop, so far as its general characteristics are concerned. It is claimed that every fully developed plant presents at least one ear, grain or seed superior in productive power to any of the others of that plant, and every plant contains at least one seed that upon trial will prove more productive than any other of the lot from that plant. In cereals the best grain is found on the best ear or head, and the superior vigor of that grain is transmitted in different degrees to its progeny. By repeated careful selections the superiority is accumulated and the improvement goes on until in a few years a fixed type is the result. In selecting seeds for experiment there should be an abundant supply of seed, good provided in order to permit of the fullest development from each seed, and to secure not only prolificacy but hardness and quality.

Smaller Hogs More Profitable.

The day has been, says a contributor to The New England Farmer, when the large fat hog brought the highest price, and it was our pride to have the fattest and largest in the whole country. For the lard hog was the money hog, from the fact that the lard hog brought a good price, and the lard that made the most lard was the most profitable to the farmer. But when lard depreciated in value, and the appetite of the people demanded leaner meat, then the price of very large fat hogs went down, and the small hog is the one that packers want and that brings the best price. How long this may continue time only will tell, but we farmers must endeavor to raise what will bring us the most money, and the hogs that will weigh from 175 to 225 pounds is about the weight that shippers want, and it costs less per pound to get them to that size; hence the economy of selling at the proper time in order to get the most money at the least expense.

"O," Arthur dear, if you only knew how happy I am with you."

"Yes, yes; I only wish I had made as good a match as you!"—Fliegende Blatter.

A GOOD WORK.

TRAVELING LIBRARIES INTRODUCED INTO PHILADELPHIA.

Many Requests for Books from the Small Places Outside the City Limits—An Effort being Made to have the System Extend all Through the State.

The traveling library system introduced in this city under the direction of the Free Library of Philadelphia a little over a year ago has proven so popular, and so many requests for its extension have been made by neighboring towns, that the trustees of the Free Library are making a strong effort to provide traveling libraries for use in every part of the State. With this object in view a bill was recently introduced into the present session of the Legislature asking for a $30,000 appropriation, and all the librarians who have charge of public collections of books in Pennsylvania are prepared to advocate its passage, says the Philadelphia Record.

The city traveling library system consists of boxes of 25 books each, which are circulated in fire houses, police stations and similar places, thus reaching a class of people who have no opportunity to share in the benefits of the regular library system. Requests have been received from thirty villages and towns outside of the city limits for traveling libraries, but as the Free Library is a city institution, it was found that the requests could not legally be complied with.

The $30,000 State appropriation is designed to overcome this obstacle. Though asked in the name of the Free Library of Philadelphia, it is for the use of the entire state. If granted, the money will be used in the equipment of traveling libraries of fifty volumes each. Those for use in the western part of the State will be placed in the custody of the Carnegie Library at Pittsburg; those for the eastern part will be handled by our own library, and the towns in the central part of the State will be supplied through the State Library at Harrisburg, the Public Library at Scranton, and the Osterhaut Library at Wilkesbarre.

MAJOR PUTNAM'S POWDER KEGS.

They were Filled with Onions but Served the Purpose Just As Well.

Shortly before the Revolution, when the air was heavily charged with forebodings of the approaching struggle, Major Putnam happened to be in Boston. The Major disliked the British coats and sometimes inveighed against their arrogant supercilliousness in no gentle terms. One day an officer of His Majesty's regulars overheard Putnam assert that the provincial army, untrained in arms as they were, would fight with the courage of trained soldiers. The officer resented the assertion, and after some hot words challenged the Major to a duel, provided he dared fight.

"Name them," haughtily replied the officer.

"Two kegs of gunpowder; the time, to-morrow; the distance, ten paces; the men to be as follows: You to sit on one keg, I on the other. Each keg is to be attached to each and lighted, and the one who holds out the longest shall be declared the winner."

There was nothing for the officer to do but accept the unusual weapons, and the following day at the appointed time and place they were found in their shirt sleeves, each combatants took their seats upon the kegs of gunpowder. The fuses were lighted and began sputtering, rapidly approaching the kegs. The officer was deathly pale, and watched the growing dangers with distorted eyes. At last he could stand it no longer, and with a leap he left his keg and raced like a madman out of sight. When he had gone, Old Put laughingly kicked the burning fuse away and disclosed to view but a keg of onions. When the matter came out the officer was subjected to the laughs and jeers of the entire command.—Harper's Round Table.

An Accidental Discovery.

When Sir Humphrey Davy was a boy of sixteen, a little girl came to him one day in great excitement, and asked why, when she rubbed two pieces of cane together, they should make a spark of light. Humphrey was a studious lad, who spent hours in making out scientific problems. He pated the child's curly head and said: "I do not know, dear. Let us see if they really do make a light, and then we will try to find out why." He soon found that the little girl was right; the pieces of cane, if rubbed together quickly, give a tiny light. Then he set to work to find out the reason; and after some time—thanks to the observing powers of his little friend, and his own industry—he her in not impatiently telling her not to worry, as many might have done—Humphrey Davy made the first of his interesting discoveries. Every reed, cane and grass has an outer skin of flinty stuff, which protects the inside from insects, and also helps the frail-looking leaves to stand upright.

A Shrewd Swindler.

A man has been getting his board free in the eastern part of Vermont by representing that he wants a good farm. He looks over a place, decides to buy it and agrees upon a price. He then says he will receive the money in a few days and the farmers board him free. When the swindler is ready to go he gets his host to carry him to another place, where he plays the same game. He usually borrows a small sum of money at each place.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hints to Home Cheese Makers.

A person who is a good butter maker and used to handling milk, will usually have the best success in amateur cheese making. In the first place, a proper heating apparatus should be employed. One of the most common and yet serious mistakes of an amateur is to employ in cheese making milk that is too sweet. To insure success the milk should be ripe, that is, in the summer it should be kept in a cool atmosphere until 12 hours old, and in the spring and fall, 24 hours. It is often more convenient to ripen the milk quickly, which may be done by using a "starter," adding to it a small quantity of overripe milk. This starter, however, should never be so ripe as to be loppered.

Do not try to prepare your own rennet. Buy a reliable brand of extract or rennet tablets, and you will always know its strength. Do not use your finger for a thermometer, as experience never makes it as reliable as mercury. Be thoroughgin all detail work just as makers in the big factories have to be. Do not apply rennet when the temperature of the milk is under 84 degrees, and keep it at that heat by covering your little vat until the coagulated mass is ready to cut up. Do not scald the curd above 100 degrees if you can help it. If you do, the life of the rennet is injured, which is needed later on to properly cure the cheese. Remember that initial milk maturity hastens the cooking process of the curd at a lower temperature than would otherwise have to be employed, and at the same time insures a better and firmer quality for the accruing cheese.

Through the whole process of home cheese making, extra care must be taken on account of the small quantity of material under the keep the curd warm. In summer it should go into the hoop to be pressed at a temperature of 70 degrees, while in spring and fall 75 degrees is better. Guard against the other extreme, for too hot curd pressed will result in coarse flavored cheese. Use a fine cloth for the press as you employ for butter, and if you desire colored cheese, a reliable brand of butter color is none too good. Make your curd enough so that it will remain a firm, close grained cheese after curing.

Generally in the spring a slight shade of acid, 1-8 to 1-4 inch strings by the hot iron, is sufficient, while in summer 12 inch is better. Test every point as you go along, and let nothing go by chance. That is the way the factory makers do. That is the main reason why they turn out even quality, high grade stock. Last but not least, do not skim the milk but make full cream cheese and you will be amply repaid for its superior quality.—Geo. R. Newell, in Agriculturist.

Debearing Justified by Experience.

All evidence goes to show that debearing subdues the animal, renders all restless or turbulent dispositions and replaces viciousness with docility. This is most pronounced in case of bulls. A marked difference is noticed in the entire herd. Instead of chasing, goring and butting, the animals walk along quietly in a body, like a flock of sheep, and have no more desire to molest than they have to be molested. This is of especial value when passing through the gates where with horned cattle, much injury is likely to be done. At the watering trough, instead of one or two standing guard and preventing the approach of the weaker cattle, all crowd in together and proceed at once to satisfy their thirst. As many as 28 debearded animals have been seen to drink from a trough 7 feet in diameter. It would be dangerous for half a dozen to do so if they had horns. Such altered conditions are advantageous alike in dairying and fattening stock, the sense of quiet and security enables the animals to better assimilate their food and thus give a larger and richer yield of milk as well as show more rapid improvement in laying on flesh.—H. D. Hemenway in Agriculturist.

Winter Protection for Grapevines.

If the vines are trained to stakes simply cut the strings which act as supports and allow the vines to fall to the ground at the base of the stake. Press down and hold in place by throwing a few spadefuls of soil upon the vines. No other covering is necessary. Do not put on too much earth as this will tend to make the vines tender. Let them remain on the ground until all danger from frost is past, then place a few stakes to the vine and shake them free of soil. Vines on trellises are treated in the same manner. It is usually advisable to prune before putting down, as there is then a smaller amount to be covered.

Pruning Large Limbs.

All pruning ought of course to be done when the limbs are small. But circumstances often necessitate the taking off of large limbs that may long have been overlooked, or may perhaps have to be. It is a mistake to saw off such branches close to the trunk. The wood soon cracks, even if covered with a coat of paint, the water gets in and a decayed trunk soon results. Cut off the limbs four inches at least from the trunk, sawing from four sides to a raised point at the center, as shown in the cut. This projection will be handsome, but it will never crack open far enough to admit water to the interior of the trunk.

Electricity on Farms.

This has passed the experimental *stage in at least one town in Ger*many, where a farm is equipped with 172 incandescent lamps. The motive power is furnished by a small brook, which drives a turbine wheel furnishing 16 to 22 horse power. The turbine drives a dynamo, which develops all the electricity needed. Wires of different sizes, strung on poles, conduct light and power to the yards, garden, dwelling, barns and other farm buildings. A small motor drives the power for the stables, a turning lath, a grindstone and a large band saw. A large motor is mounted on iron wheels, and together with the threshing machine, can be put into any barn to be connected there by an electric current with a small cable. The system of handling the motor is so simple that any farm hand can readily understand it. The 34,000 horse power used last year cost $1,428, or a little more than 4 cents per horse power per hour. Compared with other working expenses, a saving was made of $285 a year in favor of the electric plant. Power is always ready, enabling the farmer to employ his hands at once in threshing in case bad weather or some other reason prevents them from working in the fields.

Value of Cornstalks.

Mr. Prater of St. Louis, who has studied the cornstalk scientifically, thinks that within few years *farmers of the country will be receiv*ing from $15 to $25 per acre for their cornstalks. Mills will be established in the south and other parts of the country, he says, and pretty nearly the whole crop of cornstalks at any rate that part of the crop which is grown on farms contiguous to railroad lines—will be used in the mills. The market for the manufactured products is already made, as the products will be staple articles in constant demand. Of the products that may be evolved from the matured cornstalk—the stalk which has borne its grain—Mr. Prater enumerates celluloid, smokeless gunpowder, lacquer, cattle feed, roofing material, and a material that will take every purpose of papier mache. Green stalks, he says, are rich in glucose, and will yield "a better quality and a finer sugar with less expense than can be made from the cane of Louisiana."

Moisture is Celery Growing.

I prepare the ground early in the spring, sow the seed where the sun can strike, and thus get a healthy growth. After sowing the seed, cover up the bed with old carpet or old bags until the seed is up. Moisture is an essential in celery growing. Leave the covering on the beds until the plants are all up, then remove and keep the ground moist and free from weeds. The middle of July I prepare the ground for the plants by digging trenches about 10 inches deep, and put in each trench three inches well rotted manure and two inches soil. Take up the plants and cut off the tallest leaves, and thoroughly wet the roots and set in the trench. Do not puddle around plants; it is injurious. Keep free from weeds and earth up, and you are almost sure of success. I raised the Giant Pascal last year, and better celery I never saw.—Theodore B. Hoff, Morris Co., N. J.

Rotation of Crops.

The rotation of crops is undoubtedly one of the most important problems for farmers to consider who wish to obtain the best crops for a series of years at the least expense for manure or fertilizers. At the Minnesota station mangel-wurzels gave the best yield after which came rye, flax after potatoes; corn, potatoes and peas after corn. The hoed crops, especially corn, potatoes and mangels, gave a good effect in preparing the land for other crops, while the reverse is true for flax, wheat and even field peas. The largest yield of field corn was given by White Canada, followed by Alpha, Blue Prussian, Crown and Green Canada. French Chevalier proved to be the best out of 34 varieties of barley, followed by Odessa, Champion of Vermont, Highland Chief, Black Hulless and Salzes.—Detroit Free Press.

Care in Selecting Seed Potatoes.

*I made three applications of bor*deaux mixture to my potatoes last summer. The result at harvest proved that not one bushel in 50 showed any signs of rot or scab. A portion of my seed potatoes was grown on new burnt land, just cleared from a heavy forest growth. Few farmers are as careful as they should be in the selection of their seed potatoes. In order to save a few cents per bushel at planting time, they lose as many dollars at harvest. Poor seed never produced a good crop, and good seed hardly ever fails of producing a good crop.—E. E. Parkhurst, Aroostook County, Me.

Weight of Onions.

The legal weight of onions varies considerably in the different states. New York has no legal statute in that regard, but in New Jersey and the south it is 57 pounds per bushel, except Tennessee, 56, the same in most of the West, while in Connecticut and Ohio it is only 50 pounds, Maine, 47, Vermont, Massachusetts and the Dakotas 52 pounds, Michigan 54, Indiana 48 pounds.

Storage of Vegetables.

Potatoes, turnips, table beets, carrots, etc., should be kept where it is perfectly dark and the protection should be afforded as soon as they are taken from the ground. If stored in a cellar, there is nothing better than a good tight barrel with three inches of sand on top. Take any cheap material, old bran sacks are best, cut in piece the right size to well cover the top of the barrel, then put on the sand and the following spring you will find your vegetables as fresh and plump as when taken from the ground. Keep the cellar cool, but never take any chance of letting frost get in. If there is the least danger of this, burn a few lamps or heater, a kerosene stove, till danger is over.

Potatoes deteriorate in cooking qualities when exposed to light probably more than any vegetable grown and should strictly be kept in perfect darkness if the highest quality is to be preserved. Probably the cheapest and most desirable method of storage in large quantity is in pits in the field. Dig the pits when the crop is taken out and fill directly. Do not fear water for you never will find any either in actual or imaginary quantity in the pits.

Experience suggests that a pit 6 ft. long, 3 wide and 3 to 4 deep for general purposes is best, though for mangels the length might be greater with safety. Fill the pits even full or a trifle less and cover immediately with a good heavy layer of tops or if these are valuable for feeding, with bright straw or hay. Do not put on any earth until there is danger of severe freeze and then do not cover more than 5 or 6 inches deep. When indications point to the ground freezing 2 or 3 inches in 24 hours shape the top of the pit like the roof of a house with only a slight pitch. It is necessary to make any provision for drawing off surface water. Before covering on any soil a stick should be placed in each corner of the pit as nearly perpendicular as possible for a guide in covering. A single day's operation may seem an expert cannot cover evenly and be certain that exposed portions are safe without these guides. Cover the cold side much more securely than the sunny side. Take out potatoes for use in sunny days during the winter when wanted, when the mercury is above freezing. Do not leave any vegetables in a pit to be taken out at another time. In filling something over 2000 pits I never have found any serious water and very rarely damage by frost. The chief danger in the use of this method is in covering with earth before the sweating process is complete.

Cabbage are best kept by turning the heads down. Leave the top of a row, placing as closely as possible. Any standing in this way for a day or two so that all the water may be well drained out, throw up the earth on each side in the shape of a roof, completely covering the heads and the stump and all. When taken out they should be marketed at once. Onions will keep best in a temperature very near freezing, but the air must be dry, and the layer about a foot deep or less. Turnips in a little colder room if the frost happens to touch the bulbs no harm will be done. Squash and pumpkins keep all right if the air is dry and moderately warm.—A. A. Southwick in Agriculturist.

A Remedy for Scour in Calves.

Scouring in calves gives trouble on all, and sometimes causes very serious loss on a few farms. It is an infectious dysentery in young animals, and rarely lasts less than 10 per cent. of those attacked are saved. The more general trouble is known as white scours or gastroenteritis, and most farmers have a private remedy for it. A great thing is to prevent scour if possible by a proper knowledge of food and attention to diet generally. On looking through the cow houses on a large Danish dairy farm recently, I noticed that in the troughs in the calf pens there were always two lumps for the animals to lick. One was the customary piece of rock salt and the other a piece of chalk. To an inquiry, the learned professor who had the farm under his direction replied that it was to keep the calves from becoming scour in later years. He added that rock salt and chalk were always easily accessible and the calves were never or rarely troubled with the complaint which is so prevalent on American farms. In all probability it is the chalk and not the preventive well known to many people, as prepared chalk is a constituent of some remedies for diarrhoea and scouring, but it is not generally followed.—A. J. Stanton.

Coal Ashes for Currant Bushes.

Placing ashes around currant bushes during the winter has been known to keep worms from them the next summer.

"You look worried," said the impudent man's friend.

"I am slightly annoyed. I am having difficulty about getting a check cashed."

"Why, that ought to be easy."

"It's like a great many other things. It's easy enough when you get started. My trouble is that I can't get anybody to write the check."—Washington Star.

An Irishman was looking at the Morse Collection in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, when he turned suddenly and said to his companion, "Mike, will ye look at all them pots from Japan? What a country that must be for mustard!"

They are all heroes;
Captain Jinks,
Wounded and sore distressed,
With a sad and wobbling dexter limb
And six inches in his breast;
And Colonel Price,
With one arm gone
And crippled Major Mears,
And ere the humble Private John,
Whose minus both his ears.

They do not bluster of their wars,
Or tell how brave concurred;
And of their stitches, stumps and scars
They never say a word.
Not one of all the band declaims
With fervor fierce and hot
Of circumstances, dates and names
Concerned with battles fought.

And yet I know that Major Mears,
And also Captain Jim,
Could tell as tales to fetch our tears
As make our eyes grow dim.
And even humble Private John,
Whose head's so smoothly round
Because both of his ears are gone,
Could cause our hearts to bound.

But modestly these heroes hold
Eorge temptations to Grow eloquent of days of old,
When hearts were brave and true—
Crippled in wretched wise and maimed,
Their only wail the sad—
To pass from view a sung, untamed,
With not a mourning friend.

Vain be your sympathetic tears!
Alas! they cannot charge
Back to his head the private's ears
Nor stand the Major's limb!
The only hope for these poor, racked
Victims of Ruby Paul's
Is for some Congress to enact
A pension list for dolls.

A Shark in Harness.

On the shallow lagoons of the outer Florida reef the bottom in ten feet of water is white as snow, while, on that dark objects resting upon it stand out with startling distinctness. One of the frequenters of the reef is a shark, known as the nurse, a huge fellow, 9 or 10 feet in length, who seeks the seclusion of the shallows and apparently loves solitude. At least, pretends to, as heis seen lying perfectly quiet for hours, often permitting a boat to sail over him.

Naturally so sluggish a fish was easily captured, and one day, after watching the sharks swimming around the lagoon and refusing to leave the white shallow bottom, it occurred to a party of boys that the nurse shark would make an admirable steed, and immediate plans were formulated to capture one.

The sharks were most plentiful near a long, narrow island, and here the boys made their headquarters. Their mode of transportation was extreme*ly primitive.* The boat in which they crossed from the main island where they lived was the wooden casing of an arch some masons had been making, a boat-shaped affair, blunt at both ends. This had been caulked and provided with row-locks, and in it the boys made frequent excursions. The plan was to sail the boat quietly over the sharks, then lower a slip-noose down, and take one by the head.

The rope and a pair of grains were thrown into the boat, and, all being ready, the boys started on their expedition. They soon sighted a black spot, which told of the presence of a school of sharks, and a few moments later were quietly drifting over them. Not a word was spoken, and the greatest caution was observed, as one of the boys held the noose in his hand, while another lowered the noose. Unfortunately, an oar was dropped overboard, and, with a whirl of their tails, the big fishes were off in every direction.

In the excitement of the moment a third boy seized the spear, and hurled it at a shark that was passing beneath the boat. The weapon took effect, and the next moment the line, which was fastened to the pole, stiffened out with a jerk, whirling the boat round and round, and throwing the boys down violently into the bottom. When they picked themselves up they found the flat-bottomed boat dashing along at a rapid rate. They had secured a steed, though not in the manner anticipated.

Up the reef the nurse swam, now pulling the boat down dangerously near the water and sending out a big wave on either side, then turning with a rush to avoid a coral bank, that grew on the edge of the channel, and racing back to the starting point.

All this was very exciting. One boy held the line by bracing back; another took an oar and attempted to steer the craft in its wild race, while the other boy was merely an enthusiastic spectator. Suddenly the shark turned again, and the bow boy, rising to see what new direction it was taking, lost his balance and was jerked overboard. Before his companions realized fully the situation he was being towed along on the surface by the demoralized shark. The reef boys were as much at home in the water as on land, so the unforseen accident simply added to the sport. The remaining boys rowed the boat across the lagoon, gutting off the shark, soon picking up their companion, who had pluckily held the line during the exciting tow. The shark soon became weary of dragging the boat, and was then run ashore by his captors.—C. F. Holden.

LITTLE PRINCE TATTERS.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his cap!
Over the hedge he threw it;
Into the river it fell "kerslap!"
Stupid old thing to do it!
Now mother may sigh and nurse may fume
For the gay little cap with its eagle plume,
One cannot be thinking all day of such matters!
Trifles are trifles!" says little Prince Tatters.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his coat—
Buying, he did not need it!
Left it right there by the nanny goat,
And nobody never need it!"
Now mother and nurse may search till night
For the little new coat with its buttons bright,
But—"Coat sleeves or shirt sleeves, how little it matters!
Trifles are trifles!" says little Prince Tatters.

Little Prince Tatters has lost his ball!
Rolled away down the street!
Somebody'll have to find it, that's all,
Before he can sleep or eat.
Now raise the neighborhood quickly, do!
And send for the crier and constable, too!
"Trifles are trifles; but serious matters,
These must be seen to," says little Prince Tatters.

Fishes Need Slippery Coats.

The slippery coat of slime found on all fishes is essential to their existence. It is secreted usually in a continuous series of ducts with numerous openings, which in some cases are plainly visible, and in others imperceptible. There are also pores for the secretion of the mucus in the fish's head. The slime exudes through the divisions between the scales to the outer part of the body, over which it spreads, forming a sort of outer skin or covering, transparent, elastic and tenacious, and often having considerable body. Fishes vary greatly in the amount of slime which they secrete. The eel has a very liberal share, and a thirty-pound fish of two pounds weight will usually have a coating of slime a thirty-second of an inch in thickness.

One of the important functions of the fish's slimy coating is to protect it from the attacks of fungus, a form of plant life, and to keep it clean and fresh, foul and pure. If the fish is so injured that some spot becomes uncovered by the slime a barely visible fungus will be likely to lodge there, and when it is once lodged the process of reproduction is very rapid. It soon extends over the gills and kills the fish. The primary purpose of the slime of the fish is to reduce its friction when in motion and increase its speed. It also serves as a cushion for the scales, which it thus protects from many injuries. The slimy covering makes the fish hard to hold, and so enables it the more readily to escape from its enemies. In some cases the slime has a very rank smell, and this would also be one of its defense against other fish.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Singing the Pain Away.

An eight-year-old child with a cut in her hand was brought to a physician. It was necessary for the best results to take a few stitches with a surgeon's needle. While the paraphernalia was making preparations, the little girl swung her foot nervously against the chair, and was gently admonished by her mother who stood near to assist.

"That will do no harm," said the doctor, kindly, "as long as you hold your hand still," adding, with a glance at the strained, anxious face of the child, "You may cry as much as you like."

"I would rather sing," replied the girl, with a smile.

"All right, that would be better. What can you sing?"

"I can sing 'Give, give, said the little steam.' Do you know that?"

"I am not sure," responded the doctor. "How does it begin?"

The little patient proceeded to illustrate:

"That's beautiful," said the doctor. "I want to hear the whole of it."

All the while the skilled fingers were sewing up the wound, the sweet, childish voice sounded bravely through the room, and the only tears shed on the occasion came from the eyes of the mother.

It is, I believe, physiological fact that some expression of one's feelings tends to lessen pain.—Congregationalist.

Wasps Make Paper.

Wasps were the first and original paper makers, and as geometricians and architects vie with their relatives the bees. One has only to study the stories in that gray apartment house of the wasps' nest to wonder at and admire the skill of the builders. The wasps build their nests of a material made by gathering bits of weather-worn wood and chewing them up, making a true species of pulp. These buildings are equal to emergencies. A wasps' nest was once involuntarily uprooted that was under a board. Several days later it was discovered that the nest was well roofed by neat paper shingles. Never before, probably, had these wasps or their ancestors been called upon to roof a domicile, but these did this original work with much show of the knowledge of the principles of roof construction.—Chautauquan.

TAX ON NAVAL PURSES

REASONS WHY OFFICIALS DON'T OFTEN SAVE MONEY.

The Social Demands They are Obliged to Meet, the Necessity for a Double Outfit of Clothing, and the Miscellaneous Demands are Expensive.

Few officers in the army or navy are able to save a cent from one year's end to another. This is because tremendous demands are made on them, chiefly for social reasons.

Many people believe that the Government furnishes naval officers with their uniforms and living expenses, in addition to their salaries. This is a mistake that makes the average officer groan when he hears it mentioned. As a matter of fact the clothing which an officer requires is a steady and heavy drain on his income. In most foreign countries officers wear their uniforms exclusively. Not so in this. Here it *is the custom for them always to ap*pear on shore in civilian's clothes, and they do so when abroad also. This necessitates the maintenance of two complete outfits.

It falls to the lot of the ward-room mess to do the greater part of the general entertaining. In the ward room of every ship of almost all nations there is a regularly appointed visiting committee, whose duty it is to pay official calls on all foreign ships of war, as well as those under their own flag.

The officers of cruising ships do their best to keep up the reputation of the service and the nation and try to extend to the officers and officials of other nations every courtesy and to treat them with *genuine American cordial*ity. Spirituous liquors are not introduced on American ships, so the officers are confined to the use of light wines in their entertaining. This, however, does not prevent the mess wine bills from running up to the top notch, for on board of every American man-of-war there is a constant round of gayety in the ward-room.

The most abused and bothered man in the ward-room mess when it comes to entertaining is the caterer, who is not a hireling, but one of the officers of the mess, elected each month to do the catering.

Then the officers spend lots of money for curios, and are constantly being asked to contribute to all kinds of charities. Then, aboard ship with all kinds of subscription lists and officers are expected to contribute, no matter whether the cause be worthy or unworthy. Once when an American cruiser was lying in Turkish waters an old man came aboard one day. He was an *old-time ward-room performer and had been for so long in the little vil*lage port nearby that all the inhabitants knew his tricks as well as he did. He made frantic efforts to get away, but could not persuade the steamship people to take him. His last hope was the American ship. He went there, made a simple, unvarnished request for the money to pay his passage to a far distant port which he wished to make, got it and left on the next steamer.—New York Sun.

CONDUCT OF WILD HORSES.

Fear of Wolves, Speed of Colts and the Habit of Flying.

Another animal which, when in a state of nature, lives in droves, is the horse. It is almost as defenseless as the sheep, and when a herd of wild horses is attacked by wolves there is no escape but in flight. In its wild state the horse's natural habitat is on the open plains, not in mountainous regions, but on the steppes of Asia, and when attacked by wolves its only safety lies in its superior speed. If the young foal were not as swift as its parents it would fall an easy prey to its pursuer, and so, within a few generations, the wild horse might be utterly destroyed by its enemies. The curious thing is that the foal is quite as swift as its parents. When one looks at it, even in its domesticated condition, it seems to be all legs, and one is surprised to see how easily the slight body is borne along on those long legs beside the mother, even when she is running at the swiftest rate. In that fact lies the safety of the wild horse from destruction, and the thousands of generations in which that useful animal have been domesticated have brought no change in the peculiar conformation of the foal's limbs, though it is no longer needed for its original purpose.

Another curious thing is, that one of the faults of the horse of which we are apt to complain, we mean the habit of shying, is the survival of an old habit which was useful and necessary when its ancestors were still roaming wild upon the plains. Then every horse was constantly on the outlook for an enemy, and it did not look only with one eye. It habitually kept turning its head in all directions, so as to catch the slightest sound which would indicate the presence of danger. Not only when a wolf was seen did the herd take flight; any sound, as of the wolf breaking through the long grass, caused an instantaneous stampede; and something of that habit still survives. The horse seldom fears the objects which it sees unless they appear suddenly, but the sudden appearance of some light thing driven by the wind, or some slight sound that perhaps may not be heard by his master, may cause an instant and involuntary shy, such as the poor brute would instinctively make if he were still upon the plains. How unjust it is, and how utterly stupid, to justify his terror by watching him for such a fault! To do so is to make him only so much the readier to shy again, remembering—and he is sure to remember—that, even if there has been no reason for his involuntary shying, there is something to dread immediately afterward. The very sensible way to deal with this remnant of wildness in the domesticated horse is to stop and let him feel that there is nothing to fear, and so break down the remnant of his old and perfectly rational habit of flight from possible danger.—Our Animal Friends.

BY HEIGHT, NOT BY AGE.

How the Fare of Children on European Railways is Measured.

Nearly every one knows that the rule on railway trains and other public conveyances which provides for the carrying free of children under 5 years old, and for half fares for those between the ages of 5 and 12, often results in statements from the parents which are as trying to a normal conscience as the affidavits made by many tourists regarding dutiable goods among their belongings.

Sometimes these answers result in unpleasant controversies between conductors and passengers, but usually our national fact and good nature help along the adjustment without undue friction. In parts of Europe they have a way of fixing this matter so that no one has cause to quarrel about it.

Instead of going by a child's age, as to what rate of fare it shall pay, they go by size. The collector is provided with a 5 foot rule, and he rates the children by that. Any child under 24 inches in height travels free, while those who measure between 24 inches and 51 inches pay half fare. All who measure more than 4 feet 3 inches pay full fare.—New York Sun.

HER CONSIENCE.

It was a question of conscience—a New England conscience at that; moreover it began with a capital C.

"I've got it in the house, and I might as well make it up," mused Miss Hannah Davis.

"It" was a dress—a silk dress—a relic of days gone by.

"It's been lying there all these years," she went on, "and it seems real kind of sinful packed away there and not doing a soul a mite of good. It ain't right to have things put away where moth and rust doth corrupt."

She quoted this Bible authority with satisfaction.

"And it would save me buying, too," she added, hastily. "My old alpaca isn't very good. I've turned and washed it till it really ain't decent, and it's cost considerable to buy a new one. And this dress all right in the house and coating nothing. I s'pose folks would think I was terribly extravagant, but then, I don't care. I guess if I give the money I'd like to see a nice black dress and give it to the missionary society, and wear the silk instead, nobody can find fault; but then, I ain't obliged to tell 'em anyway. And it's awful handsome, too."

The golden-brown silk shimmered and shone and reflected the rays of light.

"I shall look better than any one there," she said half aloud.

"As well as any one," she corrected. "And I don't only see any one that it's an old silk made over. That ain't necessary. You needn't tell all you know, Aunt Jane used to say, and I'm sure she was a very good woman."

She smiled happily as she gave one parting glance and turned away.

There was a perceptible stir when Miss Hannah Davis, closely followed by her sister-in-law, entered the parsonage.

"Hannah Davis's got a new dress," some one whispered loudly as she passed through a little knot of women on the way to the bedroom to lay aside her wraps.

"And it's a silk one, too."

This event of the entire assembly were on her as she emerged from the little room and sank down into the nearest empty chair without making the usual round of handshaking.

"She feels stuck up," one woman whispered to her neighbor. "Well, I guess a silk dress don't make her any better'n the rest of us." The speaker reared her head and spoke across the intervening workers to Miss Hannah.

"We were just talking about a subscription for Miss Hall," she said in very audible tones. "It's for the Leavitt's. You know them. They've had awful luck lately, and there's a lot due on the mortgage, and we thought if we could just give them a little lift it would be real Christian like."

"I think 'twould be real nice," Miss Hannah assented warmly. "I'll be glad to give something, though I can't give much, you know."

She blushed as she spoke. All eyes were on her in the most uncomfortable way. Why did they kind of smile?

They must know she didn't have much money.

Could she afford to give fifty cents, she wondered.

"Well, how much will you give?"

The voice came with startling distinctness.

"Five dollars, say?"

Miss Hannah started visibly. What were they thinking of? Her hands fell into her lap. They touched the smooth silk. It must be the dress.

"It's an old"—she started to say, but the words died on her lips.

"What did you say?" her tormentor leaned forward.

The minister's wife was standing in the door, smiling.

Miss Hannah shut her lips tight.

"Yes, you can put me down for five," she said in a metallic voice.

There seemed to be more people in the room. Then some newcomers entered, and eager attention was turned to them.

"I hope you realize that you are properly punished for your sinful pride, Hannah Davis," she said, as she locked the door of her little room that night and hastily took off the offending dress.

"It was vanity all the time that made you do it and you knew it, but tried to salve your conscience with saying it was 'economy.'"

She spoke rapidly.

"If you was so terribly anxious about being economical," scornfully, "why didn't you think over that measents delaine?" A pause.

"And then you tried to hush your conscience by saying you'd give the money a new dress would cost to the missionary society.

"And, Hannah, now you've gone and given $5 to that woman for her subscription, and you knew you couldn't afford it, and it's a sin to spend money you can't afford."

She stared hard at the dress.

"I tried when you was scared into it because you was so proud, and pride is another sin. You didn't want them to think but what you could buy the dress and give away money, too. That makes three sins."

Then she went to the little davenport and wrote two notes.

Into one she slipped a five dollar bill and directed it to the treasurer of the missionary society, then she directed the other to the minister's wife and wrote steadily across the room and pinned it on the bundle.

"I shall send it over the first thing in the morning," she said.

A happier light crept into her eyes as she blew out the candle.

"I guess my conscience will rest easier now," she said.—Commercial Tribune.

To Clean Black Silk.

When a thrifty Frenchwoman wishes to clean black silk, she brushes it thoroughly and wipes it with a cloth. Then, after it is free from dust, she lays it flat on a board and sponges it with hot coffee which has been strained through muslin and freed from sediment. The silk is sponged on the right side, allowed to become half dry and then ironed on the wrong side.

The coffee removes every particle of grease and restores the brilliancy of the silk without giving it the shiny appearance or the crinkly and papery stiffness which results from beer, or indeed from any other liquid except ammonia and water, which last does not freshen the color and gloss of the silk as coffee does. The silk is much improved by the process, and the good effect is permanent.

Silk should never be ironed with a hot iron put directly on the silk. Always lay thin wrapping paper, such as is used by our best dry goods stores over it, and iron through the paper.

When stitching thin silk, or, indeed any cloth flimsy enough to draw in the machine, lay paper over it also and stitch through. The paper will tear away easily along the line of perforations made by the needle.

Present Day Lack of Gallantry.

During the past few years life in the great centres of population has witnessed a falling off of many of the little gallantries of men to women. The entrance of the gentler sex into the labor market as a competitor of men has tended to lessen the chivalrous feeling so characteristic of our fathers. Says the Chaperone Magazine: "Little attentions mean much to a woman, and they have lacked the small courtesies of life due to themselves from the opposite sex so much and for so long that they are trying to make themselves believe that they can do without them, act as if they did not expect them, but they do. They are *longing for the days of their grand*fathers, and the men who lived in them, when the little attentions that everything will come back in seven years has failed miserably in this case, and it is a serious matter. We have wondered what would become of our women! But what has become of our chivalrous, courteous men?"

One Way to Cook a Chicken.

An excellent way to cook and serve a chicken is thus: After cutting the chicken open down the back pound the breast bones with a wooden mallet to loosen and flatten the bird. Lay the bird in a shallow baking tin with some slices of salt pork, and place the pan in a hot oven. Pour a little salted water into the pan and frequently baste the chicken with it while in the oven. Let it remain until about half cooked. Then take it from the pan and place it upon a broiler over a clear fire. Broil the under side of the chicken, and then turn it and cook the side which is delicate brown. When cooked place it upon a heated platter, sprinkle it with salt and pepper and pour some melted butter over it. Scatter chopped parsley over the whole. A chicken cooked in this manner has all the delicate flavor of broiling and will be more thoroughly and evenly cooked.

To Renovate Velvet.

A simple method of cleaning velvet, velveteen and plush is as follows: With the assistance of a stiff whisk broom, a pan of boiling water and an obliging friend, who will brush up the nap as you hold the goods taut over the steam, the wrong side to the water, the material will look like new. This process removes wrinkles, brightens the color and makes the crushed nap stay up when brushed against the grain, and is well adapted for black or colored-pile fabrics. If the pile is a genuine silk put it on to remove it with French chalk before the steaming process.

Children's Poor Teeth.

A recent article in The American Kitchen Magazine gives the opinion of a dentist that the poor teeth of children is often due to lack of exercise. Much of the modern food given to children is in the form of soups, purees and mush made from cereals, and not enough work is given to the teeth to bring the blood to the blood in large quantities to them. It does *not, therefore, give up its strengthen*ing qualities in sufficient quantity to make strong teeth. The dentist recommended that things hard to chew be given to the children.

Remedy for Slipping Rugs.

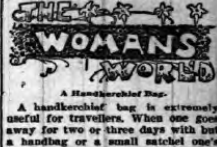
House-proud women who rejoice in smooth, hard floors often find the slipping of rugs stretched upon them a serious annoyance. It is a positive danger, as falls may easily ensue from it. A rug salesman contributed the other day this suggestion as a remedy:

"Get the rugs thoroughly," he said, "and turn them right side downward until dry. It will not hurt them and will relieve this tendency to slip.

The explanation is that the wetting dissolves some slightly gummy substance used in their treatment.

"What makes you so utterly discouraged just after Mr. Chilbone's unqualified praise of your picture?" inquired the artist's friend.

"It's a sure sign he doesn't want to buy it."—Washington Star.



A Handkerchief Bag.

A handkerchief bag is extremely useful for travelers, as when one goes away for two or three days with but a handbag or a small satchel one's handkerchiefs are very liable to become tumbled or soiled before one is ready to use them. But if kept in a tidy bag they will come forth as fresh and dainty as when they were put in. The making of the bag is within the power of any one who can sew and do simple embroidery.

Buy a quarter of a yard of fine shirting linen. Rinse and iron it before cutting. Cut off from one end five inches, and double for the bottom of the bag, making it an even square. On one half outline in the prevailing color of the embroidery the word, "Handkerchiefs." Baste a two-inch hem across the other piece of linen, and below this embroider scattered flowers. Violets, with stems but no leaves, lend themselves most readily to this design, and are suggestive for a handkerchief bag. Then join the ends. Stitch the hem, and three-quarters of an inch above stitch again, to make a place for the drawing ribbons. Put a frill of narrow lace on top of bag. Gather the bottom, divide into quarters, and sew on the bottom piece, first turning in the edges and basting them together. Get two yards of narrow violet ribbon—wash ribbon is preferable—for drawing strings, a little violet powder laid between some drops of perfume, will add to the attractions of the bag as a dainty, acceptable gift.—New York Tribune.

Mrs. Gladstone's Influence.

A woman's silent influence over the affairs of a nation is shown in the career of Mrs. Gladstone. She is not a social or political leader, nor in any way a diplomat in petticoats. She is responsible, however, far more than is generally known, not only for the long and vigorous health at her ripe old age, but also for his great ability to accomplish the amount of work which he has through his public life and since his retirement. When he was in office it was her constant care that he should not be distracted by anything that she could prevent, words that meant remarkable self-abnegation. The interests of a growing family of seven children with a food and proud mother might easily have made considerable demand upon the father's attention, but neither this nor any social duties, nor any household perplexities, were ever permitted to touch his leisure from statecraft cares. Her watchfulness has not decreased with later years; she is still his best physician, and *saves his strength in unnum*erable ways, trifling in themselves, but important in the aggregate, and possible only to one who has made such saving a life study. Blessed beneath with excellent health all her life, she wears her 83 years lightly, and still shows many traces of the handsome Miss Glynne, who captivated the rising young M. P. over half a century ago.—New York Evening Post.

Sleeping on the Stomach.

Sound, restful sleep, both by night and by day, is more easily induced if from the first the child be taught to lie on its stomach and face. The only necessary precaution against suffocation is the provision of a smooth, flat, somewhat hard hair mattress without a pillow. The advantages of this position are many. Some one has said that half the diseases of infancy result from keeping the stomach too cold and the other half from overheating the spine. By adopting the position suggested as the uniform one during the hours of sleep, the stomach and abdomen are kept well warm and the nervous circle and stomach relax, and materially to aid the digestive process, while the spine and back of the head are no longer overheated by the increased temperature of the sleeping child. It may be a coincidence merely, but it is at least a significant one, that all the children the writer has known to rest habitually face downward, have been unusually sound sleepers, and have enjoyed more than average good health.—Harper's Bazar.

To Wash White Feathers.

Soiled white feathers, after being washed, are dried by patting and shaking over the fire. A dull silver knife must be used to curl each fibre of the best effect. In preparing for washing, pour boiling water on shavings of white soap and a little soda. When a lather has been formed there is no too hot for the hand, each feather is washed separately. If the lather becomes dark-colored, another must be made. The rinsing water should be cold and a little blue.

Raising Standard of the State Bar.

The subject of elevating the standard of the New Jersey Bar is a live and pressing issue among the leading lawyers of the State. Under the present system of examinations for admission to the Bar many men who are obviously unqualified in both character and talent are admitted. Effective reform is demanded by those both in and out of the profession, and as aiming to show what might be done to elevate the standard of the legal lights the New Jersey Law Journal, of which A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, is editor, has been publishing a symposium of opinions by leading lawyers of New Jersey. Among the contributions printed on this subject in the last issue of The Journal is one by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city. Mr. Marsh's leading position and his successful career as a lawyer in the State courts make anything he says in reference to the matter of much interest. Mr. Marsh makes the following sensible comments:

The State has no greater moral right to license to an incompetent man its license to practice at the bar, than it has to such a man its commission to sit on the bench. The danger from an incompetent counsel is greater than the danger from an incompetent judge, since the action of the latter may generally be reviewed and the harm which may follow the injury caused by the former is often-times remediless.

If the subject is put in its proper light, the public will see that the proposed legislation is in direct line with the trend of that class of modern legislation universally approved, which, from time to time, subjects to more stringent tests the qualifications of certified accountants, electricians, apothecaries, physicians and surgeons, locomotive engineers, pilots, steamboat and other trained men who are entrusted with power over property or health and life.

A strong public sentiment is needed because, as experience has shown, there will always be found in the Legislature a few men who hope to gain easy admission to the bar, and who will otherwise possess sufficient influence with their legislative colleagues to defeat the most meritorious bill that can be devised.

A Dubious View.

The recent agitation concerning the condition of the city sewage beds and the great howl of indignation that has come from Dunellen people, has attracted the attention of the Newark Sunday Call, and Sunday that paper printed the following editorial:

There is renewed agitation in Dunellen and vicinity over the condition of the Plainfield sewage disposal works. Do the records would warrant it, but the offering looks became cleared, and it is asserted that the crude sewage has been passing into the stream. This report or complaint is only a little more serious than those which preceded it, and there is a loud demand that "something should be done." East Orange went through a like experience and abandoned its plant and returned it to a worse condition than Plainfield. These three comprise the notable instances of efforts at intelligent sewage disposal in this vicinity. Each cost a good deal of money and each is a failure. The plans were not bad, although probably not on a large enough scale; but the trouble came in operation. The cost of operating is large, the necessity for expensive changes is frequent, and there is a disposition among local authorities to object to expenditures, while work which requires speed is left in place in the hands of political appointees.

People sometimes marvel at the vast expenditures that fall upon large cities for maintenance of the municigovernment, but it is a fact in most cases the larger the city the smaller the cost per capita of people. For instance, the president of the Newark Board of Trade gives the following facts and figures of comparison of cost of local government between the New Jersey metropolis and a number of neighboring towns and cities. The cost to Newark is $7.14 per capita. Orange $8.15, West Orange $18 01, Montclair $20 33. The tax rate in Newark was $2 10 last year, in East Orange it was $2.50, Orange $3 76, West Orange $3 98 and Montclair $3.24, and yet in Newark there were large improvements to make the rate higher than usual.

Morristown has decided to appeal from the Supreme Court decision that she is not a third-class city, but just a plain, ordinary town, which has falsely assumed too many civilized airs. With its horse shows, national golfing matches and many other events that attract the eyes of the world towards them, it is, indeed, galling for the Morristown people to think that they rank but as a country town. Since we Plainfielders got into the second-class of cities we look patronizingly upon our elite friends over the Watchung spur.

Publishing the Laws.

The New Brunswick Fredonian urges the New Jersey Editorial Association or somebother body of newspapermen to take up the question of publishing the session laws and bring the matter before the Legislature in a forceful manner. The Fredonian says that the bill should provide for the publication in full of local acts only, and a mere synopsis of the others. Quoting the editorial from The Fredonian, the Elizabeth Journal says:

The Governor is opposed to printing the laws in the newspapers, and every lawyer, in and out of the Legislature, is opposed to it. The old system of publishing the laws was a political club used in a most malicious partisan manner, and it gave legislators a excuse for abolishing the whole system, under the specious plea of economy. What should have been done was to reform, not abolish, the system, but now that is abolished it will be difficult to reestablish even an equitable system in the legislative mind. The newspaper men are, to a large degree, responsible for this theoretical abuse, and for the wrong done to the people. They catered to the legislators of their own party, and upheld them in authority and allowed their own throats to be cut. They should have held their legislators to a strict accountability. Not one of them but would be glad to see the name of the legislators of their respective districts, and yet it has been a favorite sport for a number of years back to lie into the fit to newspapers. The people, however, will put a stop to it if it is not wanted. It is a question of right or wrong, and as such it should be pressed to a successful issue.

The Essex county delegation of Assemblymen have undertaken an admirable and profitable practice each week in relation to their official duties. The Essex gentlemen realize the difficulty of Legislators getting at the true sentiments of their respective localities on matters of public importance, and as a step to overcome that condition they have resolved to hold public conferences at regular intervals during the Legislative session, at which constituents are invited to appear and voice their sentiments. In operation the conference will be a miniature Assembly, where a consensus of opinion for that county may be obtained in the effort to enlighten and direct the Legislators. With such a large delegation of Assemblymen as Essex possesses, such a conference, when attended by all or a majority of the Legislators, secures for its dignity and influence that smaller counties could not duplicate.

An important bill introduced in the Legislature provides that there shall be appropriated annually by the Legislature whatever sum is deemed wise for the support of the public schools of the State, which sum shall be apportioned among the school districts with a view to reducing the annual State school tax. The tax now is $6 per child, and the purpose of this bill is gradually to cut down that amount till the whole tax is wiped out, if the condition of the State's treasury from year to year will permit. For the present it is not expected that the legislative appropriation will permit more than a partial reduction of the tax.

The fact that the time for making application for liquor licenses in Plainfield is nearly at hand lends contemporaneous interest to legislation at Trenton affecting such mattters. Assemblyman John King, of Passaic county, has introduced a bill providing that in all cities there shall be a Board of Excise Commissioners, to consist of three persons, but two to belong to the same political party, to be appointed by the Mayor for three years, and confirmed by the governing body of the city, the salaries for each member of the Board not to exceed $150 a year.

According to Manila advices "large numbers of the American troops are fraternizing with the natives and that many of them are engaged to Filipino girls." We don't mind the $20,000,000 that Spain is to be paid for her interests in the Philippines, but when it comes to allowing the Filipino damsels to capture our gallant boys with their artful ways we think it is time to cry enough! Unless the expansionists secure the censoring of such news they may expect their cause to fail.

When it is considered how the late Leon Abbett was prevented from being elected United States Senator six years ago, it is not to be wondered at that his son—now a member of the Assembly—hesitated about casting his vote for the reelection of Senator Smith by arising in the Lower House during the progress of voting and stating that it was not by his personal choice that Mr. Smith secured his vote for the empty honor.

The Metuchen Recorder goes back three years to get a good view of John Kean, who is now United States Senator from New Jersey. The Recorder says: "John Kean is more than a rich man. He stood up alone in the New Jersey delegation and voted for the nomination of Thomas B. Reed for President of the United States. It was a manly thing to do. It showed that he was more than a mere politician also."

Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Staats, of Bound Brook, were the guests Friday of their uncle, Garrett Eick, of East Third street.

Railway Reformatory Stir.

The first fruits of Governor Voorhees' inaugural cropped out last night in the Assembly at Trenton in a concurrent resolution providing that the joint committee on appropriations make an investigation of the condition and requirements of the Railway Reformatory, and recommended to the Legislature the policy which should be adopted in regard to its completion. The original estimate of the cost of the institution was $100 000. Over $400 000 has already been spent, and it is estimated the cost will be more than a $1,000 000. The Johnson resolution provides that the joint committee shall have power to subpœna witnesses and make a thorough investigation of the work that has been done. Senator Johnson said the resolution was in accord with the views expressed by Governor Voorhees in his inaugural address.

John Kean's Career.

Almost every person in Union county has come to regard Senator-elect John Kean as an acquaintance, owing to his intimacy with Union county affairs. The following brief biography of Mr Kean's career will not be amiss at this moment, however:

John Kean was born in Union county Dec. 6th, 1852, and first drew in the same house where he first saw the light of day. He is a graduate of Yale College and Columbia Law School. He studied law with Chief Justice Magie, but never practiced the profession. He is extensively engaged in the banking and manufacturing business.

Mr. Kean is vice-president of the Manhattan Company, of New York, and has a controlling interest in the Plainfield and street railway companies of Elizabeth. In 1892 he was elected to Congress and in 1894 he was defeated for re-election by Robert S. Green, who afterwards became Governor of New Jersey. He ran again in 1896 and was elected by a large majority. He was a candidate for Governor in 1895 and was defeated by George T. Werts.

Aguinaldo threatens to recall his envoy to this country unless President McKinley recognizes him very soon, which, the Filipino Junta says, "will remove an important medium for arriving at a peaceful understanding." It is well for Aguinaldo to follow these little formalities of government lest we should forget that he is still in the ring.

Former Mayor Magowan turns up in New York and has a man arrested for stealing two $1,400 bills from him. Magowan is a corker. How say man could have so much money as that, after going through what the Trentonian has in the past few years, is more of a mystery than the Adams poisoning case.

The strongest argument that can be made in favor of Plainfield securing a large force of letter-carriers is found in the fact that the other day one of the carriers was compelled to return to the postoffice with over 140 letters of the first class that he was unable to deliver by reason of the time assigned to him for covering his route expiring before he had got over it.

It may be a trifle late in comparison with others who have extended their congratulations to Mr. Kean, but nevertheless we congratulate the Sage of Ursino on his election to the United States Senate, which was formally consummated this noon in joint session of the Legislature.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Proprietor Staats, of the Grenada Hotel, is somewhat puzzled to know what to name the hotel which he is soon to open. All sorts of names have been suggested, but Mr. Staats is lost for a name that suits him. He will probably make up his mind in a few days to select some other name than the one now in use.

It is now the fashion among young women to wear fur boas to which are attached the heads or imitation heads of the animals from which the fur is obtained. These boas have been growing larger and larger during the past year. A new dodger from these life-like wraps was recently demonstrated at a Plainfield church. A young woman seated herself in a pew and hung her boa over the back of the seat in front of her. Now in that pew was a small child. As the sermon progressed the small child became restless and looked around. Now it so happened that a head of a fox had been placed at the end of the boa and hung over the pew in truly realistic fashion. As the child turned about he caught sight of this fierce head close by. With a scream the child turned to his mother and his cries were hushed with difficulty.

WANT TO PRINT LAWS.

STATE EDITORS PRESENT THEIR SCHEME TO THE GOVERNOR.

But Mr. Voorhees Does Not Give Much Encouragement, However — Editors Will Try Persuasion With the Legislature.

Trenton, January 25.—Governor Voorhees has had a number of callers but none has occasioned more interest than a committee from the New Jersey Editorial Association. It was chaperoned by former Senator Winton, editor of The Bergen County Democrat, and Anthony Kilgore, of The Hunterdon County Democrat. The object of the visitors was to secure the support of the Governor for a new plan the association has devised for the publication of the session laws in ninety State papers—not more than eight or less than two to be located in any one county. Under this plan, all the laws affecting the counties in which designated papers are published shall be printed therein in full, and all other laws in synopsis only.

This plan, the committee believes, would fix the cost of publishing the laws at about $20 000 annually, instead of $100 000 a year, the figure reached just prior to the session of the Senate Investigating Committe, which recommended and succeeded in having the law repealed.

Governor Voorhees was chairman of that committee, and he intimated that his views on the subject have not undergone any material change. A glance at the annual appropriation for publishing the laws of this session showed just $7,500 allotted for the purpose, and the Governor remarked that this was much lower than even the $20 000 for which the committee declared the State papers could do the work. It was not within his province, however, he added, to pass upon the merits or demerits of a bill before it reached him, and he did not want to stand in the position of influencing legislation.

It then developed that before calling on the Governor the committee had tried their persuasive powers with several Senators and Assemblymen, and were asked by all to get the Governor's views before having the measure introduced. The committee will make another attempt next Monday night, and some of the members appear to think the effort will be successful.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

It seems from investigations made by Comptroller Heston, of Atlantic City, that Newark is able to borrow money for temporary loans on better terms than any other city in the State. The local banks charge Atlantic City six per cent. for discounting its paper, and Mr. Heston thought this was too much. Upon making inquiries he learned that Newark pays three and three and a half per cent. Burlington and Jersey City four per cent., Paterson four, five and six per cent., New Brunswick four to six per cent., Bordentown, Lambertville, Orange, Passaic, Plainfield and Princeton five per cent., Trenton five and six per cent. and Camden six per cent.—Newark News.

The bowling team of the Roselle Casino has been rather handicapped this year owing to a lack of unity among the members of the Casino. The schedule of games was arranged late in the fall, but the entertainment committee of the Casino has completely ignored it and at angled its entertainments without regard to the plans of the bowling section. In consequence a number of games, regularly scheduled, have been necessarily postponed.

One of the most exciting series of games in the Central Journal League will be rolled on the Park Club alleys a week from Monday evening when the team from the Roselle Casino, now in the lead, will roll three games with the Parks. It will be the next game to take place in this city. The Parks will put up their best men on that occasion and quite a little enthusiasm among the members of the club is expected that night. The willing to stand ing well in popular favor at the Park Club now, and each championship game, rolled on the local alleys, has quite a number of spectators out to watch it.

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. Grain-O is made of pure grain, and when properly prepared tastes like the finest grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it, 15c. and 25c.

THE CZAR'S SCHEME.

EDITOR STEAD SAYS AMERICA CAN INSURE UNIVERSAL PEACE.

Nicholas' Proposals Are Sincere—Russia Ready to Arrest Future Increase of Her Armaments but Europe Is Sceptically Apathetic.

William T. Stead, writing from London, says:

"I have seen the Czar. I have heard from his own lips the earnest desire of his heart that something practical should be done, and that quickly, to divert to the service of humanity some of the many millions now devoted to the preparations for war. He has taken the initiative in summoning the conference.

"He is prepared to give earnest of his sincerity by arresting the future increase of Russian armaments. But unless he is supported by the peoples who detest militarism, as well as by those who groan under its burdens, his well-meant endeavor will fail.

"What is hoped by those friends of peace and enemies of militarism who turn their eyes to the Great Republic of the New World is that between them they may accuse the voice of the United States will, by public demonstrations, formal resolutions and by every other method whereby a democratic people gives expression to its convictions and its aspirations, have manifested to the world their determination to help the Czar to put this thing through."

THE CZAR OF RUSSIA.

"A national committee to promote the success of the Peace Conference, with local committees in every city in the Union, would do much to achieve this end.

"In England, where the difficulties are much greater, owing to the sense of peculiar danger which Russia has been the baleful legacy of the Crimean war, such a national committee is already in course of formation. By the end of next month it is expected there will not be any considerable centre of population which will not have formed its public meeting demanding that energetic support be given to the Russian proposals.

"These proposals, stated briefly, are (1) that there should be declared a truce of God for five years; (2) that during that period the governments should not increase their expenditure on armaments beyond the figure stated by them at the conference of the maximum of their needs; (3) that some international agreement should, if disputes arise between the signatories of this pact, bind them always to invite the mediation of neutral powers before appealing to the sword.

"A joint Anglo-American deputation of, say, fifteen men and five women, chosen from the foremost of our race, charged with the mandate to proceed through Europe on a pilgrimage of peace to present an address of thanks to the Czar, would rouse the continent. It would affirm the unity of the English-speaking race and demonstrate that it had both the capacity and the will to act as a unit in the cause of peace.

"Round the Anglo-American deputation would group themselves in the first place the representatives of the seven small states—Sweden, Norway Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and Portugal, with an aggregate population of nearly thirty millions—and with these reinforcements the great international delegation would begin its crusade through Europe.

"In four weeks it would have shaken the continent from centre to circumference."

The Czar's conference is attracting much sympathy from the Queen and other members of the royal family who are said to be aware of the entire sincerity of the Czar.

Why the Light Went Out.

In front of the high altar in the cathedral in Salzburg there is a great lamp that is supposed to burn forever and a day. One morning, years ago, worshippers were hurried to see it go out, and this was repeated morning after morning, always about the same time. It was thought the attendant had neglected to give it sufficient oil, and though he declared his innocence he was doubted. He would be discharged if the oversight were repeated. Unwilling to deal unjustly with the man, the dean of the cathedral hid himself one night to see if he could solve the mystery. He had not long to wait. About 10 o'clock a big rat was seen descending the rope, by which the lamp was suspended. Having reached the oil it fed freely and then went away by the way it came. Needless is it to say that the assistant held his place.

Contest in the Republican County Committee.

YOUNG MR. KEAN DEFEATED

HE IS A BROTHER OF JOHN KEAN, TO BE SENATOR-ELECT.

But the Fight Was a Close One and Coddng Was Only Elected by One Majority—Candidates for County Nominations for Next Fall are Beginning to Show Up—Democrats Look on Joyously

Elizabeth, Jan. 23 – There is a big fight on among the Union county Republicans over the offices of County Clerk, Sheriff and Senator, all of which are to be filled next fall, and the opening skirmish between the opposing factions took place at Elizabeth Saturday evening, at the annual meeting of the County Committee.

The struggle was over the selection of a chairman for the committee which, in view of the importance of the coming campaign, was deemed a prize. Former Assemblyman Charles Nelson Codding, of Westfield, a New York lawyer, has been chairman of the committee for several years, and much desired a re-election. To his surprise and that of his friends, he was opposed by Hamilton Fisk Kean, a young brother of John Kean, the caucus candidate of the party for United States Senator.

Young Mr. Kean plunged into the contest with such energy that the chairman found he had the fight of his life on his hands. He invoked the aid of all the machine leaders in Union county that he had ever done any favors for, and the result was the liveliest hustling during the last week that was ever witness among the leading Republicans of the county.

When the contending factions locked horns Saturday the first ballot resulted: Kean, 15; Codding, 15; blank, 1. There was no change on the second ballot, and the third was so voted because more votes were polled than there were members of the committee present. Codding won on the next ballot by getting 16 to Mr. Kean's 15.

The politicians say this means a bitter contest when it comes to distributing the offices next fall. Already there are three candidates in the field for County Clerk—William Howard, of Rahway, the present incumbent; Assemblyman Squire, of Elizabeth, and Sheriff Kirk, of Plainfield.

Assemblyman Houston, of Elizabeth, wants to be Sheriff, and he will have powerful opposition from other parts of the county. State Senator Cross, who was chosen to fill the unexpired term of Governor Voorhees, desires a re-election, but he will have to fight for it.

Democrats are now hoping that the internal war raging among their opponents may result in giving them a chance again to capture the control of the county.

OBJECT TO THE AWARDS

COUNTY BOULEVARD AGAIN HEARD IN COUNTY COURT.

Counsel for Property Owners Says That His Clients do Not Like the Idea of Joseph Hubbard Serving as a Commissioner.

Elizabeth, Jan. 24 –In the Union County Court yesterday, Justice VanSyckel heard the arguments of the lawyers who appeared for the property objectors on Westfield avenue, in Union Township, against the awards made by the commissioners appointed by the Court to condemn land for the proposed county boulevard. Sherrerd Depue, of Newark, addressed the court in behalf of Annie J. Bronson, former Judge Gilhooly spoke for Mrs. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, James W. Higgins, Peter C. Lee, Elias Hamilton and Mary Charlier; Lawyer Hall, of Jersey City, made an argument for Mrs. Franklin L. Pope, while Corra N. Williams, Summit, talked for W. P. Bonnell.

Mr. Gilhooly made the chief argument, and among other things said his clients strongly objected to Mr. Hubbard, of Plainfield, acting as one of the commissioners to condemn their land, on the ground that he was a brother of Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders, and also because his son was one of the engineers who made the survey of the land on Westfield avenue, which the county wanted to appropriate for the new boulevard.

Justice VanSyckel, after hearing all the arguments presented, said the lawyers could submit their briefs to the Court, and that meanwhile additional testimony could be taken on the matter next Wednesday. The Justice did not say when his decision would be rendered, but it probably will not be given before next month.

County Attorney Codington, who represents the Board of Freeholders in the matter, did not address the Court, but will submit a brief.

ONE HALF THE INSURANCE PAID.

Widow of Late Rudolph Randolph Receives $1,000 of $2,000 Policy.

The Travelers' Accident Insurance Company settled the claim Wednesday with Mrs. Robert Randolph, of Elmwood place, by paying her one-half of the amount for which her husband was insured. W. V. Mundy, the agent, paid the claim Wednesday.

It will be remembered that Mr. Randolph died very suddenly and that after several examinations the physicians refused to sign papers stating that death was due to an accident. The company stood willing to pay the full claim, $2 000, when the proper proof was given. The physicians would not give the proof, hence the liability of the company ceased. However, the company very willingly agreed to meet the claimant half way and today presented Mrs. Randolph with a check for $1,000

Mrs. Randolph is very well satisfied. The company states that on proper proof within the next eleven months they will pay the balance, $1 000 if the physicians will attest to the fact that death was caused by an accident.

PUPILS HEARD OF NOTED MEN.

Former Mayor Place Related Interesting Personal Experiences.

Former Mayor Charles Place, of the borough, gave a very interesting address Tuesday morning before the scholars in the Borough Public High School, on the subject of "Noted Men Whom I Have Met." The lecturer commenced with Martin VanBuren and followed the line of Presidents down to President McKinley, and about each one he had something of interest to relate in connection with the meeting of each incidentally he spoke of other noted men whom he has met. The talk was listened to attentively by all, and when concluded everyone was sorry that the time was up. Perhaps another opportunity will be given to hear Mr. Place, and there is no doubt but what the scholars and teachers would be pleased.

OFFICERS GAVE A DINNER.

Gesang and Turn Verein Members Treated to a Spread.

The newly-elected officers of the Gesang and Turn Verein gave a bountiful spread last Tuesday in the hall on Somerset street to the members of the society. The affair was a very quiet one and was attended by about one hundred members. The menu was complete in every particular and everyone enjoyed it. After the inner man was filled the balance of the evening was devoted to speeches and songs. The new officers made a few remarks, as did also the members of the society. The singing section of the society was present and rendered several fine selections. Before the gathering broke up everyone voted that the new officers are a jolly set of fellows.

THERE ARE MANY SEEKERS.

GOV. VOORHEES' FIRST YEAR IS A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

Most of the Vacancies in Appointive Offices Occur the Second and Third Year of His Term—The Important Places to Be Filled This Year—The Essex County Prosecutorship Interesting.

Trenton, Jan. 24 –Governor Voorhees will have a comparatively easy time of it this winter in the matter of appointments. He will not have many selections to make, as most of the vacancies he will be called upon to fill occur during the second and third years of his term. The important positions which become vacant this year are State Librarian, State Road Commissioner, State School Superintendent, all four places on the State Riparian Commission, all six places on the Board of State Prison Inspectors, the place of Henry J. West, on the State Board of Taxation, the county judgeships in Burlington and Cumberland counties, and the prosecutorships in Gloucester and Essex counties. Republicans now hold most of these places and many of them will be reappointed. The appointment of State Librarian does not rest with the Governor alone but with the Library Commission, of which the Governor is a member. The Commission expects to meet Tuesday, and Colonel Hamilton's chances of reappointment are very good. Colonel Hamilton is a Democrat, but he opposed Bryan in 1896 on the silver issue and is generally understood to have voted for McKinley.

Road Commissioner Budd and School Superintendent Baxter, both Republicans, are almost sure to be re-appointed. There are some candidates for Mr Budd's place, but it is not at all likely that Mr. Budd will be turned down.

The Riparian Commissioners and the Board of Prison Inspectors are bipartisan bodies The likelihood of changes in the personnel of the Riparian Board is not so great as is the other. There are scores of candidates for appointment as prison inspectors. The places pay $400 each. The present incumbents are William H Carlet, Burlington; Edward H. Holcombe, Hunterdon; Samuel F. Stanger, Gloucester, Republicans; M. E. Staples, Hudson; William H. Brown, Essex, and Wells Lawrence, Morris, Democrats. The Riparian Commissioners are John I. Holt, Passaic; William Close, Mercer, Republicans; Willard C. Fisk, Hudson, and Miles Ross, Middlesex, Democrats.

Henry J. West, of Camden, the retiring member of the State Board of Taxation, is a Republican, and will be reappointed in all probability. If Major Carl Lentz, of the same board, is made Prosecutor of Essex, as seems most likely, then there will be another place for the Governor to fill. If political considerations alone control, there is little doubt that the Essex County Prosecutorship will go to Major Lentz for the good work he has done for his party. It is a fact, however, that the Major vigorously opposed the nomination of Governor Voorhees, and that such men as Frank M. Swayze and Robert H. McCarter would accept the Prosecutorship if it were offered to them. If the Governor consulted his own wishes he would probably name one of these, both of whom are well qualified, but the political leaders think Major Lentz should be appointed and the Governor may defer to their wishes.

Law Judge Gaskell, who is a Republican, will be reappointed in Burlington county. Thomas W. Trenchard, Republican State Committeeman, will doubtless be named for Law Judge in Cumberland. As to Prosecutorship there, the race is between J. Hampton Pitkin, of Bridgeton, and Wheaton Bezault, of Vineland. Both have strong support.

The Governor's inaugural address in two or three instances gives food for a good deal of speculation as to what the Legislature will do in the matter. The Rahway Reformatory is in an unfinished state, and it will require about $300,000 to make even a portion of it available for use, and probably another half million to complete it upon the plans adopted and partly executed. Last year no appropriation was made for continuing the construction, and were it not that the State Prison is overcrowded, the Reformatory is pushed to completion on the original lines and some other projects, like the addition to the Morris Plains Asylum, are met with the desired appropriations, there will be little need for the Governor or the Legislature to worry about some means of keeping down the treasury surplus. A part at least of this increasing surplus, the Governor thinks, should revert to the municipalities in some way or go to lessen the State school tax.

COPS ENJOYED A FEAST.

UNION AND MIDDLESEX POLICEMEN MET IN THIS CITY.

After a Short Business Session They Sat Down to a Spread—Mayor Rockefellow and Councilman Buckle Were Guests

The superior officers of the police departments of Union and Middlesex counties held one of their stated meetings in this city Monday afternoon. The meeting was held in Captain Grant's office on Park avenue. The object of these meetings is to allow the police to become better acquainted and to talk over affairs that will help them in their work of keeping down lawlessness and crime. Heretofore the meetings have been held in Elizabeth, but this year Captain Grant invited them to come to Plainfield and enjoy the hospitality of the superiors in this city The meeting was not a very long one, and nothing of any real importance was done.

After the meeting all adjourned to the Crescent Hotel, on Somerset street, where a spread was served by Rudolph Speigel. All of the good things of the season were served and the visitors were more than pleased with the treatment accorded. At the dinner there was an interchange of good feeling and many good stories were related. When the visitors departed for their homes they all thanked the Plainfield officers for the excellent time furnished to them. Among those present were Chief Tenney, Sergeants McGrail and Decker, Captain Long and Michael Gannon, of Elizabeth; Chief Harding, of New Brunswick; Chief Burke, of Perth Amboy; Chief Wright, of Rahway. There were also a few invited guests from this city, including Mayor Rockefellow and Councilman Buckle. It might be well to add that excellent speeches were made by the Mayor and Councilman Buckle, as well as by the officers. Those who received the visitors and provided the entertainment included Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely, Russdeman Flynn and Frederickson.

Julius Williams, of Elmwood place, who has been detained at home with a serious illness, was able to go to business yesterday for the first.

—Owing to some unforseen trouble the cars on the Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville trolley ran very irregularly last Sunday.

Denver has a dog that smokes cigarettes. He is a cocker spaniel and lives in a cigar store. He is only ten months old, but he is a confirmed fiend and his cross and peevish mien has had his daily smoke. His owner has taught him a number of tricks, which Billy—that is his name—will perform when a cigarette is offered as a reward.

When ready for his smoke Billy seats himself on the cigar case, permits a pair of spectacles to be adjusted to his nose, and daintily takes the lighted cigarette in his mouth. He puffs away with a beatific expression on his intelligent face until the fire gets so close to his nose as to be uncomfortable. Then he drops the stub and remains quiet until the spectacles are removed.—New York World.

Logic Without Principle.

A curious combination of logic, with lack of principle, has sent a French medical student of good family to jail for six years.

He has failed in his examinations and thereby lost his exemption from military service. If obliged to serve for two years, he saw no way of making up his deficiencies in scholarship, but he knew that a widow's son would be exempt from the subscription. He proceeded therefore to make his mother a widow by shooting his father—with whom he was on perfectly good terms—twice in the head.

The father recovered and succeeded in getting his son's sentence reduced.

A Wonderful Baby Bicyclist.

Master John Roy Horton claims to be the champion light-weight bicycle rider of the world. He lives in Lufkin, Tex., and does many remarkable things on the wheel. He is six years old and thirty-nine inches high. He has a 16-inch reach, rides a mile in 5 1-2 minutes, and has endurance that is lacking in much older riders. He can push a wheel for twenty-five or thirty miles without the slightest exertion.—New York Journal.

Progress.

"Have you any trace of the missing man?"

"No," replied the detective, "but we are still at work on the case."

"Have you any clew or theory?"

"Yes," was the reply in a mysterious whisper. "We have studied night and day, and we are agreed on one thing."

"What is that?"

"We believe the criminal has left town."—Washington Post.

THE POLICE RAIDED QUIET POKER GAME.

Eight Colored Individuals Intent Upon the Game.

ALL WERE CAPTURED.

THEY ALL JUMPED FOR THE COIN ON THE TABLE.

Police Locked Up Men and Took Care of the Modus Operandi—All Pleaded Guilty But One—Fined $5 and $8—Henderson, the Manager, Changed His Plea—It Was the Neapolitan Club.

The police visited the rooms of the Neapolitan Club early Sunday morning. The call was not expected. Incidentally the police disturbed an exciting poker game that was in progress. Eight members of the club present accepted the invitation of the police to call at the city jail. Several were suddenly struck with the remembrance that they had imporiant invitations elsewhere. They prepared to depart hurriedly. The invitations of the police took precedence, however. Last Monday, at the invitation of City Judge Runyon, the Neapolitantites each made the city a small but substantial gift.

The Neapolitan Club, which was until recently the Neapolitan Athletic Club, has its rooms at 208 Park avenue. The rooms are on the second floor, over the corner store. It was only recently incorporated, the papers being drawn by City Judge Runyon. George H. Henderson is the soul of the organization, and is alleged to be the proprietor of the place.

The place has been reported to the police several times. Sunday morning, at 1:30 o'clock, Sergeant Kiely, Boundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Vanderveer and Mattox raided the establishment. Kiely, Frederickson and Vanderveer entered by the rear door, leaving Mattox on guard outside. They listened at the door and heard the sound of chips and sundry remarks relating to "raising it," "three of a kind," "two pair," and such other technical terms of the familiar game.

Then the raiders walked in. It is said that Mead was ahead of the game. Andy Oby was keeping score. When the light shone on the badges of the officers there was a wonderful scattering. Every man in the crowd grabbed for the "kitty," there was a clashing of silver and the coin suddenly disappeared from the table.

Henderson bolted for an adjacent closet and the rest scurried about for a hiding place but without success. Then they surrendered. Besides the modus operandi of the game, there was a huge flask of apple whiskey and several glasses, all of which was confiscated by the police. Then the eight occupants of the room were locked up in the city jail. They gave their names as Thomas Phillips, Edward Mead, David C. Martin, Andrew Oby, Joseph Johnson, Jeb Freeman, John Henry and George Henderson.

Five of the number were let out on bail over Sunday. Next morning all but John Henry were arraigned before City Judge Runyon. Henry was excused to appear later, as he had to work in the morning. Some 200 colored men surrounded the jail, packed the courtroom and peeped in the windows to see the fun.

The offenders were evidently ill at ease. All but Henderson pleaded guilty of being present and watching or taking part in the game of poker. Mead and Freeman admitted that they had been before the court on a similar charge. They were fined $8 each. Phillips, Martin, Oby and Johnson were fined $5 each.

Henderson was charged with running the establishment and conducting a gambling house and selling liquor illegally. Lawyer Robert M. Clark appeared as his counsel.

Henderson changed his mind during the morning and decided to plead guilty to the charge of running the establishment. The Judge received his change of plea, and sentenced him to pay a fine of $15 or go to jail for thirty days.

The prisoner called John Henry was arraigned later, and fined $5 with the rest.

"Two Young Men."

Rev. A. F. Todd, of Dunellen, preached Monday morning in Trinity Reformed church for Dr. Sobesck, who had been ill during the past week. He selected for his theme "Two Young Men." The first one was the young man who went to Jesus and asked what he should do to attain eternal life, and when he was bidden to sell all he had and give to the poor he turned away from Jesus sorrowfully, (Matt. 19-22.) The other young man was the Ethiopian eunuch, whom Philip taught the Scriptures and baptized and who went on his way rejoicing. (Acts 8-39.) Mr. Todd handled the subject to the satisfaction of all and brought out many truths that were very convincing to his hearers.

Miss Crane, of Kensington avenue, who has been detained at home with an attack of the grip, has recovered.

LOST HOUSE AND HOME BY DISASTROUS BLAZE

Lawyer McNabb's Residence at Dunellen Destroyed.

FURNACE WAS THE CAUSE.

MR. AND MRS. M'NABB JUST HAD TIME TO ESCAPE.

The Building was in Flames Before the Conflagration was Discovered—Fire Department Devoted its Efforts to Saving Adjoining Property—Mrs. McNabb Heard the Crackling of Flames.

The most disastrous fire that has occurred in Dunellen in a long time was witnessed early Monday morning. A large frame house, owned and occupied by Charles McNabb, a Plainfield lawyer, took fire about 4 o'clock, and despite every effort made by the firemen and the neighbors, was burned to the ground, and now presents to the sight nothing except a mass of ruins. The alarm was turned in by Charles Tilton, a switchman employed at night work on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. He saw the fire and sent in an alarm from the nearest box. Louis Schiatz which called out the fire department. When they arrived the house was in flames. The hose was connected with a small creek which runs near the house and the firemen turned their attention to the neighboring buildings which were threatened. The house owned by W. R. Larkin and occupied by Mrs. George Harrison, stands close to the McNabb house, and had it not been for the quiet night, would have been destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb were away from home all day Sunday visiting Mrs. McNabb's parents in North Plainfield. They returned home about 9:30 o'clock, but did not retire until nearly 11 o'clock because the furnace fire was low and needed attending too. When they went to bed Mr. McNabb says the fire in the heater was burning nicely. Several times during the night Mr. McNabb was aroused and compelled to get up on account of his throat which troubled him and seemed to be extremely dry.

About 4 o'clock he was awakened again and so was Mrs. McNabb. Suddenly Mrs. McNabb heard a crackling sound like fire and in a fright asked her husband what it was. He hurriedly investigated and found that the house was afire. There was little time to be lost and the couple had not more than time enough to get a few clothes on and to snatch a few pieces of their property before the flames were upon them and they were compelled to flee for their lives.

Mrs. George Harrison, who lives next door, was awakened by the barking of her dog, and on throwing open the window saw the next house afire. She hurried into the room one on the scene and says that the fire seemed to be confined to the north side of the house, but the fire spread rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb have a baby only four-and-a-half months old. The child they left in Plainfield that night. The couple took refuge in Mrs. Harrison's house until after breakfast when they left for Plainfield.

The house was a new one and was built by Sandford Staples for a home three years ago. Mr. McNabb came into possession of the house last summer and moved into it last fall. The house was worth about $2 800, as it was large, roomy and contained all the improvements. The furniture and everything the house contained was also burned, making the total loss about $4,000, which, it is understood, is covered by insurance.

The fire no doubt caught from the furnace, but whether from too strong a fire, which set fire to the woodwork around the pipes, or to burning soot, is not known.

George L. Harris, of New Market, who passed the house at 2:30 o'clock in the morning, saw a bright light in the cellar, but supposed it came from some one carrying a light.

The people who are in favor of water-works quote the fire as an argument in favor of them. They say that if the engine could have secured its supply of water from a hydrant, instead of depending on a small brook, they might have saved a part of the house.

The furniture was insured by William Woodruff, of Plainfield, for $1,000. Mr. Titsworth, of this place, held the insurance on the house which is said to be a little less than the house was worth.

A Fine Showing.

The annual statement of the Dime Savings Institution was issued Monday morning. It shows that the assets are $328 078.07. The amount due depositors is $296,103.41, and the surplus on hand is $31,975 66. This showing is very creditable and speaks well for the management of the institution.

George Bedford, of this city, has returned from an extended business trip out of town for the Walter Scott Printing Machine Company.

RAY CARROLL WINS TWO MORE EVENTS.

Indoor Athletic Contests at the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium.

WON THE FENCE VAULT.

TIED WITH ERIC MORALLER FOR FIRST IN POTATO RACE.

Eight Contestants Were Out—Green and and Egan Were Not Present—No Records Broken—The Potato Race Furnished Several Close Races—Contest Ends Saturday—Chance to Make Up Back Events.

Unless some of the other competitors make a wonderful showing in the few events remaining, Raymond Carroll will carry off first honors in the indoor athletic contest now in progress among the members of the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening two more events were contested and Carroll won—was first in one and tied for first in the other.

The events of Saturday night were the fence vault and the potato race. Only eight of the competitors showed up, the remainder being kept away by illness and other reasons. There were, however, quite a number of visitors who saw some exciting sport.

The first event was the fence vault, in which the old record was 6 feet, 3 inches, made last year by Frank Marcley. Raymond Carroll won the event after a lively contest with Eric Moraller, who pushed him closely. Carroll won with a vault of 5 feet, 10 inches, and Moraller was an inch behind. William Townsend was third with a vault of 5 feet, 6 inches. William Morgan and Herbert Brokaw were tied at 5 feet, 4 inches. The other contestants were Walter Dreier, Edgar Sheppard and Henry Pierce.

The potato race was not that farcical performance in which the competitors try to carry potatoes on small spoons, but an entirely different arrangement. Two high boxes were placed 31 feet apart. One box contained seventeen oblong corks which the contestants were supposed to take out and carry to the other box. There was one set of boxes for each man and it resulted in each man making a circuit of the boxes seventeen times, or running just a quarter of a mile. The Y. M. C. A. record for the event was 1 minute, 46 1-6 seconds, made by F. O. Bristol. The State record is only a fifth of a second better.

William Morgan and Walter Dreier were the first to run off the event. They started well but Morgan soon began to gain, especially on the turns, and he had the advantage of over half a lap when he finished. Morgan's time was 1 minute, 59 1-5 seconds. Dreier covered the distance in 4 minutes, 6 seconds. Edgar Sheppard and Henry Pierce ran together next. Sheppard ran in good form and finally lapped his opponent. He finished strong. Sheppard's time was 1 minute, 56 1-5 seconds. Pierce's was 2 minutes, 4 seconds.

William Townsend and Herbert Brokaw were the next team to try conclusions. Townsend took the lead and was doing well when he became entangled in one of the boxes and lost some valuable time. He made up as best he could and finished third in the event with 1 minute, 55 4-5 seconds to his sime. Brokaw covered the quarter in 2 minutes, 4-5 seconds.

The last pair to run were Raymond Carroll and Eric Moraller. They started together and held an even pace through every lap until the last, when Moraller opened out a little distance between himself and his opponent. On the last sprint Carroll closed that up and the two men crossed the line at exactly the same time, making the time for each 1 minute, 54 2-5 seconds. Moraller's time last year was a second slower. They were declared tie for first place in the event.

J. H. Green, Jr., was expected to make his appearance and do some fast work in the event, but he didn't come. He will probably try next Saturday to lower the record and capture the event.

Next Saturday the last two events in the contest will be run off and such of the competitors who have missed any of the events will be allowed a chance to make them up. The official Saturday night were C. E. A. Heywood and Walter L. Long.

This firm makes a specialty of fitting and claim that they cannot be beat.

Tested Their Engine.

Last Saturday evening after the fire in Prideville the members of Warren Engine Company took their engine to the Greenbrook road bridge and tested her. Everything worked satisfactory and the members were pleased.

Charles Staats, of New York, is visiting Plainfield friends for a time.

JUDGE RUNYON SAYS JUSTICE FOR ALL

Race Persecution Must Stop at Once.

FINED ONE OFFENDER.

HARMLESS HEBREW PEDDLER SET UPON AND BEATEN.

Alleged That David McLernon, Jr., Was the Offender—Claimed That Hebrew Called Him Names—Special Officer Martin Interferred—Patrolman Flynn Investigated—McLernon Was Fined $6.

City Judge Runyon has declared that there has been a malicious persecution of certain inoffensive characters for reason of their race and religion. He further announced last Saturday that it was going to be stopped if it took all the power of the Plainfield police force to do it. By way of an example he sentenced David McLernon, Jr., to pay a fine of $6 or go to jail for twelve days for assaulting a Hebrew lad.

Roundsman Flynn says there is too much disorder about the station among some of the hackmen and young men who congregate there. Friday a young Hebrew peddler was set upon and beaten in that vicinity and the Roundsman investigated the case.

David McLernon, Jr., was arrested and haled before City Judge Runyon Saturday on the charge of roughly handling the peddler. He pleaded not guilty.

The story as told by the city's witness was that McLernon had thrown his glove in the face of the Hebrew. The latter did not see who threw the glove but addressed a remark to who ever it was. McLernon turned on him, it is said, and handled him roughly. Another hackman tried to interfere. Special Officer Edward Martin arrived on the scene in time to prevent any serious injury of the pedler.

McLernon said that someone else had thrown the glove and that he had not struck except in self defence. The Judge didn't put much fairth in his story. He said that it was well known that McLernon "had it in" for Hebrews. The Judge found him guilty and fined.

RESCUED DROWNING LAD

HEROIC CONDUCT OF HAROLD DAVIS SATURDAY EVENING.

Six-Year-Old Boy Fell Through the Ice on Hyde's Pond—Davis Waded Into the Icy Water to Rescue the Boy.

Harold Davis, of Kensington avenue, made a brave rescue of a drowning lad Saturday evening at Hyde's pond. A crowd of children, ranging in ages from six to ten years, were playing on the pond. At the place where the mill-race enters the pond, there was an open space in which there was no ice. One of the smallest of the children fell in here. His companions were too frightened to scream.

Davis was standing at the other end of the pond when the lad fell in. He happened to see the child plunge into the water and started on a run in that direction. When he reached the scene, the child had gone down twice. Davis waded into the icy water up to his waist and plucked the youngster out by the back of the coat. The child was unconscious for a few minutes, but speedily recovered and was sent home. His name could not be learned. His playmates knew him only as Willie.

A NEW CLUB.

Young Men to Organize a Social Club—Rooms in the Hand Building.

A club of twenty-five young men of this city has been informally organized. It will be run somewhat on the lines of the old Crescent League and will contain principally members of the local lodge of the Ancient Essenic Order, at whose "Ark" the first plans for the new organization were laid.

Club rooms have already been engaged in the new Hand building, corner of Watchung avenue and East Second street. The club will occupy a suite of rooms on the second floor.

Death of John F. Randolph.

John F. Randolph, who died January 18th in Stafford county, Virginia, was eighty-three years old, and was born about two miles from this city on the Rahway road on a farm owned by his father, and now owned by his brother, Henry Clay Randolph. He went to Virginia and bought a farm. In 1851 he married Miss Rachel D. Field, of Round Brook. He leaves a wife and two daughters who have lived in Plainfield for ten years. He was a brother to Mrs. Eden L. Boice, Mrs. Sarah F. Pound and Henry Clay Randolph.

Approaching Marriage.

Invitations are now out for the marriage of Miss Allis Abbott, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Franklin Abbott, of Central avenue, to James Robert Blake, of Princeton University, to take place in the Crescent Avenue church Tuesday evening, February 7th, at 7:30 o'clock.

NOCORONER'SINQUEST INTO LEHIGH WRECK

Middlesex Officials Finish Investigation of the Disaster.

COMPANY IS NOT BLAMED.

BLAME LAYS BETWEEN TRAIN DISPATCHER AND OPERATOR.

County Physician Long and Prosecutor Voorhees Have Looked Into the Matter in a Thorough Manner, But Just What Action is to be Taken Does Not Yet Appear to the Public.

J. S. Voorhees, Prosecutor of Middlesex county, announced Friday that no inquest will be held as to the cause of the fatal wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen, in which seventeen lives were lost. He holds that the railroad company was not criminally responsible for the wreck.

This decision has been arrived at as a result of the personal investigation made by Prosecutor Voorhees and County Physician Long Friday. The investigation was held in the New York office of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, at the Hsvemeyer Building, and was made with the cooperation and assistance of the railroad authorities.

The investigation was for the purpose of determining if an inquest were necessary. Friday morning Prosecutor Voorhees stated that while the investigation was not yet complete, it had progressed to such an extent that he was able to state definitely that no inquest would be held, and that the company was not responsible for the wreck.

This is taken to mean that the investigation places the blame for the disaster upon either the train dispatcher at Easton, the telegraph operator at South Plainfield, or the crew of one or the other trains. He would state nothing further, and would not say whether or no the matter would be made the subject of Grand Jury investigation.

SURPRISED THE HUSBAND.

Mrs. Horace Huff Arranged a Pleasant Affair in Honor of Her Husband.

A surprise party was given to Horace Huff, of Codington avenue, last Friday, in honor of his birthday. The affair was arranged by his wife and proved a complete surprise. A graphone and games occupied most of the evening. Refreshments were served toward the close. The guests finally departed for their homes at an early hour this morning.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Cora Eyno, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ritcheon, Mr. and Mrs. John Poole, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. William's, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Saums, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Lorton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vail, Mrs. Amy Lorton, Mrs. Fred Haberle, Mrs. Edgar Vail, the Misses Ray Vail, Lizzie Huff, Ella Hedden and Ethel Lorton; Samuel Sorson, Robert Crosson, Oscar Huff and Philip Curren.

LAMP EXPLODED.

Lively Blaze Caused in a Borough House Saturday Night.

Last Saturday evening about 8 o'clock a fire broke out in a bedroom in the house occupied by Louis Bimble and family in Prideville. The fire is supposed to have resulted from an exploded lamp. An alarm was sent in from Box 156, and the department was quick to respond. Nearly everything was destroyed in the bedroom and the fire spread to the parlor directly under the bedroom, where much damage resulted. In all the loss will probably reach $150,on which there is an insurance. The firemen did excellent work in saving the house and much of the contents, and they worked hard. It was not necessary to use the steamer at the fire and consequently not much water was thrown into the house.

Gerome Peck to Make Changes.

Gerome Peck, of 217 Park avenue, is contemplating a radical change of improvement to the building. He expects to lower the building to the sidewalk, put in a handsome new front, paint and paper attractively the interior and lay a new hard-wood floor. Mr. Pack has been considering for sometime past the advisability of making this change, and has now decided to follow out his plans. When completed the building will be a credit to the avenue.

Good Things in Prospect.

Thursday and Friday evenings of this week the annual turkey supper will be given at Trinity Reformed church. The reputation already made by the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church, under whose auspices the affair will be given, will ensure a large patronage. The Ladies' Orchestra will be present each evening, and a bountiful supper will be served for 35 cents. The proceeds will be devoted to paying the balance on the upholstering for the church.

DOUBLE DESERTER IS JOHN ANTHONY.

PATRIOTISM COOLED OFF.

HE CAME BACK HOME WITHOUT LEAVE FROM HIS REGIMENT.

Now He is Under Arrest as a Deserter and Will be Sent to Chickamauga for Court Martial—Roundsman Flynn Caught Anthony as He Was Preparing to Leave With His Wife.

After having been charged with deserting his wife and family in Plainfield to join the ranks of the United States Army, James Anthony, colored, is now a prisoner in the hands of the Government, held to answer the charge of desertion from the army. He was arrested yesterday morning at 8:15 o'clock by Roundsman Flynn, just as he attempted to board a train with his wife to take them away from Plainfield.

Anthony used to live on East Third street. His wife came here from Rahway. It was said that they were in destitute circumstances and that the two little children were starving. This was at the outbreak of the war. Without warning, Anthony enlisted and left his family to their fate. The sad case of the mother and children was brought to the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and to some charitably inclined persons. Their needs were relieved and the mother was given work.

Last Thursday, Chief Grant received a telegram from Col. Huggins, of the Eighth Infantry, stating that Anthony had deserted, giving a description of him and requesting that the police apprehend him.

Anthony reached town Saturday, wearing his uniform. He went home and, he and his wife decided to leave town. When arrested, he told the officer that he had a furlough and was then returning to his duties at the camp at Chickamauga Park. The Eighth Infantry is quartered at Chickamauga.

Last Monday Anthony was taken to Governor's Island under the escort of Chief Grant. From Governor's Island, he will be forwarded to Chickamauga where he will be court martialled.

HER AGE WAS A RIPE ONE

DEATH OF MRS. DANIEL MARSHAL IN HER NINETIETH YEAR.

She Survived Husband and all of Her Four Children—Had Lived in Plainfield Since 1848—Funeral to be Held Monday.

After a life of over 89 years, over half of which was spent in this city, Mrs. Phebe P. Marshall, widow of the late Daniel J. Marshall, passed peacefully away last Friday, and Monday was laid in the grave beside her husband and the children whom she has long out lived.

Mrs. Marshall was born at Lyons Farms, New Jersey, September 29th, 1810. Her maiden name was Clendenin. Later she moved to New York, and while still quite young married Daniel J. Marshall, who was born in Scotch Plains, in a little yellow house that still stands there on the main street. The couple moved to Plainfield about 1849, and a few years later took up their residence in the old house on Park avenue, where Mrs. Marshall died.

Four children were born to them, Charles, George, Annie and Lot, all of whom died previous to their mother's death. Her last son, Lot, died last June. The only direct descendants who survive her are four grandchildren, Harry Marshall, of this city, Mrs. William Aigben, of Brooklyn, and two others. A sister, Mrs. George Stuart, of Chicago, and a brother, Abraham Clendenin, of Ohio, also survive her.

In her day Mrs. Marshall was a great worker in Reform Hall, a temperance organization which does not exist now. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, from the house. Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Marshall lived a quiet, peaceful life up to the time of her death. Since old age has overtaken her she had not gone out much except to drive, a recreation she was very fond of. A month ago she had an attack of the grip which brought on bronchial trouble and ended in her death. She died at 10:40, the same hour in which her last son, Lot, passed away in June.

CAMPBELL PRESSES TO BE MADE ABROAD.

Company Formed With a Capital of $1,250,000.

H. D. MORRISON PROMOTER.

ONLY MACHINES FOR FOREIGN MARKET TO BE MADE.

It is Not Expected That the New Enterprise Will Work Detrimental to the Interests of Plainfield—Deal Made Through the Energy of Mr. Morrison Who Has Scored a Business Success.

The Condor Agency, of London, Eng., has been purchased by a company of English capitalists, and with it the English patents of the Campbell Printing Press and Manufacturing Company, part of whose output is made at the Potter Press Works, of this city, part at Taunton, Mass., and a part at Scranton, Pa., this being necessary to meet the demand, notwithstanding that an addition was built on the Potter works about two years ago to increase the capacity of the works to one machine a day.

The demand for the machines abroad was made by two young Americans, who engaged in the business under the name of the Condor Agency. They were determined to gain a foothold in the English market for the sale of American machinery generally, and printing machinery in particular. One of the young Americans is the agency referred to is Henry D. Morrison, who until less than a year ago was a Plainfielder.

It was not the first time efforts had been made to convince the English people that American machinery was superior to their own or that of any other country in the world, but until Messrs. Morrison and Stone, as the Condor Agency, engaged in the business, success does not seem to have crowned the repeated efforts.

They, after a hard struggle, finally succeeded in convincing the English not only of the excellence of American machinery generally, but of that made in Plainfield in particular.

The result has been that the Agency built up a fine trade, which increased the demand for Campbell machines to about one machine per week with corresponding benefit to this city, where these machines were made, resulting in leaving a large amount of money here during the past year.

As there were difficulties which could not be overcome in selling machines manufactured 3,000 miles away to compete with machines manufactured on the spot, it became necessary to make some other arrangements. It was at first intended to form a company of the American manufacturers to manufacture for the foreign market in or near London, but some English capitalists made an offer, which was accepted, and organized themselves into a company under the name of The Printing Machinery Company with a capital of $1,250,000, to engage in the manufacture of the Campbell presses and other kindred machines on a large scale. The English company's works will be at Birmingham, Eng., and the main office in London, with branches in the British colonies all over the world, excepting Canada, which will be controlled by the American company.

It is thought that the increased prestige secured for the Campbell machines by this deal will more than offset the difference in the output of machines from this city, which might otherwise be affected.

The machines will continue to be supplied from here pending the erection of the English works referred to, which will not probably be ready to produce machines much inside of a year.

Mr. Morrison, with a part of his share from the sale of the business and patents referred to, purchased a large amount of the stock in the new company, and he and his partner were elected managing directors. They will have their headquarters in London as hitherto.

The many friends of Mr. Morrison in this locality will be pleased to hear of his extraordinary success. It seems to have been continuous from his boyhood, which was also spent here, where he is very popular, as he has been everywhere else.

OVERCOME BY FUMES FROM BURNING COAL

Kelms' Narrowly Missed Death by Asphyxiation.

THE MOTHER SAVED THEM.

ALL WERE UNCONSCIOUS WHEN SHE STAGGERED AWAY FOR AID.

The House Was Closed Tightly and The Damper in the Stove Pipe Shut—Two Children Fell to the Floor Overcome by the Gas—Wonderful Escape of Mrs. Kelm—All Will Recover.

The noxious fumes from a huge coal-stove nearly asphyxiated the entire family of Henry Kelm, a hard working German farmer living near Union Village, yesterday morning. Father, son and three daughters had lost consciousness when the mother gathered sufficient strength to reach the door, admit the fresh air and totter to the home of their nearest neighbors for assistance.

The Kelms live in a little story and a half frame house on the Dugway road, near Union Village. The family consists of Mr., and Kelm, Hugo, twenty years old; Emma, sixteen years old; Julia, fourteen years old, and Mamie, eight. At night they occupy three rooms that open out of the living room, which is heated by a hugh coal stove.

It was quite cold Thursday night and so every window and door in the Kelm home was closed tightly to keep out the chilly night air. A generous fire was burning in the big stove, Mrs. Kelm was the last to retire and, as she did so, she closed the damper in the stove-pipe to check the fire.

At 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Kelm was awakened by the cries of her youngest child. The room was filled with suffocating gas. When she reached her child's bed the little girl had lapsed into unconsciousness and could not be aroused. The frantic mother then called the two eldest children. They staggered from their rooms only to fall to the floor in the dining room, overcome by the gas. Her efforts to awaken her daughter, Julia, were without success. Mr. Kelm was still conscious but too weak to move.

Rushing through the poisonous fumes that pervaded the living room, Mrs. Kelm swung open the door and almost fell outside. The pure air revived her somewhat, so that she was able to open several windows. She then hurried to the home of the nearest neighbors and roused them out. They hurried to the Kelm house with restoratives.

All of the family remaining in the house were found unconscious. The husband was the first to recover, but he could do nothing on account of his great weakness. The daughters, Julia and Mamie, were soon restored to consciousness. It was two hours, however, before Emma and Hugo recovered from the effects of breathing the coal gas.

No serious effects are expected now and all the family are on the fair road to recovery, although still weak from the exposure to the poisonous fumes.

NEW PIANOS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Board of Education Wisely Selects the "Fischer" for Use.

Recently two of the finest upright pianos made by the old and reliable firm of Messrs. J. & C. Fischer, were placed in the Washington and Irving Public Schools. These pianos are in every respect the very best made, and the use of such high grade instruments will no doubt greatly increase the appreciation and love of good music among the children.

The Board of Education acted very wisely in selecting Fischer pianos and the town generally is to be congratulated on securing two such splendid instruments. We understand that over 106,000 of these pianos are in use, and the fact is in itself a positive guarantee of their merit. The tone of this instrument is singularly pure and sympathetic, and it possesses great staying in tune power. It lends itself to the varying moods of the performer with a mobility that is positively inspiring. From both a musical and artistic standpoint, the Fischer piano is perfection itself.

An event of considerable importance in Royal Arcanum circles took place Friday night in New York in the presentation to Admiral Winfield Schley of a jeweled sword. LEHIGH MAY BE TAPPED.

PROPOSED NEW STEAM RAILROAD TO SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Representatives of the Enterprise at Work Securing Right of Way—Lehigh Valley is Interested in Its Success.

Though the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company is not showing its hand openly, it is an understood fact that that company is making strenuous efforts to get into Plainfield from their South Plainfield station with a short branch to run between the two places. Several times within the last few years agitation has been current about such an enterprise, but it has generally melted away into nothing until recently. Of late a representative, ostensibly acting for independent capitalists, has been going over the proposed route to see what could be accomplished in the attempt to get a right of way to build the road. It is calculated, however, that this will not be a hard job.

The plan of the proposed branch is to have it leave South Plainfield a short distance east of the depot at that place and run in a northeasterly direction towards this city, striking the course of Cedar brook and following that stream to Park avenue, this city. Part of the proposed route lays through swampy land in the vicinity of South Plainfield, and it is thought the right of way over such a route can be secured for almost nothing. The idea is to have the depot in this city located near Park avenue and Prospect avenue. One of the biggest property owners in that section of the city has been interested in the enterprise and he has promised to aid it all that is possible.

At present there is an agreement between the Central and the Lehigh Valley for the latter road not to come into Plainfield, in return for which the Central gives certain exclusive territory to the Lehigh in Pennsylvania. But that objection will be overcome by making the branch an independent corporation.

ALL IS SATISFACTORY NOW.

Seating Arrangement in Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Complies With the Law.

At the meeting of the physical work committee of the Y. M. C. A., the following report was accepted and sent to the board of directors:

The report has gone abroad that we have been violating section 42 of the building ordinance of this city. That section reads, in part: "All aisles and passageways in said buildings (referring to buildings of a public character) shall be kept free from campstools, chairs, sofas and other obstructions." The rest of section 42 need not be quoted. The Inspector of Buildings held that by placing chairs in the gallery of our gymnasium for the purpose of seating spectators we were violating the ordinance. At a meeting of the physical work committee, it was ordered that the chairs in the gallery be limited to seventy-two in number and that they be fastened to the floor in groups of five so as to be immovable. This work was done, and December 31st the physical work committee together with Messrs. Ackerman, Murray and Bunyon, of the board of directors, met the Inspector of Buildings and examined the new arrangement. All were satisfied with the work, and it was approved by the Inspector.

DR. POGSON'S LAST SERMON.

Discourses to Baptists on the Subject of Being Faithful.

Rev. M. H. Pogson delivered his last sermon in the series last Friday at the Park Avenue Baptist church upon being faithful. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give ye a crown of life," was the text from which Mr. Pogson spoke. It was a parting sermon, and the talk was a tender one, urging his hearers to faithfulness in every walk of life.

The meeting closed before 9 o'clock so as to enable Mr. Pogson to leave on an early train. Today he goes to Saratoga where he will engage in another series of meetings there. During the two weeks Mr. Pogson has been here, holding evangelistic meetings, he has spoken to large congregations. No definite idea of the result of the work can be known yet. There have been no conversions from the preaching, as far is know, but one or two unconverted persons have shown an interest which is regarded by Rev. J. W. Richardson as likely to bear fruit.

HACKMEN QUARREL

Judge Runyon Looked Into the Circumstances of the Case.

Roundsman Flynn's resolution that good order must prevail in the vicinity of the North Avenue station resulted in the arrest of James Moore and Cornelius Guinee. Moore was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, Friday afternoon, while Guinee was unable to leave his home as a result of the fracas. The Judge, on hearing the evidence, decided that Moore was more sinned against than sinning and so discharged him. Guinee was thought to have had sufficient punishment.

The two were fooling, it is alleged, about the station Friday, and that Guinee then lost his temper and chased the other driver with much vigor. Moore retreated in good order and with effective use of his fist.

Former Prosecutor Enters Brookside Retreat for His Health.

James Meehan, formerly Prosecutor of Somerset county, who recently received his discharge from Company H, of the Third Regiment, and went to his home in Somerville from Athens, Ga., is an inmate at Dr. Cooley's Brookside retreat in North Plainfield.

Since Mr. Meehan has returned from soldier duty he has been in ill health, and a few days ago it was decided that it would be best for him to live quietly for a few weeks. His friends prevailed upon him to enter the Brookside retreat.

Need of Public Drinking Fountain.

It has been suggested that there ought to be some public-spirited man in Plainfield who would give a public drinking fountain for the benefit of the city at large.

WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A. REVIEWED FOR A YEAR.

Annual Meeting of the Association Held Thursday.

SEVEN DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

PRESIDENT CAHOONE'S REPORT SHOWED EXCELLENT RESULTS.

Report of R. C. Newman, the Treasurer, Showed That the Receipts for the Year Were $5,435.64—During the Year $3,300 Has Been Paid on the Association Debt—Funds Contributed.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held last Thursday in the small parlor of the association building and was well attended. Owing to the absence of the president, Stephen Cahoone, the vice-president, E. L. Bonney, presided at the meeting. The business was not long in being transacted. Seven new directors were elected to take the places of those whose terms have expired, reports were read and the general affairs of the association were discussed.

Owing to the changed constitution adopted last year, eighteen new directors were elected then. Six of them were to serve for three years, six for two years, and six for one year, the terms of the various members being decided by themselves. Those whose terms expired January 1st were E. R. Ackerman, G. H. Batchelor, G. S. Clay, A. C. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson and Dr. Carroll. Mr. Chapman, who was elected last year, refused to serve, so seven new directors had to be elected last night. J. R. Robinson and M. C. VanArsdale were appointed tellers and the election resulted in the choice of E. R. Ackerman, G. S. Clay, G. H. Batchelor, A. C. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson and J. R. Joy to serve for three years, and G. F. Brown for two years.

The physical director reported a good year in his department. Out of 209 members who are entitled to the physical department, 134 are in classes. Almost all of the 82 members of the boys' department are also in one of the various classes.

H. O. Newman presented the treasurer's report for the year is as follows: Receipts, $5,435.64; loan, $1,130; balance January 1st, 1898, $69 69; total receipts, $7,235.33. Disbursements, $7,089.81; balance $145.52.

In connection with this report W. D. Murray arose and stated that in addition to the $5,435.64 raised in the association, during the past year, $3,300 had been paid on the debt.

The work of the association in army and mission fields was also assisted by the people of this city, who last year gave $700 for army work, $1,500 for missions and $200 for State work. H. Newman said that the association owed $1,300.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Ladies' Nine, the band of young women who assist the men at the social affairs. The press of the city also came in for a share of thanks for the notices they have given the association gratis. A resolution of regret that illness kept the president at home was offered by H. P. Reynolds and passed.

The president's report, which is printed below, is comprehensive and thoroughly embraces the history of the association for the past twelve months.

The president's report is as follows: The past year witnessed the retirement of William D. Murray as president of this association, a position which he has filled most acceptably for ten years. During his term of office, our association reached its present high state of efficiency, we have built and occupied our building, and a large measure of our success has resulted from his wise counsels, and active participation in the work.

The most noteworthy event of the year has been the extinction of our permanent debt, amounting to about $6,300. This undertaking was commenced in the latter part of 1897, and its successful completion during times of financial depression, is most encouraging, showing the interest taken by our friends in this association, and in its work for young men.

Our religious work, to which all other departments are subsidiary, is in a prosperous condition, especially our Sunday afternoon meeting for men. The average attendance for the past year has been 106 an increase over the previous year of 8.

Commencing in October, a boys' meeting has been held every Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock with an average attendance of 28. Classes for Bible study have been held as usual during the year, conducted by the general secretary and by Physical Director Heywood, the former having an average attendance of 11 and Mr. Heywood' class of 9.

The educational department has conducted as usual; evening classes for men were held in the following studies: Mechanical drawing, mathematics, bookkeeping, Spanish, German and stenography. Average enrollment for year, 54; average attendance at all classes, 43, which is considerably less than the average for previous year.

The work in the physical department has been well maintained, and is accomplishing good results. We do not seek to produce athletes, nor is the distinguishing feature of this department basket ball as some may suppose; we rather aim to build up the body, as we strive in other ways to minister to the soul and mind, combining scientific and healthful exercises with pleasant recreation, and for accomplishing this purpose our physical director, Mr. Heywood, is abundantly qualified. The average attendance of the different classes has been as follows: Evening class, 18; business men's, 8; youths' 9; boys', 33; a leader's class has also been held with 30 sessions, and the average attendance at basket ball has been 15 During the year Mr. Heywood has made 89 physical examinations; two of the city physicians have sent men to the building for physical treatment, the candidates for the city police force have been examined in the gymnasium by Dr. Carman.

Our membership, which is now 364, including Juniors, might be increased, taking into consideration its ratio to the population of Plainfield and the borough, and more persistent effort should be made to raise it to the proper numerical standard.

The treasurer's report shows receipts of $7,235.33 and disbursements of $7,089 81, and contains a detailed account of the financial operations for 1898.

For indefatigable secretary, Mr. Manning, and his assistant, Mr. Davis, have been actively engaged in supervising all branches of our work, and in carrying out its various details.

DEMANDED JURY TRIAL; COURT WAS DELAYED.

HEARD BEFORE JUSTICE MOFFETT.

Defendant Said Principal Witness Was Sick, But This Was Not So, and the Trial Went On.

A case was tried before Justice Moffett Thursday afternoon that caused the court more trouble than usual. It was a case in which Isaac G. Scrivens sued D. J. Galbraith for $35. Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiff and Irving L. Brady the defendant.

Pope & Runyon came into court all ready to try the case. Mr. Brady first asked for an adjournment on the grounds that a material witness for his side was ill. A witness on the other side said that he had just seen the alleged sick man in the hall of the Babcock building, so the plaintiff's lawyers refused to agree to an adjournment until the other side had paid the witnesses' fees. This they refused to do, but finally agreed to go to trial without this witness. But then to the surprise of the court Mr. Brady demanded a jury.

The case was called at 2 o'clock, and by the time the jury was called and the parties ready for trial it was 4:30 o'clock. The Justice had to issue his venire, then send out for the constable, all of which took time. Then the constable had to find six competent men who were satisfactory to both parties. Finally he got together Chas. King, John Ross, I. F. Randolph, B. T. Barnes, N. C. Pennington and W. H. Abbott.

The circumstances of the case are these: A. C. Rogers drew up a set of plans for D. C. Galbraith, for which he charged him $35. Rogers sold this claim on Galbraith to Isaac J. Scrivens for $25. When Scrivens went to collect it Galbraith refused to pay. The latter said he did not owe Rogers anything.

Both men therefore brought the suit. The jury were out about three-quarters of an hour, and then brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount.

TROLLEY TALK.

Crosstown Trolley Interesting Mountainside and Clark.

There is much talk now about the crosstown trolley. The people of Mountainside and Clark Township seem to want some means of communication with Westfield, and a trolley is about the only way they can get it. Springfield is anxious for it and have a committee of its citizens taking the matter up with the trolley magnates.

Col. E. W. Hine, of the trolley company, was seen Thursday and said they were going right along with their work on both the Plainfield-Elizabeth and the crosstown line. Probably an application for the franchise will be made at the next meeting of the Township Committee. A crosstown line will open up some of the best section of country about Westfield.—Westfield Standard.

"At Home" for Misses Randolph.

A few days ago Miss Josephine Randolph and Miss Marion Randolph, daughters of Former Mayor and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, sailed from England for their home in this city. They have been abroad for some time completing their education. Monday evening, January 30th, they will give an "at home" to their friends.

PLAYED ON ROLLERS.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATED ELIZABETH BY FOUR GOALS.

Elizabeth Boys Were Not Used To Game—Robert Eaton Did Star Work For Them—A Small Audience Present.

Plainfield caught a fleeting glimpse of roller polo at the Crescent Rink last Thursday when the teams of Plainfield A. A. and the Elizabeth Club met. Plainfield won by a score of 4 goals to nothing, after a positively exciting game. The Elizabeth boys came with the reputation of being experts but their reputation belied them. Some found difficulty in even standing up on rollers. As they were short two men Owen Smith and Vernon Waters lent a hand to help them out.

Before the playing was about Elizabeth's goal-keeper players put up a desperate defence. McColley, of bicycle fame, kept goal. "Bob" Eaton, captain of the Elizabeth team, was the life of his team. He was everywhere, falling down, losing his club, but never loosing heart. T. U. Smith did most of the goal work for Plainfield, making one on a pretty back-hand stroke. Simmonds used a little too much strength and sent the ball above the goal to the dismay of the spectators behind it.

In the Elizabeth man broke his club and had to play with what was left there being no extra ones. Henry Ryder made some wonderful runs up the side with the ball. In the second half the team work improved. The visitors were badly tired, however. There were about a hundred spectators present.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		ELIZABETH
Ryder	forward	Ashley
Simmonds	forward	Hoover
Smith	forward	Eaton
Waters	goal	Weber
Fleet	point	O. Smith
Tyrrell	cover point	Ryder
McClure	goal keeper	McColley

Referee—Plainfield, Elizabeth, Goals—Plainfield, 4; Elizabeth, 0. Umpires—Roger Erickson and Charles B. Morse.

VISITING ARCANUMITES.

Greenbrook Council Received a Call From Grand Council Officers.

Thursday the members of Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed an annual visitation from the Grand Council officers. There was also a large delegation from Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and a delegation from the Fanwood Council. A sociable time was enjoyed during the evening, during which all enjoyed a smoker. The home council received ten applications for membership and action will be taken at the next meeting. The Grand officers present included Grand Vice-Regent L. J. Lightfoot, of Westfield; Supervising Deputy, Grand Regent Samuel Drummond, of Bound Brook; Grand Orator James Rodgers, of Cranford; Grand Orator James Rodgers, of Cranford; Grand Warden Collins, of Fanwood, and Grand Trustee J. Farrell, of Passaic.

In the good of the order speeches were made by the visiting officers and members, as well as by officers of Greenbrook Council, and a collation was served before the time came to a close.

WEAK VALVE BLEW OUT.

In Its Flight Through the Air it Nearly Struck the Engineer.

A weak check valve on the boiler of the engine in the Crescent Rink blew out Thursday afternoon. George Frazee, the engineer, had an extra head of steam on to heat the building for the night's polo exhibition. When the valve blew out there was force enough behind it to drive it through one of the doors.

Frazee was standing just to one side, so nothing happened. The flying valve just missed him, and so did the column of escaping steam which followed the giving way of the valve. The repairs took two hours before they were completed.

FURNISHING THE PARSONAGE.

The regular meeting of the Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. church was held Wednesday at the residence of Miss Margaret Schuck.

A motion was made and carried that the entire proceeds of the musicals and festivals given by the society in Grace M. E. church, be used for the benefit of the church parsonage.

It was decided that $60 be appropriated for the dining room; $15 for the dinner set; $35 for the sitting room, and the remainder for shades.

A Sprained Ankle.

DOWNED ELIZABETH THREE STRAIGHT.

Parks Rolled Highest Score of the Season.

ON THE PARK ALLEYS.

THE VISITORS DIDN'T HAVE ANY SHOW AT ALL.

Parks Led From the Start in All Three Games—Won by Big Margins—George Worth On the Train Again—Captain Ball Made High Score—Number of Spectators That Were Present.

The Park Club tightened its hold on second place in the Central Journal Bowling League last Thursday, and incidentally lowered the colors of the Elizabeth Club from third to fourth place. Three games were rolled on the Park Club alleys and the Parks won all of them by high scores. Heretofore the Parks haven't done any sensational work. They managed to run up against the other teams when the latter were rolling low scores, so, despite the fact that the Parks stood in second place, their high score was by no means as high as that of most of the other teams. Last night the Park Club team opened up in its old-time form. It was a surprise to the Elizabeth boys and to the seventy-five visitors who crowded along the alleys to witness the games. There was lots of enthusiasm and applause. George Worth is back once more in Plainfield and appeared in the team. He rolled in excellent form and was cool and steady. Will Thiers kept up his reputation, while the others were rolling well. Captain F. O. Ball managed to make high score for the Park team, 201.

The Parks took the lead at the start in every game and kept it to the end. At no time did the Elizabeth team get near enough to be dangerous. In the first game the Parks smashed all their previous records by rolling 905; then came 819 and then 898. It was great bowling and, if continued, will land the Parks in the lead in the race.

The individual scores were as follows:

MAYOR WILSON WAS AT MERCY OF MAD HORSES

His Honor Inside of Coach Drawn By a Plunging Team.

RESCUED SAFELY THOUGH.

DAVID EASTMAN'S YOUNG HORSE FRIGHTENED BY THE TROLLEY.

Fracas Occurred on East Front Street at 8 o'Clock This Morning—Driver Held on to the Reins in a Finely Manner, But was Unable to Control Horse—Collided With Mayor's Vehicle.

A fractious steed owned by David Eastman, of Crescent avenue, and driven by his coachman, came near doing serious damage last Tuesday about 8 o'clock on East Front street near Marshall's laundry. The horse, a young one and very nervous, became frightened at a passing trolley car, and in a few minutes was plunging in the most exciting manner. In the wagon beside the coachman was a small boy, and at the first opportunity he jumped out, thus saving himself any injury. The coachman held on the best he could, but he did not have control of the animal. Presently the horse and wagon crashed into Mayor Wilson's coach and team, and for a few minutes things looked serious. Wheels were locked and it was feared that Mayor Wilson, who was in his coach, would receive serious injury. Several passersby, however, took in the situation, and they gave their aid to straighten out the tangle. Two men caught hold of the Mayor' team and held them down while His Honor alighted from his wagon. In the meantime several men tried to curb the ferocious young horse that was making the trouble.

Suddenly, Mr. Eastman's horse broke away from the wagon and ran down the street toward Dubellen in a wild manner. Pieces of harness and parts of the shafts were scattered promiscuously along the road. Near Randolph's pharmacy the horse hit the sidewalk, but only to make a wild leap into the street again and continue his run for liberty. In front of Hillier & Co.'s place a whiffletree was left and a large plate glass just escaped being smashed.

Mr Eastman's coachman started in pursuit of the horse and succeeded in catching the animal after a long run. The wagon suffered considerably from the accident, but the only damage to Mayor Wilson's rig was the breaking of the whiffletree.

Star Course Entertainment.

Last Monday at the Y. M. C. A. Hall a large and enthusiastic audience enjoyed one of the Star Course entertainments. The entertainers were Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Thompson, necromancer and fantasists, and Prof. Charles Wold, who gave several selections with musical glasses. The artists were all of a superior order and the entertainment was strictly first class. The sleight-of-hand tricks were clever and thoroughly amused those present. Mrs. Thompson assisted her husband in playing on the piano, while Master Harold Thompson also assisted on the stage.

SENATE LODGE MEMBERS VISITED ELIZABETHIANS

A FRATERNAL MEETING MONDAY.

Onward Lodge Was the Host—Grand Officers Were Present—All Had a Word to Say.

Fourteen delegates from Senate Lodge, No. 3542, K. of H., of this city, went to Elizabeth last Monday and assisted in holding a union meeting with the members of Onward Lodge of that place. Addresses were made by some of the highest officers of the order, and at the close all sat down to an elaborate collation provided by the Elizabeth hosts.

The Plainfield people had the pleasure of meeting Grand Dictator Pearsall of Ridgewood; Past Grand Dictator Goltse, of Elizabeth; Grand Treasurer Samuel Klotz, of Newark; Past Grand Dictator Sherf, of Elizabeth; District Deputy Grand Dictator A. DE pitch, Elizabeth; District Deputy Dictator Thomas Leonard, of Newark, and Vice Grand Dictator J. Feder, of Elizabeth.

All the fourteen delegates from Senate Lodge made short addresses upon the good of the order, and it was not until a late hour that the Knights dispersed. February 21 the grand officers who were at Elizabeth last night, will be here as guests of Senate Lodge.

JOHANSEN NEED NOT MOVE.

Jury in Justice Crossley's Court Granted a Non-suit.

Twelve good men and true declared Monday that Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Johansen, who are occupying a farm in Washingtonville for which Charles Sherts, of New York, is agent, need not vacate, the premises as Sherts was trying to make them do.

The case was tried before Justice Crossley and a jury in Spencer's Hall, and the trial occupied a great portion of the day. The Johansens are three months behind in their rent and owe $48. Sherts brought suit against them to eject them. The Johansens refused to go out, and fought the case. Lawyer S. S Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, defended them, and raised three points why a non-suit should be given. The first was that there were plenty of goods on the place to have distrained instead of bringing the action. The second was that Sherts was acting as agent for his mother who died last August, and therefore he had no authority. The third was that the landlord had not lived up to his agreement in repairing the barns, etc. The non-suits were refused and the case given to the jury who were only out a few minutes and brought in a verdict of no cause for action. J. P. D. Kirch represented Sherts and it is not known what further action they will take to eject their tenants.

Changed Meeting Place.

Watchung Court, I. O. F., have changed their meeting place to Red Men's Hall, and hereafter they will meet on the first and third Thursday evenings in each month. The Court is steadily increasing in membership and has thus far been very successful.

THIEVES AT WORK EARLY

SMITH BROTHERS STORE BROKEN INTO RIGHT AFTER CLOSING.

J. A. Smith Was in the Office When He Heard Suspicious Noises—When He Investigated the Thieves Made Their Escape

A bold attempt at robbery was committed last Monday soon after 7 p m. at the grocery store of J. A. Smith & Bro., West Front street, but owing to the acute ear of J A. Smith the thieves departed in haste and empty-handed.

Mr. Smith was sitting in his office quietly reading. Suddenly he heard a loud crash. His first thought was that the cat was chasing a rat about. Mr. Smith's mind was easy for a few minutes thinking that the cat was doing her duty, but when he heard footsteps about the cellar he began to wonder what was going on.

He went to the cellar door and called, "Who is there?" There was no answer. Just then he heard more foot steps. Mr. Smith secured the assistance of two clerks and they proposed to go to the cellar. In the meantime the thief or thieves thought it best to make their escape, and by he time Mr. Smith and his clerks reached the cellar the intruders had disappeared.

The intruders had entered the cellar through a window from the alley alongside of the store. The grating had been removed and the window smashed, as well as much of the wood work was destroyed.

Mr. Smith has no idea as to who the thieves are and he did not reach the cellar quick enough to catch a glimpse of them. He has reported the matter to the police and it will be investigated.

AVOIDING LAW SUITS.

Victims of the Lehigh Wreck Will Receive Damages.

Shamokin, Pa., Jan. 24—Several persons who were in the New York excursion wreck at Dunellen have already received letters from New York lawyers who desire to place their claims for damages sustained to person and property. Parents and wives of those killed are also in receipt of similar letters.

P. J. Ferguson, of Shenandoah, claim agent for the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, who hurried to the scene of the wreck, has since personally visited some of the injured with a view of making settlement. Mr. Ferguson has been authorized to liberally remunerate all who sustained loss, either by the death of relatives, through injury or a time, and will personally visit every passenger on the ill fated train who survived, together with relatives of those who were less fortunate.

It has been officially stated that the company will not enter into litigation with claimants if it can be avoided, and every passenger in the ill-fated train will be allowed liberal compensation for damages sustained.

INSURANCE ALMOST COVERS LOSS.

Lawyer McNabb Will be Repaid for Most of the Damage Done by Fire.

Charles J. McNabb had $2,300 insurance on his Dunellen residence which was destroyed by fire Monday morning. Mr McNabb valued his property at $4,000, the house itself at $2,800. His personal property was insured for $1 000 which fully covers it, as most of the silverware, which was included in the inventory, was saved.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb, when they were away, left their silverware with their next door neighbor, Mrs. George Harrison. They did this Sunday, and neglected to stop for it when they returned at night, so it is safe. Mr. McNabb intended placing more insurance on his house, but put it off until too late.

WILL FIGHT SHARKS FOR A BIG STAKE.

Ex-Cow Puncher and Sailor Visited Plainfield.

HIS WONDERFUL HISTORY.

ONE OF HIS SWEETHEARTS USED TO LIVE IN THIS CITY.

Failing to Find Her He Took to Drink—Was Arrested by Patrolman Vanderveg—Elwin Golden Challenged All Living Shark—Wanted Judge Runyon for Referee—No Fighting, He Left Navy

For many years he roamed the undulating prairies of the far west. For years he sailed the briny deep, fought the sharks and failed to fight the Spaniards. Disgusted that he should not see active service, Edward Golden confined his movements to the land and, last Monday, wound up at the Plainfield city jail.

While Golden was not like the sailor you read about, having a girl in every port, he admired a number. One fair maid of his acquaintance came to Plainfield. That happened several years ago. He always vowed that, when fate permitted, he would visit the "Eldorado of the East" and see her. Monday Golden landed in Plainfield. He inquired for "his lady" but no one knew her. His efforts were fruitless and, tired of the unsuccessful hunt, he drowned his troubles in the flowing bowl.

Patrolman Vanderveg found the brave sailor, last of Uncle Sam's service, in a sad state last evening. He must have snapped a cable and drifted broadside to the gale, for he pitched and tossed and lost all steerage way. Golden finding himself adrift called out for help. Then the officer steered him into a friendly port and locked him up for the night.

When Golden had been with them a short while the police discovered that they were entertaining a remarkable character. It would take volumes to relate all the wonderful adventures of this wonderful man. As a "cowpuncher" on the western plains he made for himself a great reputation.

Then he tried his luck as a servant of Uncle Sam. He shipped as a fireman on the U. S. gunboat "Catskill" and served faithfully and well. But Golden's great ability appears in fighting sharks. He confidentially told his new-made friends that, given a club and a knife, he would lick any shark in the five oceans for $500 a side, time and place to be decided later. He also promised City Judge Runyon as referee of the fight. His list of victims among the shark family is a numerous one. Furthermore, he told his listeners that although he had killed many sharks in his time, not one had been able to kill him as yet.

Golden had his discharge with him when he was arrested; also a letter from Recruiting Agent Trowbridge, of Philadelphia. At first Golden explained that he had taken to drink last night to deaden the pain of neuralgia, but he afterwards confided the fact that sorrow at not finding "his lady" had also influenced him.

Golden was arraigned before City Judge Runyon Tuesday morning. The Judge heard his story and suspended sentence when Golden promised to depart immediately for Philadelphia and reship in the navy.

DEATH OF EDWARD T. HANN.

Letter-Carrier Passed Away This Afternoon—Afflicted With Consumption.

After a long illness with consumption, Edward T. Hann, of Somerset place, died Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hann was for many years one of Plainfield's most popular and efficient letter-carriers. He had a host of friends who will deeply regret his death.

He was during the past year a great sufferer from the disease, and death was considered only a question of a short time.

Said He Lost Money.

Jacob Sarlowski was arrested on Paradise alley early Sunday morning by Patrolman Saffron for being drunk. Sarlowski says that he had $6 at that time that was gone later. Saffron says the money was not on the prisoner when he searched him at the station house. Sarlowski was arraigned before City Judge Runyon Monday morning. As he had not done anything particularly naughty the Judge suspended sentence.

FARMER PITTS' MURDERER MUST PAY THE PENALTY

SENTENCE OF DEATH IS AFFIRMED.

United States Supreme Court Decides That the Slayer of Farmer Pitts Must Be Hanged.

Washington, Jan. 24—The United States Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the decision of the Circuit Court for the district of New Jersey in the case of Louis Boesel, under sentence of death for murder. He applied to the Circuit Court for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied him.

Boesel was convicted of the murder of Farmer James C. Pitts, at Summit, September 9, 1897, and was sentenced to be hanged. His case was appealed to the Court of Errors, which affirmed the decision of the lower court. Boesel's counsel, Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, as a final resort, carried the case to the United States Supreme Court. It was on this appeal that the decision was handed down Monday.

It will now be necessary to have a new date fixed for the execution.

George Manshanda, Boesel's accomplice, is now serving a twenty-year sentence in State Prison. He turned State's evidence and pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Tired of Being Sentenced.

Elizabeth, January 24.—Frank Bergen, counsel for Louis Boesel, said yesterday afternoon that he had private information concerning the Boesel case. When asked if the decision of the United States Supreme Court meant that Boesel would now be hanged, Mr. Bergen would not reply.

It is understood that an effort will be made to obtain Executive clemency for Boesel, who has been sentenced three times to be hanged.

He said to one of his keepers when the death watch was set for the third time: "I am tired of being told by the Judge that 'you are to hang by the neck until you are dead.' Now shall I hang by the feet?"

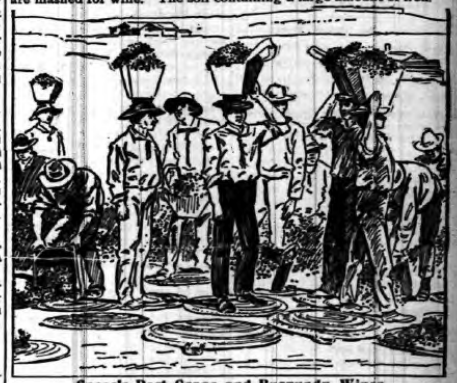
GRAPE HARVEST IN PORTUGAL.

THE PORT GRAPES CARRIED TO THE TREADING VATS.

Scene at the Vineyards of Boa Visto, valley of the Douro: Women cut the bunches of grapes into small baskets, carry them a short distance and fill large baskets holding near 100 pounds. Then men with sheepskins thrown over their backs, and plaited straw knots on their heads, shoulder the baskets and move off in single file down the rugged winding paths and flights of steps to large vats, where the grapes are mashed for wine. The soil containing a large amount of iron.



Speer's Port Grape and Burgundy Wines

are made from the same grapes grown on an eastern mountain slope in Passaic valley, New Jersey, the soil also abounding in iron produces the real Blood-making, Life-preserving Wines of the World—the old, original Port wine grape of Portugal. No other wines equal these for invalids, weakly persons and the aged. None put in market until nine years old. FOR SALE BY Druggists and Grocers.

Also the P. J. Sherry, Burgundy, Socialite, Claret vin. 1881, and Climax Brandy vin. 1878, all used extensively in Hospitals and among the Medical faculty as the best to be obtained. The unfermented Grape Juice is extensively used in New York churches for communion service.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent caution and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her cure: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at last time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." The time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but after by this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person to be quickly relieved to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

LIST OF Y M C A. ATHLETIC RECORDS.

Best Performances at the Local Gymnasium.

GOOD WORK FOR INDOORS.

THREE RECORDS WERE BROKEN IN THE LAST INDOOR CONTEST.

Raymond Carroll Broke Them—Showing in Other Events was Good—Complete List of Winners, Distances and Times in That Contest—New Interest in Athletic Work—The Table of Records.

Interest in athletics among the members of the Y. M. C. A. has shown a decided increase this year. This increase has been particularly noticeable among the members who have heretofore taken but little interest in such things. One of the principal means of bringing the novices out has been the indoor athletic contest which ended last Saturday evening.

Out of the ten events contested there were records broken in three of them, all by Raymond Carroll, who won the contest. In the others the showing made was good when compared with the Y. M. C. A. records.

A complete list of the Y. M. C. A. records in indoor events is given below, together with the winner of that event in the contest, and his time or distance, whichever it happens to be.

While there is nothing phenomenal in any of them, there is evidence of good work that speaks well for the training given at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

The records are as follows:

Standing broad jump—record, F. O. Bristol, 9 feet, 1 inch; '99 contest, William Townsend and Raymond Carroll, 8 feet, 8 1-2 inches.

Potato race—record, F. O. Bristol, 1 minute, 46 1 5 s-conds; '99 contest, J. H. Green, Jr., 1 minute 47 2 5 seconds.

Three standing broad jumps—record, F. O. Bristol, 29 feet, 4 inches; '99 contest, Raymond Carroll, 26 feet, 10 inches.

Putting the shot—record, George Proctor Smith, 37 feet, 8 inches; '99 contest, William Morgan, 32 feet, 9 inches.

Hop, step and jump—old record, George Proctor Smith, 25 feet, 2 inches; new record and "99 contes', Raymond Carroll, 25 feet, 9 1 2 inches.

One quarter mile run, (¼ laps)—record, George Proctor Smith, 1 minute 22 3-5 seconds; '99 contest, J. H. Green, Jr., 1 minute, 25 3-5 seconds.

Standing high jump—record, Ivan Hardingham, 4 feet, 2 inches; '99 contest, Berry Egan, 4 feet.

Running high kick—old record, F. O Bristol, 8 feet, 1 inch; new record and '99 contest, Raymond Carroll, 8 feet, 3 inches.

Fence vault—record, F. O. Bristol, 6 feet, 3 inches; '99 contest, Raymond Carroll, 5 feet, 10 inches.

FARM BUILDINGS BURNED.

Disastrous Fire at C. L. Blair's Country Place—Live Stock Perished.

Peapack, Feb. 1—The buildings of C. L. Blair, consisting of stable, hay barns, wagon-houses, poultry-house and other buildings, were burned to the ground Monday evening. The fire started in the building used for straw and grain storage. This building was filled, and the fire spread very rapidly and soon communicated with the horse stable and cow stable. Six valuable cows were burned in the stanchions, as they could not be released. Thirty sheep, which were also in this building, were burned. The fire spread to the poultry-house, in which were many choice fowls. These were also burned. The horses, by dint of hard work, were released from the stable before the flames reached them.

Owing to the wind blowing from an opposite direction the handsome dwelling of Mr Blair was saved. Mr. Blair is spending the winter in New York City, and during his absence the place is in charge of a caretaker, Mr. Ross, who could give no reason as to the cause of the fire. The loss is about $10,000.

SEVERE COLD WAVE IN THE ASCENDANT

A Zero Temperature for This Section.

IT WILL LAST TWO DAYS.

THEN A BIG SNOW-STORM IS PREDICTED TO ARRIVE.

An Inch More of Snow Fell Last Night—Street Commissioner Gavett's Men on Duty Early This Morning—Clearing Crosswalk—The Police to Strictly Enforce The Sidewalk Cleaning Ordinance.

A cold wave of exceptional severity is sweeping over this country and the forenoon edge of it has already reached this section. Tuesday, Jack Frost and his hardy assistants turned out and chased the mercury well down toward the bottom of the tube of the thermometer. Wednesday at 7 o'clock, the mercury registered six degrees above zero. At Oak Tree, it is reported to have reached the zero point.

In the western states where the cold wave is now at its height, the thermometer has fallen far below zero, even in the southern section. According to the statement of the weather bureau, the cold wave will reach its greatest intensity here tonight and the weather will then moderate for a big snow storm due here Friday.

The great storm that was expected in this section Monday or Tuesday passed to one side and was not noticed here. A small storm visited this section Tuesday, broke during the day but gathered new force at night. During the evening, an inch of snow was added to the inches that had already fallen. The only effect of the snow was to spoil the skating without bringing sleighing or coasting.

Yesterday morning a gang of Street Commissioner Gavett's men were on duty early cleaning the cross walks in the business section. During the morning they extended the field of operation to the residental parts of the city. The police will also begin an active campaign against those who don't clean off the snow from the sidewalks.

REFINED AMUSEMENT AT THE PARK CLUB.

SIX EXCELLENT RECITATIONS GIVEN.

Mrs. Frank H. Smith Seen at Her Best—Fine Tenor Voice of Mr. Strickett Was Appreciated.

The entertainment committee of the Park Club, of which Elston M. French is the efficient chairman, provided an entertainment at the club Tuesday evening for the members and their friends. Those who furnished the entertainment were Mr. and Mrs Frank H. Smith and G Morgan Strickett. Mrs. Smith gave six of her best recitations. Her selections were varied with pathos and laughter and each line was given with a finished style that was delightful.

Interpersing Mrs. Smith's selections G Morgan Strickett, who is the tenor soloist at the Crescent Avenue church, gave several of his best selections. There was strength and purity of tone and his selections were of the kind that won the approbation of the audience. He was accompanied on the piano by Frank H. Smith.

Superintendent Woodland Acted as Master of Ceremonies—A Few Invited Guests From This City—Several Officials From the Main Office Were There—Pleasant Remarks Followed the Dinner.

As a reward for a year of exceptional good work, the Prudential Insurance Company gave its superintendent and his assistants and the agents of the Plainfield district a banquet Tuesday at the Revere House. The Plainfield district includes the territory from Roselle to as far south as Frenchtown, Clinton, Flemington and Lambertville, and the working force consists of between 50 and 60 men. It is the custom of this company not only to promote their employees as fast as they show merit, but to frequently reward them for good work by the gift of cash prizes, articles of apparel, jewelry, etc. This banquet is given when the year's work has been above the average, and is an occasion of mirth and festivity.

Covers were laid Tuesday for seventy-five. There were seven invited guests at the banquet, former Judge W. B Codington, J. C. Ireland, Henry Woodland, M. P Elderton, Dr D. C Adams, Frank L. Cobb and William A Stimpson.

From the home office at Newark came Dr. Watson, assistant medical director; Robert Gemmell, L V. Ash, E. Taylor, Fred Tassey and D. A. McIntyre.

All of these found seats at the banquet table and partook of the menu provided by Landlord Revere.

From each napkin, as it was lifted, dropped a white carnation and a sprig of fern. During the two hours and a half spent at the banquet an orchestra, composed of Herbert J. Harold, Fred Van Eps and Fred G. Smith, played several selections.

After the cigars had been lighted, a pleasant two hours were spent in listening to speeches from some of the most prominent of the Prudential's workers. Superintendent Woodland was master of ceremonies.

In a short speech Mr. Woodland congratulated his force for the past year's work and urged them to enter into the year '99 with a determination to surpass their record of '98. He said that he wanted to do this with his present working force, and not be obliged to lay off men for inactivity.

A letter from Vice-President Dr. Leslie D. Ward, regretting that he could not be present, was read.

Robert Gammell, division manager, laid great stress upon the individual work of each agent. He is a fluent speaker and his remarks were listened to with attention.

Dr. Watson was the next speaker and he referred to Dr. Lowrie, of this city, as the oldest examining physician in the service of the Prudential in the Plainfield district.

WELCOMED BY MUSIC

PLEASANT SOCIAL AFFAIR AT THE HOME OF L. V. FRANDOLPH.

Affair Given in Honor of the Misses Marion and Josephine Randolph, Who Have Just Returned From Paris.

A welcome-musicale was enjoyed by a hundred of the music lovers of this city Tuesday at the home of former Mayor and Mrs L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, in honor of the return of their two daughters, Miss Marion Fitz Randolph and Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph, who have been abroad for about fifteen months studying music and the languages in Paris. The gathering was necessarily a small one, as the host and hostess invited only as many guests as could be comfortably seated in the music and drawing rooms. The audience was a select one, and consisted of the near friends of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph and their daughters.

The house was prettily arranged. Mr and Mrs Randolph received, assisted by their three daughters, Miss Marion Fitz Randolph, Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph and Miss Caroline Fitz Randolph. The guests were received in the library and passed on into the music and drawing rooms where they were seated. An elaborate programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered, the artists being Hugh Whitfield Martin, of New York, a composer, and a tenor of unusual ability; Miss Ada Latimer, of New York, soprano; P. Ludwig Condo and Miss Elizabeth Blossom Fitz Randolph, violinists; Charles M Mall, of New York, a brother of Pierre Mall, of this city, cellist, and Miss Marion S. Dadmun, Miss E. Louise Russell and Miss Caroline Fitz Randolph, pianists.

Special mention might be made of a vocal duet by Miss Latimer and Mr. Martin, "Sous les Etoiles," and two old English songs, "Polly Willes" and "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair," sung by Miss Latimer. The programme took about two hours to finish, and by request there were no encores.

Refreshments were served to the guests at small tables brought out and placed about the rooms. This was something new and the effect was very pleasing. The rooms were decorated with flowers of all descriptions. In the library, where the guests went first, were vases of beautiful pink roses. In the drawing room the color had grown deeper, and the pink was replaced by the dark red American beauty roses. Yellow daffodils in the music room mixed with green smilax made a pretty effect. White carnations formed the decorations in the dining room.

The Misses Randolph have spent two winters in Paris and return home with the finished touches that only a course of study pursued abroad can give. The summers were spent in Switzerland. They arrived in New York Saturday after a rough passage on the Saale. Thursday afternoon Mrs. Randolph will give a tea to be followed by a dance. This affair is given for the young people who were not invited to last night's musicale, and who have not had an opportunity yet of meeting the young ladies.

NEW TROLLEY LINES.

Somerville Cars Running Every Half Hour Under New Schedule.

The cars on the Somerville and Bound Brook line of the Brunswick Traction Company are now running every half hour, the original schedule of last Wednesday being still in force. Cars leave the station at the even and half hour throughout the day. The fare to Bound Brook is 10 cents each way and the same figure for single fare between there and Somerville.

Since the new schedule has gone into effect, the cars of the Plainfield company make close connections at Dunellen for Bound Brook. The cars of the Brunswick Traction Company start from Dunellen for Bound Brook every half hour and have no trouble in making the run in half an hour's time. The Plainfield cars no longer go to Taylor's Hotel in the evening, as has been the custom in the past, but they now run as far as the depot park and then return.

THE BOY PREACHER WAS AFTER SINNERS.

He Dragged Them Through Laughing From Their Seats.

A PRECOCIOUS YOUNGSTER.

HE PRAYED AFTER THE SINNERS AND THEN SENT THEM BACK.

The Child Evidently Found Much Enjoyment in Posing as Central Figure of the Meeting—Marched Up and Down the Platform Swinging His Arms—Prayed and Answered Question—He is Humorous.

"If you want to go to Heaven, stand up," shouted the Boy Preacher, as he waved his arms and strode up and down the platform.

"Do you want to go to hell?" he demanded of one young colored woman in the front row who didn't rise fast enough to suit him. "Stand up then." Such were the methods that the youthful Lawrence Dennis used in his alleged occupation of saving souls at the meeting held in the Fillmore Baptist church last Tuesday.

There isn't any doubt but that the youthful Dennis has a remarkable memory and is a very bright child for his years. His parents claim that he is only five years old and he does not appear much older. As an entertainer he is amusing, but when posing in the role of an inspired evangelist, as he attempted to do Tuesday night, there is much that is lacking.

Lawrence Dennis is the son of a white man, Perrine Dennis, of Atlanta, Ga., and a colored woman. He was born Christmas Day, 1893, at Atlanta, and, it is claimed, has talked ever since he was two years old. His parents, who accompany him, claim that the child has never been taught anything, but that everything came to him by inspiration direct from the Lord. They said they could not keep him at home, because he said that he must go forth and save souls. So they are traveling about the country, and the collections, which form an important part of the meetings, they say will be devoted to his future education.

The boy is evidently quite a precocious child, who finds much enjoyment in this new kind of play. When he appeared in the Fillmore Colored Baptist church on Sycamore street last evening, he was dressed in a little kilt skirt of blue and white striped cloth and a little grey figured jacket. While his skin was light the traces of negro ancestry were shown in the flat nose and the black curly hair. A long curl hung down either side of his face, tied close to the head with a white ribbon.

Once on the platform with Rev. W. D. Johnson, pastor of the church, and Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, Lawrence began to march up and down the platform, swinging his arms.

At last he decided to open the service.

"Let's sing," he began, but after beating about what to sing, he changed his mind and said, "Oh no, don't let's sing, let's pray. You pray," he said, turning to Rev. Mr. Johnson. The clergyman responded. Then there was singing, followed by more prayers, in which the Boy Preacher took a turn.

"Oh Lord forgive us and let us have everlasting life," he began. "Oh Lord forgive us and let us be washed in the blood, the blood of the Lamb and the Crucified One." He prayed several times after that but the same phrases were used only in a different order. After that the audience was invited to ask him questions.

After several simple ones were asked and answered the clergyman inquired about the minor prophets.

"The Lord hasn't told me about them yet," said Lawrence. "He doesn't think I'm old enough."

Next the youthful speaker began to wander about among the audience. Half the crowd was positively afraid of him and shrank back as he approached.

"Are you a sinner?" he demanded of a young colored girl. She giggled but said nothing, so he dragged her out of her seat and led her to the front of the platform. He found six other young people and brought them up. Then he asked all the sinners to stand up. One young colored woman did and the boy shouted, "Let her git her."

The two pastors prayed and Lawrence Dennis did as well, asking particularly that New York, Philadelphia and Europe might be saved. Then the sinners were sent back to their seats.

Some of his sayings and actions were really funny and the audience

SECRETLY WEDDED AT NIGHT IN NEWARK

News of the Nuptials Became Known Tuesday.

ELMER MANTZ THE GROOM.

AT FIRST THE COUPLE DENIED THAT THEY WERE MARRIED.

They Intended to Marry in May, But Love Was Too Strong to Keep Them Apart Any Longer—Ceremony Was Performed at the Parsonage of a Newark Clergyman at 10 p. m. Sunday.

After keeping their secret successfully for two days, two young people of this town, Elmer Mantz of Jackson avenue, and Miss Mamie Kenney, of Sycamore avenue, have announced that they were married Sunday night, and are now receiving congratulations from their friends.

Mr. Mantz is a clerk in Boehm's dry goods store, where he has been employed for eight years. Miss Kenney and Mr. Mantz have been keeping company for about a year. Their acquaintances have been expecting to hear of their engagement, and among their most intimate friends it was understood that the wedding was to come off in May.

But Sunday afternoon Miss Kenney and Mr. Mantz took a train to Newark. It was dark when they reached that city. Where they went at first they refuse to make known, but at 10:30 o'clock, after the services were over in the churches, the young couple brought up at the home of Rev. Mr. Drott, a Methodist minister, living at 43 Hill street, where they were quietly married. Mrs Drott and Miss Lillian Rock, who was visiting at the house, witnessed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs Mantz returned to Plainfield and went to their homes, where they will reside for a short time. In the spring they expect to go to housekeeping. The groom is about twenty-one years of age, and the bride a few years younger.

STRIVING TO FURNISH THE CHURCH PARSONAGE.

ENTERTAINMENT AT GRACE CHURCH.

Entertainers Were A. E. Pearsall and Miss Marie Budworth, Both of Whom Pleased.

Despite the unpleasant weather last Tuesday a large and appreciative audience assembled at Grace M. E church to attend the entertainment given under the auspices of Mrs. T W. Powell's Sunday-school class for the benefit of the furnishing fund for the new parsonage. The large attendance was gratifying both to those in charge and those who entertained.

The entertainers were Alfred E. Pearsall and Miss Marie Budworth, of Westfield, both of whom are well-known to Plainfielders. They appeared in a programme of recitations and songs, and every number was given with a finish that won applause from all.

The programme presented was as follows: "Singing Joseph," "Dow's Flat in '49" and "The Sentinel and I" by Mr. Pearsall; "Singing Sons," "She Stoops to Conquer," by Miss Budworth; "The First Settler's Story," "The Holy City," "The Palms," by Mr. Pearsall. The last numbers, "Where are You Going," and "Hunting Tower," were divided between Mr. Pearsall and Miss Budworth. Miss Carroll very kindly accompanied Miss Budworth on the piano for the vocal selections given by her.

SHORT WEEK'S WORK FOR THE LEGISLATORS.

Convened Monday Night and Adjourned Yesterday.

MR. MURRAY VOTED ALONE.

SAYS THE ANTI-ALIEN LABOR BILL WILL WORK INJUSTICE.

The Plainfielder Believes That Contractors Should be Protected on the Existing Contracts—A Day for the Patriots Was Yesterday—Praise and a Sword for Sampson—Thanks for the Women.

Trenton, Feb. 1.—The Legislature got to work at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and, having taken a noon recess, broke away again at 5 p. m., calling it a week. While the two houses were in session they made a better show of industry than they have exhibited since the session began. There is a disposition on the part of the leaders to push the bills through as rapidly as possible, and when the House adjourned at noon Speaker Watkins instructed the committees to meet at once and report bills to the afternoon session so that the House might get to work and dispose of them. Still, the committees are slow and very little business was ready for the afternoon session. The Republican Senators held a caucus until a late hour last night and discussed measures before that body with the purpose of outlining a policy to be pursued regarding them. If there is any unusual delay in the final adjournment of the Legislature it will be brought about by the commission appointed to investigate the Railway Reformatory and the investigation of the Hudson county elections, if one is made.

Assemblyman Mcngle's Alien Labor bill, House No. 7, passed the House by a vote of 50 to 1, Mr. Murray, of Union county, alone voting in the negative.

The Plainfield man opposed the measure on the ground that its passage would inflict hardship on contractors who might have contracts pending, and who had made their estimates with a view to employing cheap labor.

Should the bill become a law, Mr. Murray argued, these contractors would be obliged to employ men at higher wages, thereby entailing loss. It is predicted that the bill will come to grief in the Senate.

Echoes of the war sounded through both houses, and a good start has been made in the resolution of thanks line. The Senate adopted a resolution thanking the Women's National Relief Association for its good work in ameliorating the conditions of the soldiers and sailors in the war with Spain.

Senator McDermott opposed the resolution, saying that he was against specializing persons for thanks when so many others had done equally good work. The nurses of the battlefields were entitled to quite as much thanks as the women whose wealth enabled them to do good work. Mr. McDermott's vote was the only one in the negative.

The fact that Rear Admiral Sampson is a resident of New Jersey gave other patriots a chance to introduce a concurrent resolution in the Senate, warmly praising the Rear Admiral and providing for the presentation of a sword to him as a token of the esteem and regard of his fellow-Jerseymen. The resolution got through the Senate without a hitch, but the admirers of that other Santiago hero, Schley, will probably give it some rough sledding when it reaches the House.

Assemblyman Wood, of Mercer, yesterday afternoon made a bright, patriotic little speech in advocacy of a resolution urging the United States Senate to at once adopt the peace treaty. The applause of his fellow-members showed that Mr. Wood's sentiments were appreciated, and his resolution went through hummingly. Wr. Wood is likely to loom up as one of the few orators of the session. Orators have had no opportunities so far, however. Indeed, brilliant talkers have been very scarce in Trenton in recent years.

After the Thief.

It is reported that the police have additional evidence regarding the stolen gold watch belonging to Alonzo Brokaw, of the Plainfield Electric Light station, and they hope soon to secure the property.

Chief Doane on Duty Again.

Chief Doane, of the fire department, is on duty again after a week's illness. The Chief was confined to his home with the grip, from which he has now nearly recovered.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

True Source of Content.

There is no greater foe to a woman's happiness than restlessness. This does not of necessity mean actual physical unrest, but the mental quality of dissatisfaction with oneself, one's surroundings, one's own actions, is the quality that makes days dark and spirits depressed. The self-satisfied poise, while not one to be commended in its attitude toward the world at large, is infinitely more comforting to its possessor than that eagerness to be or have something else than what we are not or do not possess.

The artistic temperament is never really satisfied. True genius is possessed of a spirit of infinite despair over failure to achieve such greatness as genius may be possible. Mediocrity is never satisfying to such, but, alas! if it could be how much happier the whole world would be! To find content do not look in the cities. Expect it not in the household where the wife is socially ambitious or the husband has a political bee in his bonnet. Content, that sure and certain, happy and restful feeling of repletion, comes only to those who are satisfied with just enough to give them food and shelter, with a tiny margin for doctors' bills and a luxury now and then.

The attire of others has no special significance—certainly it inspires no envy. The handsomer furnishings, the greater income mean nothing. Contentment banishes all through the advancement. The smooth, unruffled brow is the hallmark of the inward placidity. A woman thus endowed does not have to fear wrinkles. Time has no terrors for her. Sleep, sweet and reposeful, with never a thought of bills to be met on the morrow, adds her in the possession of her perpetual youth that her socially ambitious sister longs to possess, but cannot guess the secret of its being. It is all very well to talk about the cultivation of repose, but it is the product of a mind tranquil, as well as a body at rest, and to obtain it the words ambition and worry must be eliminated from the lexicon of life.—Philadelphia Times.

Pure Candies Not Hurtful.

To the average child there are two delights so great that the sophisticated man or woman of the world can hardly comprehend the bliss they cause. One is to eat ice cream; the other, to eat candy. One woman confesses that when she was a small girl, and was told that heaven was a place of absolute bliss, she instantly decided in her own mind that in that place there would be gellon freezers of ice cream always standing open, and that the trees would bear on their branches, and drop upon the ground below, thousands of candies.

It is a pity that an article whose wise use gives so much pleasure and works so little harm as does good candy should have been abused until it has become an evil. Some parents feel that to keep their children in health they must forbid them to eat candy at any time, while other parents permit it to be devoured in such quantities that their ignorance can be their only excuse for the ill of allowing such indulgence. Dentists and physicians unite in the opinion that pure candy, eaten in proper quantities and at proper times, can do a well child no harm. Good candy may be now procured from many dealers, the purity of whose bonbons has justly won for them reputation. Let the mother buy these candies and portion them out to her little ones, a few at a time, and always right after a substantial meal. —Harper's Bazar.

Simple Aids to Beauty.

Sleep on a very low pillow or none at all. Sleeping on a flat bed will help to give straight, firmly-poised shoulders.

Walk from one to three miles every day in broad-soled shoes and loose clothing, leaving cares at home. You may find them when you return, or they will have fled entirely.

Walk with the limbs swinging from the hips, like a pendulum, and to do this keep the weight of the body forward on the balls of the feet. This is the secret of a graceful stage carriage.

Take a morning sponge bath with as much regularity as you eat your dinner.

Do not retire in a bedroom in which the gas has been burning for hours. Put out the light, throw open the windows as wide as possible and get pure oxygen before retiring. Then leave the window so that there is circulation of good air all night long.

Regular hours for sleeping and for eating are the best means of keeping perfect health. A dentist, on looking at a girl's teeth, found no cavities to fill. She asked in surprise: "How is that?" He replied that she had probably been sleeping regularly, eight hours a night, and jokingly added that there is a science in "teeth-reading" quite as real as palmistry.—Philadelphia Press.

Frequent Use of the Napkin.

"Children," says a physician, "should be taught the use of a napkin to wipe the mouth frequently while eating, for hygienic as well as tidy reasons. Cold sores, common with some children, are often the result of careless eating more than anything else. A trained nurse understands well the necessity of keeping the corners of a patient's mouth clean while feeding—children ought to be taught how and why they should do likewise."

well as cloth is covered with rows of it for gown trimming and hats as well. Something very novel is the use of cashmere-colored velvet cut in waved bands, covered with stitching, trimming a brown cloth gown. These edge the overdress, which is longer at the back than in front, where it rounds up a trifle at one side and fastens, the bands continuing up the side, as seen in cutting these new overdresses is that the back shall be bias, literally plain over the hips, and the fullness which naturally falls in on bias gives the needed width at the bottom. Underskirts are cut in the same way, bias in the back, which lessens the trouble of fitting the hips very much. Bands of velvet edge the underskirt in this particular instance; and another odd feature of this brown gown is a yoke and collar of pale blue velvet also covered with stitching.

Tucks from one inch to four inches wide appear in some of the new cloth gowns, around the bottom of the skirt. There will be four or five of the narrow ones with spaces between, and three of the wider lapping a little over one another. A gown with three skirts, or, rather, the effect of three, is another new model. They round up in front, the top one being very narrow, of course, and are edged all around with rows of stitching, fur or embroidery. A new shade of red which is very much worn in Paris resembles the tint of pomegranate seeds, and a costume of cloth in this color is made with a princess tunic, fastened at one side and edged all around with a chenille fringe of the same color. The underskirt is of velvet to match.

A TIMELY HINT.

Guests Who Are Not Ready to Appear at Breakfast.

A girl who visits New York frequently stops while in the city with her grandmother. The grandmother is an old-fashioned housekeeper, and one thing upon which she lays emphasis in her household rules is regularity. The meals are always on time and she likes the members of her family to be ready promptly. It is something of a trial to her that her granddaughter should sometimes after a theatre party or other festivity sleep over breakfast time. The granddaughter knows this, and she makes a great effort to be up in time, and make up her sleep if she needs to in the afternoon. The other evening she had been out very late, and grandmamma sympathized. "The child mustn't try to get up this morning," she said to herself, and dressing more hurriedly than usual she hurried to her granddaughter's room.

"Alice," she called softly, as she knocked on the door. There was no answer and she went in. "Alice," she said again, speaking a little louder, but there was no answer. "Alice," she said a third time, and at last there was a sleepy response. "Alice, dear," she said, "don't think of getting up this morning. You were out so very late last night you need the sleep." At this time she was stroking the ruffled head on the pillow, and by the time she had finished speaking the owner was wide awake, but not quite conscious of what had been said. "Oh, yes, grandma," she answered, "I will get right up," and she did, for she had been so thoroughly waked that she could not go to sleep again.—New York Times.

Circus for a Dime.

If you want a regular circus in the back yard next summer invest a dime in a package of mixed gourd seeds and plant by a picket fence. Train them along and if you pour dish water around the roots every day the first surprise will come in seeing the things grow, perhaps shutting out an ugly back yard next door, and also being a pretty back ground for marigolds, asters or similar plants in the front. Some sunny morning take a view of your fence, covered with prettily shaded leaves and the nest eggs gourds so white hanging all over in mixed with the large yellow flowers, and however, this will make a more cheerful view of things. Furthermore, the vine has something for every member of the family. Grandma can darn her stockings on a small gourd; mother can use them for nest eggs; the artistic daughter can carve pretty boxes and cups, and paint pictures on the hard smooth surface; the little girls can make a whole yard of animals out of the small ones, using matches or toothpicks for legs; the boy can make a curiosity for his cabinet by putting a bottle over the bud; it will expand and fill the place, and the other boys will wonder how such a thing could be put into such small quarters.—Chicago Journal.

OUR YOUTHS' COLUMN.

Benjamin West, the Artist.

He has made a likeness of little Sally! exclaimed his astonished and delighted mother, and she kissed him with much fondness and satisfaction. "My mother's kiss," he said, after wards, "made me a painter." And, indeed, he immediately proceeded to act on the spot, that he believed he could make a picture of the flowers she had in her hand.

Little Benjamin West, son of Quaker West, was only six years old when this incident occurred. He had done nothing to indicate the best of his genius until that day in June, when one of his sisters, who had married and had a little daughter, came with her infant child to pass some days at her father's. While the mother and daughter were gathering flowers in the garden, Benjamin was left to guard the sleeping infant in the cradle. The child happened to smile, which charmed the boy. With the instinct of genius, the lad, who, at this time, his biographer declares, "had never seen an engraving or a picture," and probably had never seen anyone use a brush, seized a pen from the table and, with the red and black inks, endeavored to delineate a portrait.

And so this boy, who wanted four months of being seven years old—for he was born on the tenth of October, 1738, six years after Washington—drew not only his first picture, but the first he ever saw. When his mother and his sister came in, he tried to conceal his work; he was afraid they would be angry, but the mother examined the picture attentively for some time, and then burst forth with the exclamation that it was the picture of the slumbering babe, and lavished kisses instead of frowns upon him.

Benjamin, at school, kept on drawing with pen and ink; and the Indians, who at times came to the hospitable mansion, were amused by his sketches of birds and flowers. They taught him his first lesson in mixing paints, giving him the yellow and red ochres which they used; his brother added a piece of indigo. The Indians taught him archery, also. Needing hair brushes, he seized upon puss again and again, until his father thought the cat's dilapidated appearance was due to disease.

A gentleman—Mr. Pennington—visiting his father, noticed the drawings about the room. On his return to Philadelphia, he sent to the boy of eight a box of paints and pencils, with pieces of prepared canvas and six beautiful engravings—the first pictures he had ever seen but his own. Next day, in the garret, from dawn to noon, from noon till eve—school forgotten, dinner swallowed in haste—young Benjamin painted subjects from those engravings. The schoolmaster sought the truant, and his garret studio was discovered, and his picture viewed. That picture, which his mother feared to have him spoil by another touch, was seen by West in the same room sixty-seven years later, side by side with his sublime painting, "Christ Rejected." He then declared that there was no seventh touche in his juvenile essay which, with all his acquired knowledge and experience, he had never surpassed.

Such is the boyhood story of Benjamin West, one of America's earliest and one of the world's greatest painters, whose name is celebrated wher ever art is esteemed.

A, B, C's in China.

It is not improbable that of all their studies, the almond-eyed youngsters of China find writing the most enjoyable. They use a brush instead of a pen, and daub on the ink with a lavishness dear to the juvenile heart. They write one letter over another till the page is as black as a cooking stove, and the copy-books become so over that it is necessary to hang them over the fence to dry.

There are no public schools in China, or, indeed, school houses of any kind. But the boys and girls of the flowery land repair to the houses of their teachers to pursue their studies. They do not sit upon the floor, as is commonly supposed, for although they have no school furniture, such as is used in this country, they are provided with common chairs, upon which they sit while studying. During recitations they stand around their teacher.

Long before reaching the school room, visitors may hear the pupils vociferously shouting their lessons and making a din which is, to say the least, confusing to one unaccustomed to this method of study. But when one realizes what an arduous task it is to learn one's A, B, C'S in China, it is no longer a matter of surprise that studying aloud is permitted. Think of committing to memory 214 elementary characters! (These characters take the place of our alphabet, for the Chinese language has no alphabet like ours.) That is what the Chinese boys and girls must do; and that is only the beginning of trouble, for these characters are grouped together to form words, of which there are more than 50,000 in the Mongolian language. Moreover, some of these words have forty different meanings, the significance of a word varying with its inflection. Another peculiarity of the Chinese written language is that the beginning of the book corresponds to the end of one of ours, so that the pupil appears to us to begin at the end of the last line on the last page, and to be reading backward.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Mother—Johnny, stop using such dreadful language.

Johnny—Well, mother, Shakespeare uses it.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE FIELD.

His Family a Notable One in the History of the Country.

Justice Stephen J. Field, came of New England Revolutionary stock on both sides, and was the son of David Dudley Field, a Congregational clergyman. His brothers included Cyrus W. Field, the promoter of the submarine cable; David Dudley Field, the distinguished constitutional lawyer; Henry M. Field, a well-known divine and author; Matthew W. Field, an authority in engineering; Jonathan Field, who was President of the Massachusetts Senate; and Timothy Field, a lieutenant in the United States Navy. Few families anywhere have been so conspicuous for ability. Stephen J. Field was born in Haddam, Conn., November 4, 1816, and is, therefore, 81 years old. When a child he was taken to Asia Minor by his brother-in-law, Rev. Joshua Brewer, and there learned modern Greek, Italian and French. Upon his return he entered Williams College and was graduated in 1837 with the highest honors. He was admitted to the Bar in 1841, having studied law in the office of his brother, David Dudley.

JUSTICE FIELD.

After another trip to Europe Stephen caught the gold fever in 1849 and went to San Francisco by way of Panama, arriving at the Golden Gate with $16 in his pocket. In three months he had made $25,000 by a deal in real estate options, and in 1850 he was elected to his first office, that of Alcalde, or Mayor, of Marysville. His life was frequently threatened by swaggering politicians and other bullies, and once he narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of Judge Terry. In 1857 Mr. Field was elected Judge of the Supreme Court of California and afterwards became Chief Justice. For his services as a War Democrat and his intimate knowledge of practice and procedure in Western cases, Judge Field was appointed to the Federal Supreme Bench in 1863 by President Lincoln. On the first day of December he served as Associate Justice thirty-four years, six months and ten days. He has achieved the distinction of serving longer on the Supreme Bench than any of his predecessors, the next in point of service being Chief Justice Marshall, who died in office in 1835, after a service of thirty-four years, five months and six days. As Justice Field says in his letter to his colleagues, announcing formally his retirement, he has written the decisions in 1042 cases, of which 365 were prepared while he was on the Bench in California and 37 are decisions in the Circuit Court.

Debarred by his position from entering actively in politics, Justice Field was, nevertheless, an attentive spectator. In 1876 he was one of the Democratic representatives on the Electoral Commission. In the Democratic National Convention of 1880 he received 61½ votes for the Presidential nomination.

Justice Field is noted for his knowledge of the law, his profound scholarship and his absolute fearlessness. He possesses a strong individuality and has the courage of his convictions. He has written a sketch of his experiences in California, which is interesting as a romance. While his health has suffered from his advanced age his intellect is still keen, and, it is possible, he may while away the tedium of his retirement by writing his recollections of the Supreme Court, particularly with respect to the great issues which it dealt with during the war and reconstruction periods.

LINCOLN'S TOMB.

ITS PRESENT CONDITION A DISGRACE TO ILLINOIS.

The Money to Build the Monument Contributed by the People, and the Trust Given in Charge of the City of Springfield—A Sorry Spectacle.

Lincoln's tomb is a monument of disgrace to Illinois. A spirit of tasteful pride is fast making Springfield one of the most beautiful of State capitals. The magnificent building which houses the government was in the days of approaching completion described as a palace in a cornfield. Since then the city surrounding has been improved to worthiness of the setting. With paved streets, well shaded, a look of general thrift in the business center and long vistas of pretty homes in well-kept grounds, it now corresponds to a noble Capitol which has no superior in massive symmetry and in convenient adaptation to its purposes, and is exceeded in liberal expenditure by only one other building of the kind, that at Albany. Springfield is an honor to the State. But in strange contrast to all else that commands admiration is the condition of the tomb. Illinois assumed a sacred trust when the question of the disposition of the remains of the martyred President was settled. That trust has not been kept. A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, writing from Springfield, says that the friends of Lincoln feel the neglect keenly. They are anxious to see public sentiment aroused and the Legislature reminded of its duty. There is neither defense nor explanation of the neglect. When the custodian opens the grated doors and takes the visitors into first the crypt and then the memorial chamber, his introductory words are regretful. In the crypt the plaster has fallen from the arched roof, and, more than that, gaping crevices have opened in the brick masonry. A little more of this inattention and the roof will cave down upon the floor under which, covered by concrete, are the caskets of President and Mrs. Lincoln.

On the other side of the burial crypt the memorial room is in scarcely better condition. Every rain the water comes through the vaulted roof. It has blackened and stained ceiling and walls. It has made a great blotch of the once bright colors of the coat of arms. Prevailing dampness has mildewed and rusted the some too numerous relics. When a heavy rain the water the surveying instruments Lincoln as a young man used, the gun which failed to save the life of his grandfather in Kenutcky when an Indian crept upon him at work on his farm, the great book in which every child in the public schools of Pennsylvania wrote his or her name attached to the expression of sorrow at the time of death. The stone tablet which the Romans sent from the walls of the Eternal City to commemorate emancipation, likening the act of Lincoln to that of one of the early Emperors who freed the slaves, is in the dampest and most unhealthy vault. William the Silent, who also died by assassination, has a place. The walls are covered with the memorials forwarded from all parts of the country. For such a collection of historical value the State is not manifesting sufficient care to keep the rain out.

The tomb cost $270,000. This money the most of it, was raised by voluntary contributions. Large sums came from the troops in the field, single companies contributing several hundred dollars. It is little enough that Illinois should maintain the granite pile in a state of tolerable repair. On the outside the cement has dropped from between the courses, and many of the blocks are out of line. Even the approaching walk is cracked and broken and uneven.

One might suppose that with such a number of visitors to the tomb there would bet no difficulty in reaching it. Yet the car line by which the mile and more of distance from the business center is made does not run to the place, but stops in a park where refreshments are sold, and the pavilion seems the usual inducements to local patronage are conspicuous. From the end of the track a clader path winds down the hill. There a dusty road is crossed. A gate admits to the cemetery. By a walk up which by past the stone vault where the body was at first deposited, the way is over the slope where more people stood on that day when the nation mourned than have ever been gathered in the Illinois capital city since. The tomb, square and squat, a mile away, with the pavilion near its center, is on the crest of a gentle slope with a reservation of nine or ten acres of sward and trees about it. On one side stands a neat stone house, the abode of the custodian. The grounds are well kept. The site is beautiful. Only the condition of the tomb prompts the feeling of regret. Lincoln belonged to the nation. His resting place should have been the nation's care, if his State can be so forgetful.

CHICAGO'S FEMALE WARING

Mrs. A. Emogene Paul's Work in Cleaning the Western City's Streets.

Mrs. A. Emogene Paul is the Hercules in petticoats who has undertaken the task of cleaning the streets of Chicago. It is the first time in the history of municipal government that a woman has been chosen for such a commission. Mrs. Paul took the contract because in the list of Civil Service eligibles her name was at the top, and Mayor Harrison reasoned that if she was not a broom she was a woman and had swept, anyway. He presented his plan to her. It was exactly what she wanted to do, and exactly what she thought she could do. She therefore rolled up her sleeves, tucked up her skirts, and one day startled the town by appearing on its busiest street at the head of the broom brigade.

MRS. PAUL.

There is no one in Chicago who does not think Mrs. Paul will accomplish what she has set out to do. The town has confidence in her, despite the fact that for twenty years men have failed to keep even the crosswalks passable, or the alleys better than the byways of an Indian shamble. Mrs. Paul is not a "new woman." She is plain business from the bottom of her feet to the top of her head. Her chin is pointed and her head tips back over two square shoulders. She is built like a woman who always knows her own mind. She wears a policeman's star under her jacket, and she has never hesitated to step into the middle of the road and ask the officer on the beat to stop a scavenger who was sprinkling old bustles and canes from his overloaded cart. Many a baker, making bread with rats in a basement, has been driven from business by her persistent nagging as an agent of the Health Department. She has cleaned out scores of unworthy buildings. It has never been recorded that she frowned anybody, or hesitated to demand the enforcement of any ordinance calculated to keep the town clean.

This unique Commissioner of Streets is a New York woman. She was born in a little village in Monroe County, near Rochester. Her parents had plenty of money, and more. They concluded to try the West while Mrs. Paul was a young girl. They went first to Rockford, Ill., and were prosperous. Mrs. Paul—the only girl in the family—went to the seminary at Canandaigua, where she was graduated with honors, and came back to Rockford to live the peaceful life of a bright country girl on a big farm.

She was married in due course, and it was all sunshine for a long time. Then the clouds piled up with one great sweep. She lost her husband, her father, her brother—all in a few months. Her son followed the others. This left her without kin on earth, save her mother. She therefore decided to give her life and her energies to the good of the race in general, the poor in particular.

Mrs. Paul says she is forty-eight years old. Men who know her best will believe her. It is not wise for a weak man not to believe her. She would argue him off the earth. She rides around the main thoroughfares in an old buggy, provided by the Mayor. She has been on duty on cleaning the streets other than the general proposition that "the only way to do it is to do it, and then keep it done." She meets her big gang of men each morning and night at the dump grounds. The man who has slipped a pile with his wagon gets his time and an order for his pay at once. The sweeper who has forgotten his crossing finds his head cut off. She finds the trouble with two-thirds of the men sent to her is the prevalent idea that it is a "snap" to work for the city. She will have none of this.

Shaw—And do you love me as much as you did when you were first married?

He—Oh, more. You have become one of my habits by this time, so to speak.—Indianapolis Journal.

A PARIS SUGGESTION.

REGISTER YOUR MAIL

TRIAL OF A SLOT MACHINE WHICH MAKES THIS POSSIBLE.

Three of Them Now Ready for Business—A Mechanism Which Rejects Light Coins—Letters Transferred to the Postman's Bag Without His Touching Them.

The latest development of the slot machine is an invention designed to make every person his own registered-letter clerk and to facilitate the forwarding of registered mail. The use of three machines has been sanctioned by the Postmaster-General, and under his orders they are to have a six-weeks' trial in New York. What may happen after that is conjecture merely, but the assumption of the inventor of the machine is that if its work is satisfactory, it will be adopted as a regular adjunct to the Post Office system.

While the machines are being put to their special test an agent of the Post Office is to be in constant attendance at each. He will explain the working of the machine to the public and see that no one tampers with the mail.

The charge for registering a letter is 8 cents in addition to the regular letter postage. The machine makes the same charge, assuming that a single 2-cent stamp is sufficient for the regular postage. Under the law a letter prepaid by one 2-cent stamp must be forwarded and any extra postage collected at the other end.

To work the machine you drop a silver United States dime into a spout at the upper right hand side. A square iron cover flies up automatically and reveals a roll of white paper. Opposite certain lines you write the name and address of the person to whom your letter is to be sent and your own name and address. At the right hand upper end of the machine is a small lever. You press this back and the letter slot in front opens and into this you drop your letter. Then you seize the handle of a big crank at the right and force it back until a bell rings. As you do this the iron cover closes and locks over the writing tablet. Now you draw forward the big lever until a bell rings. As you do this a duplicate of your writing, on a separate slip of paper, is slipped out of the machine at the left hand side and upon this paper is imprinted also the Post Office date marks, the serial number of the letter and the signature of the Postmaster. This is your receipt. Your original writing remains in the box until the letters are removed, and then it goes with them. Upon the receipt the clerk enters the letter is dated.

The next thing is to get the letter to the Post Office without giving the letter carrier a chance to tamper with either the letters or the originals of the receipts. The box has a hopper bottom so constructed that it can be opened only when the mail bag is attached to it. The mail bag can't be opened, either, except in conjunction with the hopper or at the Post Office. The strip on which are written the names and addresses drops into the bag with the letters.

The dimes fall into a brass cylinder in the base in which they are dropped into the machine, and the postman, if he finds a bad one, can tell at once, by running the mover in order, which letter it belongs to. Such a letter will be held and its sender notified to pay the postage in good coin and get his bad one back.

Aside from this, the machine is constructed to throw out bad coins, if they are under weight. When the coin first drops into the slot it goes into a delicate balance where it is weighed. If it is too much worn to be current the machine rejects it, and instead of passing into the machine and starting the posting operations, the coin drops out of a hole in the front of the machine and falls on the floor.

The inventor says he has spent three years in perfecting the machine.—New York Sun.

FOODS PRESERVED IN TIN.

Exhorbitant Prices Demanded When First Introduced in France.

The process of preserving foods in tin is of older origin than may be supposed. It was in 1841 that John Collin of Nancy, France, began the business which is now of magnitude. In 1842 a quart of turtle soup in tin put up by Collin cost $2.75; a small box of sardines, $1.25; an entire truffled salmon, $18; a beef tongue, $3; a Toulouse duck truffled, $6. Vegetables were proportionately dear. Collin carried his system much farther than is suspected at the present day. He sold in tin an entire cooking pig, for which he charged $13.50; an entire turkey for $7.50, six pounds of roast lamb for $4.25, an entire pheasant for $11.50. He had also preserved butter in tins, for which he asked 75 cents a pound.—New York Sun.

PATTI AT FIFTY-SIX

A WONDERFUL WOMAN'S FOUNTAIN OF PERPETUAL YOUTH.

Still Fresh and Attractive With a Clear and Sound Voice—Her Latest Love—How Nicolini Won His Way—The First Match With DeCanz.

That wonderful woman, Adelina Patti must have found the long-sought fountain of youth. At 56 she is still fresh and attractive, her voice is clear and sound. The story runs that she met Baron Cederstrom, her third love, at Pau last year where, too, she met Jocelyn Persse, an Irishman, to whom she was reported at one time to be engaged. The Baron is described as about 25 years old, of commanding figure, and fine appearance. Of course, he has a musical education, and he possesses a fine baritone voice. He has a small fortune, but Patti has a far bigger one. He was entertained by Patti at her Welsh castle, Craig-y-Nos, last summer.

Patti's last husband, Ernesto Nicolini died in January, 1898. A year or two after her debut, in 1858, she was engaged to the late Max Strakosch, but this affair did not last long.

The diva, then riding on the top crest of success, seems to have passed the next few years fancy free. About 1861 or 1862 she met the Marquis de Caux, of an honored French family. As they thought well of each other, a marriage was arranged by the Empress Eugenie. The ceremony took place in the summer of 1868, and they began married life most happily. In this fortunate state they lived for several years, according to the observation of others, without a cloud upon the domestic horizon.

Then Signor Nicolini appeared upon the scene. They first met in 1871. The wooing and winning of the diva by Nicolini forms the greatest romantic episode of her life, and is considered by many the most incomprehensible. Words can hardly express the aversion in which Patti held the singer. Nicolini, according to all accounts, seems to have been of rather ordinary musical ability. He appeared to imitate in every possible way the great Mario, though in voice he fell far short of his ideal. Only in stature and wife could he dress, manner and so on, may have had much to do with Patti's feelings. For, when young, she had heard Mario and Grisi, and that Nicolini should attempt to duplicate Mario in minor details may have been the final cause of the aversion. Nicolini, however, who had a wife and children, followed Patti all over Europe. When he knew that she was to appear in a certain city he would secure an engagement for that city, and if possible, for the same theatre. So successful was Nicolini that after a while she found him singing Romeo to her Juliet in Gounod's opera. She could hardly bear him, and again and again would have refused to sing with him, except for business reasons. Such fervent lovemaking as came out in the scene, though one-sided, had not been witnessed before on the stage by that generation, at least.

And yet all met the hearty approval of the Marquis. Nicolini was received at the home of the Marquis and Marquise as a guest. Signora Nicolini, however, did not like the turn of affairs, and though they seemed to be a devoted couple, many were the outbreaks and many the times when she reproached her huspand with being a "veritable Don Juan." When Nicolini had effected a reconciliation with his wife, he usually celebrated. Nicolini even took the Marquis into his confidence. He went to Patti's husband one day, and asked how to get rid of a young woman whom he knew in St. Petersburg, and who had followed him in his tour. This came to Patti's ears, and she contemplated informing Nicolini's wife. She did not carry this into effect, however, and soon after Nicolini found a way to send the girl back.

About this time or a little after, Nicolini seemed to be not so disagreeable to Patti. Anonymous stories and bits of information were sent to the Marquis, to which he gave no heed for a long time. Finally, however, though he would not appear to make use of the points lavished upon him, a coolness developed between himself and his frequent guest, which increased until he no longer invited Nicolin to his house.

One day in Moscow there fell into the hands of the Marquis a letter of Nicolini's, which was addressed to Patti's chambermaid. The Marquis would not open the letter, though he could not fail to guess pretty accurately its contents. He demanded that the opera of "Romeo and Juliet" be stricken from the list to be presented in Moscow. The director assented, but owing probably to the representations of the interested artists, he allowed their names to be announced in "Traviata." Enraged at this, the Marquis would not allow his wife to appear at all, but was appeased on the promise that if she would only sing, Nicolini should not appear. This promise, however, was broken.

A few weeks later the Marquis and Marquise separated. But it was a long time before a divorce could be obtained. Finally in 1880 the French divorce laws were passed in 1884 they were legally put asunder. In the meantime the Nicolinis were also divorced. All being ready, the diva married Nicolini in June, 1886. As Nicolini had retired to their own church (the Catholic) without special dispensation, and as that special dispensation could not be had, they were united in a little Protestant church near Patti's Welsh castle.

For a long time before the marriage Patti suffered in the estimation of many people, but in the end, she regained all her prestige and the affair never has been laid up against her. In fact, all agreed to forget it, and it was recalled only by the death of Nicolini.

This rearrangement of the trio proved as happy as the original marriage of Patti and Nicolini lasted for a time. Certainly Nicolini played the lover-like husband to perfection. He took the greatest care of his wife, watched over her voice, would not let her exert herself unduly, and even prepared for tempting but harmless little dishes after the theatre.

And when Nicolini fell ill of cancer it was she incomparable Patti who watched over him carefully and faithfully, giving up her engagements that she might be by his bedside.

A SINGLE TRACK RAILWAY.

It Is Ten Miles Long and Runs Successfully in Ireland.

Little is heard at present about the "bicycle railway" in this country, and it may not be generally known that a single rail road is in practical operation in Ireland.

The Listowel and Ballybunion Railway sounds like the invention of some mad humorist; but such a place as Ballybunion really exists.

It is a very popular seaside resort in the southwest of Ireland. The distance between the point and the other terminus at Listowel is ten miles, and there is one intermediate station—that of Lisselton. The system on which this railway is worked is called the Lartigue single rail elevated railway, and was the invention of a French engineer.

BICYCLE RAILWAY.

This single rail line, it should be explained at once, is not a single track railway, but actually has only one rail for traffic to run on. This rail is supported on iron trestle work at the height of three feet three inches from the ground, and the locomotive and carriages are actually balanced on it.

There is nothing in Europe to compare with the extraordinary trestle bridges which carry American railways over the deep gullies and precipitous creeks found in many parts of the United States. They are of rough timber construction, sometimes rising to a height of 300 feet, and form a most complicated maze of timbers.

Mary Leiter's New Home.

Viceroy and Lady Curzon, she who was Mary Leiter of Chicago, have started for their new home in India. They will spend next summer in Simla, a Himalayan town on the top of a hill, where monkeys run wild and the slopes are covered with deodars and rhododendrons. It is the cozy spot from the heat of Calcutta, to which the entire English government moves at the end of spring, and where it stays until the beginning of the fall—safe from scorching winds and plagues and sights of killing temperature. It has a new palace for the viceroy and £500,000 has been spent in recent years by the foreign office in London to put up buildings for the use of the departments and officials in transacting all of India's Indian business from the region of the Punjab.

The distance from Calcutta to Simla is 1,174 miles. It is a most trying journey, although it passes through interesting country. Cawnpore, Lucknow and Delhi, towns associable for ever with the mutiny, all of which are situated so low that the summer heat is almost unendurable.

The vice regal palace is beautiful, and, situated at a great height, is indeed a "castle in the air." Simla's location is unhealthful, and it is rapidly becoming one of the very fixed institutions of England's work in the great black empire.

"James" shouted the conductor, as the trolley car stopped at the street bearing that name. A man alighted him, the car stopped, and the man alighted. A half-minute later the car neared another cross-street. "William," announced the conductor. Another man got out. The Irishman's eyes grew visibly larger. "Alexander," shouted the conductor. The third man left the car. When it had started on the Irishman arose and approached the conductor. "Oi want to git out at Avnoo B," he said. "Me forrehname is Michael."—Youth's Companion.

Her brilliant husband married her without asking the consent of his government, and now he must be punished for his rashness by being sent to Madrid. There may be some diplomats who would prefer some European capitals to Washington, but Madrid is a rather stiff sort of a place and the American embassy is a bigger prize than a Spanish mission. Mme. daughter of rich parents. She was educated abroad, and speaks French and German with perfect fluency. Prior to her marriage with M. Patenotre she was been but seldom in society, and people were all the more surprised to see her step into the place of a grand dame and find herself perfectly at home. She has never made a mistake and has not a single enemy. She has the priceless faculty of never forgetting a face or a name, and as she welcomes her guests she has for each some little remark that is so purely personal as to make the person addressed feel that he is doubly welcome. Mme. Patenotre dresses gorgeously and has beautiful diamonds. Her removal to Europe will be more in the nature of a home going than of a visit to a strange place.

A LOCK OF NAPOLEON'S HAIR.

Kept in a Dark Room Forty Years, That the Light May Not Injure It.

A unique souvenir of the great Napoleon is kept in the family of his old nurse and attendant, being now in the possession of Professor Bagley, of Abilene, Kan. He is a native of the island of St. Helena, and his mother was one of the intimates of the guardians of Napoleon. When the Emperor died Napoleon's body was put in a box and clipped from his head a lock of hair. Part of the lock she gave to Mr. Bagley's mother and she gave it to her son.

It is kept in a bottle and is black and gray, with a trace of brown. For forty years the bottle has been kept in a dark room, that the hair may not be injured by the light. There are about forty strands in all. The relic is held at a great value by the possessor. He has also some cloth from the coffin, a medal struck by Napoleon and some other minor souvenirs from the island of St. Helena.

The only other portion of the body of Napoleon known to be on this continent is a single hair that Richard Watson Gilder once owned. He kept it in a watch case. When the watch was repaired he forgot to tell the jeweller of the precious contents. When he went to get it he asked: "Did you find anything in the case?"

"Yes," replied the workman, "there was a hair in there, but it is all right now. I blew it out."

"You blew out a piece of Napoleon Bonaparte," said the editor of the Century.—New York Journal.

The Czar Spoke English.

Maj. Alfred Mordecai once had an interview with the Czar of Russia, of a somewhat informal and conversational nature, in the course of which he used the address "Monsieur" in speaking to the Emperor, but carried the interview forward, so far, in French, says the Jewish Messenger. Turning to Gen. McClellan, who stood near by, Maj. Mordecai suddenly exclaimed with a mighty and deep Carolinian oath! "Mac, I'll be d—d if the fellow isn't dead!" The Czar thereupon smiled, bowed, and said with a civility that entered the Major's bones like ice: "I speak English quite well enough, sir, to continue our interview in that language, if you prefer it!"

Onions as a Germ Destroyer.

The wonderful faculty which onions possess of absorbing disease germs ought to be written in letters of gold before the eyes of every householder. Merely hanging in a net, onions will purify an apartment. Especially in cases of small-pox and diphtheria they have great power. A dish of raw onions sliced and set in the sick room will draw away the disease. As their odor gives out they should be burned and replaced by fresh ones. For its great medicinal and useful properties the onion merits more particular study.

A SPARROW'S PRACTICAL JOKE.

How He Desired a Companion to Get a Sticky Bath of Ink and Mucilage.

I think it not often recorded that birds in general are given to perpetrating practical jokes, but I chanced to witness a little episode which would seem to prove that some of the genus have a bent more fun and frolic in their composition than is commonly supposed.

It transpired one morning that, in a burst of absent-mindedness, I dipped my mucilage brush into my ink bottle, and my pen into the mucilage jar, thereby ruining the contents of both. Preparatory to having both bottles washed and refilled I poured the worthless mucilage and ink together in a small tin pan, which was sitting on my window ledge. Presently an investigating sparrow chanced along, and, mistaking the tin pan for a bath, doused head and tail into the mixture. Evidently the dip was not an enjoyable one, for the bird lost no time in getting out, and, very disconsolate, hair and drippy, on the ledge in the sun to dry. But drying was just what he should not have done under the circumstances. Pretty soon the mucilage began to harden, and before the bird knew what was happening he was incased from tip to tail in an inky gum coat. What to do the little fellow knew not, and it was quite amusing to see his frantic but fruitless efforts to extricate himself from his predicament. After watching him a minute or so, I at last took pity upon his helplessness and lifted him across the room and put him into a full basin of water, where he soon washed himself free of his embarrassment.

After his bath, while the little fellow sat in the window preening himself in the sun, there chanced along another sparrow, also out upon a tour of inspection, whereupon the two set up a lively chattering and chirping with many dabs in the direction of the pan.

"No. 1 is warning his friend of the danger that lies therein," I thought, and immediately thereafter was startled by seeing sparrow No. 2 dive into the pan headforemost. No sooner had this happened than No. 1, with a chirp and a chatter, flew to the other side of the street, where, from a convenient housetop, he watched his friend's struggles with the predicament that he himself had just passed through.

If that was not playing a practical joke, it was very much like it, and, at all events, bird No. 2 understood it to be one, for after I had treated him to a bath, he made after No. 1 post haste, and the last I saw of them they were fighting it out on the roof in good fashion.—Nashville Correspondent Philadelphia Times.

Monkeys Rendered of Use.

The newest service rendered of monkeys in captivity was illustrated in London. The school inspectors noted with suspicion that a great many families reported "no children," and in order to ascertain the real number of children in the district resorted to an ingenious scheme. Two monkeys were gaily dressed, put in a wagon accompanied by a brass band, and were driven through the streets of the district. Crowds of children followed the monkeys, and when the wagon was stopped in a street officers distributed candies to the youngsters while they took their names and addresses. Two hundred stray boys and girls were rounded up by this method. —Golden Days.

Rosamond's Love.

Occasionally Rosamond, who is now just three years old, is naughty.

She was so the other day, and her mamma, to bring her to a proper realization of her conduct and what it might lead to, said:

"Rosamond, mamma cannot love her little girl if she is so naughty."

"Very well, mamma," answered the little maiden demurely, "then I suppose I will have to love myself."

The Way It Is in Japan.

When a young prince of Japan wishes to learn the mysteries of chirography, young maidens bring paper, others make ink and prepare the paint-brush. The master expresses admiration by gesture and face, for no words must be spoken by him to the prince, his mouth even being bandaged that his breath may not blow upon the face of the prince. The teacher must move about in the quietest manner, and give commendation only.

To See Him Stroller Some More.

At a popular table d'hote restaurant in Boston the other evening, as a gentleman was supplying himself with a teaspoonful of burning brandy, there came a knock at the door, and, on it being opened, in walked two very ragged children, a boy and a girl. "Wot you want?" gruffly asked the waiter. "Please, sir," said the little girl, "we see the gent swallerin fire through th' window, and we'd like to see him swaller some more, if we ain't in no one's way."

The Speed of the Camel.

The speed of the camel when on a journey of considerable length rarely exceeds three miles an hour, and the swiftest dromedaries are hardly known to go faster than a ten-mile gait, but this can be kept up for twenty hours in the day, and for six or seven days at a time.—From Answers.

Thoughtful.

A small boy of four was riding on a rocking horse with a companion. He was seated rather uncomfortably on the horse's neck. After a reflective pause he said: "I think if one of us gets off I could ride much better."

AS THE SUN WENT DOWN.

Two soldiers lay on the battlefield
At night when the sun went down,
One held a lock of little gray hair
And one held a lock of brown.

One thought of his sweetheart back at home
Happy and young and gay,
And one of his mother's last adieus,
Feeble and old and gray.

Each in the thought that a woman cared
Murmured a prayer to God,
Lifting his soul to the skies above,
There on the battle sod.

Each in the joy of a woman's love
Smiled through the pain of death,
Murmured the name of a woman's name,
Though with his parting breath.

Pale grew the dying lips of each,
Then, as the sun went down,
Out went the light of their lives,
And one kissed a lock of brown.

THE MARCHIONESS.

It was in Normandy last year, during the shooting season. I had had a long morning's sport, and noon found me footsore and weary in the vicinity of an old mill, somewhere between Mortagne and Conde-sur-Huisne. It was a picturesque looking place and I determined to solicit the owner's hospitality.

The miller received me very courteously and I was soon stretching my legs under the table and partaking of the most exquisite dejeuner that was ever placed before a hungry sportsman. There were trout from the mill stream and partridges from the neighboring moor, cooked to a turn and accompanied by some really excellent wine, not the "gnat's wee" of Normandy, but good usellow Bordeaux. This somewhat surprised me, but when at dessert the miller invited me to visit his gallery of family portraits, I was perfectly bewildered.

"What," said I to myself, "a picture gallery in a mill!"

Of course I accepted his invitation, and found that the pictures really existed and were fine ones, too. There were a dozen of them, representing Louis XIV. courtiers and marquises, and marchionesses of the time of Louis XV and Louis XVI., the series being closed by a buxom-looking farmer's wife in a white sun-bonnet next to a delicious little marchioness. Stopping before the two latter portraits the miller said:

"These are mother and daughter."

He appeared to be amused at my surprised expression, and continued:

"Yes, sir, this country woman is my mother, and that pretty little marchioness *smiling at you is my grand*mother. It is a strange story. Everybody round about knows it, and I may as well tell it to you.

"As you have probably surmised from the size of these portraits the story is laid during the Terror. The father, mother and elder sister of you little marchioness were arrested, and soon afterward judged and executed. The little marchioness, my grandmother, sir, found safety only in flight. The poor orphan took refuge with one of the farmers on the family estate, whom she knew she could trust. This farmer was a young man—he was only about thirty years of age. He had known the little marchioness from her babyhood, and was deeply attached to her. In fact, to be frank with you, sir, in his heart of hearts he loved her.

"He was greatly troubled by the perilous position in which her presence placed him, but he could not turn the poor child away to be massacred by the savage revolutionists. He hid her in the cellar and the mob vainly scoured the whole country in search of her. But a neighbor, a ferocious Jacobin, had marked the farmer's trouble, and suspected the reason for it denounced him to the revolutionary committee.

"In a few minutes the house was surrounded by a horrible mob howling for the death of the hated aristocrat. They battered in the front door and poured into the place. Ah! sir, it was a terrible moment."

Here the miller paused and mopped his brow, while his eyes glistened with excitement.

"The first room was empty," he went on, "they smashed everything in it they could lay hands upon, and were about to break open the door of the next room when it suddenly opened and the marchioness stood before them, pale as death. The farmer was had dealt with anguish and terror.

"For an instant the mob stopped short. But it was only for an instant. Shrieks of 'Down with the aristocrat! Kill her! Away with her! Burn her! Tear her to pieces!' arose, and the bloodthirsty crowd pressed forward to rush forward, when the little marchioness was suddenly struck by an inspiration. Ah! sir, it must have come from on high. She made signs to them that she wished to speak.

"'Citizens, and citizenesses,' said she, 'I understand to hearing such an appellation from the mouth of a dainty aristocrat, the mob stopped. She profited by the pause, and continued:

"'Citizens, what do you want with me? Why are you incensed against me? What have I done to you? I am one of you—I am your sister!'

"Murmurs of approval and of protest were heard, but in the main the mob appeared to be astonished and suspicious.

"'She's fooling us, the aristocrat,' shrieked a woman, who, with her dishevelled hair, flushed face and crooked fingers ready to claw the delicate girl's eyes out, looked like one of the Furies let loose.

"'No, no,' exclaimed the marchioness earnestly. 'I swear to you that I am no longer an aristocrat, but a woman of the people. In proof of it, here is my future husband,' and she pointed to the farmer, who, too overcome to utter a word, could have bent his knee before the brave young girl, but she prevented him.

"Her remarkable presence of mind was their salvation. The fact that she was willing to marry a simple citizen caused a complete revulsion of feeling, and the wretches who a moment before had been lusting for her blood, now applauded her.

"'We must be married under the Tree of Liberty,' she added, 'and, citizens, you invite you all to the wedding.'

"Another burst of applause followed this invitation. Friendly hands seized the little marchioness and the farmer, and they were straightway shouldered and carried in triumph to the Tree of Liberty, preceded by the capering mob, waving their pikes and scythes.

"The marriage took place, and the crowd, joining hands, danced the Carmagnole frantically around the newly-made husband and wife, and the festivities with eating and drinking, were kept up till nightfall, when those of the revelers who were not too intoxicated escorted the couple back to the farm.

"As soon as they were alone the assumed familiarity of the farmer immediately vanished. Doffing his hat, he bent respectfully before the marchioness, and with tears of gratitude in his eyes, exclaimed:

"'Mademoiselle, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Your sacrifice was our salvation. I beg you to pardon the liberties the critical position in which we were placed compelled me to take. It is, of course, my duty to render you your liberty, and I do so.'

"'Sacrifice! Liberty!' said the marchioness, 'but I am free, and I have made no sacrifice. Don't you then understand that I love you?'

"And so it was concluded the miller, "that the little marchioness became a poor farmer's wife, and the grandmother of an honest Norman miller."

A BUNCHGRASS SHEPHERD DOG.

Left With 2,000 Sheep. He Had 6,000 When His Owner Got Back.

A bunchgrass shepherd dog of eastern Oregon is the hero of this tale. The name of the dog was Jim, and his owner was called Bob Thompson. This story dates back to 1878, when sheep were sheep and wool was wool; when a good sheep dog was worth more than a horse; when horses were horses and bicycles were not known.

Every sheep camp had its crack pack of dogs, and in the sheep's pack there were thirty. At the time of the Bannock uprising Thompson and his men were herding sheep ten miles from Pendleton. One morning a messenger rode up in hot haste, warning the shepherds to flee for their lives, as the Indians were on the warpath. The shepherds fled. Only the dogs and sheep were left. For the next few days the dogs came straggling into Pendleton one by one, and within a week they were all gathered together except for but Jim. At the end of a month the Indian uprising had been put down and Thompson went out to look for his sheep. He had left two thousand and he found six thousand, all quietly grazing on the bunchgrass near by. He searched on a tall butte, a black object that turned out to be Jim, who gave his master a frantic welcome and then proudly started with him to inspect the band.

Single-handed, Jim had taken care of those sheep for thirty days, driving them to fresh pastures each day. Every stray band that he met he had chased into his drove, until he had become the king herder of the bunchgrass country. Here's how Jim came by his name, and he was as fat as a possum in persimmon time. He was too smart to go hungry, and had picked out the fat of the flock whenever he wanted to make a meal. Jim is gone now, but his memory is respected by every wool puller in Umatilla county.—New York Sun.

Duped the Burglar.

Bythe dim light of the dark-lantern the burglar read the following inscription on a card tacked to the outside of the window he was about to pry up with a jimmy:

TO MIDNIGHT CALLERS:
Do Not Ruin the Fastenings of this Window
By Prying It Up.
The Rear Door of the House Is Always Unlocked.

The card is dusty and covered with cobwebs," he said to himself, "It has been there a long time, but I'll just go around and see if that door's still unlocked. If they'd rather have me go in that way I think I'll humor them."

Whereupon he stole softly around to the rear door, opened it, and a man in one of the sleeping-rooms upstairs, awakened by a burglar-alarm, came down and shot him.

ENDED IN SMOKE.

The police bureaus at Paris had an extremely hard nut to crack. Resting out immediately for London was one of the most astute of Russian political suspects. This man was so keen scented that whenever he or his belongings had been overhauled by the police at St. Petersburg the officials had always been met by a bland but cynical smile, and had found nothing. But in spite of his mild protest, the polite shrug of his shoulders and slight lifting of his eyebrows, there was before his cataloger a master mind that directed the organization of the whole revolutionary movement of modern Russia.

This man to-night was leaving Paris for London, and was known to be bearing on his person the key to a most complicated cipher to be used by secret societies corresponding between London and St. Petersburg. Once in England, thanks to perfidious Albion, the harborer of all criminals and political refugees, he hand would touch him without fear of punishing legal process not at all in accord with the plans of the Russian police, who wanted surer and swifter measures adopted.

Just after the Franco-Russian entente the Paris police bureau was the more anxious to cover itself with glory in the eyes of the Russian secret department. It was to be a fight for life. The man had taken all the precautions in his power, and the police had to make their plans accordingly.

The little journey of the man on into one night had the honor of having a special map of the route drawn by the police officials. But dotted in red on the familiar route from Paris to Calais were certain marks which meant a great deal to the police who read them. The end of all this was to discover where the man who was travelling had hidden his secret document and to filch it from him.

At the Gare du Nord a police officer, *attired as a railway porter, in assist*ing the traveller with his portmanteaus, substituted another similar in appearance. A second spy, at a given signal, was to snatch from him his middle valise, in which the key-pack (not the cipher down in the lining of his hat) the police must see to it. A party of card sharpers were to travel with him as far as Rouen, and during a prearranged struggle his hat was to be knocked out of the window. From Rouen to Calais two more police spies, male and female, were to travel with him.

There was as much attention paid to this one man travelling between Paris and Calais as if the Emperor of the czar of Russia, travelling incognito in France. And the man knew it. But, brave man though he was, he saw that the French authorities meant to stop at nothing to get the key. He carried his life in his hands. Surely they would not rob him of that. A dead man can tell no tales, and he laughed to think how securely his secret was hidden.

The cipher that was worth half a million to the Russian government was written with invisible ink, and was contained on a piece of tissue paper some four inches by two inches square. Fifty times during the journey had the police spies, but they found it not, set eyes on the document.

Hardly had he alighted at Calais when a laborer carrying a plank of timber, narrowly missed by a few inches striking a signal in the head. He grew pale as he thought of things he knew of the methods of the French police. But he set his teeth, and if there was one man in Europe who could carry his mission through it was he now.

A blind man coming along the street, led by a boy, suddenly struck him a blow between the eyes. The assault was so sudden that for a moment he was stunned. On recovering a crowd had quickly gathered. The blind man was bleeding from the mouth, and a dozen witnesses cried aloud that he had tried to strike down the wretched beggar. The beggar himself cried out most loudly of all. A couple of gendarmes hustled him off to the lock-up, the cloud of witnesses following in their train.

In the police office he regained his composure. He smiled when the officer in charge read over to him the accusation of the beggar. To do this the justice in Calais had summoned with marked respect. They met on common ground. It was a duel of accomplished fencers.

"A chapter of accidents, M. le Directeur," laughed the prisoner.

"A busy life, monsieur, has its dangers," replied the director.

The messenger's passport was in order. He submitted himself to be searched, nay, he desired it. He calmly looked on while the officers sought what they wanted, and he offered a cigarette to the functionary who sat in silence while the blue smoke from the cigarette embraced him as a wreath from behind which peered two keenly bright eyes. Of course they found nothing and were met by the same cynical smile.

But the cipher never reached London that journey. It had been consumed by the police agent at Calais. How amusing it must have been to have seen the blue smoke that was feeding on the cipher, which the paper around the cigarette had written upon it, issuing forth from the mouth of a police official.

"And you may guess," said the secret messenger, in telling the story afterwards, "how glad I was that we owed the whole efforts of the French police end in smoke."—Golden Penny.

A Practical Plan.

The gentlemen who have been put in charge of the plans to secure the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality took an eminently practical and cautious step towards that end by deciding that the most essential thing to do at the start is to secure a concensus of opinion from the people who are to be affected by the proposed change, as described in The Daily Press yesterday.

The fact that the North Plainfield borough election is near at hand makes the step especially opportune. It will allow the voters "over the brook" to give quasi official decision with reference to the plan without irretrievably committing themselves in favor or against the consolidation idea. Once the boroughites have given voice by this semi-official plan that consolidation will be a good thing, the hardest part of the battle for the success of the project will have been gone through with. If it is seen that a majority of the people desire a consolidated city, it will be found much easier to arrive at a satisfactory plan of details to consummate the idea.

It is the intention, of course, to follow out the same modus operandi in securing the sentiment of the city voters with respect to Greater Plainfield as is to be put in operation in the borough. But it will be impossible to do this until the city election next December. Soon after that the Legislature will convene in session for next year, and then the leaders in the movement will be well prepared and ready to go before the Senators and Assemblymen with a bill designed to bring about the consolidation on such lines as will probably be deemed most practical and just in the meantime.

With concentrated sentiment under the proposed plan the Legislature will be found willing to listen to the appeals for enactment to make a Greater Plainfield.

Growth of the Trolley.

The Newark Evening News printed the following editorial recently concerning the extension, present and prospective, of the trolley lines in this section of the State:

The different links in the trunk trolley line between New York and Philadelphia are gradually being connected, and it is probable that within the next two years the entire line will be completed. As soon as the road between Elizabeth and Plainfield is franchised for which has been granted by the Union County Board of Freeholders, and the connection is made, there will be a continuous line from Jersey City to Somerville, the link joining Somerville and Bound Brook having been finished the day. We also either been begun or will soon be started on a line between Trenton and Princeton, leaving only the distance between the latter place and Somerville to be covered in order to make a through line from Jersey City to Trenton. From Trenton, on the New Jersey side, the road has been extended to Bordentown, and while at the same present writing, before the end of the coming summer it is expected that it will reach Camden, while on the Pennsylvania side the construction of a line from Trenton to connect with one now advancing from Philadelphia, will probably be completed about the same time. In taking the route it has from Elizabeth to Trenton the trolley line seems to have followed the wisest line, but rather that of the densest population, allowing that for some years at least it is expects that local travel will furnish the bulk of its revenue, that the future may decide to be in the way of through traffic will depend largely upon the improved methods of electrical propulsion. It can hardly be doubted, however, that the possibility of such traffic in the future is clearly anticipated.

Westfield is tiring of paying high rates for electric light and water, and has taken a formal step to ascertain the cost of establishing municipal ownership of the plants supplying these two commodities. Plainfield is tired, too, of high prices for light and water, but neither former Mayor Fisk's or Mayor Rockefellow's ideas for municipal ownership have gone any further than the suggestion conveyed in their last messages to the Common Council. Why doesn't some member of the Common Council take up the matter and secure investigations similar to that proposed in Westfield?

Two men remained in the Atlantic ocean for fifteen minutes at Atlantic City, Sunday, sporting about in the chilly water as though the thermometer was above the nineties. It is evident that Atlantic City does not propose that the belles of Asbury Park shall have a monopoly of the reputation to be gained by winter bathing—even it takes several cases of pneumonia to outwit them.

Case of Tramps in Somerset.

The question of what to do with the tramps still asserts itself in the various counties of New Jersey, and none more so than in old Somerset. In her neighboring bailiwick, Middlesex, the genus bobo has been legislated against to the extent of making his capture by the constabulary of the county a quitalent to his introduction to a monster stone pile, which he is expected to work upon with a maul as added and supported after the government had found no further use for them, and who, had it not been for the excellent treatment and kindly consideration of the heiress, would have fared in a rough manner.

Ordinarily one would feel that Miss Gould had done all that could be expected of her when she cared for the sick soldier boys while there was life in them—if it was their fate to die in the U. S. A.—but it may be carried out the dying requests of the patriots of the Spanish American conflict to the very time when the period of "dust to dust, ashes to ashes" is at hand then it is that the noblest and truest philanthropic sentiment is reflected.

Plainfield has read much of Miss Gould's fine treatment of the soldiers, but until Monday it was not brought into close touch with her praiseworthy practices. Her treatment of Private O'E-efe stamps her as a noble woman.

Though the constabulary force of the State is one of its oldest institutions, it is not slow by any means—at least not in Mercer county. There the constables are forming themselves into a union to secure mutual protection and benefits to be found in the performance of their duties as peace officers. First and foremost in their plans is to secure an amendment to the law of 1898 which cuts off their fifty cent hearing fee. That, of course, will be the great point to gain, because the constables with the rest of the world know that "it is money that makes the mare go." The second purpose of the organization is to establish a regular set of prices which shall be paid the constables for attending baseball games, dances, and other public events where the obstreperous individual seeks the privileges without proper pay. It is stated that if the Mercer county constables find that their union works well its ideas will permeate the State and organize the whole New Jersey constabulary force into one grand symphony of efforts. It's a cold day when the constables of New Jersey are not up to snuff.

Ever since Congressman Howell of the Third District was elected he has been endeavoring to have an appropriation made for the erection of a postoffice building at New Brunswick. At every session of Congress he has introduced a bill and last year the bill introduced at that session was reported favorably. Speaker Reed set his official veto upon all expenditures for public buildings and the bill died a natural death and the people of New Brunswick still lack a new postoffice building. The amount incorporated in the bill was $125,000, but Monday Mr. Howell introduced a substitute bill decreasing the amount asked for $100,000. He probably thought there would be more chance of getting the bill considered by making it an even hundred thousand.

The progressive citizens of Summit are talking of a change of municipal government from township to city of the third class. It would seem that Summit is large and important enough to become a third-class city. With a city government it would be able to accomplish much that is now prevented under the township form. The Union County Assemblymen, Messrs. Squires, Murray and Houston, are in favor of the incorporation of Summit. It is not thought that the objections likely to be presented against incorporation will have sufficient weight to cause Gov. Voorhees to veto the bill when passed by the Legislature.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray announces that there will be a hearing of the State House on Assembly bill No. 14, known as the Building and Loan Bill, Tuesday next at 12 o'clock noon. Mr. Murray informs the Press that he will be glad to see any Plainfielders, who are interested in the proposed law, at the hearing. The measure is one of great importance to building and loan association, which have a strong foothold in Plainfield.

A Middlesex county woman who was shot at three times by her irate husband, after having quarreled with him, was saved from death by the bullets striking a corset steel and glancing off so as to make only a flesh wound. It was lucky for that woman that she was not a follower of Jenness Miller's style of dress.

The vultures of Cuba are reported to be starving. That speaks well for American occupation of the land. When the Spaniards were in power there it was the buzzards who grew fat feasting off the flesh of the reconcentrados who were starved to death. The buzzards can afford to starve a little bit.

Miss Gould's Noble Act.

The story printed in the news columns of today's paper concerning the experience of Private John O'E-efe reads romantic, but it is the plain truth. Of Miss Helen Gould, whose generosity and sympathetic treatment of the soldier boys has won the praises of the nation, we say God bless her!

The experience of Private O'E-efe was the same as hundreds of other comrades in arms, whom Miss Gould aided and succored after the government had found no further use for them, and who, had it not been for the excellent treatment and kindly consideration of the heiress, would have fared in a rough manner.

Ordinarily one would feel that Miss Gould had done all that could be expected of her when she cared for the sick soldier boys while there was life in them—if it was their fate to die in the U. S. Speaker Reed set his official veto upon all expenditures for public buildings and the bill died a natural death and the people of New Brunswick still lack a new postoffice building. The amount incorporated in the bill was $125,000, but Monday Mr. Howell introduced a substitute bill decreasing the amount asked for $100,000. He probably thought there would be more chance of getting the bill considered by making it an even hundred thousand.

The progressive citizens of Summit are talking of a change of municipal government from township to city of the third class. It would seem that Summit is large and important enough to become a third-class city. With a city government it would be able to accomplish much that is now prevented under the township form. The Union County Assemblymen, Messrs. Squires, Murray and Houston, are in favor of the incorporation of Summit. It is not thought that the objections likely to be presented against incorporation will have sufficient weight to cause Gov. Voorhees to veto the bill when passed by the Legislature.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray announces that there will be a hearing of the State House on Assembly bill No. 14, known as the Building and Loan Bill, Tuesday next at 12 o'clock noon. Mr. Murray informs the Press that he will be glad to see any Plainfielders, who are interested in the proposed law, at the hearing. The measure is one of great importance to building and loan association, which have a strong foothold in Plainfield.

A Middlesex county woman who was shot at three times by her irate husband, after having quarreled with him, was saved from death by the bullets striking a corset steel and glancing off so as to make only a flesh wound. It was lucky for that woman that she was not a follower of Jenness Miller's style of dress.

The vultures of Cuba are reported to be starving. That speaks well for American occupation of the land. When the Spaniards were in power there it was the buzzards who grew fat feasting off the flesh of the reconcentrados who were starved to death. The buzzards can afford to starve a little bit.

Good Advice For Churchmen.

The editor of the Elizabeth Journal, who is an active church worker in his own city, has been watching the dissensions that recently arose in the First Church of Christ in this city, and he draws some excellent conclusions accent the subject of church quarrels that deserve to be heeded by certain churchmen. The Journal says:

Rev. J. B. Clever, of Bound Brook a forceful preacher, with strong individuality, has entered upon a novel work in his present charge. It is one that ought to be followed by more pastors and churches of the same denomination in Plainfield. The two congregations were formerly one. They became divided over some old-time question, separated, and have been struggling along ever since. It is to be hoped Rev. Mr. Clever will succeed. More than that, it is to be hoped that other large living churches will profit by his example, unite and become stronger, better and more full of life and activity. It is a common current article these days to say that the churches are losing their hold upon the people, that they are losing their power and influence. There cannot be too many churches if each one is living active prayerful and Christ like.

But to divide one strong church congregation, and make of it two puny, emaciated struggling organizations, is a poor policy and poor religion. All the more so because such divisions are the result of quarrels oftener than the necessities of growth or the opening of a new field of work. If church organizations were like bees, swarming to new homes when the old ones could no longer hold them, there would be less complaint of poor pastors, and more intelligent and struggling, thriving congregations. The few instances of consolidation under our observation have invariably resulted in strong, revived, and healthy churches; but there's many a division that has resulted in little else than perpetual struggle, disappointment and regret.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that good old lady whom Plainfielders have come to regard as almost of themselves is an enthusiastic advocate of equal suffrage. At a recent meeting of the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association, Mrs. Howe paid the following trite remarks to her sisters who rest content with the present condition of affairs and who say that they do not want suff-rage for themselves or any other women: "If these women are in a state of active resistance to their own good, it is better than if they were doing nothing. At present they seem like a hornets' nest stirred up against us. But wait, you who are young enough—for I am too old to wait much longer—and you will yet see them all ranged as good bees, making suffrage honey. If they do not, their granddaughters will."

THE BOY PREACHER.

tittered "Stop," would shout the you ful preacher, with a stamp of his foot, and a wave of short arm. Then he would continue to pace up and down the platform as he did throughout his stay there. Toward the last, two white young women left the hall and the boy shouted after them "They're going out, they don't like it."

An offering was received at the door Later, the audience was invited to step forward and drop an offering in the ba-ket held by the child. The response to the latter invitation was not particularly enthusiastic as the boy passed around in the audience and patiently waited before each one until they had dropped in a contribution Pictures of the child were afterwards sold by the pastor.

The mother gave a short talk telling the history of the boy and the story of his wonderful inspiration as she called it. Then the benediction was pronounced and the audience was dismissed to partake of refreshments that were served in the back of the church.

BANQUET WAS REWARD

Supt Ball, of Dover; Assistant Superintendent H. H. Apgar, of Somerville; Supt A. I. Reilly, of Newark, and others made short addresses during the evening upon the good work done by the Prudential agents, and the necessity for hard work in the future.

It was not until a late hour that the company dispersed, and it was with many congratulations and well-wishes for the future that they returned to their homes.

The banquet, due to the tireless work on the part of Supt. Woodland and the excellent service given by Mr. DuBevois, was a success in every way.

FAITHFUL SERVANT IS DEAD.

Domestic in Dr. Long's Family Passed Away at the Hospital.

Miss Susie Saunders, colored, aged 19 years, a faithful servant at the home of Dr. Long, of Park avenue, died yesterday at Muhlenberg Hospital as a result of chronic pneumonia. About five weeks ago Miss Saunders was taken ill with the grip and she was immediately taken to the hospital, where she had the best of treatment in the hopes that her life might be saved. Her illness finally developed into pneumonia that caused her death. She was born in Richmond, Va., and resided in this city for several years at Dr. Long's home. She was very well liked and was a good servant. The funeral will be held from the parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son, Park avenue, at a time to be decided upon later.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Minute World.

Mark Twain has contributed some very interesting literature to the public, and his books of a humorous character have been read and enjoyed by thousands of people, but none have enjoyed the popularity of his "Tom Sawyer," which has been dramatized and made ready for stage use, and which will be presented at the Stillman Music Hall Saturday afternoon and evening, February 4th. The book has been followed as closely as will a mir, and all the characters well taken care of. The principal scenes, the grave yard where Tom and Huckleberry Finn go in search of a new made grave with a bottle of stump water to try the dead cat cure for warts, is very graphically presented. This particular scene affords excellent opportunity for dramatic action. The grocery store and court scenes are particularly fancy. The girl final cast which presented the play in New York at the Metropolis and People's Theatre, is headed by Charles B. Collins and Miss Adele St. Alva, who introduced clever and catchy specialties. The matinee Saturday is especially intended for the ladies and children.

May Irwin and her merry company in "Kate Kip, Buyer" continue to attract large houses nightly at the Bijou in New York. There are but a few weeks more of the jovial comedienne whose inimitable personality has packed the Bijou at each performance from the opening night. It is to be regretted that Miss Irwin's business representative is unable to extend her annual metropolitan engagement beyond February 18th as out-of-town managers have been firm in their refusal to make any but the original arrangement. So within a few weeks Miss Irwin and "Kate Kip, Buyer" must give way to "Brown's In Town."

POLICEMAN CROW DIES

SOMERVILLE OFFICER VICTIM OF THE DESPERATE BURGLARS.

He Was Shot Through Body at the Somerville Beef House Robbery and Died Yesterday—Looking for Murderer.

Somerville, Feb. 1 —Assistant Chief of Police Manning B. Crow, who was mortally wounded in a single hand fight with three desperate burglars, who had cracked the safe of the Swift Beef Company, at 2 o'clock the morning of Jan 19th, died at his home in Hamilton street yesterday. Crow was shot through the body by an ourpost of the gang, who was concealed behind a tree.

Staggering from the effects of his wound he crossed the street to the beef house and opened fire on two members of the gang who were trying to escape through an office window. The men returned the fire and retreated toward the railroad and escaped.

Crow fired four shots at the men and one of them is believed to have taken effect. One of the men was seen to stagger as he ran, and blood stains were on the ground near the beef house. Prosecutor Nelson Y. Dungan and his detectives have been untiring in their efforts to run down the thieves. A large reward has been offered, and a close watch has been kept on all the hospitals along the line of the New Jersey Central Railroad for the appearance of the wounded burglars.

The Swift Beef Company has employed several detectives on the case, but as yet there is no clue to the thieves.

Crow was one of the oldest and best known policemen in the State. He recently celebrated his twenty-first anniversary on the force.

CHEESE MADE TROUBLE.

Naughty Boys Put it in the Heater and it Made a Stink.

Westfield, February 1—The first and second grammar grade classes at the Lincoln High School were dismissed from their studies yesterday morning on account of a peculiar odor which arose from the hot air shaft in the classrooms. The peculiar smell caused the teachers and scholars to feel ill, and it was impossible to receive any classes in the recitation room.

An investigation was made, and eventually Professor Edwards learned that Herbert Williams, Herbert Clarke and Percy Ketcham had dropped small pieces of cheese into the hot-air shaft.

The boys' accompanied them to school this morning and tried to straighten out matters. The boys were, however, suspended by Professor Edwards. The affair has created considerable talk among the school children.

How Miss Helen Gould Became Interested in a Soldier.

VISITED HIM PERSONALLY.

THE HEIRESS CARRIED OUT DYING WISHES TO THE LETTER

His Forlorn Manner Attracted Miss Gould's Representative as She was Passing Along Seventh Avenue One Day—The Sick Soldier Sent to Miss Gould's Home on the Hudson to Recover His Health.

In connection with the death of John O'Keefe, a private in the 201st N. Y. Vols., whose interment took place in this city Monday, there is a touching story. All honor is due Miss Helen M. Gould, whose kindly acts and at times personal attention made the last days of Private O'Keefe as comfortable as possible. He was cared for just as much as any soldier of higher rank.

The story of this soldier is, indeed, a pathetic one. It was early in November last that Private O'Keefe stood at the corner of Third avenue and Fifteenth street one day. He was then cold and suffering with troubles contracted at Camp Mead. As he stood on the corner he was approached by Mrs. Robert Sullivan, who is the representative of Miss Helen M Gould in her work among the soldiers

Mrs. Sullivan addressed the young man and inquired if he was ill or was in need of anything. By a glance Mrs Sullivan noticed that the soldier was suffering, and she at once took him to Camp Walroth, which place was opened sometime ago by Mrs Walroth, of Fifteenth street, New York. The soldier was then placed under the charge of Dr. Gallant and his wife, who attend to the soldiers brought there. He seemed to improve at Camp Walroth and on Thanksgiving Day he partook of a hearty dinner with the other soldiers. After that he began to grow weaker, and at the request of Miss Gould he was transferred to her home at Nyack on the Hudson, where every wish was granted in the hopes that he might recover. Mr. O'Keefe did not appear to be one desiring charity, and often said that he was used to work and was anxious to do something. In view of this Mrs. Sullivan personally interviewed Mr. Swan, of the Manhattan Street Railway Company, and secured a place for him on the surface railway, which place he was to take as soon as he got well.

While Mr. O'Keefe was at Nyack he was failing gradually, until it was deemed best to remove him to the Presbyterian Hospital in New York It was there that he spent his last days and died. He was a person of rare patience and his last days were emplified to a large degree a beautiful character and disposition While at the hospital he was personally visited by Miss Gould and frequently she sent him flowers.

Towards the last arrangements had been made to move the patient to the Home for Consumptives in Brooklyn and when Mr. O'Keefe was spoken to about the change he suggested that they wait a few days so that he could go in a carriage, as he had a particular dread of ambulances. The request was granted but the attending physician, Dr. Fisher, informed those in charge that the patient was too ill to be moved and that he would not live long. In a few days he grew rapidly worse, until the end came last Saturday morning. When the nurse left him Friday night she left medicine for him to take, but he was unable to take it. The last words he spoke was to the nurse that went on duty Saturday morning. He asked her to speak gins to the night nurse for him because he had been unable to take his medicine.

After Mr. O'Keefe's death Miss Gould instructed her assistant, Mrs Sullivan, who is Miss Gould's sole representative in the work of the Woman's War Relief Committee work, to see that all expense of burial was provided for. This was done, and Miss Gould stood the expense. Mr. O'Keefe's dying request was that the G. A. R. Post, of this city, bury him, and this was done Monday.

Mrs. Sullivan, accompanied by Mrs. Dr. Potter, of New York, came to Plainfield Monday afternoon and attended the services. Mrs. Sullivan brought with her a large and beautiful bunch of roses from Miss Gould, which were laid on the casket, and a beautiful silk American flag, the gift of Mrs. Dr. Porter, was also laid on the casket. The remains were at A. M. Runyon's undertaking parlors until 3 o'clock where friends were able to take a last look. The remains were then taken to St. Mary's church under escort of the members of Winfield Scott Post No 73 G. A. R., where services were held. Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, where the Post took charge and gave the usual salutes. There was a large attendance of friends at the services to do honor to one who had died in the service of his country. Rev Father Wessman also assisted at the services.

INDORSED NOTE FOR HUSBAND.

A Complicated Trial in Justice Mosher's Court Yesterday

A complicated case in which a wife endorsed a note as an accomodation for her husband, was tried in Justice Mosher's court Monday. The parties were Charles Peterson, of Dunellen, against Oscar Pearson and wife. Peterson purchased goods of Peterson to the amount of $185 several months ago, and as Peterson would not take Pearson's note, he got his wife to endorse it. With her endorsement the note was brought. Other notes were given in the same way until the bill was reduced to $111, when no more money being paid on it, suit was brought.

William Newcorn represented Peterson and W. K. McClure was Pearson's lawyer Mr McClure claimed that Mrs Pearson could not be held for the amount of the note as she was only an accomodation signer. Justice Mosher reserved his decision for one week. Mr. Pearson owns the property.

FATAL HEMORRHAGES.

Colored Man Found in an Unconscious Condition in a Barn

Peter Scudder, colored, aged 45 years, an employee of Tot Eck & Harris, coal dealers on Clinton avenue, was taken ill last week Friday with inward hemorrhages and died at his home, 528 West Third street Sunday afternoon. Dr. Clawson was called to treat Scudder, but medical skill was of no avail.

Scudder, when taken ill, went in a barn on the premises where he was working and was found sometime later in an unconscious condition. He was taken care of and after a while he regained consciousness. A report became general at that he had frozen to death, but this is not so. The funeral services were held from the late home yesterday.

The second subscription dance given by the society people of Plainfield this year took place in the Casino of the Union County Country Club Monday night. There were about 175 sub scribers to the dance and a great number of those were present. The dance was one of the leading social functions of the season

The Casino was void of any elaborate decorations, but presented a comfortable and home-like appearance with its settees placed here and there, and many sofa pillows thrown down carelessly in this corner or that, and its many little nooks formed by the grouping of palms. Over the electric light globes was wound red gauze, and a dim light was thrown over the scene, giving everything and everybody a reddish cast.

Wack, of the Waldorf Astoria, of New York, furnished the music for dancing, which was kept up until a late hour. No set dances were danced, nothing but waltzes and two steps. The musicians were seated on the stage and that left a larger space for dancing. The supper was in charge of Steward Stutter, of the Union County Country Club The committee in charge of the dance consisted of Edward T. Wilson, Dr. Frank C Ard, Francis A. Cokefair, Clifford W. To Depend on New Council

At the meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening nothing definite will be done regarding a permanent pavement for Somerset street, as the present Mayor and Council's term expire in March, and it will require an election to determine what the future course will be. There will be only two more meetings of the present council, next Friday evening and an adjourned meeting February 15th. The election takes place in the borough early in March.

Mrs. M. S. Ackerman's Tea.

Mrs. M. S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, gave the first of a series of "at homes" at her residence Tuesday afternoon. It was a charming informal affair, attended by many of the elite of Plainfield society. The house was charmingly decorated for the occasion.

MR MURRAY'S VOICE HEARD ONCE AGAIN

Plainfield Assemblyman Speaks For Contractor's Protection.

HIS MOTION WAS DEFEATED

IT BOUGHT TO CHANGE A BILL FATHERED BY MR MUNGLE.

The Measure Prohibits Any Not Citizens of the United States From Being Employed on Public Works in the State—State Claims the Honor of Planting First Flag on the Union Soil

The Legislature of this State did not weary itself with much business Monday night but after pushing along a bill or two and receiving a few more, took a recess till morning. In the House the bill prohibiting the employment of any but citizens of the United States upon public works came up on second reading, and Mr. Murray, of Plainfield, offered an amendment to exempt contractors from the provisions of the act. Mr. Mungle, the father of the measure, opposed the motion, and it was defeated on a viva voce vote. The committee to which the bill was referred after its introduction struck out the provision that only citizens of New Jersey should be employed on the public works. Mr Mungle consented to this action, and with this alteration alone the bill passed second reading and will probably come up on final passage tomorrow.

The following resolution offered by Leader McKee was adopted: "Whereas, this House of Assembly is honored by having among its employes Herbert Matts, late seaman on board the United States auxiliary cruiser Buffalo, who served his country with honor during the recent hostilities with Spain, having voluntarily been the leader of a party of New Jersey sailors to land at Piedras, on the north coast of Cuba, and having put the garrison to flight, hoisted the Stars and Stripes over the fortification thereby winning for New Jersey the distinction of being of the first to plant the American flag, the emblem of liberty, on Cuban soil; therefore, resolved, that this House of Assembly hereby express its pride and pleasure in having Mr Matts among its employes and extends to him and the people of New Jersey its congratulations."

The Senate adopted an Assembly concurrent resolution providing for an investigation into the present system of engrossing bills, with a view of abolishing it.

A bill providing for the licensing of expert accountants practicing in the State was introduced by Mr Ketcham It creates a board of three examiners to examine accountants, the first person to be Isaac A Lewis, of Paterson; Richard F. Stevens and Frank M. Scott, of Newark, or such other "qualified public accountants, residents of and practicing in the State, as the Governor may select."

Game bills were in evidence at last night's session, One, introduced by Senator Hutchinson, makes the open season for hare, rabbits, quail, woodcock and ruffed grouse between November 10 and December 10; for gray snipe during March, April and September, and for squirrels during September and from November 10 to December 10. Another bill, by Mr. Stokes, makes it unlawful for three years to take any ring necked pheasants, and for five years to take any wild deer.

Senator Hutchinson introduced a bill which, if enacted into law, will give the members of the Boards of Freeholders in Mercer, Camden, Monmouth, Union and Passaic counties $300 a year instead of $1250, as at present. It fixes the pay of the Director at $500. This is all the compensation the members are to receive.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HIGH FENCE PUT UP TO SHUT OFF INDIGNITIES.

KRAUSSE EXPLAINED TO THE MAYOR.

His Honor Says Board of Health May be Called Upon to Act in the Matter.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, called on C. W. Krause, of Vine street, Monday, to hold a conference regarding the high board fence that the latter had erected on his property which shuts off the view of a adjoining houses.

It was the purpose of His Honor to secure, if possible, by moral persuasion, the removal of the fence. Mr. Krause made a very plain statement of facts and told how his neighbor had acted toward him and his wife and children. He stated that the actions were at times disgraceful, and that he would not allow his family to suffer such indignities After hearing the facts in the case His Honor told Mr. Krause that he should have reported the case to him and he would have attended to it at once.

Mr. Wilson informed Mr. Krausse that the Board of Health would no doubt visit him and compell him to remove the fence inasmuch as it would come under the head of a nuisance. Mr. Krausse did not say whether he would concur with the Board of Health or not if requested to take the fence down.

DANGER IN CALCIUM CARBIDE.

Rules Governing Its Sale in New York Limited Acetylene Gas Prohibited

Superintendent Murray of the Bureau of Combustibles, has made regulations governing the transportation storage and sale of calcium carbide, which the firemen declare to be a source of danger in a burning building, because when water reaches it acetylene gas is given off. A number of stores keep it for use in bicycle lamps. Hereafter, in transit or on storage, it must be inclosed in hermetically sealed iron receptacles marked "Dangerous, if not kept dry" No package may contain more than 100 pounds. It must be stored in isolated buildings that are fireproof and waterproof. No artificial light or heat will be permitted in the building where it is stored. Not more than twenty pounds, in bulk or in cartridges, may be kept in any store or factory, and this must be in a fire proof safe or vault above the street grade and must be kept six inches above the floor.

The manufacture, transportation, storage, sale or use of liquefied acetylene is absolutely prohibited within the limits of this city.—N. Y. Sun.

F. Carpenter was appointed to draft a bill to present to the Legislature and to urge the passage of the bill. Last year a bill forming a new township was defeated.

RAY CARROLL WON THE INDOOR CONTEST.

Completed at Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Saturday Night.

ONLY SEVEN FINISHED.

CARROLL FINISHED FIRST IN MOST OF THE EVENTS.

He Also Broke a Number of Records—The Running High Jump and Putting the Shot Held Saturday Night—Carroll and Morgan Winners—Gross's Great Work in Potato Race.

The indoor athletic contest among the members of the local Y. M. C. A., was concluded Saturday evening when the last two events were contested in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Raymond M. Carroll won the championship by a big margain. Berry Egan and Eric Moraller, the two of the contestants who were pushing him the closest, dropped out and did not complete the ten events. William Townsend came in for second place and a silver medal, Carroll wianing the gold one offered.

The two events regularly scheduled for Saturday evening were the running high jump and putting the shot. Out of the twelve local athletes who originally started, only seven appeared to complete the events. A small but enthusiastic audience was present in the visitors' gallery.

In the running high jump Carroll came out ahead. Before he gave up he cleared the bar at 5 feet, 2 inches, and could have undoubtedly gone higher. William Morgan was second with 4 feet, 8 inches; William Townsend third with 4 feet, 4 inches. J. H. Green, Jr., Walter Dreier, Walter Sampson and Herbert Brokaw were also present and took part.

In putting the shot the first honors went to William Morgan, whose put was 33 feet, 9 inches. Carroll was second with 33 feet, 6½ inches. Townsend finished third with 31 feet; 3 inches.

Ray Carroll had two events to make up, three standing broad jumps and the running high kick, and won first honors in each. A. B. Meredith was high man in the three broad jumps with a jump of 25 feet, 9 inches. Carroll made 25 feet, 10 inches. In the high kick, the apparatus was not high enough to allow Carroll to do his best and a temporary arrangement had to be substituted. His kick was 8 feet, 3 inches, 2 inches better than the association record made last year by F. O. Bristol. Bristol also held the record in the three broad jumps, 29 feet 6 inches.

Sampson and Green made up the potato race and the fence vault. Great things were expected of Green in the potato race and he did very well. He injured his ankle in the fence vault or else he would have made an even better showing. He ran the required distance in 1 minute, 47 2-5 seconds, which was only a second and a fifth slower than the local association record and a second and a two-fifth slower than the State record.

The total number of points scored by each contestant who completed the ten events were as follows: Raymond Carroll, 7295; William Townsend, 592; William Morgan, 495; J. H. Green, Jr., 423; Herbert Brokaw, 390; Walter Sampson, 317; Walter Dreier, 285.

SOCIETY WOMEN WERE OUT.

Mrs. George A. Strong Gave a Delightful Tea Saturday Afternoon.

A delightful tea was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. George A. Strong, of Central avenue, and was largely attended by Plainfield society folks. The ladies receiving with Mrs. Strong were Mrs. E. B. Clark, Mrs. W. R. Richards and Mrs. Isaac Miller. The ladies at the table in the dining room were Mrs. Harmon and Mrs Huntington, while the young ladies assisting were the Misses Patterson, VanBoskerck, Halloway, Clark, Miller, Moore, Case and Strong.

The beautiful home was charmingly decorated for the event and the use of chice roses and greens produced and admiring effect. The affair was marked by the entire absence of formality and the hospitality of the hostess and her assistants was a noticeable feature throughout.

Helping the Baptist Ministers.

The collection for the aid of the Baptist ministers' home was taken up Sunday morning in the Park Avenue Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Pogson, who held evangelistic services there early in the month, is connected with that home, and it was upon condition that the church would take up an extra collection this year for the home that he gave his services.

THROWN FROM WAGON BUT STOPPED HORSE.

FRIGHTENED AT A TROLLEY CAR.

C. P. Stout Had Thrilling Experience on West Front Street Yesterday Morning—Damage Slight.

One of the horses used by Laing & Stout, the Sunday newspaper dealers, became frightened at a passing trolley car Sunday morning, threw the junior member of the firm out on the sidewalk and caused all sorts of trouble before his excitement was subdued. Chauncey P. Stout was delivering papers on West Front street, beyond Grant avenue when the accident occurred.

A car came down Rocap's hill at full speed, and the horse, which was from Robert's stable, is only afraid when standing. Stout was just getting out of the runabout when the horse made a dash at the sidewalk, cramped the wheel and threw Stout heavily on the sidewalk. Stout jumped up and, while the horse was rearing and plunging, seized him by the bridle. He finally threw the animal and sat on his head until some passersby came to his rescue. The horse was then unharnessed.

The harness was broken in several places and one shaft was snapped. Both Stout and the horse escaped serious injury. When the horse was allowed to get up, he began to plunge again and pulled the bridle off. Stout grabbed him by mane and nose and hung fast until a strap could be put about the animal's neck.

ENTERTAINED AT WHIST.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schultz Were Visited by the Watchung Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schultz, of Hillside avenue, entertained the Watchung Whist Club at their home Saturday evening, and a most delightful time was passed in card playing, dancing and singing, several catchy selections being given by I. G. Taylor, Miss Keys and Mr. Jones. Those who won the prizes at whist were Mrs. Slocum, Peter Schultz and Mr. Johnson. The guests' prizes were presented to Miss Jex and B. O. Bowers, Jr. Those who were present from out of town were: Miss Jex, of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Keys, of Hackensack; Miss Thorn, of New York; Mr. Taylor and Mr. Austin, of Brooklyn.

The Tribune Almanac.

The Tribune Almanac was first published in 1838 under another name. It has appeared every year except one, since that date, continuously confirming and enhancing its original claim to the confidence of the country. In recent years its size has been extended to meet the requirements of a growing population, with a greater complexity of interests, and now contains a much more varied assortment of topics. By rigid compression and expert arrangement, it yet remains compact and portable, while extraordinarily comprehensive. We observe that the 1899 number contains the Constitution of New York; the Charter of the Greater New York; a complete history of the War with Spain, including the Treaty of the Joint Commission in Paris; and the Monetary Systems of the world; full returns of the election in the several States and Territories; electoral and popular vote for each President since the election of George Washington; the War Revenue Bill; a complete summary of Acts passed to date by the present Congress; History of the Annexation of Hawaii; and many miscellaneous topics. Send 25 cents either to this paper or to the New York Tribune and you will receive a Tribune Almanac for 1899.

Street Car Jumped the Track.

Last Sunday as Car No. 12, of the main line of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, was passing along on Watchung avenue, near Fourth street, the wheels made a slip and jumped the track. The car was well-filled with passengers and all received a severe shaking up. However, no one was injured. It required about a half hour to get the car back on the track, and several other cars were used to accomplish the feat.

MISS GOULD PAID FOR FUNERAL OF SOLDIER

Generous Action of New York Heiress to Plainfield Boy.

DYING WISH WAS GRANTED.

PRIVATE O'KEEFE BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS.

He Was a Member of 201st New York Regiment and Died in the Presbyterian Hospital From a Disease Contracted While in the Army Service—Obsequies in Charge of G. A. R. Post of This City.

A few days ago John O'Keefe, formerly a resident of this city, and an employee of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, died in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, as a result of disease contracted while serving as private in the 201st N. Y. Vols. He made a request before he died that his body be sent to Plainfield and that the funeral services be in charge of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city.

This request reached Miss Helen Gould, of New York, and she communicated with Commander Charles B. Stephens, of Post No. 73, G. A. R. Miss Gould informed Commander Stephens that she would stand the entire expense of the funeral if the post would look after the burial. The commander assented and the body reached Plainfield Sunday.

The post was notified and Monday at 3 o'clock p. m. the funeral services were held at St. Mary's R. C. church, and were in charge of the officers and members of the G. A. R., assisted by the rector of the church, Rev. Father Smyth.

Tip, the Bootblack, Gets His Liberty.

"Tip" Thompson, the colored bootblack, who was sentenced about two years ago to serve a term in State's Prison for attempting to kill his wife, has completed his sentence and is now in Plainfield again. He will probably locate here permanently.

Some Four Leaf Clovers to Be Worn.

As a good luck charm the rabbit's foot has a rival. Just now it is the four leaf clover that superstitious maidens are looking upon with favor. Even the rabbit's foot mounted in gold has lost much of its subtle power.

Fashionable girls are wearing the four leaf clover as a belt buckle, a watch charm, cuffbuttons, a pendant, and as the newest ornament to swing from their chatelaine. And it is a real clover which they are wearing, and if possible one that they have found themselves.

The clovers are mounted in a most clever fashion, and make an exceptionally pretty ornament as well as a lucky one. The clover is first carefully pressed, and then each petal mounted on a small, round piece of white silk or satin. This is then incased in a glass, and the charm is complete.

This lucky clover leaf forms the centre of many an exquisite belt buckle, this season. One of the prettiest showed the clover mounted in malachite and gold. The belt itself consisted of oval pieces of malachite caught together by gold chains.

The clover leaf is incased in glass swinging from the chatelaine just as a good luck charm, or it forms the top of her chatelaine bonbon box.

One of the newest lorgnettes has down in the corner of its golden handle a tiny lucky clover, mounted on the handle and covered with glass. It is sunk into the handle of the lorgnette and then surrounded by tiny diamonds.

A Rainbow Party.

Among the most popular entertainments is a novel form of evening party known by the name of "Rainbow Party," which is somewhat like a figure of the cotillion, danced, or rather acted, throughout the entire evening.

Young ladies invited to a rainbow party are each expected to wear an apron. This may be of any shade or hue the wearer chooses, and must be left unhemmed at the bottom. Each one is provided with a numbered ticket, the duplicate of which is placed in a box near the entrance, these tickets being drawn by the gentlemen on entering.

Then commences the fun of the evening. Each gentleman having found his fair partner, is set to hem her unfinished apron, the ladies supplying the needle and thread to their respective cavaliers.

At a given signal they commence to thread the needles. A certain time is given them for this unaccustomed task, then another signal is given, and they begin to sew. Afterwards a committee is formed to judge the work and award the prizes. The aprons are raffled for, the different couples dance a few dances together and the entertainment ends with supper.

Common-Sense Beauty List.

An authority on physical training for women gives the following directions for securing the best results, which naturally must be modified by individual characteristics and circumstances:

"Sleep nine hours out of the twenty-four, bathe in cold water, exercise five minutes daily with light dumbbells, drink a cup of hot liquid before breakfast, spend half an hour every day in outdoor exercise, make the best of bad bargains, and always keep your temper."

THREATS OF A CRUSADE MADE ELIZABETH DRY.

SALOON MEN ACTED CAUTIOUSLY.

A Few of Those on the Inside Were Able to Wet Their Whistles by Giving the Password.

Elizabeth, Jan. 30—Elizabeth was a dry town yesterday to strangers. The threatened crusade of the Anti-Saloon League and the churches against Sunday selling had the effect of alarming the saloon keepers, and the Liquor Dealers' Union sent out a warning Saturday night to its members to admit no persons to their places on Sunday unless they were regular patrons. As a consequence, pickets were on the watch at the various saloons to detect the approach of "spotters" who, it was expected, would be sent out by the crusaders to catch violators of the law. Special passwords given out Saturday night were necessary in order to get in many of the places, even though the applicant was known.

The crusaders who are agitating the closing of saloons on Sunday will hold a meeting this week, at which reports will be made of the dealers who were caught doing business yesterday and efforts made to have them indicted.

The saloon keepers have themselves largely to blame for the crusade against them by the law and order element, as the way in which they openly defied the law has been most glaring and offensive to the community during the last six months.

TRIBUTE TO LETTER-CARRIER.

The Late E. E. Hann's Comrades Gave a Beautiful Piece of Flowers.

Regarding the obsequies of the late Edward E. Hann which were held Saturday afternoon, it should be stated that a floral tribute consisting of a star, anchor and pillow was presented by the employes at the post-office. There was also a handsome pillow from the members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of which the deceased was a member, and several bunches of cut flowers from friends. During Mr. Hann's illness neighbors and friends were very kind as were also the members of Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., and the bereaved family appreciates the expression of kindness. Those who acted as pall-bearers included A. D. Pope, Jacob Blimm, John Wakefield, George Schlereth, Thomas Osment and Samuel Miller.

Runaway Horse Had a Short Run.

An unfortunate accident occurred Last Thursday at the freight house, when the horse owned by J. P. Lalre, the hardware dealer, became frightened and ran away. The young colored man employed by Mr. Laire was in charge of the horse and wagon and was loading goods on the wagon at the time. The horse ran as far as Callahan's grocery store on Richmond street, where he was caught. The wagon was damaged a little, but the horse escaped injury.

Judgment Given.

Judgment was rendered in Justice Moffett's court last Monday against William Trust for Thomas Timbo. The amount involved was $68.92. Part of it was a note for $50 given by Trust November 11th last, which went to protest. There were also two boxes of cigars for $4.50 and $8.50, $7.21 for cigarettes and tobacco and $2.80 borrowed money. Pope & Bunyon represented the plaintiff and execution was issued at once.

Thieves Coveted the Bicycles.

An attempt was made Saturday evening to enter the bicycle house in the rear of the residence of Mr. DuBois, of Putnam avenue. Several wheels were stored there. The padlock was pried off, but the lock to the door held fast and the would-be thieves could not gain entrance. The mechanism of the lock was disabled, however, in the effort to force it.

Thomas will sever his connection with the reportorial staff of the News next Saturday and move to Elizabeth to accept a more lucrative position on the staff of the Elizabeth Daily Journal. MAYOR ON WAR PATH.

MR. WILSON HAS A SPIRITED TALK WITH GUSTAV SUTTERLIN.

It Is Alleged that Illegal Practices Were Going on About Bottling Works—Sutterlin Promised to Do Better

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, has been on the war path and has again succeeded in bringing to terms a violator of the laws. This time it was Gustav Sutterlin, the beer bottler on Greenbrook road. His Honor has been securing evidence for sometime past that there has been illegal practices going on at this place, that crowds were assembling at the establishment and were able to buy liquors on the premises and drink it there.

Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock Mr. Sutterlin, at the request of Mayor Wilson, appeared at the latter's home and with uplifted hand gave a promise that he would not violate the law any more. His Honor gave the offender of the law a good talking to and informed him that if the practice continued he would make his business to see that the full penalty of the law was exercised on him. Mr. Sutterlin solemnly promised to do the right thing in the future.

GROOM LOST THE KEY.

Egbert Scribner Had a Peculiar Mishap After Being Married.

Miss Sarah Taynor, of Steiner place and Egbert Scribner, of 144 Duer street, accompanied by Mr. Scribner's son, A. Scribner and wife, as witnesses, called at the home of Rev. George Hauser, of Duer street, Sunday, and were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was a simple one and was very impressive. After the wedding the couple adjourned to the home of the groom, where an informal reception was held.

An unfortunate circumstance in connection with the affair was that fact that after the groom had rewarded the minister for his services, he lost his pocketbook containing money and the key to the trunk which contained many belongings of the bride and groom. It was found necessary to break the trunk open by forcible means, for the owners could not wait to seach for the key. Mr. and Mrs. Scribner will reside at 144 Duer street, where everything has been been prepared for their comfort.

A KICKING HORSE.

The Steed Did a Skirt Dance for the Benefit of Churchgoers.

Sunday forenoon on West Front street, opposite Randolph's drug store, a horse and wagon owned by Philip J. VanWyck, of Stelle avenue, figured prominently in an exciting accident. The rig was in charge of the coachman, Mr. Stewart, and the horse, a fractious one, did some high kicking. While the hind legs were in the air they descended astride the shafts, and then there was trouble. The horse toppled over and at the same time kept on kicking.

Presently a large crowd gathered and Mr. Stewart had plenty of help in straightening out the difficulty. The horse was not injured, neither was the wagon damaged. After the animal was placed on his feet Mr. Stewart took him home and secured another horse before he started for church to bring Mr. VanWyck and family home. It is said that the horse is celebrated for his kicking propensities.

KEPT MARRIAGE A SECRET.

A New Jersey Volunteer and Miss Carrie Hamilton Wedded in October.

While the regiment was stationed at Pompton Lakes in October, Williams received a furlough. On the night of October 12th he and Miss Hamilton, to whom he had been paying attention for some time, went to New Brunswick by trolley and proceeded to the parsonage of St. James' Methodist church.

ARMY NURSE RELATES HARDSHIPS OF WAR.

Dr. Main Described His Experiences in Cuba.

HE WAS AT SAN JUAN HILL.

OFFERED HIS SERVICES WHEN THE FIRST CALL CAME.

Though a Non-Combatant, He Was in Close Proximity to the Thickest of the Fighting Between the Americans and the Spaniards—Risked His Life to Carry Water to the Soldiers in the Trenches.

Daniel C. Main, son of Rev. A. H. Main, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, spent seven months last summer in Cuba in the service of the United States Government as a member of the Hospital Corps. He related some of his experiences Sunday at a men's meeting in his father's church. His story of the short war between Spain and this country was an interesting one, told as it was by one who had been in the very midst of the struggle, although not a combatant himself.

Mr. Main said that his enlistment in his country's service was not the result of any sudden burst of patriotism. As far back as 1896, he said, members of the Cuban Junta in New York went through the hospitals there enlisting the sympathies of the nurses in their cause. Mr. Main said that he would have enlisted then for Cuba but that something prevented him and held him back until the opportunity had passed.

But as soon as the Maine was sunk in Havana harbor, and the call for volunteers was sent out by President McKinley, he hastened to Philadelphia and with many young men, and older ones, too, whom he knew, enlisted. He was sworn in April 27th, and May 3d was in Tampa, Fla. The next morning the men were assigned to the different companies and he and most of his friends widely separated. The next morning after his arrival he was transferred to the artilley, where he had less work to do, but poor food.

It was not until June 26th that he received his orders to sail for Cuba and Mr. Main took some time to tell incidents connected with that short voyage from Tampa to the Cuban island. Mr. Main was at the battle of San Juan Hill, in his capacity as nurse, and worked hard, with the doctors and other nurses, to relieve what suffering they could among the men.

Some of the stories of bravery and suffering were very pathetic, and showed with what loyalty every man who went to war entered into the spirit of it. Mr. Main did not only care for the suffering in the hospital tents, but at this famous battle ran out with a number of canteens of water, up the side of the hill, to the men lying in the trenches, who were almost dying from thirst.

Dr. M. S. Simpson happened to be in the audience, and after Mr. Main had finished, he was invited to make a few remarks regarding his experiences on the Badger. The Doctor had been to Cuba long before the war broke out, so the country Mr. Main described was old and familiar to him he said. Dr. Simpson spoke words of praise for the New Jersey boys who were in Cuba or on the war vessels in the harbors, and also spoke highly of the bravery of the Spanish soldiers and sailors.

FURNITURE FOR NEW SCHOOL.

Borough Board of Education Award Contract for Seats.

The regular monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education was held Saturday night instead of tonight for the accommodation of one or two members. The regular monthly budget of bills was ordered paid together with the contracts on the new school building.

The contract was awarded the Grand Rapids Furniture Co., of Grand Rapids, Michigan, for furnishing and seating the new school. There were were bids from three or four other furniture companies, but the committee decided upon the Grand Rapids Co. The total cost of furnishing the new building will probably not be over $650.

Thirteen applicants for the position of janitor to the new school were present and were examined by the board. A decision will be arrived at and one employed at the next meeting.

Medical Skill of No Avail.

The death of Mrs. Phebe M. Hetfield, widow of the late Zophar Hetfield, occurred Sunday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jaggers, 529 West Front street, after a long illness. Mrs. Hetfield was born at Fanwood and lived there all of her life. She came to Plainfield to receive the proper treatment for her troubles, but the best of medical skill was baffled in efforts to restore health. The deceased is survived by one son, who is married and is engaged in the milk business. The funeral services were held last Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house, No. 529 West Front street.

THE LAST TRIBUTES PAID TO THE DEAD.

THE RADFORD OBSEQUIES.

LATE LETTER-CARRIER HANN HONORED WITH CHURCH SERVICES.

Funeral of the Late Robert Radford Held From His Old Home—Floral Tributes Were Beautiful—Letter-Carriers Visited Mr. Hann's Home and Viewed His Remains—Fythians Present.

The funeral services of the late Robert Radford were held Saturday from the house, corner of West Front street and Elmwood place, at 1:15. There was a very large attendance of friends and relatives, bearing strong evidence of the high esteem in which the departed was held. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the services, and his words of comfort to the bereaved ones were filled with consolation. He spoke very highly of the exemplary life of the departed, and paid a rich testimony to his faithful Christian character. He told how he had attended so regularly divine worship, and how he had lived a Christian life every day.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, including offerings from the several children of the departed. Interment took place in the North Plainfield cemetery, and relatives of the deceased acted as bearers.

Last Saturday the local letter-carriers visited the late home of Edward T. Hann, on Somerset place, and viewed the remains of the former comrade. The scene was a pathetic one and the carriers were much affected. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon from the First Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock, and were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, who spoke words of feeling and comfort to the bereaved ones. He also spoke about the life of the departed, of his faithfulness in the service of the Government. The floral display was beautiful and consisted of many set pieces and bunches of flowers. The attendance of relatives and friends at the services were large, and included a large delegation from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of which the deceased was a member. Officers from this lodge assisted in the services at the grave which made it very impressive. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

The funeral services of Jennie Boot, aged nine years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boot, were held Saturday from the house, 426 West Sixth street, at 1 o'clock, and were private. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, officiated. Interment took place at 3:30 o'clock in VanLiew cemetery, New Brunswick, and Dr. Pockman, pastor of the First Reformed church of that place, officiated.

SECOND TIME SCORCHED IN A YEAR.

Fire Fiend Works Disastrously in A. J Leader's New York Printery.

The many friends and acquaintances of A. J. Leader, of Duer street, are sympathizing with him in his second loss by fire in about a year's time. His printing office, situated on Reade street, New York, was badly damaged by fire and water Thursday evening, and his large printing business completely paralyzed for a time by the unfortunate circumstances. The fire started in book-bindery under Mr. Leader's office, which was almost totally destroyed. Mr. Leader has a large amount of "grit" and will set up a new office in the vicinity of his present location, as soon as arrangements can be perfected. In the meantime, friendly printers have come to his rescue and are endeavoring to help him get out some of his most important orders.

FELL THROUGH THE ICE.

Little Girl Took Chilly Plunge in Tier's Lake Saturday Morning.

Dora Wilson, the twelve-year-old daughter of William K. Wilson, of East Fourth street, fell through the ice on Tier's lake Saturday. She and Fred Long and "Son" Haberle were walking across the lake on the ice together when it gave way with them and they fell through.

The boys got in up to their knees, but Dora was further out than they, and sank until only her head was above the water. Long and Haberle, with the assistance of Frank Schropefer, succeeded in dragging Dora out when she promptly fainted. It is not thought that the involuntary bath will do the girl any harm as she was hurried home and put into dry clothes at once.

Rescued With Difficulty.

An unknown man broke through the ice on the South Plainfield pond Thursday afternoon and was only rescued with considerable difficulty.

Mayor's Appointments.

Mayor Rockfellow will submit his appointments to the City Council at the next meeting to be held Monday evening, February 6th.

MANY AT TURKEY SUPPER

A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR HELD AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Annual Event Given by Ladies' Christian Work Society—Many Suppers Served—Those Assisting to Make it a Success.

The annual reunion and turkey supper of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church opened in the lecture room of that church Thursday and was continued Friday. Like other affairs conducted by that enterprising society it was a complete success, and the rooms were crowded with members of the congregation and their friends from other churches who came to partake of the bountiful spread provided.

In the main room, six supper tables were arranged. A banquet lamp illuminated each with its handsome display of silver and china, the ladies in charge of each table vieing with each other in the beauty of the table decorations.

Mrs. Paul and Mrs. Disborough were in charge of one table, assisted by Miss Jeanette Simpson and Miss Maude VanDyke. Mrs. A. Emmons was at another with the Misses Grace Emmons and Dora Ulrick as her assistants. Mrs. H. W. Marshall presided at the third and Miss Grace Smith and Miss Ada Chandler as waitresses. Mrs. Benj. Nowell and Mrs. Tompkin were at another table, assisted in the serving, by Miss Jennie Quick and Miss Edith DuBois. Another table was presided over by Mrs. H. J. Martin with Miss Gertrude Tier and Miss Grace Rowland as waitresses. The sixth table was commanded by Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., assisted by Miss Grace Berg and Miss Alice Berg.

Booths were arranged about the sides of the room for the sale of various articles. At the cake table were Mrs. John Whitenack, Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff and Mrs. Townsend. Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. VanDoren and Mrs. O. W. Dunham divided the cares of the apron table.

At a rustic lemonade booth the ladies in charge were Mrs. VanDyke, Mrs. Curtis H. Thorpe, Mrs. M. Frank Neefie and Miss VanEps. The flavoring extract table was in charge of Mrs. VanName and Mrs. VanZandt. Here were sold bottles of flavoring extract donated by Carl Kaerth. Miss Emma Gillem and Mrs. E. E. Anthony were in command of a "mystery" table. The candy booth at the end of the lecture room was in charge of Mrs. E. H. Bird, Mrs. William Startup and Miss Minnie Williams.

The coat room near the entrance was looked after by William Startup, Postmaster E. H. Bird and E. T. VanWinkle alternated as check-keeper.

The whole affair was under the charge of a general committee composed of Mrs. E. H. Bird, chairman; Mrs. P. M. Demarest, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, Mrs. Seaman Williams, Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. J. Krymer, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., and Mrs. Harry W. Marshall.

Turkey was the principal dish of the supper, but the rest of the menu was an excellent one and there was plenty of everything. There were 253 persons who partook of the supper during the evening.

An informal programme was rendered during the evening by the Ladies' Orchestra, of which Mrs. Buckley is the leader. Their music was excellent.

One of the most important departments of a first-class supper, the kitchen, was in charge of an efficient superintendent, Mrs. P. M. Demarest.

J. H. Tier, Sr., assisted the ladies very materially in the kitchen by carving the sixteen turkies served.

SOCIETY PEOPLE WERE OUT.

OLD GREY-HAIRED MEN FOUGHT WITH FISTS.

Jim Clark, Old and Crippled, Thrashed the "General."

IS EIGHTY-THREE YEARS OLD

"GENERAL" WARREN ROSS BORROWED HIS AXE WITHOUT LEAVE.

The Old Man Nearly Starved in a Shanty Near Stony Hill Last Summer—Kind People Helped Him—Has Been Ill Part of the Winter—Was a Great Fugitist in His Young Days.

"General" Warren Ross is looking for a new home. James Clark and his wife are living alone in the Lord homestead, near Stony Hill, once more. The primary cause of it all was Jim Clark's axe but it ended in the aged fish peddler, forgetful of how aged and decrepid he was growing, thrashing his old friend until the latter was compelled to flee for his life.

It was only last summer that the people of Plainfield learned of the helpless state of old Jim Clark and his wife, how they lived on what picking up in their little hut in the woods and how both were so weak that they could hardly stir about. Kind folks of this city went to their rescue and took them relief.

The aged couple were given the privilege of occupying the Lord homestead during the absence of any regular tenants. They both improved in health and lived there quietly but happily. During the winter Clark was again taken ill and old Warren Ross, commonly called the "General," went to the Lord place and lived there, looking after Clark's horse, cutting the wood and spending the rest of his time trying to gain a livelihood at odd jobs about the neighborhood.

For the last month Ross has been employed by Thomas Xener, of Stony Hill, cutting wood by the cord. Ross borrowed Clark's axe without asking and used it at his work.

The warm weather of the past week set Jim upon his feet again and brought new life to the old man. He became quite enterprising and wandered about the place. Then he found that his axe was gone. He accused Ross of taking it and threatened to thrash him if he did it again.

Now the "General" considered Jim an old man, for the latter is eighty-three years old, while Ross is only sixty-five. He admitted taking the axe, but laughed at the idea of Jim's attempting to thrash him.

When Jim was a young man, he won for himself a great reputation as a strong and powerful man, unusually handy at his fists. He was then peddling clams when six of the Perth Amboy gang announced that he could dig no clams there. Jim went to Perth Amboy, despite their prohibition. He met the six fishermen and thrashed them all. That won for him the admiration of his friends and they told far and wide of his prowess. Finally, the champion pugilist of New Jersey, the "Awful" Gardiner, came and they met one night near New Providence. Jim hit his opponent beneath the ear with a right swing of his fist and Gardner's life nearly ended then and there.

The memory of those glorious times of the past came back to Jim and he forgot that he was old and crippled and started for the "General." Ross awaited the onslaught. With right and left, Jim hammered his adversary with mighty blows of his big fists, finally tumbling him over in the mud. Then Ross picked himself up and departed hastily and has not since returned. Jim went to bed, tired and stiff after the unwonted exercise.

THREATENING FLAMES.

Discovered Just in Time to Prevent Destruction of the House.

Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock a fire broke out in the house occupied by William Chamberlain and family, of East Third street. In five minutes the house would have been doomed had the flames not been discovered. The fire was caused by the walls becoming overheated from a stove. The fire was spreading rapidly when Mr. Chamberlain, his brother-in-law, Theodore Martin and John Kiederling arrived home from work. Mrs. Chamberlain summoned them at once and it required considerable hard work on the part of the three men to put the fire out. The fire spread to some clothing that was hanging in a corner and damaged it considerably. The woodwork was also damaged. In all the loss will be about $40. Mr. Martin, in fighting the fire, was burned in several places, and his hair was also singed. Mr. Chamberlain was burned about the hands and face, while Mr. Kiederling escaped without any injuries.

Changing Time of Tax Payment.

The ordinance changing the time of year for the payment of taxes, which was introduced by Councilman VanHerwerden at the last meeting, will be taken from the table at the next meeting of the Council in February.

CAMP-MEETING MAN HEARD FROM AGAIN.

Rev. W. B. G. Costor Turns Up In Brooklyn This Time.

HE IS ASKING FOR CHARITY.

BROOKLYN AUTHORITIES WRITE TO THIS CITY FOR INFORMATION.

With the Help of Former Councilman Spangenberg, Mrs. Woodruff, Agent for the Organized Aid Association, Compiles His Record in Plainfield and Sends It On—His Record is Bad Here.

Rev. W. B. G. Costor, the colored preacher who attempted to organize a church here last summer, and afterwards decamped with the proceeds of the large collections taken up at a series of camp-meetings, has been heard from again. He is in Brooklyn, soliciting aid for his wife and himself, and applied to one of the aid societies there for help.

When the officers of the society questioned him about his past life, and where he had lived last, he mentioned Plainfield, and said that he was engaged in mission work here last year.

The preacher's gift tongue almost won him the confidence of the society and he was on the point of receiving the desired aid when it was thought best to communicate with Plainfield and find out if his record was good.

Accordingly, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, superintendent of the Organized Aid here, was asked to tell what she knew about him. Aided by Leonard Spangenberg, who was one of the preacher's strongest supporters, and who lost about $45 by him, Mrs. Woodruff was able to send back to Brooklyn such a clear record of Costor's actions that the society turned him off.

Costor arrived in Plainfield from Newark last spring. He came well recommended and through the help of Mr. Spangenberg he organized St. Peter's church in the northern part of the city. A series of camp-meetings were afterward held at Netherwood, at which prominent colored preachers spoke. Then the camp-meetings were over Costor decamped, carrying with him the amount of the collections, nearly $100. No very good efforts were made to locate him, and Costor's whereabouts have been unknown.

In his talk with the officers of the Brooklyn Aid Society, Costor said that he was coming back to Plainfield once more.

A FREE ENTERTAINMENT.

First of a Series of Affairs to be Given by First Church of Christ.

The first of a series of entertainments to be given by the Christian church this winter and spring took place Friday night. The entertainment was given in Reform Hall and was followed by an oyster supper in the basement.

The entertainment was free and everybody was invited. It consisted of recitations, singing and instrumental music, and seemed to be enjoyed thoroughly.

A quartette composed of W. C. Smith, Sr., W. C. Smith, Jr., Edward P. T. Smith and Arthur H. Smith, rendered a selection at the opening and close of the programme. Besides these there were recitations by little Beulah VanWinkle, piano solos by A. G. Carpenter, vocal solos by Mrs. Manley, a vocal duet by Rev. and Mrs. McKane, and an original poem written for the occasion by Noah Pike and entitled, "The Church." This was read by Arthur E. Smith, who also had charge of the entertainment.

The supper was served down stairs. Cake, coffee, crackers and oysters were donated by the members of the church and then sold. Twenty-five cents bought a stew and 10 cents a cup of coffee and a piece of cake. The ladies of the church had charge of this part of the affair and quite a snug sum was realized.

A BIRTHDAY DANCE.

Charming Affair in Honor of Miss Cruikshank at Scotch Plains.

A charming dance was given at "Seomore," the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank on Belvidere avenue, last Friday, in honor of their daughter, Miss Lelia Moore Cruikshank, and a number of her friends from the Castle School, Tarrytown. It was the occasion of Miss Cruikshank's birthday.

Mrs. and Miss Cruikshank were assisted in receiving by Miss Alexander, of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss Price, of Texas. There were sixty guests present, including the schoolmates of Miss Cruikshank from the Castle and friends from Plainfield and New York. The parlors were handsomely decorated with American Beauty roses and smilax. An elaborate supper was served late in the evening under the direction of Gustave Dahn, of the Waldorf-Astoria.

FOR OR AGAINST A GREATER PLAINFIELD

Borough Voters Will Be Asked for Their Opinions.

VOTE AT NEXT ELECTION.

MEANTIME A PERSONAL CANVASS IS TO BE MADE THERE.

Opinions Wanted on Consolidation and the Best Method by Which It Can Be Accomplished—A. E. Keasey and T. W. Morrison to Act as Canvassers—Formal Vote at March Election.

Do you favor a Greater Plainfield, and, incidentally, what arrangement would suit you best? That is, in brief, the question that every voter in the borough of North Plainfield will be asked during the next month. The question of the consolidation of the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield is to be brought prominently to the front and a systematic campaign in its favor will be conducted. After no end of discussion the joint consolidation committee, appointed at the request of the Board of Trade, has taken definite action.

At the last meeting of the joint consolidation committee it was decided that the question of consolidation could be placed before the voters of North Plainfield. A sub committee was appointed to take the matter in charge and arrange definite plans for this expression of the opinions of the borough voters. The committee was composed of Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Former Mayor W. L. Saunders, School Trustee S. St. John McCutchen and Editor Frank W. Runyon.

Last evening the members of the sub committee held a meeting at the home of Former Mayor Gilbert on Central avenue, and discussed the best methods to be used to bring the question of consolidation before the people of the borough. Their instructions had been to put the question to vote at the coming borough election in March.

Mr. Saunders had been a number of the leaders in both political parties regarding the matter. The committee will request each political party at the primary proceeding the borough election to place on its ticket the question of consolidation, for or against. Mr. Saunders had been told that there would be no objection by either political party to placing such a proposition on the ballots of the election.

This vote will merely tell whether there are a majority of the borough voters in favor of or opposed to it, without saying the method of consolidation they prefer. The committee was anxious to secure an expression regarding the method that those favoring consolidation would prefer the ends should be attained.

Balloting in the newspapers was suggested but the fact that there are certain citizens who would pay no attention to such a method decided the committee against it. It was suggested that return postal cards might be sent to every citizen, asking for an opinion but it was feared that many would not respond.

The plan finally decided upon as the most practical was a personal canvass of every voter in the borough. It was determined to secure the services of two well known citizens of North Plainfield and have them personally interview every voter in the borough regarding their opinion in the matter and, if in favor of consolidation, which method they would prefer. There are about 1,600 voters in North Plainfield, so it will take a month to complete the canvass.

The two canvassers selected were Andrew B. Keasey and Thomas W. Morrison, both men of extensive acquaintance in the borough, well and favorably known there, and with experience in newspaper work which will aid them in their endeavors to obtain the varied opinions of the citizens of the borough. They will begin the canvass this week.

It is intended that the canvass shall be strictly impartial. The canvassers will not attempt to influence the opinion of those they interview but will simply learn just how every citizen stands in the matter. It is the intention of the committee to give the question as much publicity as possible for they believe that when the citizens of the borough thoroughly understand the situation there will be no doubt in their minds as to the advisability of consolidation. Both newspapers have agreed to open their columns to communications arguing the pros and cons of the question. A thorough discussion and ventilation of the subject is what the committee wishes.

There are only three ways of consolidating that look at all practical. Greater Plainfield can either become a part of Union or Somerset county or form a new county of its own. These three methods will be suggested to the voters and their preference asked.

It is not intended that the personal canvass and the formal vote at election time shall conflict. Both methods of ascertaining public opinion on the question will be tried. The personal canvass is more, however, to ascertain which method of annexation would be favored by the friends of consolidation. The vote will be simply for or against consolidation.

A SKATING PARTY.

There Wasn't Much Skating But it Was a Successful Affair Nevertheless.

The Misses Holly gave a skating party to a number of their friends last Thursday. The guests gathered at the Holly residence near Avon Park and spent part of the evening playing old-fashioned games, including tag, blindman's buff, on the lawn. It had been intended to spend most of the evening on Spring Lake, which is close by, but the warm weather of the day had made the ice too soft and so the skating was done.

The young people, numbering fifty altogether, had a very pleasant evening despite the fact that the skating didn't materialize and ended it by gathering in the house where refreshments were served and an impromptu dance enjoyed.

OUTCOME OF FAMILY FEUD.

High Board Fence Built on Vine Street Saturday Morning.

A board fence, eighteen feet high, now extends the entire length of the boundary line between the two houses, Nos. 23 and 25 on Vine street. The fence is the final result of a neighborhood quarrel that sprang up last August between the wives of C. W. Krause, of 23 Vine street, and William C Campbell, of 25 Vine street.

Krause declared his intention of building a high board fence to entirely separate the families. The posts were placed in position. Then the Camp bells moved to Connecticut.

Mrs. Louisa Bleck, of 27 Vine street, is the owner of the house occupied by Campbell. She was very indignant at Krause for driving away her tenant as she claimed. Mrs. Bleck has just succeeded in getting another tenant to take the house.

NINTH YEAR OF THE UNITARIAN SOCIETY.

Celebrated in an Auspicious Manner Thursday Night.

MANY CLERGYMEN HEARD.

REV. D. W. MOOREHOUSE DESCRIBES SOCIETY'S EARLY LIFE.

A Few of the Members First Organized in the Public Library in 1889—A Steady and Thrifty Growth Followed—What the Unitarian Church is Doing in Religious Thought.

The First Unitarian Society of Plainfield celebrated its ninth anniversary in All Souls' church on Park avenue, last Thursday, and was in every respect a success from a denominational standpoint. There were about seventy persons present, including the members of the Plainfield society and guests from other society out of town. The affair was held in the Sunday-school room, where a banquet was served at 7 o'clock. The guests were seated on either side of the tables that were arranged to form a letter "U."

After the banquet Samuel Huntington, a member of the Board of Trustees, acted as toast-master in the absence of the President Henry B. Wells, who, together with Mrs. Wells, are now in Texas for the benefit of Mr. Wells' health. Mr. Huntington introduced the speakers of the evening, the first of whom was Rev. D. W. Moorehouse, of New York, secretary of the Conference, and the one who formed the Plainfield society. Mr. Moorehouse told briefly how a few of the members met at the Public Library in 1889 to organize. From there the members went to the Seventh-Day Baptist church, where a few meetings were held. After that the meetings were held for a time in a music store on East Front street, and then through the generosity of the late Mayor Job Male a house on Second place was given temporarily to hold meetings. Rev. W. E. Tilden was the first pastor called and he remained until the spring of 1892. Then Rev. Hobart Clark was called and remained six years, when he retired owing to ill health. The last and present pastor, Rev. Alfred Wickes Hickson, was then called. Mr. Moorehouse spoke of some of the dark days, but congratulated the members on their great success in securing such a beautiful house of worship and in their growing membership. He claimed that science had changed everything, and that higher criticism had established new literatures, and had reconstructed the history of the Bible.

The next speaker on the programme was Rev. Thomas R. Sliser, pastor of All Souls' church, Orange, who explained that the Unitarian church is doing a work among the unchurched, and that a higher feeling and deeper thought was the rule of the members.

The next speaker was Rev. Hobart Clark, of West New Brighton, who was a former pastor of the church. He congratulated the church on its growth and recalled many incidents in connection with his pastorate here that were enjoyed. He mentioned the names of several persons, some now dead, who had given a great deal to the church.

Following this address remarks were made by Rev. D. M. Wilson, of Brooklyn, who was a classmate of Revs. Clark and Nickerson, Rev. Walter B. Hunt, of Orange, followed with a few remarks in which he congratulated the Plainfield society. He was followed by Rev. Arthur H. Grant, of Montclair, who also congratulated the members of the home church.

Mrs. David P. Hall was called on and she made a few remarks, in which she stated that the women rejoiced with the men in celebrating the anniversary of the church. The last speaker was the pastor of the home church, Rev. A. C. Nickerson. He spoke briefly about the growth of the Plainfield society, and said he felt sure that the next decade would see it in an advanced stage of prosperity. With these remarks the event came to an end, and after a brief social time the happy gathering dispersed.

Improvements in Hardware Store.

A decided improvement in store fixtures is the changing of the sample boxes or drawers in Lake's hardware store. There are about 400 of them on the south side of the store and changing the front of each drawer from a dull-green to a bright-polished oak, with a sample of the contents on the face of each, is a very decided improvement to the looks of the store.

Twelfth Wedding Anniversary.

A few friends were entertained last Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah VanWinkle, Jr., at their home in West Fourth street, in honor of their twelfth wedding anniversary.

A Cake Walk.

Henry Ackerman, M. Brokaw and William Illsley gave a dance and cake walk Thursday in Washington Hall. The cake was won by Miss Annie Hart and partner.

PARKS TAKE THREE FROM THE ROSELLE'S.

Race In Central Journal Bowling League Grows Close.

ROSELLE STILL IN LEAD.

BUT THE PARK CLUB MADE A BIG JUMP MONDAY NIGHT.

Games Were Rolled on the Park Club Alleys Before a Large Crowd—Park-Rolled Over 800 in Every Game—The Roselle's Powerful Hoodoo—Her Scores Were Remarkably Poor—The Scores

Alas for the far-famed prowess of the Roselle Casino bowlers. It wasn't of any account when they ran up against the delightful little hoodoo that the Park Clubites had ready for them last Monday. The team from Roselle, leaders in the Central Journal League, came to the Park Club alleys last Monday, rolled three games and lost them all by margins rauging from 48 to 180 pins. It was a veritable Waterloo for the Roselle boys.

Now the addition of three games to the "won" column of the Parks and three to the "lost" column of Roselle doesn't make any change in the order of the clubs in the League but it does wipe out Roselle's big lead and leaves the situation so that another series of three games may change the order.

It was conceded that with three victories from Roselle, the Park's chances for an intimate first in the League were very hazy. So it was that the games of last Monday were watched with particul interest, not in Plainfield and Roselle alone but by the other towns represented in the League.

The Roselle team came up with the intention of carrying all before them. They had their regular team that has been doing such great work and were prepared to make the best showing possible. Now it is confidently told about the club that Former Mayor B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., president of the club, was so anxious that the Parks should win that he returned to Plainfield early last night and hunted out the old hoodoo that he had used so successfully against the Bachelors of the club. This he turned loose on the the visitors.

Whether it was the hoodoo or not it cannot be stated with accuracy. It was evident from the start that something ailed the Roselles. There were splits innumerable, and when they did have a chance to hit the pins they failed many times. It was only by the narrowest margin that they managed to get 7.0 in the first game. The Parks, meantime, went on alone and amused each other by upsetting the pins in great form. The Parks were only 107 pins ahead at the end.

Next game was even worse. Shangle actually failed to score an even 100. The Parks were sailing on ahead with strikes and spares galore. The finish caused the visitors to blush with shame.

The last game saw some excitement. The visitors picked up and actually started out to overhaul the Parks. The latter were only eleven pins ahead at one time, but they braced up and finished in fine form. "Doc" Thiers winding up with three strikes.

At the close of the game, the admirers of George Worth presented him with a handsome bouquet of flowers. He was immediately hoisted up on a chair and from his lofty position bowed and smiled his thanks.

The scores were as follows:

To Try Contract Case.

A venire has been issued by Justice Mosher for a jury to try the contract case of Fred Anderson against Charles Burnette Friday morning. Anderson abingled the other's house. Burnette claims that the work was not done as it should have been done and refuses to pay for it. The jury will settle the amount that ought to be paid.

Prof. Maxson Talked.

Prof. Maxson, of the High School, delivered an address before the Monday Afternoon Club Monday on the "Public Schools." It was a scholarly talk and was interesting and instructive.

A GREAT DANDY.

IN A YEAR HE DISCARDS MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED PAIRS OF BOOTS.

Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis Is Immensely Rich—Constantly Employs Twenty Tailors—Dresses on an Average Six Times a Day.

The greatest dandy now living is Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis. He is a mediatized prince—that is, one who is entitled to sovereign rank in the courts of Germany and Austria although he has lost the power which originally belonged to that rank. He is fabulously rich, so that he can indulge his eccentricity of never wearing the same suit of clothes twice without having to levy taxes on his twelve subjects.

The Almanach de Gotha accredits him with the title of "Serene Highness," but it is a delusion and a mockery. What serenity can a man enjoy who never relinquishes command of a standing army of valets, tailors, bootmakers and haberdashers, who plot, plan and strategize to keep their master the best-dressed man of modern times. He has able aides-de-camp and spies stationed in every capital of Europe, who lie in wait and pounce on new designs in scarfs and waistcoats, and then see that every scrap left from these things is destroyed, so that the Prince may never have the mortification of meeting a duplicate waistcoat or cravat.

Twenty tailors are kept working day and night to keep the Prince's wardrobe up to the proper standard. Granting that it takes nine tailors to make a man, the Prince employs the services of a sufficient number of full to make two and two-ninths men.

His cast-off boots number over two hundred pairs a year. He hails with delight any new or revived sport that will enable him to add another costume to his wardrobe, though his dressing and undressing preclude his ever engaging in it. In this way he has bicycle suits that have never biked, golfing suits that have never golfed; hunting suits that have never hunted; fishing suits that have never fished. He changes his clothes on an average six times a day. His family is one of Europe's oldest.—New York World.

A LARGE MAGNET.

Is Used in Searching for Metal which May Have Gotten Into the Eye.

Almost everybody knows that the best way of extracting metal particles from the eye is by the use of a hand magnet. The idea, however, of employing for this purpose a magnet of sufficient power to lift 10 pounds seems at first somewhat hard to comprehend, but such an eye doctor has been found the best adapted to the requirements of a New York hospital. The eye is brought close to the magnet, which is 24 inches long, and if the particle of metal is there it, unfeeling to the surface of the eye-ball, instead of penetrating the tissue, it leaps in a twinkling from the eye-ball to the magnetic surface. It is, however, in cases in which the metal is imbedded in the eye that the great usefulness of the powerful magnet is seen. In such cases the gouge or bistoury has to be used, and formerly the surgeon was unable to locate the speck, and often had to cause the patient great pain, even when the eye had been cocainized, before the extraction could be made. Now the whereabouts of the foreign substance is told in a second. The attraction of the magnet causes the surface of the eye-ball beneath which the piece of metal is lodged to bulge out, showing the exact position of the particle, and the surgeon inserts his instrument without the slightest fear of having made a mistake.—St. James Globe-Democrat.

Whales are Hard to Find.

The motive which has begun a new period of Antarctic explorations is very evident and definite, indeed. The supply of right whales has practically given out in the north, owing to the over-demand caused by the high price of whalebone. The oil, to be sure, is not worth nearly so much as in the palmy days of New Bedford and her sturdy whalers, by reason of the cheap production of its rival, petroleum. But the bone is sold at $5 per pound, and a right whale may have in his capacious jaws a whole ton of the precious commodity. With each animal furnishing a small fortune for a seafaring man, it is not surprising, in these days of harpoon guns and steamships, that the Arctic Ocean has been plundered of its whale wealth. So whalers are turning their attention to the waste of unexplored waters.—Scribner's.

A Beautiful Piece of Silk.

The Empress of Germany has had the material for a gown made which, when completed, was so beautiful that she would not allow it to be desecrated by the scissors of a dressmaker. The material is of silvery white silk, upon which is a raised pattern of flowers, foliage and bright-plumaged birds. The whole stands out in bold relief, and is such a masterpiece of work that the Empress immediately gave orders to have it made into curtains. The work was done by one skilled weaver, who worked months on it. He received twenty dollars a yard for the work, in addition to his regular pay, and the price to the silk when it was completed was $120 a yard.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

DUAL CONTEST IN ATHLETICS ARRANGED

Plainfield and New Brunswick Y. M. C. A's. Schedule.

TO BE HELD IN THIT CITY.

THERE WILL BE FIVE EVENTS TO BE CONTESTED.

Each Association Will be Represented by a Team of Three Men—Probable Candidates Named—Gymnastic Contest to Follow at New Brunswick—Banner With Names of Winning Team to go to Victors.

A dual indoor athletic contest between the members of the Plainfield and New Brunswick Y. M. C. A.'s is one of the scheduled happenings for the month of February at the local Y M C A gymnasium. While such a contest has been under consideration for some time, definite arrangements were completed Monday by the physical directors of the two associations at an informal meeting held at the office of C. E A Heywood, the local physical director.

The date of the contest is still uncertain but it will be held sometime during the middle of February at Plainfield. It is to be followed later in March by a dual gymnastic contest at New Brunswick.

There will be five events, two to be selected by each association and the fifth to be agreed upon. Plainfield has selected the running high jump and the standing broad jump, and New Brunswick putting the shot and the hop, step and jump. The other event will probably be the running high kick. Each association will be represented by a team of three men all of whom will enter each event. Points will be scored according to the schedule given in the Association Athletic League Handbook.

Regarding the two dual contests, it was agreed that the home association will take all the gate receipts and pay the visiting team's way, while the two associations will share the cost of the banner which will be awarded the winning team. The names of the members of the victorious team will be placed on the banner

Plainfield's team of three will be chosen from among the following: George Proctor Smith William Townsend, Eric Mortaller, Walter L. Long, Raymond M. Carroll, Berry Egan and F. O. Bristol. As soon as the date of the first contest is settled, the candidates will begin practicing the events selected and will get in good condition for the contest. The New Brunswick association has the advantage of being able to draw from some of the best athletes in Rutgers College. Two of their three men will probably be from the college.

The dual gymnastic contest will be held at the New Brunswick gymnasium. The details have not yet been fixed and will largely depend on the success of the first contest.

AGAINST THE MORMON.

Local Endeavorers Do Not Want Roberts Seated in Congress

An executive meeting of the Plainfield local union of Christian Endeavor was held Monday at the home of the president, Miss F. G Hawkins, of La Grange avenue. Reports were received from the presidents of the various local societies, and a letter has been forwarded from the president of the local union to Congressman Fowler, protesting against the seating of Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah.

The president was given power to appoint a committee to arrange for the annual meeting of the union in March. Before that meeting is held, however, a public conference will be held which will be of interest to Plainfield, Endeavorers. The executive meeting closed with a social hour and refreshments.

Their Fifth Anniversary.

Lucetta Council, No. 28, D. of L., is preparing for the celebration of their fifth anniversary, April 12th. A committee consisting of B W. Hand, N. H. Guttman and W. W. Stratton has been appointed and have the matter in charge.

The exercises will consist of a short programme, after which there will be dancing. National and State officers are expected to be there. Two prizes are offered, a gold watch and chain, and a camera, which will be contested for.

To Try Right of Property.

Three months ago Wallace Coriell swore out an attachment against Charles Lines for a bill he owed him for $40. When the constable went to sell the goods, Mrs. Caroline Chapot claimed the goods, so Thursday afternoon a jury will be called by Justice Mosher to try the right of property. The goods consist of a wagon, a few lamps etc.

His Honor Took a Tumble.

Early Tuesday morning while Mayor Rockfellow was passing in front of the Coward building on Park avenue his feet slipped on a pair of iron coors, causing His Honor to take a tumble. The fall did not result in any injuries.

ELABORATE PLANS FOR THE HOSPITAL

Modern Structures Proposed for Community Sick Rooms.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS ACT.

THEY WILL DEFINITELY DECIDE ABOUT IT NEXT MONTH.

Plans for a Magnificent Institution Drawn by Architect Barlow and Presented to the Governors Last Night—Descriptions of the Proposed Changes—First Cost $35,000.

The terrible disaster on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at West Dunellen and the subsequent transportation of its many victims to the Muhlenberg Hospital has brought prominently before the people of Plainfield the great need of an increase in the facilities at the hospital. Thanks to excellent management, the hospital authorities have been able to answer all demands made on them at this crisis. The fact still remains and is now plainly in evidence that the work of the hospital has outgrown its present accommodations and an addition is urgently needed.

The interested members of the Board of Governors of the hospital long ago realized the situation and soon that the time would soon come when it would be necessary to enlarge the present accommodations. A year ago a committee, of which Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was made chairman, was appointed to consider the subject and ascertain just what alterations and additions would be necessary to bring the hospital to the required position. Plans were submitted and the matter duly considered when it was deemed expedient to postpone the subject owing to the outbreak of the war with Spain With the close of the war, the opening of a season of prosperity, and a sensational disaster right at the very doors of those interested, the committee thought this a favorable opportunity to bring the matter before the Board of Governors for action.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board was held at the Public Library last Monday when the committee in port was presented by its chairman, Former Mayor Fish.

Before taking any definite action on the subject it was decided by the Board to make an appeal to the community for the means to put up the new buildings. The committee undertook to report at the next monthly meeting regarding the prospect of raising the money. Definite action will then be taken as to the beginning of the work.

The plans, which were submitted by the committee, were quite elaborate and highly approved by expert judgment. They involve an ultimate expenditure of a considerable amount, looking toward the continual growth of the city and the necessity of adequate hospital accommodations. It is the purpose of the B ard that the work should be undertaken in a way to utilize the present plant and not in torfere with the working of the present hospital.

The most essential part of the new plant will be built first, and after a scheme which admits of indefinite growth as may be required. The building will go forward in a way to meet the necessities of the situation.

The final and completed scheme provides a central administration building, flanked on either side by and connected with a service building and its related wards, one wing being for men and the opposite one for women, connected throughout by corridors into one system. The wings for men and women are alike in arrangement, each consisting of a service building and its connected twin ward building.

The first idea in planning the wards is to place them in the freest play of sun and air possible on the site. The wards are to be amply large, sunny, airy rooms, containing no plumbing, heating or other practical fixture and with high curved ceilings. They are to be built on angles, open, except in winter, over concreted surface beneath, and to be separated by a quiet lobby from all traffic and the noi s*sary noises of the service building ad*joining, just across the main corridor.

In the basement of the service building, there is to be a kitchen and pantry and the heating, disinfecting and clothes storage rooms. On the first floor, or ward level, there is to be an examination room to be used also for dressing and for minor operations. Opposite will be the baths and toilets and beyond the kitchen and drug rooms, a special for children's ward of three beds and a dining room for convalescents, connected with a special diet kitchen. The second floor will provide a maternity ward of three beds, five rooms for pay patients and necessary toilets.

The rooms throughout are to be warmed and ventilated by the most *perfect means known, the tempera*tures to be under automatic thermostatic control. The walls are to be lined to the height of six feet with opal glazed tiles, and all walls, floors and surfaces throughout are to be perfectly smooth, polished and impermeable, so as to admit of thorough clean ing. Exteriorly the buildings are to be of common hard brick with stone base and trimming.

According to the present ideas of the Board, it is first intended to erect one of the service buildings with the accompanying wards, the service building for administrative purposes, the new ward as the women's ward and the present hospital buildings as the men's ward.

The administration building is to contain the offices of the matron and the doctors, the visitors' room, the dining room and the operating room, while the second floor will be devoted to pay patients.

If the enlargement of the hospital facilities is begun according to the proposed plans, it will require from $18,000 to $25 000 to complete the first stage of the improvements. It is rather difficult to name the amount to be involved in the entire project but it will be in the neighborhood of say $50,000.

Contracting Firm Dissolved

Wm. J. Peason and Henry E Gayle, who have been associated in business as carpenters and builders for some time, have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. All debts and demands are assumed by Mr Gayle, who will continue in the business

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of the use, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are bought I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on my last occasion, but I did not, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them for $10 if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES, as packed in a paper carton (which must be sent for now at usual price, FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. Any druggist will sell the cartons containing the Tabules, or they may be sent by mail if twenty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York.—or a single carton (TEN for five cents) will be sent for examination on receipt of a penny. Nevertheless, keep against foul or sour stomach, biliousness, headache, sleeplessness, and all disorders arising from indigestion.

MID-WINTER WEDDING A FASHIONABLE EVENT

Celebration of the Blake-Abbott Nuptials Tuesday Night.

WAS A CHURCH CEREMONY.

THE MARRIAGE NOTED FOR ITS SIMPLICITY AND BEAUTY.

Ceremony Solemnized by Dr. Richards at 7:30 o'Clock in the Crescent Avenue Church—Bridal Party Beautifully Attired—After the Ceremony a Reception Held—Groom a New York Broker.

For simplicity and natural beauty the wedding of Miss Florence Alice Abbott, daughter of School Commissioner and Mrs. Charles F. Abbott, of 966 Central avenue, and James Robert Blake, also of this city, which was witnessed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last evening, was perhaps the most striking of the season. The society folks of this and many other cities were present in large numbers to grace the event.

The wedding was solemnized at 7:30 o'clock. Previous to the appointed hour and while the guests were being seated, Frank J. Smith, organist of the church, rendered a musical programme of selections from Gabriel-Marie, Batiste, Wioder, German, Wely and Jensen. When it was announced that the bridal party had arrived, the sweet and familiar notes of the Loehengrin wedding march were heard.

First of all appeared the ushers, all of whom, with the exception of C. Westley Abbott, brother of the bride, were classmates at Princeton University of the groom in the class of '94. They were J. McThompson, of Albany; Walter Gibson, Walter Pearson, of Orange; McCready Sykes, William Meredith, of New York, and C. Westley Abbott, of Plainfield.

Following the ushers were the bridesmaids, Miss May Waring, Miss Katherine Reinhart, Miss Caroline Vail, Miss Gertrude Andrews, of Plainfield; Miss Elizabeth Breslin, of New York; Miss Edith Blake, of Newark. They all were gowned in green net over green taffeta silk and carried pearl roses. They wore silver butterflies with white aigrettes as a coiffure.

The next member of the party was the matron of honor, Mrs. M. E. Tremaine, of Buffalo, who was gowned in white net over white taffeta silk. She also wore a silver butterfly with white aigrette as a coiffure and carried pink roses.

After the matron of honor came the bride escorted by her father. Her gown was a beautiful white satin, trimmed with point lace. She wore a veil of tulle caught up with orange blossoms. She is a brunette of striking beauty.

When the party reached the altar, which was luxuriantly decorated with palms, greens and smilax, arranged in a huge bank, they were met by the groom and best man, Judson S. Todd, of New York, who entered the church from a side door at the left of the altar. The entire party formed in a semi-circle facing the officiating clergyman, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, who performed the ceremony according to the service of the Presbyterian church. During the ceremony favorite selections were rendered by Mr. Smith on the organ.

After the couple were united in matrimony, they reversed, faced the throng of guests and left the edifice by the aisle on the left of the church, followed by the members of the party. As they preceded down the aisle that favorite wedding march from Mendelssohn was executed with rare skill. The guests received from the bride and groom smiles of recognition, and in return two of Plainfield's prominent young society folks were silently wished a happy and prosperous journey through life.

At 8 o'clock a wedding reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Blake at the home of the bride's parents, on Central avenue, where a very large and fashionable crowd gathered to extend their best wishes to the bride and groom.

The beautiful home was resplendent in the decorator's art. Smilax, grecas and roses were used chiefly and the many colored lights throughout the various rooms gave additional brilliancy.

During the evening a delightful supper was served by a well-known caterer. While the reception was in progress music was rendered by an orchestra from the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra, of New York.

After congratulations were offered Mr. and Mrs. Blake left their relatives and friends to enjoy a honeymoon of one month. They have not as yet de-

THE FIRE LADDIES FAIR.

CROWD OF WARREN ENGINE COMPANY'S FRIENDS ON HAND.

Rivalry in the Voting Guests and a Good Business at the Booths—Entertainers in Abundance Were Also There.

Despite the severe storm Tuesday p.m. Essengerbund Hall, where the fair of Warren Engine Company is being held, was packed with friends of the company, and everyone had a good time. The stands and booths did a good business, while there was great rivalry in the voting contests for the most popular secret society and for the most popular chief in this section.

During the forepart of the evening a fine programme was presented. There were several songs by the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein, and a trio, violin, cornet and piano, by Miss Emma Nelson, Mrs. J. D. Anderson and Miss Irene Day. A feature was the clackwire performance given by Prof. Burke, and Andrew Carpenter entertained all with selections on the violin imitating a thunder storm. There was also a piano duet by Miss Emma Nelson and Miss Irene Day, and a song by Mrs. J. H. Manley. A pleasing number was another instrumental trio by Miss Becker, Miss Emma Nelson and Mrs. Anderson.

All of the numbers were given in a perfect manner and the artists were heartily applauded. Another number on the programme was popular songs by Harry Roberts. The selections caught the audience in good style, as did also the appearance of "Jack" Carney, who gave his latest, "The German Trolley." After the rendition of the programme, music for dancing was furnished by N. H. Guttman's orchestra, which also played during Prof. Burke's performance.

During the evening there was a fancy pakewalk exhibition by Miss Mamie DeNise and Harry Milligan. Last evening there was a prize cakewalk, and the evening firemen from nearby places will attend, and Friday evening the Mayor and Council of both city and borough will attend. Other attractions will also be offered.

LOCOMOTIVE DERAILED ON THE TURN-TABLE.

DELAYED SOMERVILLE LOCAL TRAINS.

Slippery Rails Caused the Accident—Relief Engines Sent From Dunellen and Roselle.

Somerville, Feb. 8—Travel was interfered with on the Central Railroad this morning by an accident on the turn-table in front of the engine house at this place. A drill engine was backing on the turn-table, and the slippery rails made the wheels slip more than usual. The brakes refused to work properly and the next thing the engineer knew the locomotive had left the table and was lying so as to prevent the table being turned.

The local trains running from this place were therefore delayed, as no engines could get out of the round-house while the drill engine was in the way. Engines were sent to Somerville from Dunellen, Roselle and Jersey City to bring out the trains, and meanwhile the wrecker was sent to get the drill engine out of the ditch.

WHAT THE Y. M. C. A. GYMNASTS WILL DO.

Details of Gymnastic Contest for Novices.

MANY ENTRIES EXPECTED.

WILL BE HELD IN THE GYMNASIUM SATURDAY NIGHT.

There Will be Three Moves or Trials on Four Selected Pieces of Apparatus, the High and the Low Bars, Parallel Bars and German Horse—How the Points Will be Scored, Ten for Each Move—The Judges

Considerable interest is being manifested among the members of the Y. M. C. A. over the gymnastic contest for novices which will be held in the gymnasium Saturday evening. From present prospects there will be nearly a score of competitors for honors in the contest. The details of the events are not well understood except by a few.

The contest will consist of twelve moves or trials on the four principal pieces of apparatus in the gymnasium, the high and the low bar, the parallel bars and the German horse. As the contest is one for novices, Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood has arranged it so as to be as simple and yet as thorough as possible. The four well-known pieces of apparatus have been chosen. Then Mr. Heywood has selected five moves on each and a list of them has been posted in the gymnasium so that all the members can familiarize themselves with them. From these five moves for each piece of apparatus, three will be chosen by lot the night of the contest. In all there will be twelve moves.

Unless the number of contestants is so large that it will be necessary to have their trials in two sections, all the competitors will, in succession, try the same move. They will alternate in leading so that, if possible, each contestant will lead on a different move.

According to the method of scoring to be used, the maximum score to be made on each move is 10, or a possible total of 120 for all twelve moves. In past contests, however, 35 points has been considered a good score for a novice. The 10 points for each move are divided as follows: 2 for approach, 2 for execution of exercise, 2 for retreat and 4 for general form. Robert A. Meeker and C. E. A. Heywood will be the judges.

The contest will be held in the gymnasium Saturday night beginning at 8 o'clock. The visitors' gallery will be open for the members and friends who are interested in the gymnastic work of the association.

Endeavor Anniversary.

Miss Brown's Brother is Better.

Miss Mary Brown, of East Fourth street, has received a letter from her brother, J. D. Brown, of Nebraska, that he is improved in health. Mr. Brown is now under treatment at College View Hospital, Lincoln, Neb., and there appears to be strong hopes that he will recover. If he does he will come to Plainfield to visit his relatives in this city and vicinity.

—St. Valentine's Day falls this year on Tuesday, February 14th, and already several social events are being arranged for the evening of that day.

ELECTION OFFICERS' PAY

ASSEMBLYMAN MURRAY'S BILL GOES TO THE GOVERNOR.

The Pay Will be the Same in Small as Large Cities—Monroe Bill Wanted by Thompson Passed by the Senate.

Trenton, Feb. 8—The first bill introduced in the House by Assembly man Murray, of Union county, was passed by the Senate yesterday afternoon, and awaits the Governor's signature. It provides that in cities whose population is under 40,000, election officers shall receive $5 a day for the time spent in registering the names of voters, and $10 for election day. This is the same pay as for officers in larger cities.

The committee on banking and insurance gave a hearing yesterday afternoon on the Bell and Guenther bills, which provide for State supervision of building and loan associations. Secretary Forman, of the State League of Building and Loan Associations, and representatives of several of the smaller associations, appeared. The principal objection raised to the bills was against the provision that made the investigation compulsory and levied the expense on the association investigated. The associations want the State to pay the cost.

Secretary Forman said that a meeting of representatives of the building and loan associations would be held in Trenton, Feb. 17th, for the purpose of drafting a bill that would be satisfactory to them, and requested that action on the Bell and Guenther measures be postponed until after that date. Chairman Murray, of the committee, said that the request would be granted.

At the afternoon session of the Senate bill No. 81, which provides that the issuing of a license to sell intoxicating liquors to corporations and companies operating parks and picnic grounds shall permit them to run more than one bar, provided that $100 be paid for each bar a year, came up on final passage. Senator Martin, the introducer of the measure, referred to the larger number of remonstrances against the bill. He said that the remonstrances had been signed to a great extent while the signers were laboring under a misapprehension of the provisions of the bill.

The bill was finally passed by a vote of 11 to 9 Those voting in the negative were Senators Cross, Evans, Hutchinson, W. J. Johnson, Keasbey, Pierson, Smith, Stanger and Stokes. Senator Miller, of Salem county, did not vote.

Next Monday being Lincoln's birthday and a holiday, the Senate adjourned till next Tuesday morning.

WHERE IS ROSE SEGAL?

She Flitted Out of the Chancellor's Court, but Not to Her Parents.

Elizabeth, Feb. 8—If Miss Rose Segal can be located, it is said on good authority that she will be arrested and brought before Chancellor McGill to show cause why she should not be sentenced for contempt of court in disobeying the Chancellor's ruling, pending the trial of the habeas corpus proceedings.

At the first hearing Chancellor McGill gave a verbal order that Miss Segal should be remanded to the custody of her father, with reasonable liberty, pending a final hearing on the question of her age. This hearing is set down for the 14th of this month. The Court had no more than finished his ruling when Rose skipped out of the courtroom, and her father has never seen her since, nor does he know her whereabouts.

DUNELLEN WILL CLAIM BIG SUM FOR DAMAGES.

Borough Council Authorizes an Action to be Instituted.

ALL ABOUT SEWAGE BEDS.

DUNELLEN PEOPLE BACK UP ACTION OF THEIR OFFICIALS.

Resolution Introduced by Councilman Gaskill Authorizing the Commencement of the Suit—The Amount to be Demanded as Damages is Not Yet Decided—Money to Pay the Legal Expenses.

Dunellen, Feb. 8.—The threats of Dunellen residents that they would make trouble for the city of Plainfield if the latter continued to keep and use their present system of sewage beds, has now taken a definite form, and a suit for heavy damages against Plainfield as well as an attempt to secure an injunction against the further use of the beds will be started at once.

The suit this time is not to be begun by any individual or class of individuals, but by the borough as a whole. At the meeting of the Common Council Monday evening a resolution was offered and adopted authorizing the borough to start proceedings against the city of Plainfield. Just what the damages to be demanded will be is not yet determinated, but it will be a large sum. Some say $100,000, and others place it higher.

The resolution was introduced at the meeting by Councilman Harry Gaskill. When the resolution was read it was seconded simultaneously by every Councilman present, and carried with a rush. Everybody seemed to be in favor of it, and so expressed themselves. A committee composed of the Mayor, Councilmen Gaskill, Gaston and Wykkoop was appointed to secure counsel and start the suit at once. A meeting will be held February 21st, at which the committee will report.

It is said that the borough treasury contains $1,900 with which the suit can be commenced, and what further sum is needed, they say, can easily be raised either by individual subscriptions or by taxation. It is said that there are not ten people in the borough who oppose this action of the Council, and that $5,000 can be raised for the purpose as well as $500. H. B. Willis, of New Brunswick, is the borough counsel.

FORMER FRIENDS GO TO LAW.

Dunellen Men Mixed up in a Trio of Legal Disputes.

Dunellen, Feb. 8.—Two men who used to be friends, Colonel William B. Hayes, a New York lawyer living out here, and D. D. Williams, the liveryman, are now at daggers points and are mixed up in three or four suits at law over some business transactions between them.

The last suit was begun yesterday in Justice Warden's court, and is a case on contract brought for $63.08. Williams claims that it is for hack hire and for the use of a road wagon which the Colonel has had since last December.

Suits and cross-suits have been commenced until both parties have become involved in a mass of legal difficulties that will require several weeks to straighten out.

A Lunch Box Sociable.

A very successful entertainment and lunch-box sociable was held at the Christian church Tuesday evening and despite the storm there was an excellent attendance of members and friends of the church. A musical programme was rendered by Arthur Smith and Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the church. Miss Jennie Smith presided at the organ in an efficient manner. A dialogue entitled "The Way to Keep a Secret," was given by several people. Mrs. Andrew Cox took the leading part and every part was well taken. After the programme the lunch-boxes were sold by William C. Smith, Sr., and every box brought a good round price.

—Next Monday the Plainfield Ministers' Association will meet at the home of Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, at which time Rev. Dr. Rodman will read the paper to be discussed.

WANT RIGHT OF APPEAL.

PROPERTY OWNERS APPEAL TO LEGISLATURE.

They Ask for Jury Awards of the Value of Lands to be Used in Making the Widened Boulevard in Union County.

Trenton, Feb. 8—A committee of residents of Union county called on their representatives in the Legislature, Monday night, Senator Cross and Assemblymen Squire, Murray and Houston, and submitted to them a petition asking them to introduce and procure the passage of an act giving the right of appeal from the awards made by the commissioners appointed to condemn lands to be used in widening Westfield avenue in Union county.

The petition states that under the present system they have no remedy against unjust awards made by the commissioners, and ask to have the Hudson county boulevard statutes to enacted, allowing an appeal and trial of the award to be held before a jury.

The signers of the petition ask to have the statute used for Hudson county again put on the books. This statute allows any aggrieved property owners whose land has been condemned thirty days in which to file an appeal to the Circuit Court. There a struck jury may be ordered. If they award a greater amount than the commissioners the Board of Freeholders must pay the costs; if less than the property owner pay them. However, an appeal will not prevent the continuance of the work on the road if it is begun, for it is provided that the Freeholders may enter and use it if they have paid or tendered the amount awarded by the commissioners.

Where an award may have been made before the passage of the act, it is enacted that thirty days thereafter shall be allowed in which an appeal may be taken.

THE CHURCH WOULD NOT COUNTENANCE THE SHOW

REFUSED TO ACCEPT THE PROFITS.

Where Sunday Bowling and a Comic Prize Fight on the Programme Arranged for Entertainment.

The Afro-American Vaudeville and Comic Company gave an entertainment in Washington Hall Tuesday. The profits of which were to have been for the benefit of the Calvary Baptist church. The tickets for the show were sold with that understanding, and Rev. Mr. Wallace's name was put on the programme as pastor of the church.

The entertainment was advertised as a "strictly moral entertainment," and there was no change in the plans until just previous to the time for giving the entertainment when the church people discovered that there was to be a comic prize fight and buck dancing. Then they at once renounced all interest in the entertainment, and refused to take the proceeds.

It was too late then to postpone the entertainment, so it was given as advertised. Owing to the storm there was a small audience present. The artists were all from out of town, but among the members of the executive staff are S. P. Jackson and J. Stepp, of this city.

FROM COCK FIGHT TO JAIL.

Newark Man Started on Wild Career by Bad Luck at South Plains.

Elizabeth, February 8.—A well-dressed man, who described himself as George King, of Newark, was arraigned before Police Justice Hatfield yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct. He had caused considerable excitement about the Central Railroad station by flourishing a revolver and firing it at an east-bound passenger train.

In explanation of his conduct, King said he had been to a cock fight near Plainfield and lost most of his money.

Judge Hatfield sent him to jail for days, and refused to let King off with a fine.

Still in Brooklyn.

Rev. W. B. G. Costor, the colored preacher who left town last fall carrying with him money belonging to St. Peter's congregation and other people, has continued to stay in Brooklyn, where he was heard from two weeks ago. The benevolent societies there, advised by Plainfield people who were duped by Costor, have refused to aid either him or his wife, but still they stay, persisting that the story of their wrong doings here is not true.

Mrs. Ackerman's Tea.

Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman was at home to a number of her friends yesterday afternoon. Her charming home on Crescent avenue was prettily decorated for the occasion.

CITY ILLUMINATED BY BLAZING FACTORY.

Hartfelder's Establishment Was Burned to the Ground.

AN EARLY MORNING FIRE.

FLAMES GAINED GREAT HEADWAY BEFORE DISCOVERED.

No Explanation for Origin of the Fire—W. O. Baldwin's Stable Caught—Fire Department Saved It—Hartfelder Badly Burned—Horse Burned to Death—The Loss is Nearly $4,000.

All Plainfield was illuminated at 5 o'clock yesterday a.m. by a conflagration that completely destroyed George Hartfelder's stair factory on West Third street and partially burned the stables of Wm. O. Baldwin, the hay carter, of West Fourth street. Hartfelder's hay barns was connected, while the owner was badly burned about the face, neck and hands in his efforts to save the animal. The total losses will reach nearly $4,000.

George Hartfelder lives at 736 West Third street. His stair factory occupied a two story frame building in the rear of the house. It is located right behind the new West End engine house. The factory was largely open beneath. Upstairs, there was stored 2,000 feet of pine lumber drying. There was considerable uncompleted work stored there. The machinery, consisting of saws, planers and lathes, were located on the second floor. In the rear of the factory, there was a stable where Mr. Hartfelder kept his horse.

The first the Hartfelders knew of the conflagration was when their bell was loudly rung and someone shouted "fire." Letter Carrier Patrick J. Beville lives opposite and saw the fire. He alarmed the Hartfelder household and then sent in an alarm from box 45, corner of South Second street and Muhlenberg place. The alarm was sent in at 5:10 o'clock. The flames had already been seen by the watchman at the car house of the Plainfield street railway on West Fourth street. He telephoned to fire department headquarters and part of the apparatus was on the way to the fire when the alarm came in.

Half dressed Hartfelder rushed out to rescue his horse. The interior of the factory was then a mass of flames. He flung open the door of the stable and the fierce heat drove him back, badly burning his face, neck and hands. The horse was burned to death.

The large stables of William O. Baldwin, of 73 West Fourth street, were nearly in the rear of the burning building. The smaller stable caught fire. There were six horses inside that were led to a place of safety by Baldwin and his men. The snowplow of the Street Railway Company was working on Grant avenue when the fire was discovered. The man in charge drove into Baldwin's yard and dragged away two wagons, heavily loaded with hay, before they were ignited. He hitched them behind the scraper.

The fire illuminated the whole city and was seen for miles away. There was a sharp sleet falling at the time that greatly hindered the efforts to save the adjoining property. The factory itself was doomed before the alarm was sent in. The fire apparatus made a fast run considering the heavy pulling. The attention of the firemen was immediately turned toward the Baldwin stable which was finally extinguished. The recall was sounded at 7 o'clock.

Mr. Hartfelder has been unable, as yet, to figure out his exact loss. It will amount to $3,000. The loss is only partially covered by insurance, the amount of which Mr. Hartfelder does not know. The loss to the Baldwin stable, which is owned by J. W. VanSickle, the North avenue butcher, will amount to $100, which is covered by insurance.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Hartfelder says no light or fire was left in the building during the night. It is not believed that the fire was the work of incendiaries, but that a fire caught during the day in the shavings while the men were at work, and smouldered all night to burst out early in the morning.

Talked on Junior Work.

The members of the Primary Teachers' Union met Monday afternoon as usual and there was a good attendance. Miss Lunger led the devotional exercises, and Mrs. Powlison taught the lesson. Rev. Mr. Bennet, State Superintendent of Junior Work, was present and led the discussion on the topic of "Junior Work?" which proved to be very interesting. Next Monday afternoon William D. Murray will teach the lesson.

THE REAL KAISER.

MOST TALKED OF MAN ON EARTH ROYAL TAILOR'S DUTIES.

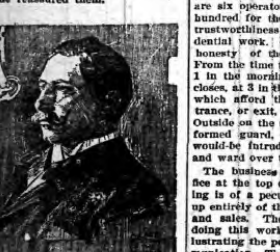
William II., His Vanities, His Foibles, His Clothes, His Ways, His Habits and His Home Life, as Described by a Frenchman.

The fierce light that beats upon a throne burns to-day with fiercer lustre than ever. The occupants of those thrones no longer shun its glare—indeed, they are usually as anxious to court it as if they were star actors yearning to get under the calcium light on the mimic stage.

Emperor William is not a man of scholarly attainments. He was rather a dull pupil at school. His younger brother far outshone him. When, at eighteen years of age, he left the College of Cassel to proceed to the University of Bonn, William was only tenth in a class of seventeen. But this was through no lack of will to excel. He was a hard worker and gained one of the three medals reserved for the three most studious pupils.

Curiously enough, he loves Paris and hates London. His mind still goes back with delight to the few rollicking days he spent in the French capital in 1878. But despite his English mother he has never felt any affection either for England or the English.

It is said that long ago, when he was only a Prince, he was seized at review with a bleeding of the nose. As the officers of his staff pressed around him he reassured them.



EMPEROR WILLIAM.

"Do not trouble yourselves about it, gentlemen; it is only the last drop of English blood escaping from my veins."

He loves the army and is beloved by it in return. After leaving the University of Bonn he turned his chief attention to his military education. Always the first at parade, he was the last to seek repose. He exacted much from his men, but more from himself. On the very eve of his marriage he was commanding, as captain, a company which he was drilling at Potsdam, while according to ancient custom, his betrothed was making her triumphal entry into Berlin. His family and his future wife only saw him for a few moments in the evening. The very day of his religious ceremony, at six o'clock in the morning, he was once more at Pottsdam, to give a medal to a sergeant-major. He said to the officers, who were astonished to see him at such a moment:—

"Gentlemen, I am only doing my duty."

"But," said the sergeant-major, under his breath, "when I was married I had a week's leave."

He has carried the same traits into his imperial life. His energy is proverbial. He never rests, and professes the deepest horror of idleness. Moreover, his capacity for work is prodigious.

At levees the Emperor pays his guests some original attentions. During the course of a levee he will change his uniform five or six times. Thus, for instance, if the son of a deceased general of the artillery comes to announce to William II. the death of his father, the Emperor does not fail to call on his artillery uniform to do honor to the officer who has died in his service. He wears the uniform of a general of artillery, of cavalry, of infantry, or the naval uniform, according to the person he received and the position that person occupies.

If the Emperor receives foreign representatives or military attaches of foreign Powers, he wears the uniform of the army of the country which the visitor represents, or at least the orders belonging to that country.

This fatiguing ceremony lasts till about half-past two. The Emperor then joins his children, who are already at table, and takes his second breakfast with them.

He then visits certain great functionaries, generals and ministers, and discusses state affairs with them. He visits an artist and sits for a picture or a bust. He inspects the barracks and the public offices, and, if he has time, he concludes the afternoon with a carriage drive, which lasts till five or six o'clock.

At half-past six he again receives persons who have some communication to make to him, or who come to consult him on matters of civil business. He reads reports and signs papers which were presented to him in the morning, but which he wished to think over. Finally, at seven o'clock, he dines with his family.

On leaving the table the Emperor devotes some time to his children, who have spent the day in their studies, or in physical exercises, and then he returns to work.

In the evening, as a novel recreation, the Emperor practices fencing. Toward ten he takes a light repast and then retires to his bedroom. At a little after ten he summons his valet to help him to undress.

On a table beside his bed there are always placed paper and pencil, in order that the Emperor may make a note of anything that occurs to him before he goes to sleep, or before he gets up in the morning.

SHORTEST TELEGRAPH LINE.

It Begins and Ends in the New York Stock Exchange.

Probably the shortest independent telegraph line in the world is the one contained within the walls of the New York Stock Exchange. It is little more than fifty feet in length, extending only from the first to the fourth floor of the famous money mart, yet it is perfect in mechanical detail, and since it daily transmits and passes a volume of business exceeding that of trans-continental wires.

This unique telegraph system is employed solely in reporting the transactions of the exchange. One terminus of the line is in the exchange floor, the other is in the top of the building, a flight above the point to which the elevators run and where none but trusted employes of the telegraph company are admitted.

Here, in two little rooms side by side, are located the New York Stock Quotation Company, where record of all the exchange operations is received and is transmitted to "tickers" in every part of the city almost as soon as the transactions are completed overhead. Inside the rooms are six operators selected from many hundred for their skill, rapidity and trustworthiness to carry on this confidential work. Nothing is left to the honesty of the operators, however. From the time they enter the office, at 1 in the morning, until the exchange closes, at 3 in the afternoon, the doors which afford the only means of entrance, or exit, are closed and locked. Outside on the stairway stands a uniformed guard who warns away all would-be intruders and keeps watch and ward over the men themselves.

The business transacted in the office at the top of the exchange building is of a peculiar kind, being made up entirely of the record of quotations and sales. The method followed in doing this work is interesting, as illustrating the perfection or quick communication. There may be 10,000 quotations sent out in the course of a day, but so complete is the system that every sale or offer is reported in 2,000 offices in from ten to thirty seconds of the time when it takes place.

All the business on the floor of the exchange is transacted by verbal agreement, and when the market is brisk there is a perfect fusilade of bids and offers. Stenographic official "reporters" jot down the record of all transactions on little slips, which are then rushed over to the telegraph desk, a distance of perhaps twenty feet, and promptly placed on the wire which runs upstairs.

At the other end of the line the operators are ready to receive the message and put it on the outreaching lines. When business is running in ordinary course there is no copying in the upper office and each transmitting operator takes the message by ear as it is clicked off and puts it on his own wire without waiting for the receiving operators to pass it to him, so that the printing of the quotations on the tape of every ticker in the system is practically instantaneous with the touch of the transmitting operator on the exchange floor.

But when there is a rush this method cannot be followed. In that case two receiving operators are stationed with each sounder, one to each side of him. They take down the messages as they come and pass them on to the transmitter. He sends them out alternately, being able to work twice as fast as the receivers.

The men employed in the stock quotation office are all experts," said the superintendent of the exchange telegraph in answer to a question. It requires a special training to master our system and become familiar with all the characters employed in our work.

"Each quotation consists of from four to eight characters, running like this: 'W. U. 107 1-8,' 'C. B. & Q. 99,'" all letters and figures. The speed which the men acquire in handling these quotations is remarkable. The average record of each operator runs about twenty-five of these per minute. This means from 150 to 200 impressions per minute or something like 50,000 during the hours when the exchange is open—fifty times as fast as the rattle the ordinary operator even to thins of maintaining such a speed."

A Method In His Peculiarity.

A certain learned professor at Cambridge is a very absent-minded man. A friend of his had been seriously ill. When he was convalescent the professor used to send him jellies and other delicacies. One day he took him a fine bunch of hothouse grapes. The old friends were very pleased to see each other, and were soon in deep discussion. The professor, becoming interested, began absent-mindedly picking the grapes, taking one at a time till they were all gone. On going out of the door he called back to his friend, "Now, mind, eat those grapes; they will do you all the good in the world!"

"Yes, we lost that good girl that I told you about." "What was the trouble?" "Why, she left the water running in the bathtub, and it leaked through and slightly dampened the ceiling. She said she wouldn't stay in a house where they didn't have waterlight floors."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE GREATEST GUNS.

KRUPP'S FAMOUS FACTORY AT ESSEN, GERMANY.

This is the Town from Which Pullman, Ill., was Modeled—The Works Turn Out Locomotives and Other Machines Used in Peaceful Pursuits.

Beside a black river termed the Ruhr which washes a smoky forest of tall chimneys and innumerable iron foundries, and surrounded by coal mines, crossed here and there with avenues, the whole topped by a little neighboring hill, lies the far-famed village, of Essen. Essen is famous in Europe as the home of the Krupp gun and in the United States as the model out of which the late George M. Pullman made his famous experiments of a paternal municipality. The very traditions of Essen run into parables about cannon and paternalism, but here four generations of the Krupps have lived and died, each generation adding a large slice to their fortunes as the hereditary gun-makers to the Kings of Prussia.

If one were asked what is Essen he could truly answer that Essen consists of 1,553 big blazing ovens, 439 steam boilers, 650 steam engines, 1,632 machine tools, 82 trip hammers, 21 rolling mills, 45 miles of tall chimneys, 500 acres of land under one cover and 19,605 workmen tortured during their comparatively short lives in order to forge implements of human destruction. The capstone, of course, is placed by the architect in Herr Alfred Krupp.

That is all there is in Essen. And yet though the industrial chief of his own principality, in the only attempt which Alfred Krupp ever made to enter the Reichstag, he was defeated by Socialists, and entirely through the sufferages of his own workmen. There is an eloquent chapter of nineteenth century history in these two facts, indicating as they do that though an institution and an organic part of the German Empire the people who drive their living from him wouldn't trust him with the making of the laws. So much for Krupp; now for his hammers.

There are as I have said 82 steam hammers in the Krupp factories varying from 500 pounds weight to 50 tons. These hammers have each names taken from the Emperor's household. The largest of these hammers is termed the "Kaiser," whose ponderous weight of 50 tons falling upon an anvil block weighing 1,250 tons crushes with its inherent weight and acquired momentum the highest mass of steel to a thickness of a sheet of tissue paper. This hammer is operated by a button which is pressed suddenly within the eighth of an inch of the plane of the anvil, thus giving a light or a heavy stroke as the occasion requires. The "Kaiser" is capable of giving 300 strokes a minute. The force of its limpact on the foundations is distributed by means of water; otherwise when in action it would shake the city. It is attended usually by four expert workmen upon either side who swing the casting operated on over the anvil by means of a crane, while the fifth man operates the hammer by touching the button.

In a Krupp gun nothing is put except what is termed crucible steel. This crucible steel is at first a huge ingot which in uniformity is matchless in the world. The ores that make the best steel are known if chemistry respectively as red hematite and spathic ore, and of which with a sprinkling of manganese and suitable fluxes by the time of carbon and silicon the famous cannons that bear Krupp's name are made. A large ingot of this ore, usually weighing twenty-five tons, is lifted on the anvil and is there deftly moulded by highly trained men who roll it and twist it and turn it with surprising rapidity while the great hammer unmercifully plays upon the hot amorphous mass until the desired shape is attained. The highest grade of intelligence is necessary for these men and sometimes their observation has to be so prompt and fine that an attendant has been disqualified for his work by even a bilious attack. When the piece of steel is hammered and at without a weld, it is cooled and bathed in oil. From the bath it is taken to the boring lathe where the interior is scooped out by boring machines to the required calibre. In the meantime the steel is tested and subjected to various scientific processes which provide against, in use, care being taken that where the force of the explosion is greatest the part is thickest while towards the muzzle it is reduced by what is termed the "choking" process, so as to give the projectile from the moment of expulsion to that of penetration the same motion as a spinning top.

Safety has been for years one of the specialties of Herr Krupps. During the war with Denmark in 1864 several of their guns burst at the breech and there was grave dissatisfaction in the German army in which the firm was in some danger of losing its monopoly, but only by greater care and proficiency and a new test the danger is now reduced to a minimum, and not more than one gun in 2,300 guns could possibly burst.

Many people believe that the Krupp works are wholly devoted to the manufacture of heavy artillery and that no nation save Germany can acquire Krupp guns. This is a mistake. The firm will manufacture guns for any nation with which Germany is at peace and a few years ago the firm entertained an offer to sell two cannons to the British war office. Herr Krupp said the price would be $5,000,000 in view of which prohibitive figure it is needless to say there was no sale. About two-thirds of the working force of the establishment is devoted to building steam vessels, locomotives, shaftings, and other heavy stock and machinery of a purely commercial character. The long duration of peace in Europe has been discouraging of late years to the purely military part of the establishment since cannon once supplied to the army last many years in times of peace. The commercial features of the establishment therefore overshadow the gun-making department, and Herr Krupp has been incriminated that part of his plant which is devoted to the interests of peace, rather than to those of war. The number of bridges, beams, rails, tires, switches, steamer shafts, rudders, and other marine paraphernalia manufactured so far in excess of the cannons and gun carriages and mortars and howitzers on exhibition or which the firm turn out annually, Essen which is thus fast becoming the home of Vulcan rather than the shrine of Mars is but a reflex of the change from war to peace which is fast coming over the minds of man. Upon entering the establishment it presents the view at first sight of a military museum where are arranged in rows all the different forms and varied improvements in cannon during a century or more. These weapons are stored in chronological order and indicate wonderful progress and precision from the days of Cressy and Poitiers, the wars of the Tyrolese, made of the trunk of a tree and bound by an iron band, down to the more formidable arms of the days of Moltke and Von Roon. The development of arms has probably reached its highest point of perfection, but the demand for this perfect weapon is much less than in the days of Prince Eugene. To such an extent is this the case that Essen which for the better part of a century has resounded with the Titanic blows of Odan and of Thor is at length devoted to the manufacture of implements of peaceful commerce though it is of course as the national armory of the German Empire that this unique place is still famous and chiefly interesting to the world.

A Queer Lottery.

Men do not acquire their better halves nowadays in civilized nations as the result of the tossing up of a coin or the cast of a die, nor are Englishmen in the habit of taking their spouses with a halter round their neck to Smithfield, and there sell them by public auction to the highest bidder.

Russia, however, seems to form an exception, if we are to believe an advertisement relative to a lottery for which tickets can be bought for about a rouble each in the town of Smolensk.

There is only one prize to be drawn, and it consists of the entire sum yielded by the sale of the tickets, amounting to 5,000 roubles, together with a lady described as "of noble blood. The tickets are sold only to males, and the lucky drawer of the prize will have to marry the damsel if he takes the 5,000 roubles. If, however, he be already married, he is at liberty to turn over the matrimonial prize to any friend whom he may wish to put in for such a good thing. If the winner should be willing to marry, but is not found to the damsel's taste, then they are to be dispensed from matrimony, and permitted to divide the roubles.

We surmise that, unless the prize-winner should happen to be an eligible young bachelor, the splinter will prefer the last method of settlement, the more so as she has described herself as being not only no longer young, but also poor.

Teeth as Big as Your Hand.

"Whoever has looked inside an elephant's mouth has seen a strange sight," said an elephant trainer of P. W. "Elephants have six front teeth, and they never eat flesh or any food that requires tearing apart. Eight teeth are all they have, two above and below on each side, huge yellow molars as wide as a man's hand and a couple of inches thick.

"Over these hay or fodder is shifted by the queerest, ugliest tongue in the whole animal kingdom, a tongue that is literally hung at both ends, having no power of movement except in the middle, and to shift back and forth from side to side, arching up against the roof of the big mouth like an immense wrinkled pink serpent. There is nothing stranger than the working of an elephant's tongue, unless it be the wonderful way his breathing apparatus when he sleeps.

"Elephants, like human beings, have two sets of teeth—the milk teeth, which are smaller than the permanent molars, fall out when the animals are about fourteen years old. These baby teeth, which nevertheless are enormous, are occasionally picked up by circus men among the fodder and preserved as curiosities."

A Large Key.

"The oldest lock in existence is the one which formerly secured one of the doors of Nineveh," says the St. Louis Republic. "It is a gigantic affair, and the key to it, which is as large as a gun as can conveniently carry, reminds one of the Scriptural reference to such instruments being carried on the shoulder. The exact words are, 'And the key to the house of David I will lay upon his shoulder.' The key in question is a foot thick, is nearly three and a half feet in length, and of the thickness of a four-inch drain tile."

Household Hints.

To keep rust away rub steel over with lard after having been well cleaned, and to take off the lard use lime.

An excellent liniment for bruises is equal parts of laudanum, alcohol, and oil of wormwood make a good liniment for bruises.

For an eye-wash have 2 to 5 grains of alum dissolved in ½ pint of water, and applied to the eyes whenever they are weak or inflamed will strengthen them.

DRAFT RIOT OF 1863.

NEW YORK CITY STILL OWES SOME OF THE DEBT IT INCURRED.

Horace Greeley and Henry J. Raymond Barely Escaped the Mob—Ostered People were Stoned, the Militia Defied, and General Disorder Maintained.

In mid-July, 1863, when the whole North was rejoicing over Gettysburg and a call had been made for a new army to be raised by a draft, a large number of New Yorkers undertook to resist conscription. Their opposition assumed the form early on the morning of July 13 of a riotous onslaught upon the headquarters of a district provost marshal at the corner of Third avenue and Forty-sixth street. The rioters put to flight Deputy Provost Marshal Jenkins and his subordinates, destroyed wheel and ballots, and then set fire to the house. Marauding bands sprang up in various parts of the city. Bull's Head Hotel was visited, and a request for free drinks being refused, the place was fired, and two private houses on nearby Lexington avenue were burned down.

The feeling was that the war had been waged in order to free the Southern negroes, and animosity toward the colored race inspired the rioters in the afternoon to make a raid on the Colored Orphan Asylum in Fifth avenue. It was set on fire and destroyed. The original mob had now increased enormously. It started to go downtown to set on fire another provost marshal headquarters on the east side of Broadway, opposite where is now Daly's theatre. The police and the firemen, with the result that the fire destroyed all the fronts between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets, while many of the shops were pillaged.

A fatal sense of security and reliance on popular patriotism, together with some political dislike of harsh measures, had seemingly possessed the police department, (the old Metropolitan state organization,) and due preliminary precautions for the prevention of disturbance had been neglected; but at this stage the Superintendent of police became energetic. It was now seen at the close of Monday that the riotous spirit had exceeded ordinary police resources, and that the military arm was needed. Particularly so, because riotous feints had been made upon the Second avenue and the Center street armsenals and upon the armory at the corner of Second avenue and Twenty-first street. The house of Mayor Opdyke on Fifth avenue, near Sixteenth street, had been invaded and some of his furniture destroyed; and a riotous fetch had been also made for the residence on Ninth street, near Fifth avenue, of Henry J. Raymond, editor of the Times, which had strongly supported the draft. Monday closed with a proclamation from the Mayor, commanding order and calling on all good police citizens, so that Superintendent Kennedy now had 2,000 bluecoats at his command.

Tuesday, July 14, came and before the day closed a poor negro had been chased by a mob through Clarkson street, in old Greenwich village, captured, beaten, and then hanged. Gov. Seymour issued a proclamation declaring the city under insurrection, and inviting citizens to enroll themselves as special aids. Meantime a large section of the mob was threatening the Tribune office and also the house of a citizen, 19 Lamartine place, where Horace Greeley was a guest. Governor Seymour and Mayor Opdyke proceeded to the city hall, opposite the Tribune office, (where the mob was now gathering in force,) and addressed the rioters, urging them to refrain from violence. Illa habitual word in first addressing a meeting had always been "Friends," and he used that word in beginning his speech, which fact was immediately seized upon by some of the newspapers to his disadvantage. What rhetoric failed to do was accomplished by police clubs and good discipline before nightfall of Tuesday, and the Tribune was relieved of a raid.

All day Tuesday disturbances continued. Colored people were stoned and maltreated. At Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, a collision occurred between the military and a section of the mob, which resulted in several deaths, the latter. Another collision came on the east side, at Broome and Pitt streets, where the military were compelled to fire and wound several rioters. In another collision, at Second avenue and Thirty-fourth street, (Wednesday,) a negro was hung, shot, and beaten to death, and his corpse dragged along the pavement and hanged to a lamppost. The house of Postmaster Wakeman, who had been active in promoting the draft, as well as the police station on Thirty-sixth street, were burned, and some clothing stores were sacked by the rioters. Up to Wednesday morning the third and last day of the rioting, 130 policemen had been more or less injured, including a lieutenant colonel and a captain.

Archbishop Hughes issued a temperate address, one of the judges decided the draft methods not in accordance with the Constitution, and Provost Marshal-General Nugent issued orders suspending the draft, which proceedings, over the return of the city regiments from the front and details of Federal and state soldiers and the popular experience with the police force, virtually quelled the riot. One result of the riot was a municipal debt for damages of several millions, and a further debt for bonds then issued are still outstanding.

SENATOR DEPEW.

HE EARLY DECIDED TO ESCHEW POLITICS, BUT DIDN'T.

"Our Chauncey" Has Always Been Popular, But Has Frequently Been Against the Machine—Had He Not Taken to Railroading He Would Have Been a National Figure Years Ago.

Senator Depew laid out his course in regard to politics when he was thirty years old. At that time Secretary of State Seward wished to make him minister to Japan and actually appointed him to the office. At about the same time Commodore Vanderbilt offered to make him attorney of the Harlem railroad. When he was thirty years old, at

HOW OUR SHIPS TALK

THE USE BY THE HELIOGRAPH OR A SIGNALING CODE.

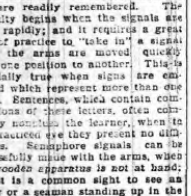
The Language of the Seas Is Easily Learned by Marines, and the Vocabulary, Though Small, Is Sufficient for All Practical Purposes.

The importance of the part which the signal staff play on board a man-of-war can not be overrated. It is the ears and tongue of each ship; and through it are conveyed the commands and reports of the largest as well as the most trivial import, from an invitation to dinner to an order to fight the enemy.

The means and codes through which messages are conveyed vary as these circumstances surrounding the vessels differ. At the principal Naval depots and at the Navy schools in Annapolis and Newport the students are carefully instructed in all the branches of this important subject. The instruction is usually given to the pupils in pairs. One man reads the signals made by the instructor, while the other writes them on the slate.

The semaphore system of signalling is the easiest to learn. Every letter or sign is indicated by one or more arms of the semaphore held in positions which follow a regular sequence and are readily remembered. The difficulty begins when the signals are made rapidly; and it requires a great deal of practice to "take in" a signal when the arms are moved quickly from one position to another. This is especially true when signs are employed which represent more than one letter. Sentences, which contain combinations of these letters, often completely nonplus the learner, when to the practiced eye they present no difficulties. Semaphore signals can be successfully made with the arms, when the wooden apparatus is not at hand; and it is a common sight to see an officer or a seaman standing up in the stern sheets of a boat oscillating and waving his arms in a way to make the uninitiated fancy he has gone stark mad, yet conveying a perfectly intelligible meaning to the signalman on board the ship. The principal use of the semaphore is in what may be called "conversational" signalling; and for this purpose it is in almost constant employment in a squadron of war-vessels.

THE USE OF THE HELIOGRAPH



TAKING IN A SEMAPHORE

But the oldest and still the principal medium of communication between war-ships are flags. They are always used for evolutionary, routine, and similar classes of signals. The mastery of the flag system of signalling is very difficult, for with the letters of the alphabet and a complete set of numerals, a very great many combinations can be made, and these can be further varied by distinguishing pennants. The hoisting of the flags is, by no means, as simple a matter as it looks. The requisite skill can only be secured by much practice. An expert signalman will run up a string of flags in a few seconds, and have them all floating out clear; while a tyro would get them hopelessly entangled and wonder at the contrariness of the little strips of bunting.

When the hours of instruction are over the men roll up the flags into neat little bundles, in such a way that they can be hoisted in that form and suddenly set free by a sharp pull on the halliards. The whole of the student who rolled them up if the flags do not "break" properly when they are again unfurled.

The heliograph affords a very pretty medium of signalling, but can only be used when the sun is shining. It is a small circular mirror, mounted so that by a motion of the finger it can be made to flash the sun's rays on a given point in the distance. The flash of this instrument can be seen for fifty miles; and, with the aid of a telescope, at a much greater distance. An opaque substance is held before the mirror at longer or shorter intervals, thus changing the flashes into a series of dots and dashes, and enabling the operator to use the Morse telegraph alphabet in sending the messages. During the Apache campaign in Arizona a message was transmitted with the heliograph one hundred and eighty-three miles.

In time of war the lighthouses situated along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts could be made to do invaluable service as signalling stations. Their watchful eyes could sweep the ocean and signal the approach of an enemy long before the ships were visible from the land. Take the lighthouse at Sand Key, Florida, for an illustration. This light is seven miles from Key West. Should there be trouble in the Gulf of Mexico or Cubaward, men stationed in the top of its tall tower could watch the waters for twenty miles around; and, with the aid of a search light, look far down toward Cuba, and send to the war department reports of the movements at the seat of trouble. Another example of what can be done in the way of lighthouse signalling is furnished by the beacon at Cape Cod where there is a signal display station, telegraphic connections with Boston, Cape Cod passing Cape Cod signalmen messages to the lighthouse, and within a minute the messages are in Boston. From these lighthouses, scattered at intervals all along our coasts the movements of an hostile squadron approaching our shores, might be watched almost continuously; and its doings signalled at once to the proper authorities. All that would be needed would be to equip them with proper signalling apparatus, telescopes, etc.

In this connection it will be interesting to note some of the ancient methods of signalling. Beacon fires, built on tops of high hills, mountains or towers, have been used for long-distance signalling from time immemorial. The Bible refers to their use; while the more ancient historians write of them as being common long before their day. Relays of torch-holders were also frequently employed for signalling purposes. The use of mirrors to flash signals by means of sun rays dates back to the time of the Pharaohs. An alphabetical method of camp signal was perfected by Polybius. The letters of the alphabet were arranged in five or six columns. The number of a letter in a column and the column were indicated by the number of torches held up. Another ingenious contrivance for night communications from afar was the clepsydra. This was a tall vessel containing water, which was let out slowly by a tap at the bottom. Divisions were marked down the side, and on each division a sentence was inscribed. Each signalling point had one of these instruments; and the time when a message was to one station it was acknowledged by the other, and the tap at the bottom of each clepsydra pulled out. When the surface of the water had settled to the required sentence, a second light was shown, the flow of water stopped, and the sentence at the surface of the water read on the other and corresponding clepsydra.

Once More the Airship.

One more inventor has entered the field with an airship, and he is as sanguine of success as were all the others who have from time to time fluttered into the air with various contrivances and came ingloriously to earth. He is M. C. McCarthy of Nicholson, Wis., and he is now at work on plans for an airship on a principle which he claims to have invented, and which he says no other airship man has ever tried to use. True, he has not yet built an airship, and, therefore, the success or failure of the principle is still something for the future to determine, but on paper the plan looks just as feasible as do all the other airship plans that have been exploited in the past.

For three years McCarthy, who is only 21 years old, has been interested in aerial navigation, and has made a be lit upon the idea of using an innumber of experiments along lines of his own, with varying success. At last vertical propeller similar to a propeller of a steamer and having it driven by electricity. He describes the invention as follows:

"Towering high above the car of the ship is a huge propeller, standing perpendicularly and constructed the same as that of an ordinary steamer. When power is applied to this and it begins to revolve rapidly it acts on the air as a steamboat propeller does on the water, and the ship rises rapidly into the air to any desired height. When the height is reached speed is slackened, and the propeller revolves only fast enough to keep the ship suspended in the air.

"Reaching out from the car of the ship are two smaller steering propellers, and, besides being used for steering, they are capable of driving the ship through the air at a high rate of speed. The edge of the car being circular, they may be shifted to any point, thus rendering it possible the power is transmitted to them by McCarthy's new acute angle coupling which is so constructed that it works at an angle and can be turned or twisted over on itself any number of times. It can scarcely be recognized as anything less than a new mechanical principle. The power to be used in the new ship will be furnished by a storage battery."

Like all airship enthusiasts, McCarthy is sanguine that before the century closes, regular lines of airships traveling at a high rate of speed will be crossing between this country and Europe, carrying passengers, and will be an common in the United States as railway trains now are

HOW TO FOLD NAPKINS.

Some Fancy Designs that Make an Effective Showing.

There are many unique and dainty ways to fold the napkin, or serviette and one of the simplest and prettiest is here reproduced. The most difficult part in the operation is the plaiting which with practice can be done successfully. To fold a simple "lea-fan," first lay the napkin open on the table, with one of the corners toward you, and the opposite away from you and carry it up to a level with, but some two or three inches to the left of, the opposite corner, letting it rest there. Then press down the crease, and you have the linen folded as in Fig. 1 before you, ready for further manipulation.

Fig. 1.—Press the forefinger of the left hand firmly on point E—the centre of the lower edge—and, taking hold of C by the thumb and forefinger of the right hand, fold it over and carry it up until it lies on point B. Next press the forefinger of the right hand on point E, and, with the left, fold over, and carry up D in the same manner, letting it rest on point A. Press the creases flat, and Fig. 2 is complete.

Fig. 3.—The next operation is a perfectly simple one, consisting, as it does, of folding up a good piece of the bottom point, and bringing it nearly to the lower point of the centre top angle, as shown in Fig. 3.

Fig. 4.—Having carried up the bottom point, and pressed it flat, half of it must be folded back again and brought to the centre of the lower edge (see Fig. 4).

Fig. 4.—Now comes the most important stage of folding, and one which must be carried through with great care. The linen, folded so far, must now be plaited, the approximate width of the plaits being indicated by the dotted lines in this diagram. The plaiting must be done from the centre to the ends, squeezing up the plaits between the thumbs and second fingers of both hands. When completed, the serviette will appear as Fig. 5.

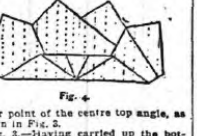

Fig. 5.

Fig. 5.—All that now remains to be done is to grip the folded linen endways firmly between the thumb and forefinger of the right hand; shake gently from side to side, and place in a wineglass, when the "Leaf Fan" will require no further attention.

He Was Nearest.

A boy of six years, who attends a private school where prizes are given on every sort of provocation, but as yet had never earned a prize, came home one afternoon and exhibited proudly one of these awards of merit. "Good!" said his mother. "How did you gain it?"

"I was first in natural history."

"Natural history at your age? How did that happen?"

"Oh, they asked me how many legs a horse had."

"And what did you say?"

"I said five."

"But a horse hasn't five legs, child!"

"I know; but all the other boys said six."

WORTH WHILE.

"'Tis rare sooth to be eloquent
When life is a jolly song;
But the flash worth while is the one who can smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

For the lucky are few, and the many are blue,
And always a-moping in tears,
And the smile that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that comes after years.

In the smile that comes through a tear.

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who can smile
When there's no cause to be glad.

By the cynic, he said, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is combed red today
By the marks of the feet of life.

But the virtue that is pastes passion,
And the sorrow that is a sin a smile—
It is these that the world will hail the bonnier of earth.
For we find them but once in a while.

A DISCORD.

BY E. J. W.

The Soprano was late that morning. As she brushed hastily past the Organist she looked up from his instrument to whisper,—

"Better late than never."

She gave him a nod and laughing sidewise glance, and slipped softly into her chair between the short, good-natured Second Soprano and the tall, melancholy Tenor. She herself was neither short nor tall, but quite the happy medium.

A light snow was falling, and a few of the great feathery flakes still clung to her stylish jacket. The Second Soprano obligingly flicked them off with her handkerchief, in return for which she received a flashing smile of thanks.

The Soprano smiled a great deal. Indeed, she could well afford to, for her teeth were faultless, and her eyes of that rare golden brown color which always reminds one of a sunbeam dancing upon a clear, dark pool of water.

Beautiful eyes, truly, and reflecting in their depths the many and ever-varying moods of an impulsive, generous, intense nature.

When she rose in her place and sent that wonderful voice of hers ringing and thrilling straight into the hearts of her hearers, they listened in an ecstacy of enjoyment and sudden spiritual uplifting.

For some the radience of actual divinity lay along the dim old aisles and touched the exquisite faces upon the chancel with a wonder, the solemn tones of the great organ became the blended sweetness of many harps and voices led by the one soaring, vibrating voice which sang praise and honor and glory to the Most High.

Something of this kind was said to her once. She threw back her dainty head and laughed long and heartily.

"Really, you do me too much honor!" she cried when she could speak. "Far too much honor! Why, I have studied in Paris, Berlin, Munich, and have spent thousands of dollars to get just that quality into my voice which you are pleased to consider so admirable. It is my stock in trade, and I should be foolish indeed did I not use it to the best advantage."

She loved her art with ardent enthusiasm, and pursued it unremittingly. She had been known to spend months upon an aria be one she considered herself capable of rendering it in an acceptable manner before the congregation.

She said once, carelessly, that she should never marry—a husband would be an encumbrance. Women of her type rarely married men with interests or attachments of their own, and if not there could be but one result from the union—utter wretchedness either for one or both, which was true enough as far as it went.

She had not said this in the hearing of the Organist, yet it came, as such things do, to his ears.

There can be no secrets exchanged or kept in a choir. Every confidence, every bit of gossip, soon becomes common property.

The Organist knew perfectly well that his love for the Soprano afforded delectable food for many a conjecture, which knowledge often made him provokingly absent-minded; or was it the fault of the narrow mirror which hung before him on the organ? That dear, delightful bit of French plate glass! If it was tilted at just the proper angle he could catch a glimpse of a rosy ear nestling in a mass of dark hair, and a white neck gleaming above a brown fur collar, though the vision, 'tis true, was often spoiled by the intervening heads of the lower satellites.

Then there was always the hope that she would permit him, as she sometimes did, to walk home with her after service. Then, she hired barely a block from the church, and the distance always seemed so short to him, because from delight, fear and longing he was bereft of speech, or if he spoke at all, must only utter merest commonplaces, for the sake, of the attendance, or the choir, instead of saying that which was in his heart to say.

On this particular morning he seemed more than ordinarily lost in thought. When he began to play the "Nunc Dimittis" instead of the "Te Deum," the Basso apprised him of his mistake by vigorously poking him in the back with a hymn book. The poor organist colored to the roots of his wavy blonde hair, his left foot slipped on the music, and by the skillful use of a few chords dropped into the required key. But the blunder obviously annoyed him. He was of an extremely nervous temperament.

The Soprano sang a solo that morning—an exquisite, difficult thing which she had taken great pains in preparing. After the first note or two she saw that she had the undivided atten-

CHESS CLOCKS.

How They Are Used in Time Matches Between Great Chessmasters.

Hour-glasses or sand-glasses were formerly used for the purpose of measuring time at chess matches, but now specially constructed clocks are in general use for this purpose. These clocks consist of two clock mounted on a common base, which moves on a pivot, the two clocks therefore being on the arms of a sort of see-saw. The beam or base is so constructed that when one clock is elevated it stands perfectly perpendicular, whilst the depressed clock lies over at an angle. But as the mechanism of each clock is so constructed that it only moves when the dial is perfectly perpendicular, it follows that when the upright clock is going the depressed clock is at rest.

Another and more modern variety has the two clocks fixed on the same level, but with a small brass arm reaching from the top of one to the top of the other. This arm acts on a pivot, and can be brought down into actual contact with one clock at a time by a touch of the finger. When it is thus in contact, by an ingenious device the clock is stopped, and the desired result is attained. The working of the clocks during a match is simplicity itself. At the commencement of the match the hands of each clock point to twelve, then at the call of "time to commence play," the clock of the first player is started. Then as soon as he makes his first move he stops his own clock, either by depressing it or by touching the arm referred to, the same motion starting his opponent's clock; so it goes on during the entire course of the game, each move being marked by the stopping of one clock and the starting of the other.

Water Makes Us Live Long.

Solid and dry as the human body appears, water constitutes more than one-fourth of its bulk, and all the functions of life are really carried on in a water bath, and, although the sense of the thirst may be trusted to call for a draught of water when required, the fluid can be imbibed most advantageously for many reasons besides merely satisfying thirst.

In the latter stage of digestion, when commiuination of the mass is incomplete, it is much facilitated by a moderate draught of water, which disintegrates and dissolves the contents of the stomach, fitting it for emulgence, and preparing it for assimilation. Hence the habit of drinking water in moderate quantities between meals contributes to health.

Water is the universal solvent of Nature and the chief agent in all transformations of matter. When taken into an empty stomach it soon begins to pass out through the tissues into the circulation, and digests, after a solids, whose excretion from the system is thus facilitated. Very few people think of the necessity of washing the inside as well as the outside of the body, and should be as careful about the cleanliness of his stomach as that of his skin.

Where Gold Fish Grow.

The world's supply of goldfish is obtained chiefly from Shelby County, Indiana, where the largest goldfish farm in the world is to be found. There are two farms in the county—one, measuring thirty acres, is in the southern portion; the other, about one-third that size, lies some miles to the north.

Each farm is divided into ponds, many of which are only ten feet square, all being connected by little channels. These ponds are surrounded by high embankments to protect the fish from wind and cold; no other protection from the elements is necessary during the winter.

It is a common, but mistaken idea that the fish has the power to change on its scales as soon as it is placed in a new and different stimulus to all the organs of the body from what is in force at other times. Therefore, perhaps, the saying, "Laugh and grow fat" is not an exaggerated one, but has a foundation in fact. The truer words were ever uttered than those which state so clearly: "Laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep, and you weep alone." The jolly, wholesome, happy-hearted people are those who have most friends and see the best that life holds out to them.—Churchman.

Presence of Mind.

Peter O'Shaughnessy, a prospector of this city, while at work in Sheep Gulch started a landslide at an elevation of 4,000 feet. With rare presence of mind O'Shaughnessy sat astride of his shovel and, with the exception of a few bruises, rode safely to the bottom.—Cor. Salt Lake Tribune.

OUR YOUTH'S COLUMN

THE BROKEN TOY SOLDIER.

No pension bureau offers us reward for service done;
We wear no medals on our breast for gallant battles won,
Yet no one of Napoleon's, nor one of Caesar's host
Has made himself a record such as even I can boast.

They were toy soldiers harder than real soldier-men, you see;
A march of fifty thousand miles is nothing much to me.
I lost a leg at Marathon, an arm at Monterey;
Was left for dead at Gettysburg—all on the self-same day.

And as I lie forgotten now, no longer fit to roam,
I wish some millionaire would found a poor Toy Soldiers' Home.

Seen Playing Leapfrog.

"The funniest thing I ever saw in a black bear family," said Bob Ellison, an old-time trapper in the Rocky mountains, "was one day last summer. Parker and I had trailed a she bear to a hearty growth of timber down in a baby canyon. When we came in sight of the bear home we were not seen, so we sat down with our rifles across our laps and watched the family. The mother bear had three cubs and it seemed that she had left them at home while she went skirmishing for forage. She had just got home with what looked like the carcass of a coyote when we came along. Well, the way those cub bears pulled that carcass to pieces and divided it among the cubs was mighty interesting. We could see that the parents were all-fired hungry themselves, and that they looked with longing eyes as the boys and girls chewed the meat and bones down, but they never seemed to want a bit while the children were hungry. If you could have seen how the old bear sat on his hind legs and watched the meat disappear while he could get a sniff of the feast it would have taught you the greatest lesson of your life on unselfishness. When the cubs were through eating the mother and father bear chewed a little about the bare bones and lapped up some blood, but that was all they got. Then the fun began, and you never saw a better show in your life in any theatre. The cubs and their dad rolled and tumbled about the ground; they played leap frog over one another, they pulled one another about by the tail, and the cubs would get astride their dad's father and pull and haul him until he must have been sore. Once in a while they would vex him and partner and I hollered out loud to see how he would baste them with a forepaw. Then the bear got jealous of the fun, and the whole family pitched onto the old man, just as you see boys fool with their dad. The parent bears chased each other about the manual training brush and over the cubs. The cubs would follow as best they could. I'll swear those bears had such a good time that I heard them laugh themselves. Well, this kept up for two hours. Then the old man Bruin went off to hunt for his food, and you may believe it or not, partner and I followed him and located that whole family, but I'll be darned if there's money enough in bear pelts to get us to fire into such a fine lot of folks as them. Why, it would be just like murder.

A Dog's Bright Idea.

A collie had been much annoyed by the conduct of a neighbor's dog which was too lazy to bury bones for its own consumption, but greatly enjoyed the pleasure of unearthing the bones of others. When Don had been deprived of several choice stores in this way, he evidently meditated over the vexing matter, and at last a bright idea came to him.

One day after dinner, when the neighbor's dog was out of the way, Don began to dig a hole not far from where his master sat watching him. The hole was unusually deep; in it he deposited a big and still remarkably desirable bone. Then he covered it well with earth, disappeared in a moment, and came trotting back with a small bone which had seen its best and second-best days, but which was good enough, in Don's opinion, for a thief.

This bone he laid on the earth which hid the big one, and scraped the earth over it with deliberate care. His master had the satisfaction of knowing that the ruse was successful, for next morning he saw the thief hastily leaving the premises with the small bone in his mouth.

Later in the day Don reaped the reward of his wisdom, as he sat munching and crunching the big bone at his leisure.

The Queen Bumble Bee.

The length of life of a queen bumble bee is probably little more than a year at most. Here is one reason for this belief. She hatches among the late days of summer, and soon after leaves the nest, leading a vagabond existence, night and day, among the autumn flowers. The winter she passes in an earth burrow dug by herself, and unaided, founds a colony in the spring. These combined periods of fall and spring require the daily use of her frail wings in the field at least four months. Now, we know that the wings of the worker bumble bee wear to less than half that time; also that the old queens who take to the field after the nest breaks up in August frequently have tattered wings and soon disappear. Nature does not supply insects with new wing cells, as it supplies birds with new wing feathers. So the loss of the power of flight at this season of the year to the queen bumble bee means the loss of life.—St. Nicholas.

The Borough Election.

The News editor bucked up against the State laws Thursday in his discussion of borough politics. The News editor says:

There is probably nothing this season to cause any anxiety over the introduction of a new half of the Council and a new Mayor, but in a case of some municipal question, for which a contest would be worth waging at the election, it might mean a good deal as to who the three new Councilmen and Mayor might be, for the remaining members would have only half the voting power, and with the Mayor against them a completely new order of things could be established in the face of all that had been done previously for the welfare of the borough, supposing the north part of Plainfield had any such candidates for office who would not consult the best interests of the municipality.

The editorial also states "that Mr. Ball was chosen to fill out the year in place of Tunis J. Carey. * * * Had Mr. Ball been chosen to fill out Mr. Carey's unexpired term of the balance of power would still remain with the present Council, and only two new men would have to be elected this year."

The laws of 1897, chapter 2, section 4, says:

"Provided, that their (Councilmen) terms shall be arranged, by lot, if necessary, so that the term of one shall expire at the end of each year; all vacancies occurring in any of such offices from any cause shall be filled by appointment till the next annual election, and until the election and qualification of a successor; at said annual election the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired term only; the term of office of all elective offices shall begin on the Monday after the election."

It would appear from the above stated law that the Mayor and Council had acted in accordance therewith.

The Curfew Law.

Since the agitation for a curfew ordinance grows apace in New Jersey, and especially in Plainfield, the following observations from the Presbyterian Journal on that curious feature of municipal law will be interesting and instructive:

About four hundred American cities have adopted the curfew law. All boys and girls under fifteen years of age are required to be at home at 8 o'clock at night from October to March, and 9 o'clock from March to October. Policemen are required when making an arrest to take their young prisoners home and accost their parents' wishes. A writer says: "The officials of Indianapolis, St. Joseph, Des Moines, etc., report a decrease of eighty per cent. in arrests and commitments of youths since the curfew law was adopted. It was supposed at first that there would be a vast amount of indiscriminate arresting of boys and girls. The contrary proves to be true; some of the cities and towns report but two or three arrests annually. The Mayor of North Platte, Neb., reports that for two years before passing the curfew law they sent fourteen boys and girls to the Reform School. For two years after passing the curfew law they did not send any. The Chief of Police of Pueblo, Col., says: 'Many young girls between the ages of thirteen and nineteen, who were formerly on the streets as late as 12 o'clock at night, now stay at home and have been saved by the curfew ordinance.' The Mayor of Leavenworth, Kansas, says the curfew ordinance works like a charm and all the mothers are in love with it. Numerous cities and counties have already passed resolutions endorsing the curfew. The City Council of Lincoln, Neb., says: 'The practical results to the youth of the city, growing out of the enactment of the curfew law, have been such as to satisfy the members of the Council that it should be adopted at the earliest moment by the Council of every city, town and village in the county.' Chief of Police of St. Joseph, Mo., says: 'Nothing of a dense arrest of youths has occurred under the curfew law, and there has been a decrease of seventy-five per cent. in crimes among the youth.'"

The State Board of Arbitration, which gained considerable unenviable notoriety sometime ago owing to its having passed through the year without arbitrating a single labor trouble, has started out this year with better prospects for practical work. In fact, it already has one good mark to its credit. After extending over a period of twenty-nine weeks the strike of the employes in a silk mill in Paterson has been satisfactorily settled to both sides through the auspices of the State Arbitrators. In this particular case the strikers secured a increase of thirteen per cent in their pay. This ought bear fruit in recommending the services of the Board more readily to the laboring masses who become involved in dispute with their employers.

Repeal of the "Dunn Act."

When the irrepressible John Dunn, of Elizabth, decided that he would forsake the brush and the paint pot and try his hand at law he secured the passage of a law which has become known as the "Dunn Act." It provides for the admission of men as lawyers who have secured the approval of five counselors in good standing in the bar. Primarily, Mr. Dunn wanted the law passed so that he could profit by it himself, which he was able to do. But in doing this a large loophole was opened for the admission of many misfit lawyers whom the better side of the profession seriously regret are now entitled to recognition in the State courts. The recent agitation for a higher standing of the members of the bar has resulted in bringing the "Dunn Act" into a searching light where its true inwardness is recognized and deplored.

Assemblyman Walscheid, of Hudson, proposes to put up the bars let down by the "Dunn Act," and to guard against the influx of young lawyers by hedging the profession around with extra precautions. This the Hudson man proposes to accomplish by the provisions of a bill which he has introduced in the Legislature and which provides for the appointment, by the Chief Justice, of nine persons who shall serve as a board of examiners and who shall examine all applicants for licenses as attorneys and recommend the successful ones for re-examination before the Supreme Court. The bill imposes on aspirants for admission to the bar the necessity of serving a clerkship of three years, if the said aspirant be a college graduate, and four years if not.

Opposed to New County.

The idea of forming a new county, with Plainfield for the county seat, which has only been discussed in a passing way, has already stirred up opposition from sources that indicate how difficult it will be to carry out the project. The Newark Advertiser says:

A project of a new county to be carved out of Union and Somerset counties, with Plainfield for the county seat, is broached.

The idea is to take in enough territory to give the county a population of 80,000. Somerset now has a little more than 60,000 of inhabitants, and if parts of the county should be taken away the population would be reduced.

The great objection to this or any similar project is that it increases the small county power in the State Senate and adds so many more rotten boroughs to be manipulated against popular government in New Jersey.

It is fair to say that the large senators will not consent to any increase in the already extraordinary minority representation in the State Senate.

The Newark News disposes of the subject with this tart comment:

Plainfield has need to restrain its vaulting ambition before it makes itself ridiculous. The Legislature is not going into the business of cutting counties into smaller ones in order that Plainfield may enjoy the honors of a county seat.

County Collector Hugh Dugan, of Jersey City, has announced his determination of capturing the Democratic Mayoralty nomination from Mayor Hoos, who is a candidate for renomination. Such being the case, we rise to enquire what will Dugan do to him?

Assemblyman Squire has introduced a bill in the Legislature providing for the incorporation of New Providence as a borough. And yet Summit and Westfield, both big enough to lose New Providence in, hesitate about getting away from the township government.

William Waldorf Astor has compelled the London Mail editors to apologize to the Queen's court for having knit him up to ridicule. Willie would have a big job on his hands if he tried the same proposition in this country.

The near approach of "moving" time suggests that there is no better way of renting a house than advertising it in the rent & wood column of The Daily Press. The Daily Press C. A. W. brings results.

Governor Voorhees seems to have Major Lentz and his friends in a guessing mood as to which way the wind is in the rent & wood column of The Daily Press. The Daily Press C. A. W. brings results.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PRINT EXHIBIT.

Camera Club to Hold an Event in Their Rooms in April.

The Plainfield Camera Club will hold a photographic print exhibition during the first week in April in the gallery of the club, Babcock building. Awards will be made in the following classes: Landscapes, interiors, portraiture, groups, hand camera work, mechanical, beginners' work and animal study. The exhibition will be open to all amateur photographers in this vicinity. Awards will also be made for the best general exhibit by a member of the club, and for the best exhibits made by lady and gentleman outside the club. These exhibits must contain at least ten pictures. The committee in charge consists of H. H Coward, chairman; Mrs A. W. Rand, Mrs. L. H. Morgan, Miss Susie Davies, W. B. Harsel, Louis Barsum and C. T. Coon.

General Eagan's Defense.

The defense made by General Eagan at the court martial is a remarkable corroboration of the general opinion of the public concerning him. He has too much emotion to be always the officer and gentleman that he may be at some times. "Consider my feelings," he says. But that is the very thing that we are not to consider. We do not expect our officers high in command to make violent exhibitions of their feelings and then ask us to consider them. The whole discipline of the military service implies a discipline of the feelings and a certain control of them under the most aggravating circumstances. There could be no martial system whatever if one's emotional extravagances were to become a part of it to be excused. The exhibit which General Eagan makes of himself is that of a man whose sensibilities are under no sort of control, who grows morbid in the self contemplation of wrongs and proceeds to hysterical lengths that are passionate and perilous. That he may be at the same time a brave man, with an honorable record of physical courage, in no way lessens the particular indictment which public opinion now makes and which is all the more obvious in the light of his extra emotional self vindication. Squeezed into the smallest compass, his excuse is that in the stress of his feelings he forgot himself and was temporarily insane. This is a very poor excuse indeed for an official upon whose head rests the multiple responsibilities of a complicated department.

The pompous solemnity with which trifles are treated by official Germany continues to make the rest of mankind laugh. The American comic paper Puck recently printed a cartoon representing the nations of the earth as animals, in which Germany assumed the shape of a pig. This picture, having been copied by the Paris Figaro, that paper was thrown out of Germany neck and heels. The consequence was that half a million people in Europe who never heard of Puck and who would have forgotten the picture as soon as seen are everywhere asking for it. Several harmless foreign publications have in this manner been excluded from the German mails, and it does not appear to be at all plain to the high cockalorums who are carrying on the puerile tyranny that they are sowing the tiny seeds of discontent among the intelligent people of the empire. Count Posadowski, when recently questioned with respect to the political discontent in Germany, went off at a high rate of speed on German unity and German prestige abroad. He refused to touch upon the small ills and annoyances of the people under the present system and pointed with great solemnity to a consolidated Fatherland.

The infliction of a fine of $500 by Judge Bond of the superior court in Boston upon the Boston Herald on account of a headline printed in that paper during the trial of a case, which headline it was held was prejudicial to the case, has caused much comment there and elsewhere. The headline was in these words, "Guilt Is Evident," and this was declared to be an improper interference with the administration of justice, as the trial was still in progress and the guilt undetermined. The fine which followed was the result of contempt of court. The precedent thus established is seriously questioned by certain newspapers. But it has long been held by the reputable press as part of an unwritten code that it shall refrain from prejudging a case on trial and not seek to influence public opinion or the jury in advance of a decision.

The latest imperial incident from Germany relates to Judge Wiszomiski, who recently sentenced an innocent laborer to 10 months in jail because he was a Socialist. The man appealed to the imperial court, which reversed the sentence and censured the judge for his loose methods at arriving at judgments. To the astonishment of the court, the emperor immediately promoted the judge to the head of the imperial court at Leipsic, where he is now a member of the bench which has just solemnly declared his unfitness for judicial functions.

On Jan. 30 the Third United States infantry, over 1,000 strong, set out from Fort Snelling, where it has been for ten years, to make the long journey of nearly 10,000 miles to Manila. When it left, the thermometer stood at 35 degrees below zero, and the regiment will not stop until it reaches a place where the thermometer marks 35 in the shade. In contemplating this jaunt one sees that endurance is becoming of greater importance than bravery.

The other day Miss Ayers of Penn Yan, who received all her originality for her final act, shut herself up in a trunk and then took poison. In 48 hours after this exploit was blazoned Robert T. Rink of Philadelphia imitated the feat successfully with another trunk. Curious that the monkey instinct of man should come out strongest in death.

The latest scientific discovery is that spontaneous combustion in haystacks is due to a microbe. The only thing left that we have any assurance does not depend upon a microbe is a "live wire."

Our Minor Culprits.

Judge Aspinall in Brooklyn the other day gave expression from the bench to his astonishment at the number of boys who are brought into his court charged with burglary. He had seven before him at the moment. "There must be something radically wrong in the home surroundings of these boys," he said. The boys probably had no home surroundings whatever. What are we to expect of boys who are educated in the streets, who associate in gangs, whose literature is blood and thunder, whose amusements are furnished at the cheap and nasty concert hall and whose art stares at them from the coalyard fences? Home influence, indeed! It is not the quality of the home influence that is to blame, but the total absence of it. The popular inclination in the cities is to condone the mischief of the street boy on account of his size. He is virtually encouraged to be vicious. Very seldom indeed does a stalwart policeman undertake to arrest a full-grown pickpocket without being assailed with cries of "Shame!" from truckmen and bystanders. No one understands this so well as the small boy. Judge Aspinall can help to correct this evil by inflicting punishment upon these boys sternly and not by hunting for the homes to send them back to.

Just how the boys of a community run things when the home influence does not suit them, may be seen in Vineland, N. J. A curfew ordinance was passed in Vineland requiring all children to be indoors upon the ringing of the bell at 9 o'clock. This was especially odious to the boys, who when the attempt was made to execute the law broke into the high school, paraded the streets in derision, fairly defying the town marshal. Now, the boys of Vineland are supposed to have home influences, but it is very questionable if those influences are at work teaching them respect for law.

The archbishop of Canterbury has delivered himself of a very commendable utterance with respect to holidays, and he insists that to be of any service to man they should be cut clear from all work. He declares that what the modern man, woman and child need more than anything else is an absolute change occasionally with a sense of complete freedom and rest. This admonition applies with much more force to America than to England. Our cousins have not lost the old art of innocent outdoor merrymaking, and, as a nation, they enjoy their holidays with a genuine zest that is almost unknown here. It is very common to see the American who is taking an outing carry business cares with him, and if he can find a similarly disposed fellow they will go off together and talk shop or stocks or politics while the young folk are playing. The truth is that the average American has yet to learn the art of playing, and unless he does he will always run the risk of dying with his business unfinished.

In discussing the possibilities of universal peace the London Times does not hesitate to declare that the most powerful factor making to that end is the perfection of deadly engines of war. The enormous advance in death dealing inventions is nearing a point where war will be a calamity to the whole human race, and the most furious warrior king or government will hesitate long before it lets loose these prodigious machines of destruction. With the means of exterminating life now in the hands of the great powers it is to be hoped that they will not come by the same as did the ancient nations, for they would probably depopulate the earth.

Queen Victoria is said to take a great interest in the ritualistic controversy which now threatens to produce a crisis in the Church of England, but she carefully avoids taking a stand. As she is the official head of the Church of England great anxiety is felt by both sides as to her action. But so far she has succeeded in presenting a most discreet impartiality. The latest event in the controversy has been the dismissal of two curates of St. Agnes' church, Liverpool, by their bishop in consequence of their advocacy of auricular confession.

A conference of the farmers of several counties in Illinois has resulted in a call for a national convention of farmers for the purpose of forming a national party representative of the agricultural interests of the country. In the declaration of principles the organization appeals to every farmer in the United States to join hands in effecting the nomination and election of farmers as members of congress and members of the legislature.

The Parisians have introduced music at their crematories so that the funeral guests can enjoy themselves while the deceased is burning. There is no good reason why they should stop at Offenbach and Strauss on such mournful occasions. A dash of ballet and gymnastics would certainly enliven the tedium.

After a most incomprehensible delay the United States senate has at last been forced to increase the salaries of some of the diplomatic officers abroad. For years the poverty of our consular agents has been a term of reproach in Europe, and to fill the offices with responsible men has been difficult.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Minnie World.

The great scenic drama of "Faust," with Joseph Callahan in the role of Mephistopeles, is the attraction at the Music Hall Saturday. In this character Mr. Callahan is said to develop an almost new creation. All the subtlety and heartlessness of the part are brought out in full force and the management has surrounded him with an adequate company. But excellent as is the company it would scarcely give full prominence to the play were it not for the scenery. "Faust" makes great demands in the way of stage pictures, and these have all been lavishly provided for. There is the opening scene in the laboratory of Faust where the compact with the Evil One is made. Then comes the Kirmess, with its dancers and music; then the beautiful garden scene, followed by the cathedral; the night of the Brocken, accompanied with its weird effects, and finally the apotheosis and the picture of Marguerite being transported to Heaven. All through the play the electricity plays a conspicuous part, and this feature alone is a most beautiful one. Music of an appropriate nature is introduced, the whole making a most attractive entertainment. There will be a special matinee for ladies Saturday.

There is also a complete company of vocal artists who are said to excel in singing effects, and comedians who render up-to-date specialties with fervor and action. A brass band and orchestra accompany the performers, and a street parade will be one of the features Monday.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

In giving credit for the various indoor athletic records at the Y. M. C. A., an error was made in the record for putting the shot. The record is still held by George Proctor Smith, but his put was 36 feet, 1½ inches, instead of 37 feet, 6 inches.

When it came to settling the date for the dual athletic contest between the teams from the Plainfield and New Brunswick Y. M. C. A.'s the two physical directors found some difficulty in finding a day that would suit both teams. February 16th was first chosen but had to be given up as the State convention would be in session at Rahway. New Brunswick agreed to Tuesday, February 21st, but several of the Plainfield team couldn't take part on that date. It has now been decided to put off the contest until Friday, March 10th.

LIVELY TALK ABOUT CITY ASSESSMENTS.

Drawn Out by Nomination of a Commissioner of Appeals.

MR. ATTERBURY OPPOSED.

HE WAS CHARGED WITH HAVING USED BAD JUDGMENT.

When the Nomination Came to a Vote for Confirmation, However, None of the Councilmen Voted Against Him—Other Nominations Made by Mayor Rockfellow—Much Important Business.

An unexpected storm of opposition arose at the regular February meeting of the City Council last Monday when Mayor Rockfellow appointed Albert H. Atterbury as a member of the Commissioners of Appeal. Before he was confirmed a great deal of discussion was listened to regarding his appointment. Mr. Hetfield introduced the subject after the appointment. He stated that he understood it was Mr. Atterbury who had caused a reduction in the tax bills of many complainants at the last sessions of the Commissioners, after the Board of Assessors and the Council had gone carefully over the books. He was of the opinion that there was too much of that sort of thing, and that the Board of Commissioners should be composed of men of good sound judgment who know the value of property. He stated by way of explanation, that personally he did not know Mr. Atterbury, but from what he had heard he thought someone else should appointed. He also understood that one member of the Board had favored his clients by reducing their tax bills, and at the same time had paid no attention to other complainants.

Mr. Barrows made a few remarks in which he stated that in a measure he agreed with Mr. Hetfield, but he felt as though Mr. Atterbury would make a good commissioner and would improve the standing of the Board.

Mr. VanHerwerden believed that there could be an improvement in the Board of Assessors. In his opinion the whole trouble was to be found there and not with the Commissioners of Appeal.

Mr. Coriell agreed with Mr. VanHerwerden, but he understood that Mr. Atterbury was a capable and efficient person for the position, and he favored him. Mr. Mellick and Mr. Buckle favored Mr. Atterbury and thought he would be a good man for the position.

Mr. Atterbury is a Democrat and the law requires that one member must be of the opposite party. When the vote was taken for confirmation all the members voted in the affirmative. Mr. Atterbury was appointed for three years.

On a motion offered by Mr. Barrows, bids for macadamizing East Sixth street, Ninth street and Franklin place, were received. There were three bids. J. A. Wilson bid 72 cents per foot for East Sixth street, 79 cents for East Ninth street and 70 cents for Franklin place. For the same streets C. A. Meeker bid 72 cents, 69 cents and 68 cents, while A. I. & N. B Smalley bid 67 cents, 66 cents and 65 cents.

After the ordinances providing for the introduction of the Park avenue storm sewer, the macadamizing of West Third and Fourth streets were presented, and there were no objections, the same were adopted on first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised. Mr. Hetfield alone objected to the Park avenue storm sewer ordinance.

Fred W. Bird petitioned the Council to establish a city scales and gave as important reasons for such scales that he had on several occasions received different weights in purchasing coal. The petition was referred to the finance committee.

Petitions for crosswalks were received as follows and were referred with power: West Sixth street and New street, West Fifth street and Muhlenberg place, Arlington avenue and Ninth street, East Third street and Fillmore avenue, East Third street and Church street.

The Board of Health asked the Council for $681.45, 5 cents per capita on the population, as an appropriation for the coming year.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company filed their bond and necessary papers showing location of tracks for the proposed extension in the east end. They were referred to the finance committee and later were confirmed by the Council.

Mr. Hetfield presented a petition from Joe. Carbone in which the latter asked the Council to cause a discontinuance of his case in the courts, and he would pay costs, etc. This petition had the sanction of the corporation counsel and was agreed to by the Council.

It will be remembered that the suit against Mr. Carbone was for violating the city ordinance in selling chewing gum, cigars, etc., on Sunday, sometime ago, and the case is now in the higher courts.

At this time Mayor Rockfellow made his appointments for the year. Craig A. Marsh was appointed corporation counsel; J. H. Carman, city physician; members of the Board of Health, James H. Murray, F. W. Dunn.

J. W. Murray, Jr., was appointed first assistant chief of the fire department, and Andrew Jennings second assistant chief. As pound keepers Frederick Wenzel and John Meeker were appointed, while the usual list of special policemen were appointed, all of which were confirmed. The list of specials include church sextons, school janitors, etc. In all forty were appointed.

Overseer of the Poor Hansen reported that there were twelve new cases during the past month, of which number seven were granted, and four of that number was for temporary aid. There were four deaths and at present there are twenty-four beneficiaries. The city physicians report was received and filed and the report of the Board of Health showed that at present there are two contagious cases in the city, one typhoid and one scarlet fever. The report states that the city is particularly free from contagious diseases. The Board of Engineer reported that Alex. Manning had resigned from the fire department and they asked the Council to accept his resignation as approved by the Board. Building Inspector Doremus reported the granting of nine permits. The liquor licenses were presented and referred to the committee, and Mr. Coriell, chairman, moved that they be advertised.

Mr. VanHerwerden reported on the petition of Fred W. Bird for the establishment of city scales, and he thought it was a matter for the courts to decide upon and not the Council or any committe, and he moved that the petition be filed.

Mr. Coriell made a motion that inasmuch as the cost of the new engine house in the West End had exceed the appropriation that $300 be appropriated to complete the work. He also moved that Chas. H. Hand's petition for the privilege of erecting a porch on his new Watchung avenue building be denied and it was so voted.

Mr. Mellick stated that the contract for furnishing a complete set of maps of the city had been given to Frank J. Hubbard at a cost of $700.

Mr. Smith, as chairman of the alms committee, offered four resolutions to the effect that $50 be appropriated to make certain repairs at the Industrial Home, that six suits of clothing be purchased for six inmates of the Home at an expense of $6 per suit, that an amount not to exceed $80 be appropriated to wire the Home for electric lighting, and that one dozen mattresses be purchased for the Home at an expense not to exceed $1 25 each. All of the resolutions were adopted.

Mr. Buckle moved that the printing and stationery committee be authorized to purchase one hundred copies of the rules of order for the Council.

Mr. VanHerwerden called up the ordinance regarding the changing of time for the collection of taxes, and the same was adopted on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Barrows stated that the street and sewer committee had been very busy in putting forth efforts to stop the ground flow at the sewage beds, that Engineer Farquar had visited Plainfield twice and that his report soon to be submitted would govern the committee's report it would make to the Council. In the opinion of the committee it was thought that additional pipes would have to be laid on Richmond street and Putnam avenue and that Cedar brook would have to be cleaned and made deeper. In connection with this report, he moved that $500 be appropriated for the preliminary work. Mr. Barrows also moved that the rules of order for the Council be made the by laws for 1899, and that when Council adjourn it be to meet Thursday evening, Feb. 23d.

Mr. Barrows called up the motion laid on the table at a previous meeting that the Council go into the election of a city clerk. He then stated that he had received the opinion of the corporation counsel and that he had been informed that his previous opinion would hold. In view of this fact Mr. Barrows asked the Council to kill the motion so that further complications would not result if the motion prevailed and Mr. MacMurray should be again elected city clerk. The motion was therefore killed.

Before the meeting adjourned Mr. VanHerwerden asked the president to instruct the various committees as to making their appropriations by the next regular meeting, so that the tax budget for the year could be arranged. The Council then adjourned.

SUNDAY GOLF PLAY STRONGLY TABOOED.

Hillside Club Will Not Allow Sabbath Desecration.

MET A BIG ADVERSE VOTE.

HOWARD FLEMING PROPOSED THE SUNDAY PLAYING.

Former Councilman Dumont Opposed the Project of Sunday Playing in a Vigorous Manner—Deplored the Existence of a Sentiment Favoring the Idea—Amendment Defeated by Vote of 68 to 6

In anticipation of the annual meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, when amendments to the constitution of the club could be made, a number of the younger members, who have liberal views, have of late been discussing the project of having the club allow the playing of golf on their links on Sundays.

Those who favored the idea were careful to lay their plans so that they could not be accused of directly interfering with the church-going hours. At the meeting Monday night Howard Fleming, who took the leadership in the proposed innovation, offered an amendment to the constitution which would permit playing on the links Sundays after 1 p m. The proposition was not entirely unexpected, but nevertheless it caused a small-sized sensation when presented.

Mr. Fleming made no detail argument in favor of the amendment, but at the first opportunity former Councilman John B. Dumont, who is an active member in Grace P. E. church, arose and opposed the amendment in most vigorous fashion. It was evident from the start that the amendment was doomed to defeat. Mr. Dumont made a plea for the sanctity of the Sabbath, and deplored the existence of a sentiment such as prompted an attempt to put the members of the club, one of the most representative in the city, in the light of countenancing the desecration of the day that should be devoted to other than worldly pleasures.

Several others spoke briefly on the subject and then the vote was taken. It was not a surprise when it was announced that the amendment was defeated by a vote of 68 against to 6 for. Mr. Fleming and his supporters took their defeat in a philosophical manner and didn't seem to be greatly put out over the decision.

Numerous other amendments were also proposed for the constitution, but few of them were adopted. The most important changes were the ones regarding the notice that must be given when an amendment is proposed, and the one changing slightly the admission of visitors.

The following trustees were elected: Josiah Brown, Charles J. Fisk and A. H. Atterbury.

We give no rewards as offer of this kind is the meanest of deceptions. Our plan is to give every one a chance to try the merit of Ely's Cream Balm—the original Balm for the cure of Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in the Head, by mailing for 10 cents a trial size to test its curative powers. We mail the 50 cent size also and the druggist keeps it. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Makes Africans Speak.

Rev. Charles Mohamed, of Africa, who is in this country completing his education, made an excellent address at the Mt Olive Baptist church Sunday afternoon. He related many interesting incidents about the manners and customs of his people. He will return shortly to his native county to teach.

POLICE LOOKING FOR ALLEGED MISSIONARY.

"Rev." Charles Mohamed is Reported as Unworthy.

PLAINFIELDERS AIDED HIM.

GOT PASSAGE TO AFRICA FOR HIM THAT HE DID NOT USE.

He Has Addressed Several Meetings Here and Enlisted the Interest of Secretary Manning, of the Y. M. C. A. and L. W. Randolph—Supposed to Have Sailed for Africa, But He Did Not Go.

"Rev." Charles Mohamed, a missionary, so-called, who claims that his native place is in North Africa, and who made an address at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last Sunday afternoon, is reported as being unworthy of any help that people are inclined to give. Several months ago this man visited Plainfield and secured the interest and help of Secretary Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., and L. Warren Randolph. Others were also led to help him. He addressed several meetings here, including one at the Sunday afternoon meeting of the Y. M. C. A. His story was that he was completing his education in this country and expected soon to return to his native land and teach his people.

Having fully impressed this fact on the minds of several Christian workers he had no trouble in getting help. Through the efforts of Mr. Manning, Mr. Randolph and a man of prominence in Washington Park, passage was secured for him to his home. As was supposed, he started for home.

When he was supposed to have been half way home, people in this city were greatly surprised to learn that he was again in town, and this time he was collecting money from friends of Mr. Randolph and Mr. Manning. In order to make his scheme a success he would produce a letter showing Mr. Randolph's signature. This letter was originally given to Mr. Mohamed to present to the person who assisted in securing him a ticket to his home, but he did not let people read the entire letter. Among the most prominent people he called upon and secured money was Rev. Dr. Yerkes, L. W. Serrell and Charles Matthews, but there were many others. Then people began to get an inkling that something was wrong and they spoke to Mr. Randolph about the missionary. Each one was informed by Mr. Randolph that he had not authorized anyone to collect money.

At that time an effort was made to reach Mr. Randolph, but he escaped before such a result could be brought about. It was then thought that he had left for good and would not return again. Nothing more was thought of him until Monday when The Daily Press announced that Rev. Mr. Mohamed made an address at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. This news reached the notice of Mr. Randolph and Secretary Manning and they took immediate steps to locate the missionary. They learned, however, that he had gone to New Brunswick, but would return to Plainfield next Sunday. If he does return there will be people on the lookout for him and the police have been given instructions to arrest him.

The missionary is of small stature and very dark. His hair is black and long and is parted in the middle. He has a persuasive manner about him and is a very smooth talker. He says that he can talk several languages fluently.

PLAINFIELD'S NEW CLUB.

"THE CLUB" IS A SELECT ORGANIZATION OF TWENTY.

It is Composed of Those Who Have Been the Backbone of Previous Local Organizations—Officers and Committees.

The congenial ones who formed the backbone of the late Crescent League and the defunct Crescent Wheelmen have gathered together once more and "The Club" is the result. While that organization practically been in existence for several weeks, it was not until Monday that it was formally organized.

"The Club" was organized with eighteen charter members and the membership limited to twenty. H. O. VanEmburgh was chosen president and Thos. Hanna secretary-treasurer.

"The Club" is not a club, but a social organization, the object of which is to furnish its members a quiet place, where they can spend their evenings together without intrusion from the rest of humanity. Frank Jones, Clarence Teal and Fred Viewig were appointed a committee to draw up the rules and by-laws for the government of the clubhouse.

The clubrooms are located on the second floor of the Clarkson building, East Front street. The members will alternate in alphabetical order as a house committee. During the month of February Amos Andrews and Frank Bowman will officiate. One room is devoted to a pool table, the other is a reception room. They are nicely furnished and well equipped.

After the club has once started there will be no club meetings. The rooms will be open every day and night and the members will congregate there when they wish.

"The Club" is entirely free from debt and, taking a lesson from the experiences of the previous organizations, it will not be allowed to get into that condition. The monthly dues are sufficient to pay the expenses of the club and leave a little over for emergencies.

SIXTEEN NEW CARS.

Brunswick Traction Company Will Soon be Able to Cope With Trade.

New Brunswick, Feb. 8.—It was stated yesterday by Edward H. Radel, secretary and manager of the Brunswick Traction Company, that the company had decided to purchase 16 new cars. This increase in the rolling stock of the company is made necessary because of the additional territory now being covered in the branch lines to Somerville and Plainfield.

An order has been placed with one of the leading street car manufacturers for six new open cars, similar to the summer cars now used by the company. These cars will seat 75 people and are to be delivered in this city between April 1 and 16. These cars will be used on the lines to Somerville and Plainfield.

Another order has been placed for 10 new winter cars. The company is obliged at present to use old Newark cars on the local lines. This, however, is only temporary and these cars will be replaced by new ones as soon as this order is filled. Upon receiving these 16 new cars the company will be able to meet all the demands of heavy traffic.

COUNTY CLERKSHIP FIGHT ALREADY ON

City Clerk MacMurray Early in the Field.

HOWARD WANTS IT AGAIN.

J. W. MURRAY, JR., AND SHERIFF KIRK ALSO MENTIONED.

If Plainfield Is to Get the Republican Nomination Her Delegates Must Present an Unbroken Front—Robert Houston the Probable Man for the Shrievalty Nomination—Political Gossip.

While it is rather early yet to begin to talk county politics and attempt to give even the possibilities of the coming fall campaign in Union county, several booms have already been inaugurated for the nominations to be made by the Republicans at that time. As early as last fall it was generally noised about that City Clerk Jas. T. MacMurray was to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for county clerk. The term of office of the present incumbent Clerk Howard, of Rahway, expires with 1899, and a new one will consequently be elected.

Among the county officials whose terms of office expire this year is Sheriff William T. Kirk, of this city. Now it has long been the ambition of Robert Houston, of Elizabeth, one of the representatives of Union in the Assembly, to be sheriff of Union county. His friends have long ago announced that they were out for the nomination of their favorite and it has been generally acknowledged that honest "Bob" Houston would be the Republican nominee for the place.

Now if the shrievalty is going to Elizabeth, Plainfield feels that she ought at least to have the county clerkship. Of course such a distribution of the plums would leave Rahway out in the cold, but then Plainfield is not getting a bit more than she is entitled to. As already noted, City Clerk MacMurray has been a prominent candidate for the place. Then it is also rumored that Sheriff Kirk would accept the honor if tendered to him, while First Assistant Engineer J. W. Murray, Jr., of the Plainfield Fire Department, is credited as being in the race at this early stage. Then from Rahway comes the announcement that Clerk Howard will try for renomination.

Plainfield's chances of securing the nomination will largely depend on whether her delegates present an unbroken front at the convention in the fall. If there is a split in the city delegation then there is a good prospect that there won't be a Plainfield man put up.

According to the statement of the wise ones, the fight, from the present aspect of affairs, will be in Plainfield between MacMurray and Murray. They credit MacMurray with good chances of securing a straight delegation from the First and Fourth wards. The Third ward is likely to support Murray. The Second ward is an uncertain quantity. That will mean a lively time in Plainfield at the very start of the campaign, for both men named have powerful friends in the ranks who are going to turn out and hustle from the start. There may be a "dark horse" in the field, who will make himself known at the last and give both a hard rub, for politics are a mighty uncertain thing after all.

THROWN IN THE DITCH.

Miss Arlene Crane and J. C. Kirkner Met With an Accident While Driving.

Miss Arlene Crane and J. Caspar Kirkner, both of West Eighth street, were thrown from a buggy and Miss Crane was seriously injured, Saturday afternoon, near Dunellen.

They were coming from the direction of Bound Brook and had just passed the residence of J. P. Osmund, when they met one of the trolley cars of the Brunswick Traction Company, which had left Dunellen at 5:15 o'clock, under the care of Motorman Smith and Conductor J. C. Kirkner.

The horse shied and turned the buggy upside down in the ditch and Miss Crane was thrown out on her face, badly cutting it. Mr. Kirkner escaped with a bruised leg. Aid was secured from a neighboring house. The horse was pinned to the ground and could not run.

Funeral of Evan Jones.

The funeral services of the late Evan Jones were held from his residence on Kensington avenue this morning. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes conducted the services and made a short address.

There were several solos by Miss Ripley, of Westfield. There were a number of floral pieces, including a handsome one from the Board of Trade. The attendance was small. The remains were taken to Jersey City on the 1:15 train for interment.

Miss Gould Extends Thanks.

Miss Helen Gould, of New York, has extended to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., through A. M. Runyon & Son, of this city, a vote of thanks for their assistance in the burial of the late John O'Keefe.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Music World.

Among the most important dramatic happenings of the present season will be the magnificent production of "Faust," which is to be given at Music Hall Saturday afternoon and night of this week. Few plays on the American stage today have achieved such a lasting popularity. Its story, familiar to all, is so replete with poetic beauty and its incidents savor so strongly of the dramatic, that the public never wearies of it, but finds new attractions every year. The play will be given by an excellent company under the management of Messrs. Foster & O'Neill and they have secured for it leading member of the company, Joseph Callahan, a gentleman well and favorably known in the theatrical world. Mr. Callahan is an actor of varied experiences. He has played many parts with success and this admirable training has fully qualified him to assume the difficult role of Mephistopheles.

* * * * *

Manager Edwards announces that after a great deal of trouble and expense he has finally secured Charles Frohman's company to present to our theatre-goers the beautiful comedy, "The Little Minister." The success attained by this play is well known and has called a great deal of comment. The mere announcement of its appearance here will undoubtedly be sufficient to create a demand for seats that will cause every one to be sold long before the day set for the performance.

* * * * *

For years American theatre goers have associated "Rip VanWinkle" with Joseph Jefferson, until one thinks and speaks of the man and the character as one and the same. And now the public has the opportunity of seeing and listening to this old and thoroughly American stage production in an entirely new light. The presentation by the Jefferson Comedy Company is one of special interest on account of the exceptional cast. The four sons of Joseph Jefferson who are so well recommended by the father and ex-President Cleveland, and Edna Carey and Blanche Bender, both connected by marriage with the Jefferson family, make up a most interesting company. Thomas Jefferson, who takes the part of Rip, is certainly most successful. This clever company will present "Rip VanWinkle" in Plainfield February 20th.

After seven years of persistent and constant presentation of the best programmes of refined vaudeville in New York city, the Proctor continuous performance theatres have now reached the great triumphs in their history. The Twenty third Street house, just west of Sixth avenue, in the centre of the shopping district, is perhaps the most accessible theatre for patrons of the continuous performance. For those who are uptown and come into the city via the Grand Central depot or the Long Island ferry, it is preferable to visit the Palace, Fifty-eighth street and Third avenue, near Lexington avenue, a special inducement is held forth to the ladies at the Palace, the price for the best seats in the afternoons to the ladies is 25 cents, no higher. The performance begins at the Palace at 1:30 and at the Twenty-third Street house at 12:30 and run continuously until 10:45 p. m.

Mrs. Dreier's Musicale.

A pleasant musical and tea at home was given last Friday by Mrs. Harry Dreier, at her home on West Front street. Mrs. Dreier was assisted in receiving by her sister, Miss Francis Sandberg, of New York. The evening was spent with music, and vocal solos were sung by Mrs. William Westphal, Jacob Rosenthal, of New York, and Miss Sandberg rendered selections on the violin and piano. Mr. Rosenthal is an expert performer on the violin and Miss Sandberg is an accomplished pianist. Miss Flora Pullen also gave one or two vocal selections.

Borreco Family Has Recovered.

Mrs. Borreco and her infant child, both of whom were injured in the Lehigh Valley Railroad wreck at West Dunellen, left the hospital last Saturday cured. The infant child was the one that Dr. Zeglio took special care of and brought to the hospital. The child was found by him in an out of the way place, and was apparently dying when discovered by the doctor. He is now exceedingly gratified to learn of its recovery.

Congressman Fowler Talked.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of New Jersey, delivered an address Friday night at the dinner of New York bankers, on the "Present Status of Currency Legislation."

FOR SIXTY YEARS BIG FORTUNE WAS GROWING

Stutz Tells How He Has Suddenly Become Wealthy.

$4,000 IS NOW $75,000.

ORIGINAL SUM LEFT TO HIS CREDIT WHEN HE WAS TEN YEARS OLD.

When He Became of Age He Had Left His Old Home in Hacen and Not Until Recently Did the Bank Officials Find Out Where He Lived—Plainfield Lawyer Is Now Working to Collect the Money.

John George Stutz, the aged German truck gardener living in Pascack valley township, three miles from this city, who has been left a fortune in Germany, as was told briefly in Saturday's paper, was seen by a local reporter Monday. He told more in detail of his good fortune. Though the German farmer does not look a day over sixty years old, he asserts that he was born March 8th, 1823, in Baden, Germany, and is therefore seventy-six years of age. He has lived in this country since 1845, and always in this vicinity. He makes his living off from ten acres of land just across the line from Union county in Middlesex, near where the old Codrington log houses stand. Stutz is quite deaf, but that is his only physical affliction. On account of that defect his wife does most of the business in this city. She is well known among the local stores where she is a daily visitor in the summer months selling the products of the ten acre farm. Stutz is the father of six children, two of whom live with him.

Sometime ago his son in law, who is employed by the local trains running between New York and Dunellen on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, noticed an advertisement in a New York paper asking for information of one John George Stutz, who was born in Germany. Stutz's attention was called to the advertisement and he answered it satisfactorily. He received a reply detailing the circumstances of how his mother had died when he was ten years old, leaving $4,000 in a German bank to his credit. The money was to have been paid to him when he became of age, but by fire that time had arrived Stutz had left home. By a curious train of circumstances the money had lain in the bank for these sixty odd years without a claimant. Then the matter was taken up and the bank officials traced Stutz to this country. The advertisement brought him to earth. In the sixty years the bequest of his mother had been in the bank it had increased to $75,580, by compound interest, so Stutz asserted to the Press reporter this morning.

When the first received the good news Stutz said that he made up his mind that he would go to Bader, Germany, to claim the fortune para nally. This proposition met with emphatic opposition from his family, who said that the matter could be settled up by a lawyer. They realized that the expense would be considerable more, but they argued that even then there would be plenty for Stutz to enjoy for the remainder of his days. So Stutz came to Plainfield and had an interview with a New York lawyer, who resides in this city, and whom he knew through selling him garden stuff in the summer months. Who this lawyer is Stutz regards with great secrecy, as all attempts of the correspondent this morning to elicit the information from him failed. The lawyer is now engaged, through the American Consul in Germany, trying to settle the matter so that Stutz can secure his fortune.

The Main Question.

To the public at large the main question appears to be whether or not we shall hold the Philippines, but to individual consideration the question of holding one's eyesight is the most important. How to insure this result can only be reliably ascertained by a test of your eyes, a scientific attainment of which is free to you at Collier's.

SMALL JUDICIAL FIELD.

ONLY TWO REPUBLICAN LAWYERS ELIGIBLE TO SUCCEED BARTINE.

They are Senator Reed and Lewis Schenck—Judge Reed for Five Years a Corporation—Bartine May be Continued.

A very singular state of affairs exist in Somerset county as regards the filling of the judiciary position now held by Judge Bartine at Somerville. Judge Bartine's term expires next year and it will be the duty of Governor Voorhees to fill the place. Naturally, a Republican should get the position. Here is where the peculiar part of the affair comes in.

Just now there are only two lawyers who are Republicans, that are eligible to the office. They are Senator Chas. A. Reed and Lewis Schenck, the former of the borough, and the latter of Somerville. The requisites are that a lawyer must be a counselor for five years in the county. Of course, there are a number of Democrats eligible to the position. Some say that Judge Bartine has been such a good man on the bench that he deserves a reappointment.

ONE ARM WAS MISSING, BUT SHE WAS A DANDY

A Unique Woman Thief Visited Somerset County Farmer.

PRETTY AND WELL-GOWNED

FARMER BROKAW WAS IMPRESSED WITH HER MISFORTUNE.

She Appeared At His Door One Stormy Night and Said She Had Lost Her Way—Told of a Big Sum of Money That was Waiting for Her at Flemington—Brokaw Regrets Good Nature.

Never since old Farmer Pendergast was gold bricked out of $5,000 has the Watchung Ridge section been visited by as clever an imposter as recently let herself loose among the hills. She was young and vivacious, with a pretty oval face and dark eyes topped with a wealth of bleached hair. Her form was slender and graceful and she walked with a jaunty air. She wore a tailor made gown, a stylish hat and a fur cape, all of the best material. The most striking thing about her appearance was the absence of her left arm which was off at the shoulder.

One stormy night she knocked at the door of Garret C. Brokaw, a well-to do farmer living on the Ridge near Whitehouse. She gave her name as Miss Leona Demmar, of New York, and said she had got off the cars at the wrong station and had lost her way. Her destination was Flemington, sixteen miles away, and she wanted shelter for the night. The sight of this pretty miss in the storm appealed strongly to Farmer Brokaw and he gladly gave her shelter. Her manner was that of a woman of culture and refinement. She said she had lost her arm in a wreck on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad near Trenton Junction, and had got a verdict for $25,000 damages against the company, and that the settlement was about to be made at Flemington by her lawyer, O. P. Chamberlain, of that place, and the agents of the railroad company.

The Brokaw family were charmed with the stranger and invited her to remain at least a week. She protested, but accepted the invitation. The day alleged to have been set for the settlement of her claim Brokaw with his best span of horses drove the fair stranger sixteen miles to Flemington. She alighted from his carriage in front of the County Clerk's office, where she said she was to meet by appointment her lawyer and the agents. Brokaw saw her enter the building and drove to Humphrey's Hotel, where he was to take dinner with her an hour later. He waited in vain. She could not be searched the town for her and inquired at every railroad station, but could get no trace of her. At the office of O. P. Chamberlain he learned that he had been duped, as the lawyer was without knowledge of the fair damsel. Brokaw then whipped his horses into a run and started for home. After taking an inventory of the family cash and valuables he told his wife never to harbor another strange woman, even if she had both arms off. Mrs. Brokaw had not been so taken with her.

Brokaw's loss is believed to be heavy, but he refuses to tell about it, as he has recently been laughing at a neighbor who was gold-bricked. Information has been received of the arrest of a woman giving her name as Miss Giberson and answering the description of the swindler at Westchester, Pa. She is held by Chief of Police Jeffries, of that place, charged with stealing jewelry from people at Bristol and Wilmington whose confidence she gained through a story about her lost arm, a railroad wreck and a verdict of $40,000 against the Pennsylvania Railroad yet to be collected.

AN ENTERTAINING TALK.

MRS. F. B. PERCIVAL ADDRESSED THE YOUNG WOMEN'S MISSION BAND.

The Occasion was the Second Anniversary and Annual Meeting—Mrs. F. E. Woodruff was Chosen President.

Last Friday in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church the second anniversary and annual election of officers of the Young Women's Mission Band of the church was held. After the election a talk by Mrs E. B. Horton was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mrs Horton is the corresponding secretary of the Women's Executive Board of Domestic Missions in the Reformed church.

Recently she visited Cromwell Centre, Iowa, where a church and Sunday-school of the Reformed denomination are thriving. Her description of the long drive from the nearest railroad station to the town and then her narrative of what she saw, ate and drank, during her two days' stay among the residents of the place was very interesting, so much so that she held the closest attention of her hearers from beginning to end, and all were really sorry to have her stop speaking. Mrs. Horton also told the band and their friends present, of a recent visit among the Russians, at one of the settlements in Northern Dakota. This narrative also proved highly interesting and instructive, as did her visit to Lenox, a fine town in Dakota, where the Reformed people have a church and are actively engaged in home mission work. We are sorry, but space forbids further details of Mrs. Horton's thoroughly enjoyable talk.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, president; Miss Lillian A. Force, vice-president; Miss Emma Gillem, recording secretary; Mrs. W. C. Startup, treasurer; Miss Minnie Williams, corresponding secretary.

The annual report of the treasurer, Mrs. Startup, showed receipts of about $60 during the year, and after all bills were paid a balance of $17.29 in the treasury. Miss Emma Gillem, the secretary, also read her annual report, reciting the work done by the band during the past year, also showing a large increase in the membership of the band.

CYLINDER TIPPED FORWARD.

Fell Over and Struck Horses and They Ran Away.

The team and truck from the Potter Press Works carted a large cylinder down to the works of the Aluminum Plate and Press Company, North avenue, Friday afternoon. The cylinder was placed too far forward so that when the team was turned around and the truck backed up for unloading, it tipped forward and fell over on the horses. The team became frightened and promptly ran away only to be caught by one of the workmen as they were rushing through the gateway. The pole and the harness were broken but no other damage resulted.

CORLE RETREATED AT POINT OF REVOLVER.

The Laborer Thought He Was a Trespasser.

CORLE WANTED A WAGON.

BUT THE DETERMINED MAN WITH THE GUN CHANGED HIS MIND.

Corle Went After Borrowed Rig—Mr. Hayes Was Not at Home—His Son Was a Forgiver and Didn't Understand—Called for His Revolver—Then the Visitor Decided They Would Leave.

C. V. D. Corle, the well-known livery man, is still minus a runabout. The story of his attempt to recover possession of it is a thrilling one. Corle is perfectly satisfied to have escaped from the adventure alive. For a short time, it is said, he hadn't the slightest wish to recover possession of the vehicle.

Some time ago Corle left a runabout, with red running gear, at Williams' livery stable in Dunellen. He has been intending to call for it. Friday, accompanied by a Plainfield lawyer, a friend of his, Mr. Corle drove to Dunellen and asked for the wagon. Mr. Williams told him that he had hired it out to a man named Hayes, living on the road to New Market. Mr. Williams gave Corle an order on Hayes, requesting the latter to turn the wagon over to its owner. Corle and his companion then drove up to the Hayes place.

They noticed signs about the property forbidding trespassing, but as they were on a business errand, they drove right in. They were greeted by a great Hungarian laborer, standing 6 feet 9 inches in height, who without waiting to hear what they had to say, ordered them from the place.

Corle says that he and his companion attempted to explain but it didn't do any good. The native of Hungary raved and tore about and finally called on the servant at the house to bring forth his revolver. The revolver was brought and was speedily brought to bear on the callers who attempted to temporize. The gun was a large one and the man looked determined so Mr. Corle and his friend retreated without delay. Another departure was made in fast time. Mr. Hayes, it was afterwards found, was in Washington at the time and had instructed his man to look out for trespassers.

FEEBLE-MINDED BOY CARED FOR.

Sent to a State Institution at Vineland Through Governor Voorhees.

Albert Coon, aged sixteen years, a resident of this city, was taken Friday to the Home for Feeble-Minded Children at Vineland, this State, by Mrs. William A. Woodruff, agent for the Charity Organized Aid Association. The admission of this lad to the Home is among the first acts of Governor Voorhees in this department and his treatment of the case through Mrs. Woodruff was very gratifying to the latter. Mrs. Woodruff was highly pleased with what she saw at the Home and was glad to know that such an institution is doing such a grand good work. Last Friday was "birthday" night at the Home and the exercises were of an interesting and instructive nature.

Next Thursday the members will be entertained by Mrs. LaForge, of Rahway, for Mr. LaVere, her brother. The members of the club will go to Rahway by stage.

GAVEL FOR THE MAYOR.

Mr. Wilson Honored in the Same Way That Senator Reed Was.

The old gentleman from South Jersey who presented a gavel to President Charles A. Reed, of the Senate, extended the courtesy still further, and has presented a similiar one to Mayor Wilson, of the borough. Last Friday His Honor produced the gift at which time he explained how it happened to get into his possession. He informed the Council that the gavel was made of apple and hickory, and he hoped that it would only be necessary for him to use it occasionally in calling the members to order. The gavel is a handsome one and corresponds nicely with the desk used by His Honor.

Charges on Police Force.

LITTLE WORK FOR BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Regular Meeting Taken Up With Routine Matters.

THE FINANCIAL REPORTS.

A MATTER OF CROSSWALKS AN INFORMAL TOPIC OF DISCUSSION.

Mayor and Councilmen Receive an Invitation to Attend the Fair to Be Given by Warren Engine Company—A New Dumping Ground Wanted—Some Resolutions Offered and Accepted.

There was precious little business of importance that occupied the attention of the members of the Borough Council last Friday. All the members were present except Mr. Ball. Mayor Wilson called the session promptly at 8 o'clock.

Clerk Arnold presented his financial statement showing that the amount due from county and State is $5,837 69, with a cash deficit of $906 68, leaving a borough balance of $4,931 01. He also reported the collection of $84 10 from fines, licenses, etc.

The report of Collector George F. Brown showed that the balance on hand January 1st was $21,351 14. There was received since that time $5,616 28, and disbursed $25,161 96, leaving a balance on hand February 1st of $14 46 32. The borough fund shows $5,007 11, and the Watchung avenue fund $471 21.

The members of Warren Engine Company extended to the Mayor and Council an invitation to attend their fair to be held next week in Saengerbund Hall, and Mr. Rogers supplemented the invitation with a few remarks in which he urged the members to attend and assist the firemen to purchase their new unifo ms.

A complaint was received from James H. Carson in which he stated that the pipes for drainage to be located at the intersection of Brook and Belmont avenues, which were promised by the Mayor, had not yet arrived. He asked that the matter be attended to. This matter was referred. Another complaint was received from W J. Butifield regarding the use of the Stein farm for a dumping ground. He stated that one previous occasion the Board of Health had stopped the practice and he urged that steps be taken to effectually stop it. Regarding this matter Mr. Rogers said that he thought there were merits in the complaint and he thought it would be well for the Council to make the matter. It was finally decided that it is a case for the Board of Health and will be so referred. Mayor Wilson thought it advisable for the Board of Health to select some suitable place for a dumping ground and then secure the approval of the Council of its action.

Mr. Woolston made his monthly report as chairman of the street committee and reported that the cost of work during the month was $166. He also stated that the committee thought it cheaper to hire a street roller at 50 a day in preference to purchasing a roller.

Mr. Burtis, chairman of the police committee, reported that during the month there were thirteen arrests three of whom had been committed to the county jail. He also reported that $65 had been collected as fines.

Mr. MacLoughlin offered two resolutions. One was to the effect that certain names be stricken from the tax list as settlements had been effected. The other one was that a warrant be drawn for $14 63 in favor of W. W. Bowley as ten per cent. of the money collected as delinquent taxes during the past month.

Mr. Rogers offered a resolution that Tuesday, March 7th, 1899, be designated as the day when the Board of Registry shall meet to revise the registry.

Another resolution was offered by Mr. Rogers that when Council adjourn be to meet Friday evening, February 17th, at 8 o'clock. This will be the last meeting of the present Council.

At this time the members indulged in a little discussion on crosswalks. Mayor Wilson stated that an appeal had been made for one at the corner of Somerset street and Hudson lane, and that he thought it should be granted. Mr. McLoughlin spoke for one at the corner of Somerset street and Codington avenue. Mr. Woolston wanted to know what was the matter with the sidewalk on Somerset street above Codington avenue, and Mr. Valiant asked what had become of the crosswalk promised by the Mayor on Rockview avenue. After some discussion the matters were finally dropped for the present.

Mr. Valiant offered two resolutions, one of which provided for the drawing of a warrant for $800 to pay a Watchung avenue note due, and the other resolution provided for the payment of a $1,200 note due March 18th, provided the bank would allow a rebate of the interest.

According to the annual custom Mr. Valiant offered a resolution to the effect that the finance committee examine the books of the collector and auditor, etc., and report at the meeting to be held February 17th.

On the suggestion of Mr. MacLoughlin the Council then went into executive session to talk over some private matters.

Society people were out in large numbers to the afternoon reception given by Mrs. Lawrence Myers and her daughter, Mrs. Fred-rick Goodhue Mead, of East Front street, Thursday. The large house was thrown open to the guests from 4 until 7, and about 500 came and went during those hours.

The cotillion was led by Bride-maids Quimby, of Orange, and Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph, who introduced some pretty figures. There were guests from New York and Orange. HARMONIZING VOICES HEARD AT THE CASINO.

Second and Last Subscription Concert Last Thursday.

A FASHIONABLE AUDIENCE.

AUDITORS LIBERAL WITH APPLAUSE FOR THE VOCALISTS' EFFORTS.

Arrangement of Programme Gave the Artists Plenty of Opportunity to Display Their Talents to the Best Advantage—Mr. Pollock and Mr. Duff Up and the Concert With a Duet.

The second and last subscription concert was given at the Casino last Thursday. There was a large and fashionable audience present to enjoy it. The artists were Mrs. Josephine Jennings Percy, soprano; Mrs. Morris Black, contralto; Frank V. Pollock, tenor; Dr. Carl E. Duff, basso; Mrs. Nelly Udelle-Smith, violinist; Frank J. Smith, conductor and pianist.

The arrangement of the programme was so pleasing as that of the first concert, and the artists were given plenty of opportunity to display their talents to the best advantage. The first number, "Widow Malone," by Mr. Pollock and Dr. Duff, won general approbation. Following, Mrs. Percy gave "A May Morning," by Denza, and "Polly Willis," by Dr. Arne both of which were gems. Mrs. Percy has appeared before Plainfield audiences be ore, but her work last evening was no doubt appreciated better than ever. Her strong voice, over which she had perfect control, was fine and her higher notes were reached with ease and grace.

The next number was given by Mr. Pollock, who sang Schubert's "Serenade," accompanied by Mrs. Udelle-Smith with violin obligato. This well-known ten r captivated the audience. There was strength, sweetness and purity of tone in his voice. Mrs. Smith's work on the violin was a decided feature in this number.

"Phyllis," by Dr. Arne, and "Cherry Ripe," by Horn, was given by Mrs Morris Black. Both of these numbers gave excellent opportunities to this singer, and her full, strong voice with a wide range made her singing a pleasure.

Mr Duff appeared next and rendered "The Minstrel Boy," and "She Alone Charmeth My Sadness," by Gounod. In both selections Dr. Duff won the heartiest of applause. He proved to be just as popular as on previous occasions, and, if possible, his work last evening was even better than before.

The next selection was given by Mrs. Black and Mr. Pollock. It was "Oh! La Stanchezza a," by Verdi, and was delightfully rendered. The two voices blended in the sweetest harmony.

The programme in part second was as follows: "Nymphs and Shepherds," "Within a Mile of Edenburgh," by Mrs. Percy; "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," and "Tell Me, Mary, How to Woo Thee," by Mr. Pollock; "Oft in The Stilly Night," and "The Low-Backed Car," by Mrs Black; "My Love's An Arbutus," and "Margretham Thore," by Dr. Duff. The last two numbers were given by Mrs Percy, Mrs Black, Mr. Pollock and Dr. Duff. They were "The Last Rose of Summer and "Too Whit, Too Who!"

All of the numbers in part second were thoroughly enjoyed and throughout the entire programme the audience was generous in applause and the artists were generous with encores. In a large measure the success of the concert is due to Mr. Smith, accompanist, whose superb work gave a delightful finish to the affair.

Settled Without Aid of Court.

The trial of the right of property which was to have come off in Justice Mosher's court Thursday afternoon before the justice and a jury was called off at the last minute, the parties agreeing to settle the matter without the aid of the court. The case was one in which Wallace Coriell secured an attachment against C. W. Lines for about $40. When the levy was made Mrs. Caroline Chapot declared the goods did not belong to Lines at all, but to her. Rather than go to the cost of a trial the parties have settled it out of court.

At a meeting of the members of the Union Building and Loan Association, of Plainfield, was held Friday night at which directors were elected. The directors then elected the following officers: President, Dr. M. B. Long; vice president, E. M. Laing; secretary, R. A. Meeker; treasurer, R. J. Shaw. The by-laws and constitution were adopted as amended by the committee appointed at the last meeting.

THE HOTEL KENSINGTON

NAME SELECTED FOR THE HOUSE KNOWN AS THE GRENADA.

Its Alterations and Up-to-Date Improvements Will be Completed March 1st, When It Will Open for Guests

After standing idle for two years the old Hotel Grenada on North avenue is rapidly being overhauled and remodeled. By March 1st, when the house will again be thrown open as "The Kensington," a great change will have been wrought in its appearance, and it will be recognized as one of the modern, up-to-date hotels of the State.

Some time ago the hotel passed into the hands of Harry J. Campbell, John H. Staats, who has conducted the Sheridan House in Elizabeth, and the Fairview House in Cranham, has leased it and will open it in a few weeks as a first-class hotel.

But before it was thrown open for business, the old house needed to be thoroughly overhauled. This is being done, and from cellar to garret carpenters, plumbers, painters and decorators are busy at work making the repairs so much needed. The sum of $9,000 will be spent on the repairs and improvements, and with $6,000 worth of new furniture and furnishings, it will cost Messrs. Campbell and Staats, who are paying for the repairs and furnishings together, $16,000 before a guest is admitted to the house.

The lower floor has been changed greatly. Instead of the two stores and hotel office formerly there, the dining room has been brought forward and occupies what was one of the front stores. The one on the opposite side is the cafe, while the office is in the centre. The main entrance in the front leads back to the stairway.

The bedrooms are newly papered and painted, fitted out with steam heat, push buttons, electric lights, e.c. There are toilet rooms on every floor, as well as suites of apartments with private bath.

Edward White has the contract for carpeting the hotel throughout. Garret Q. Pearce furnishes the furniture. The metal work is being done by the Merritt Metal and Ceiling Company, of Newark, superintended by Mr. Merritt himself. Mr. Armstrong is overhauling the plumbing, from top to bottom, and Mattis Brothers have the contract for the carpenter work. Already the old hotel looks like new, and when the work is completed will take its place as one of the leading hotels of the city.

The evening was spent in a social way and a delightful repast was served The members expressed regret that the organization was to disband, as there are many pleasant memories of work performed since the society was formed.

EVENTFUL LIFE OF EVAN JONES ENDED

Well-Known Plainfielder Died at His Home Last Night.

HELPED TO MAKE THIS CITY.

HE WAS FORMERLY PROMINENT IN ALL PUBLIC ENTERPRISES.

Opened Many of the Principal Residential Streets—Built the Revere House and Was of Great Assistance to Church and Charitable Circles—Influential Figure in Abolishing Slavery.

At an age just bordering on the four score point, Evan Jones, for over thirty years one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Plainfield, died Thursday at his home on Kensington avenue, after an extended illness, the last thirty six hours of which were spent in unconsciousness. Death came at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Evan Jones was born in Aberayron, Wales, in 1820 His father was a well-to do farmer and the son was instructed in the art of tilling the soil. In 183 he came to this country but returned two years later and married. He and the young woman of his choice were the first persons to be married in the Congregational church at the home of birth and the event was one of great note. After the wedding Mr. Jones and his wife, together with his father and brother, returned to America and settled in Jersey City, where the newly-married man began to learn the mason trade, also that of building. At one time Mr Jones employed as many as one hundred men. It was he who built Jersey City's first city hall and the building was for many years a monument to good workmanship. There were many other prom nent buildings that he erected. He was a hard-working man and in a few years he accumulated quite a fortune. He became closely identified with religious work and became a Baptist. However, he did not favor the close-communion Baptist, and it was through his efforts that the Bethesda Baptist church, of Jersey City, was built and supported, although there was considerable opposition to the church.

This was previous to the Civil War. When the war broke out Mr. Jones became an anti-slavery man, and he helped to construct means for the escape of Union men from the Rebel forces. His sympathies and support were always with the oppressed, and he never lost an opportunity to do good where he could.

He was a prince of entertainers and his palatial home at Jersey City was always opened to friends. During those days he entertained many notable men including Henry Ward Beecher, Wendell Phillips, S. J. Tilden, Frederick Douglass and many others of note in the religious and scientific world.

Mr. Jones was a hard student, and in this way he accumulated a vast amount of knowledge. He was thoroughly conversant on all important topics and was well read.

In 1863, the year of the riot, Mr. Jones and his family were threatened with destruction by angry mobs that surrounded their house. As a result the family was obliged to move out of the city inside of a day. Mr. Jones remained in Jersey City, however for a short time, and then came to Plainfield to join his family, who had previously moved here. It was during the late Mayor Job Male who was a resident of Jersey City, and through the efforts of Mr. Jones he was induced to move to Plainfield. When Mr. Jones moved to this city he was undisputably worth a half million dollars, and he began at once to invest his money in property and make improvements. During his early days he owned land where the Plainfield Seminary stands, and where the Revere House and Male Library is situated. He also owned land where the Mrs. Baldwin and Marion S. Ackerman residences now stand. The property on which stands the Crescent Avenue church was secured through the efforts of Mr. Jones and he also gave $2 000 to help the church. He had Park avenue cut through, widened and straightened, and that section of the city where Carleton, Putnam and Kensington avenues now are was all owned by him, graded and trees were set out.

Although not a member of the First Baptist church he attended that house of worship and assisted the members in many ways. He was a teacher in the Sunday-school and had a large class. In those days the salary of the pastor was small, and in addition to giving $1,000 to the church, he was the means whereby the pastor's salary was increased to double the amount then given. At various times he gave freely to those in need. He gave $600 to erect the Mt. Olive Baptist church. He also gave $500 toward erecting the old railroad station at Netherwood. He built the Revere House, then known as the Park House, and for the first few years it was a great success.

Mr. Jones was always interested in educational matters. Beside being a trustee of the Plainfield Seminary, he educated a number of colored girls and for years afterward they devoted their time to teaching among their people. He also educated a Japanese and he returned to his country to teach. Several poor children were also taken care of and educated by him, and some of them are now residing in this State living in comfort and have social standing.

Mr. Jones served the city for two terms in the City Council and his record in a civic capacity is many acts of kindness and charity of people in Plainfield will never be forgotten by those who know of them. It has been said that Mr. Jones gave more money to building up Plainfield than any other single man, but he gave too freely and he suffered in consequence, for he lost a greater portion of his money and many friends whom he befriended beside.

When Mr. Jones came to this city he purchased the property where S. A. Ginna now resides, and for many years lived there. He improved that property greatly, and it is today one of Plainfield's handsomest pieces of property.

Mr Jones married his second wife in 1876. Five children, beside his wife, survive him. The children are L. H. Jones, of Red Bank, N. J., Evan Jones, Jr., Mrs. Sadie W. Jones, Miss Grace M. Jones and David Jones. People in Plainfield are reaping largely the benefits from the hard and earnest work of Mr. Jones, and his name will go down in history as a good name. He was a faithful and conscientious Christian who lived every day alike, and was always striving to help others

THE Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS FAILED TO TAKE ACTION

NO GAME WITH THE YALES NOW

The Next Board Meeting Isn't Until March, Too Late For the Game—No Quorum at the Meeting.

By simply not meeting the directors of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. have practically declared against the proposal made of a game of ball between the local association team and the crack five from the Yale University. A monthly meeting of the board was called for Thursday. At the meeting the members were to be asked to consider the advisability of allowing the local team to leave the gymnasium and play the match in the Crescent Rink. It would be impossible to meet the expenses of having the Yale team here if the game were not played in the rink, as a large crowd could be accommodated. The management of the Yale team gave Plainfield February 23d as an open date.

At the Board meeting Thursday night, there was not a quorum present so no action could be taken. As the next meeting does not take place until March, the Board cannot act on the question in time unless a special meeting is called for the sub-ject at once. It will take some little time to advertise the game and make necessary arrangements so that unless a special meeting is called at once, basket ball enthusiasts of this city might as well give up all hopes of seeing Yale team here.

WIFE OWNED THE PROPERTY.

Jury Decides That Meat Market Utensils Could Not be Seized.

A jury of six men last Friday decided that various articles in use in Morris Ballantine's butcher shop, on East Front street, did not belong to him but to his wife, and were not liable to be seized by Nathan Schwartzer, of New York, to satisfy a judgment he obtained against Ballantine a few weeks ago.

When the constable went to make the levy on the goods he was told that they belonged to Mrs. Ballantine. A jury was therefore drawn to try the right of property. With a few exceptions they decided that all the goods included in the list levied upon belong to Mrs. Ballantine, and are therefore safe from seizure. Pope & Runyon represented the sheriff and Codington & Swackhamer Mrs. Ballantine. The jurymen were Charles Wilson, Ralph Sauma, Theodore Gray, P. M. Kline, P. A. VanFleet and J. B. Clarkson.

Special Endeavor Services.

Special Christian Endeavor day exercises were held last Friday at the Park Avenue Baptist church, in which the seniors and juniors both took part. The printed exercises prescribed by the united society were used. They consisted of recitals, readings and which members from all over the room took part. The meeting was led by Mrs. W. S. Lowry, president of the society, and superintendent of the juniors, and Mrs. D. M. Runyon, chairman of the prayer meeting committee.

To Give a Birthday Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sherman Wheeler, of Park avenue, have gone to New York to the Murray Hill Hotel for a week or two. While there Mrs. Wheeler will celebrate her birthday by giving a dinner to a number of her friends. Mr. Wheeler has left his horses under the care of Dr. Nott while away.

WARREN'S SCANDAL WAS BUT A DREAM.

Investigation Committee Failed to Find Anything.

COOPER ENTIRELY CLEARED

WAS CHARGED WITH BEING IN SCHEME TO ROB COUNTY.

A Rumor Started to the Effect That He Tried to Destroy the Old Bridge Near Warrenville—Investigation Started By County Freeholders—Cooper Was Really Working for the Freeholders.

The Somerset county authorities have had all the exciting experiences attendant on an investigation of an alleged public scandal up in the wilds of Warren, and, incidentally, have cleared the skirts of the "uncrowned king" of that section, as John C. Cooper is called, of any implication in a scheme to rob the taxpayers of the county.

On the hilly road that leads from Warrenville to Mt. Bethel there used to be a stone arch bridge over a little creek. For nearly a hundred years the bridge stood there. Last summer, however, the keystones to the bridge fell down into the brook and the structure became so weak that it had to be torn down Then the county replaced it with another one for which Eugene Moore had the contract. Cooper did the carting.

There was a rumor gaining circulation in the township that John C. Cooper maliciously knocked the keystones out of the bridge that he might get the contract for repairing it. A short time ago John Wendell, of South Side, brought the matter to the attention of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at Somerville and to Judge Bartine, of the county court.

Director William Logan, of the Board, promptly appointed a committee, composed of two of the Freeholders and himself, to investigate the matter and report to the Board. Last week they came to Plainfield and in company with Freeholders Lutkins and Moore drove over to Warrenville and then to Mt. Bethel, where the hearing of the investigating commission was held in the hotel there.

Gus Shoemaker, of Mt. Bethel, was brought before the committee. He had heard the rumors but knew nothing of the matter himself. John Wendell had only heresay evidence to offer. The greatest stress was laid on the testimony of David Coddington, of Mt Bethel, who, it was alleged, had seen Cooper at the bridge while his brother Coddington was there and told the committee that he had passed the bridge early one morning and seen Cooper appear from beneath it and had noticed a crowbar lying on top of the bridge.

Then Cooper was called before the committee and gave his testimony which was immediately corroborated by Freeholder Coddington, of Mt. Horeb. Freeholder Coddington had instructed Cooper to enlarge a hole in the roadway on the bridge so that a barrel might be placed in it, and thus prevent some horses from stepping in the small hole and breaking a leg.

The testimony cleared Cooper of any improper action. He and his friends are very indignant at the rumor, however, and talk of bringing suit against the men who started it and spread it. Tuesday, at the meeting of the Board, the investigating committee will make its report and will undoubtedly tell the Board that there was no evidence so far as they can discover to destroy the bridge or rob the county in any way.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

PARKS WON AT WHIST BY A SINGLE TRICK.

Final Round for State Championship Trophy.

DEFEATED ROSEVILLE A. C.

VICTORY OVER RIDGEWOOD WILL WIN THE TROPHY.

The Game Last Monday Was Played in Roseville—Very Close Throughout—Parks Won by Score of 9 to 8—Changes This Season in Arrangement of Contest—The Score by Rounds.

The second match in the final round for the championship trophy of the New Jersey Whist Association was played at the clubhouse of the Roseville Athletic Club last Monday. The teams from the Park Club, of Plainfield, and the Roseville Athletic Club, were the competitors. After a hard fought game the visiting team was victorious by a single point.

A new plan was tried this season in playing for the State championship trophy. Instead of the old method in which a club held the cup until defeated, the cup then passing into the hands of the victorious team, and finally becoming the property of a team winning it fifteen times, the clubs in the State association were divided into three sections, the Jersey Central, the D. L. and W., and the Erie. Each team in each section played two games with each other team in that section. The Parks, the Rosevilles and the Ridgewoods were victorious in their respective sections.

In the first match of the final round, Roseville defeated Ridgewood. Last night the Parks defeated Roseville and will next play Ridgewood. If the Parks are victorious then the State championship trophy will be awarded to them. Otherwise the series will have to be played over again.

The game of last Monday was one of the closest ever played at the Roseville clubhouse. Roseville was represented by a team composed of Messrs. Wyckoff, Hurd, Ebbott and Hoffman. The "pony" team of the Parks, Messrs. Peter B. Matthews, Arthur A. Freeman, Fred H. Freeman and Albert O. Woltmann, represented them.

The score by rounds was as follows:

	PARKS.	ROSEVILLE.
First round.....	2	3
Second round.....	3	2
Third round.....	4	3
	9	8

Matthews and Woltmann completed their game before the Freemans did at the last. The score then stood tie. The Freemans took their game by one trick, giving the Parks the one point necessary for victory.

The next game will be played in Plainfield between the Parks and the Ridgewoods some day next week.

For Infirm Laborers.

A movement has been started looking toward the erection of a home for aged and infirm men at Lincoln. It is planned to have the establishment under the control of the various trades unions so that their members may have the advantage of the home. Mayor Silas D. Drake, of Lincoln, has offered a tract of ground for the proposed building free of charge.

SOCIETY AT A MUSICALE.

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR FOR BENEFIT OF CHILDREN'S HOME.

Held at the Handsome Residence of Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview Avenue, Last Monday—Fine Programme.

A well-conducted musicale, with such an exquisite setting as the home of Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, could not fail to charm and delight, and the many guests who filled the beautiful rooms of Mr. McCutchen's residence last night enjoyed a rare pleasure as they listened to a choice musical programme. The object of the entertainment was twofold, combing the pleasure of the guests with profit to the Children's Home, an institution that merits and elicits the sympathy and co-operation of Plainfield's best citizens. The number of tickets was limited to 250, and of these there was quick disposal.

The programme, as previously printed in The Daily Press, was rendered with exquisite finish and wonderful technique.

The instrumental numbers of the pramme were performed with great skill the duets being perfect in time and execution, and giving entire unity and harmony where two places were used.

Mr. Mali, the 'cellist, gave great pleasure with the vigor and delicacy of his performance.

In part second, Mr. Swayne sang DeKoven's "Armourer's Song" from Robin Hood with such taste and power that it won for him an encore, to which he responded with "The Bonnie, Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond."

Miss Grace Gregory, who has a rare voice, combining volume with sweetness, showed the bird-like tones of her voice in "L'Leure Exquese" and sang for an encore "John Anderson, My Joe John."

Mr. Meiu's voice possesses great strength and range of tone. His encore was "Ich Bin Deem Und du Bist Meiu."

Miss Marion Dumont, accompanist, won for herself golden opinions from her fellow townspeople for her delicate and skilful technique.

Mr. McCutchen, in a few pleasant words, thanked the artist for their labors and the audience for their appreciation.

Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

Much credit for the success of the musicale is due to Miss VanBoekerck who looked after the business end of the affair and planned and carried out her portion of the work with such skill and energy.

Funeral of a Little Fellow.

The funeral services of the late Charles Emmons, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Emmons, of Somerset street, were held Sunday at the house, Rev. Father Brennan, of St. Joseph's church, officiated. A short sermon followed, in which he dwelt on the purity and happy eternity of little children. A very impressive scene was the four little boys who acted as pallbearers. They were Andrew Carney, Jr., George Becker, Lloyd Sharp and Clarence Pope. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

"THE MAPLES" TORN UP BY ITS PROPRIETOR

George Thatcher and His Wife in a Lively Spat.

POLICEMAN WAS CALLED.

PATROLMAN MYERS WAS UNABLE TO MAKE PEACE.

By the Time He Arrived on the Scene the Barroom and Fixtures Had Been Wrecked by the Wealthy Minstrel Man—Second Call for a Cop—Thatcher Finally Went Away and Took Train to New York.

Early last Tuesday the police headquarters in this city were notified that there was imperative need of a policeman at "The Maples," the roadhouse on the county road run by George Thatcher, the well-known minstrel man. Patrolman Nick Myers hurried to the hotel and found Thatcher chasing his wife about the house and uttering dire threats.

The minstrel man was flourishing a revolver and Mrs. Thatcher was fearful of the results. The officer learned that the rumpus had been in progress for some time, and previous to the former's arrival on the scene the barroom and its contents had been wrecked and were strewn about the place in a promiscuous manner.

Officers Myers tried to subdue the angry Thatcher, but for the nonce he found his persuasive powers at low ebb. Fearing that there might be a tragedy, he called Chief Grant on the telephone and asked for help.

The Chief detailed Officer Higgins to go to "The Maples." By the time the latter arrived on the scene, Thatcher had left the hotel, going towards Fanwood, where he took a train and went to New York.

No arrests were made by the officers as the hotel is just beyond the city limits.

LICENSE APPLICATIONS.

FOUR NEW APPLICANTS BEFORE THE COMMON COUNCIL.

They Were Obliged to Secure the Signatures of Twelve Property Owners—Eight Established Dealers Applied Again

At last Monday's session of the Common Council fourteen applications for liquor licenses were presented and referred to the proper committee. There were four new applicants and these were obliged to make application the same as other applicants in previous years. They were obliged to secure the signatures of freeholders. The new applicants were J. H. McVey and J. H. Staats, of North avenue; Andrew Shlick, 724 West Third street; Hans Hansen, East Front street, the place formerly occupied by Mrs. Caspar, and J. A. Blatz, corner of Front and Somerset streets.

With the other applicants it was only necessary for them to petition the Council for a license as they have held licenses before and have not been convicted of illegal selling or any other crime that would bar them from receiving a license. Those who petitioned were Henry Haurand, J. E. Beerbower, Jacob Blimm, Alex. Findley, Daniel Galbraith, Frank Linke, J. J. Goff, Martin J. Kane and John Rafferty. These licenses will be advertised in the usual way and will be considered Thursday evening, February 23d.

FUTURE OF AFRICA.

A Returned Missionary Discussed the Subject.

Joseph Booth, of Brooklyn, a returned worker among the heathen tribes in Africa, spoke at the men's meeting at the Seventh Day Baptist church Sunday and gave his views on the future of Africa and her people. Mr. Booth is an Englishman, and has been engaged in industrial work there, teaching the ignorant blacks the lessons of civilization.

Mr. Booth's remarks were interesting, and among other things brought out Mr. Booth said that the future of the African races lay in America. He mentioned the Zulus as the most advanced race, and the tribe most easy to teach. One Zulu brave, who now lives in Brooklyn, Mr. Booth said, already speaks as good English as he does himself.

Engine Company No. 2 to Disband.

It appears that this paper was misinformed last week regarding the result of the meeting of Engine Company No. 2, which was held for the purpose of deciding whether to disband or not. The company held a lively meeting and by a vote of 8 to 6 the members decided to disband May 1st, at which time the furnishings owned by the company will be sold.

Street Needs Attention.

The street committee of the City Council would make an enviable reputation for themselves if they would remedy the difficulty on Front street opposite Washington avenue. The ground is so low in some places that it does not take much water to flood that spot and make walking disagreeable. The roadway is also bad and water stands there for days at a time.

FINE OPENING FOR THE FIREMEN'S FAIR.

Warren Engine Company's Events Under Full Sway.

PROFITS TO BUY UNIFORMS

GESANG AND TURNER HALL PRETTILY DECORATED FOR THE AFFAIR.

The Members of the Company Were Attired in Their Present Uniforms and Their Wives and Sweethearts Were on Hand to Give Them Assistance—Dancing Was Enjoyed—Numerous Games Played.

Monday was the opening night of the fair and bazaar which is being held all this week in Gesang and Turner Hall under the auspices of Warren Engine Company No. 1. For an opening night the attendance was good, and if as much interest is shown in the fair during the balance of the week, the object for which the fair is being held will be assured, and the uniforms for the boys can be purchased at once.

Under the eyes of the committee the hall was transformed, Saturday, into a glimpse of a fairy land. With evergreen trees, ribbons, banners, flags and bunting the bare hall was made to look attractive, and the booths and tables were trimmed and decorated, and the articles for sale displayed so artistically that they attracted the attention of the purchasers at once. The firemen wore their hats and those who have uniforms wore them. The firemen's wives and sweethearts were there, and the ladies looked after the booths and tables.

Mrs. George H. Fairchild, wife of Chief Fairchild, has entire charge of the ladies and the tables. At the fancy table are Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel, Mrs. Rosenthal, Mrs. George Kesselring, Mrs. Bamberger, Mrs. J. J. Stahl and Mrs. Walter Bennett.

At the grocery table is Mrs. Rosenthal and Miss Sadie Searing. Miss Lillie Lang, Miss Carrie Mehl and Miss Anna Searing have charge of the perfumery counter.

On the opposite side of the room is the candy table and at that are Miss Lillie Zeiss, Miss Mamie Kohler and Miss Emma Bolsterli.

Miss Minnie Winckleman, hidden in the depths of a big tent, tells fortunes at ten cents apiece, and next to her Whit Frazee has charge of a number of phonographs where one can hear the latest popular airs for a small sum.

The "rolly bowly" board is in charge of J. J. Stahl. Pools of five are made up for five cents apiece and the lucky one of the bunch gets a ticket on a handsome Rambler wheel.

The two counters for the gavels and for the firemen's badge are looked after by Joseph Newman, and Mrs. McGann, Mrs. William Newman, Mrs. David Allen and Mrs. Edward Smith have charge of the refreshments.

Monday there was no programme rendered, but dancing was the order of the evening, music for which was furnished by Frazee. Bert Lunger, Mr. Rosentral and George Kesselring composed the floor committee. Down in the basement the alleys were kept hot all the evening. Rudolph Spiegel looked after them, and Thomas McGann had charge of the "knock the babies" game.

There are thirty-eight members of Warren Engine Company, all of whom are active in making the fair a success.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DAY.

A Rutger's College Student Talked in Trinity Reformed Church.

Christian Endeavor Day was observed in Trinity Reformed church last Sunday, by the Endeavor Society of that church. Clifford B. Case, a student from Rutger's College, was present and made a very excellent address, to a good-sized audience. The young man is graceful and easy in the pulpit and gives promise of making his mark in the ministry of the Reformed church.

Prof. Chas. Wold was also present and rendered several solos on his musical glasses to the delight of all. The new hymn books, recently purchased by the Sunday-school, were used for the first time by the choir and congregation, and the singing was one of the pleasant features of the anniversary exercises.

Judgment in Favor of Wanamaker.

John Wanamaker, the merchant prince, secured judgment in Justice Nash's court Monday against Frederick W. Hand for $31.70. Hand purchased a set of books November 8th, 1897, for $38.50. The sum of $8.50 was paid on the bill at different times, leaving a balance of $30, and with interest added, brought the amount of the judgment up to $31.70. Reed & Coddington represented Mr. Wanamaker.

LEGISLATIVE MEASURE TO PRINT THE LAWS.

Bill Introduced by Senator Frances Tuesday Morning.

BEST PAPERS TO BE CHOSEN

MANAGERS FOR VILLAGE FOR EPILEPTICS CHOSEN.

The W. C. T. U. Aroused Over the Attempt to Deal Liberally With Liquor Licenses in Public Parks, and Petitions Presented to Both Houses in Opposition—Fight for Prison Inspectors' Place.

Senator Francis, of Monmouth county, Tuesday introduced a bill providing that the Governor, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House shall select ninety newspapers in the State each year, before February 1st, in which a synopsis of the laws is to be printed at the rate of sixty cents per folio. A similar law was repealed three years ago.

The newspapers of the two leading political parties, as shown by the popular vote at the next preceding general election, are to be chosen and each party is to be equally represented. Not less than two nor more than eight newspapers are to be chosen in a single county, and preference is to be given those papers that have been published the greatest number of years and having the largest circulation in the county where they are published.

Senator Stokes introduced a bill amending the act of 1897, relative to the protection of oysters in Delaware Bay and Maurice River Cove. It changes the license fee from $3 to $5 and provides for more effective operation of the tongers' law.

Governor Voorhees sent in these names of nominees for the board of managers for the Village of Epileptics: Salis Garrison and Thomas J. Smith, of Cumberland county; Wilbs S. Combs, Monmouth; John H. Ewing, Hunterdon; Rev. James M. Buckley, Morris, and John W. Ward, Mercer. The nominations will probably be confirmed tomorrow.

The Mercer county Republicans are making a bid for the scalp of one of the members of the Board of Prison Inspectors. One is John Fell and the other Captain Louis Clayton, both citizens of Trenton. It is believed that the contest will end in the reappointment of both Carter, of Burlington, and Stanger, of Gloucester county.

Senate Bill No. 21, which provides that companies conducting parks and picnic grounds may operate more than one bar under the license granted to sell intoxicating liquors, each bar to cost not less than $100 fee, will probably come up in the Senate this week, and its friends claim that it will pass, though numerous protests were presented in both the Senate and House last night. The petitions in opposition came mainly from Methodist clergymen and members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the southern part of the State, who were urged to protest by Mrs. Emma Bourne, president of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. The latter, it is claimed by friends of the bill, labored under the misapprehension that the measure gives the right to park companies to grant licenses for the various bars, when, in fact, the company applying must take out the extra licenses.

Wife is Not Responsible.

In the case of Charles Peterson, of Dunellen, against Oscar and Caroline Pierson, of this city, for the recovery of a note for about $111, Justice Moeher Monday handed down his decision in favor of the plaintiff. Peterson sued Pierson and his wife, because her name as well as his was affixed to the note, but the court ruled that as Mrs. Pierson had only put her name on the paper as an accomodation to her husband, she could not be held liable, so gave the judgment against Pierson only.

Wants Broken Window Paid For.

Mrs. Amelia French, who owns the store on West Front street now occupied by Drake & Mundy, has brought suit in Justice Moffett's court against Peter Zimmerman for a broken window glass. Zimmerman occupied the store recently, and when he left neglected to repair the damage done. The demand of Mrs. French is for $50. Charles J. McNabb represents her.

Hopes for Her Recovery.

A consultation Sunday of Dr. Probasco and Dr. West, of Jersey City, over the illness of Miss Louise Verdon, of Shady Lawn, Somerset street, gives her relatives and friends hopes for her recovery. Miss Verdon is at the home of her sister, Mrs. Steinhauser, Jersey City Heights.

Good Results.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church met Monday afternoon in regular monthly session and received the final returns for their annual supper. The amount realized, $129, was the largest in the history of the society.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that could benefit the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?" He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said: "The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is secured. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules highly recommended in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which would appear in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take no risk myself in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the talking about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style of vest combining very separate tablet is packed in a paper carton (about an inch square) which is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the words "Ripans Tabules." One dozen of the Ripans Tabules are sold for five cents at those drug stores which have been supplied with the trade packages. Ripans Tabules are also sold by druggists generally. The five-cent carton (which is sufficient for ordinary occasions) may be had of any druggist. One gross (twelve dozen) will be sent for five cents. Ripans Tabules may be had by mail by sending five cents to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce street, New York. Ripans Tabules are the best blood purifier known to medical science.

RECOVERING FROM THE BLIZZARD.

All Jersey is Struggling to Get Back to Regular Ways.

BIG JOB TO CLEAN THE SNOW FROM CITY STREETS.

IMMENSE DRIFTS BEING CARTED AWAY FROM BUSINESS SECTION.

Country Roads Were Utterly Impassable Tuesday to Anything But Men Who Were Venturesome—Central is Gradually Getting Back to Running Regular Trains—Street Railway Doing Fairly Well—Snow Shoes Came in Handy.

Plainfield and vicinity is beginning to recover from the blighting effects of the worst blizzard since the memorable one in 1888. The damage that the storm has caused is irreparable in some cases, in others the loss will be great in financial ways and in hundreds of instances it has caused great inconvenience and worriment that even a philosophical view of the situation will not drive away. It will be fully a week, however, before conditions in this vicinity resume their ordinary course.

CLEANING THE STREETS.

The Big Drifts of Snow Being Carted Away From Business Section.

Tuesday morning, with the results of the recent blizzard on the ground, there was little attraction to go out of doors. As the day warmed up and some of the more enterprising residents began to dig themselves and their sidewalks out, and the people began to turn out. In the afternoon the more thickly populated parts of the city assumed quite a live appearance. Along the line of the street railway this was added to by the efforts of the traction company to open up its lines. In the business section the removal of the snow from the streets and trolley tracks made plenty of activity. In the streets where there was plenty of traffic, the sleighing was excellent, and a host of sleighs were out in consequence.

On Front street, Park and North avenues and the other principal thoroughfares in the business section of the city the sidewalks were cleaned by Tuesday noon and progression in that section, at least, was not difficult. The snow that was removed from the sidewalks was piled in great heaps on the side of the streets. Some of the heaps were eight and ten feet in height. Openings were cut at the crossings.

Some brilliant minded persons placed signs on top of these large heaps of snow. "Syracuse Plows" remarked a large sign in front of Griffen's hardware store. Another advertisement of mowers lifted its head on top of another heap. An ulster, with a large price tag attached, decorated a neighboring bank.

One wag, who evidently had remembrances of the summer resort on the Watchung Mountains above Bound Brook, placed a sign on one snow mountain in front of Shaw's pharmacy. It read "MIZ-erable Peak."

There wasn't much chance for any decoration of these snowbanks, however. The employes of Wm. Hand & Son, who were working for the city, attacked the great drifts and heaps on Park avenue. Five teams and twelve men soon leveled the heaps between Front street and North avenue. Part of the snow was carted off and dumped along the brook near Watchung avenue. The rest was spread over the surface of the roadway.

Berckman street, between North avenue and the railroad bridge, was rendered impassable by the deep drifts. A gang of Street Commissioner Gavett's men were set at work there to open a way for traffic. The road is now passable.

Another gang went to work on East Front street, near Cole's hill, where the snow was so drifted that sleighs and wagons were unable to get through. It was necessary to dig away the snow and make a cut through the drifts, which were over eight feet high.

Superintendent Adelmann attacked the work of the blizzard with very commendable vigor. Neither expense nor trouble was spared in handling the obstacles to the running of the cars. Ten carts and sixty-two men were kept busy all yesterday afternoon on the snow heaps along West Front street, beginning at Madison avenue and working east. Especially on the north side of the street the banks were high and thick and it took considerable time to remove them.

The scrapers cleaned the tracks well and the greater part of the snow-banks were carted away and dumped along Green brook behind the Babcock building. Where the snow had been removed the sleighing was good.

In the business section the street railway company will remove all the banks of snow along the lines of its tracks. On the other streets the banks made by the scrapers will be leveled off so as not to interfere with the sleighing.

The work of opening up the trolley lines was pushed forward yesterday afternoon, the five scrapers being kept constantly busy. On the Netherwood branch, the line was opened up Putnam avenue to Kensington avenue. Toward Dunellen the cars were successfully run on Grant avenue, the line of the latter thoroughfare also being opened up. Out Somerset street the cars reached Coddington avenue during the afternoon. Just beyond, a huge drift six feet deep stretched right across the road. On the West Fourth street branch the line was open as far west as the car house.

COUNTRY ROADS LOST.

Blizzard Was in Its Glory Up in the Washington Valley

On snowshoes and afoot a few of the most determined of the residents of Warrenville and vicinity made their way through the huge drifts that blocked the Washington Valley roads Tuesday afternoon and opened up communication with the rest of the world. Sleighing is impossible at present, and it is likely to be several days before the roads are in condition for travel.

The blizzard was in its glory up in that region. It snowed and blew so that the farmers were shut up in their homes, and many found great difficulty in even reaching the barns and stables to care for their cattle and horses. The snow obliterated the fences. Only by the rows of trees and telegraph poles was it possible to follow the line of the road.

The country looked like a great ocean of white, undulating and wave-like, broken only by the trees and here and there a solitary farm house. The drifts stretched across the place where the road used to be, sometimes to the depth of ten feet. Some of the houses were half hidden by the great banks of snow.

FLOUNDERING IN DRIFTS

Tough Experience of Rev. George Bowers in Coming to Plainfield.

Rev. George Bowers and his son, of Warrenville, started out Tuesday Mr. Bowers is overseer of the poor in Warren township and felt that his duty compelling him to go to the assistance of several needy families under his jurisdiction. He found it impossible to get the horse and sleigh out of the barn and so started forth on foot. They ploughed through drifts up to their necks, dodging the larger ones and wandering along across fields and through the woods without any regard for the road.

After carrying the necessities of life to the helpless ones and risking their lives thereby in the deep drifts, the two men started for Plainfield, five miles away. The trip took three hours and the men were completely exhausted when they reached civilization once more.

Rev. Mr. Bowers was in Warrenville at the time of the memorable blizzard of '88 and says that the drifts on that occasion did not equal those of the present great storm. The snow is deeper now, he says, than ever before and the drifts higher.

A short distance east of Pettifious' Hotel on the valley road he found the proprietor stranded in a snow bank with a large basket which he was taking to Plainfield. He had fallen into a drift and was unable to extricate himself. The Bowers dug him out and assisted him the remainder of the journey. The traveling afoot was very ardous and the three men often sank down in the snow for a brief rest. They finally reached Somerset street and better walking.

3 MILES ON SNOW SHOES.

L. B. Colby Found No Trouble in Going Over the Big Snow Drifts.

S. B. Colby, manager of the farm of the Plainfield Poultry Company, left his home on the Washington valley road, a mile east of Warrenville and made the remaining four miles to Plainfield in forty minutes. Thanks to his snowshoes, he was able to remain on top of the snow and encountered no serious obstacles en route. He says that the roads are very badly drifted, the drifts in some places measuring as high as ten feet. The road will have to be dug out before there is any travel that way. Mr. Colby was an inspector of lumber in northern Canada in 1884 and became quite an expert on snowshoes. He has not used them since that time until yesterday when the shoes and the knowledge of how to use them was very valuable.

BURSTED PIPES.

Private Residences Put in a Serious Plight by the Cold Snap.

As a result of the cold snap almost all of the homes in Plainfield have in some degree suffered, and in almost every case pipes have been frozen, but among the worst cases are those at the homes of Mrs. Corliss, Road Ending, and Mrs. Rodman, of Hillside avenue. In both cases the occupants left the city for a few days, and while they were away the cold got in its fine work. Mrs. Rodman turned the water off from the house but failed to drain the pipes inside. In consequence the pipes burst, as did also the boiler, and the plumbing work is a wreck. This is the case at Mrs. Corliss. Here a large tank is used to supply the house with water. The tank of water froze, as well as the water in the pipes, leaving matters in very bad shape.

THE CENTRAL RECOVERING.

Railroad Passenger Traffic is Being Resumed With Considerable Regularity.

As fast as possible the regular schedule of running trains is being resumed on the Central Railroad. At intervals of every two hours Tuesday trains were run from Dunellen and Somerville to New York and back, but no attempt was made to follow the regular schedule.

Up to 9 o'clock this morning only one track was in use between Somerville and Easton. The two engines which were derailed near Somerville Monday morning were still there yesterday, but last night one of them was removed, and now both tracks will soon be open.

Yesterday the usual schedule was resumed, and local trains are running again as before the storm, only they are all late. The trouble still seems to be in the yards which were piled full of snow, and the switches which were frozen tight.

Between New York and Philadelphia huge snow drifts and cuts filled with snow successfully obstruct the passage of anything. Last night one train did struggle through and reached New York in safety, but it was a train which had become a sled in a drift. No attempts have been made to send trains out of Philadelphia for New York, and it is not likely that any trains will leave New York for Philadelphia until towards night.

One passenger, a Plainfielder, purchased a ticket for Washington Yesterday. He was told that he couldn't get through for some time, but took his ticket, and will run the chances.

ALL THE WAY TO DUNELLEN

City Street Car Lines are Now in Good Working Order.

The excellent campaign conducted by Superintendent John Adlemann, of the Plainfield Street Railway, against the snow has been effective. This morning at 10 o'clock the first car was run through to Dunellen. A gang of shovellers and scrapers cleared the tracks beyond Grant avenue so that the cars are running at fairly regular intervals. The line has been opened to Netherwood station. The deepest

DEATH OF DR FRENCH

GREAT ENDEAVOR WORKER HAS PASSED AWAY.

He Was Well Known in Plainfield and Held in High Esteem for His Work Among Young People—His Life.

Rev. Dr. J. Clement French, of Newark, formerly president of the State C. E. Union, and well known in Plainfield, died Tuesday morning at his home in Newark. Dr. French was pastor of the Park Presbyterian church in Newark.

He had been ill since Dec. 12th, when the church began a three days' celebration of his fiftieth anniversary. He had contracted a cold, but insisted on carrying out his part in the celebration, and he delivered a long historical address.

Dr. French was born at Barre, Vt., May 8, 1832.

His first charge was the Central Congregational church, in Brooklyn, and he was pastor for fourteen years. At the close of the war, in the company of Henry Ward Beecher and others, he made a pilgrimage to Fort Sumter and raised the Stars and Stripes over the old fort. After a year spent in California for his health Dr. French accepted a call to the West-minister Presbyterian church, in Brooklyn, and occupied the pulpit for nearly six years, when he was compelled to seek rest on account of throat trouble, and lived in Orange, N. J., for a year. He afterward supplied the pulpits of several churches in Brooklyn. January 15, 1879, Dr. French accepted a call to the Park Presbyterian church of Newark, which was then in West Park street, and he was installed October 16th.

He did much to build up the Park church, and was held in affectionate esteem by a large and influential congregation. Although of delicate physique, he was fond of outdoor sports, and was a charter member of the Hollywood Club, which owns extensive game preserves in the North Woods, and was president of the club. For thirty years he spent his summer vacation in a cottage on the tract, and was a good shot and an expert angler.

When the State convention of the Christian Endeavorers was held in Plainfield two years ago Dr. French was the guest of the society. His splendid address and magnetic, sympathetic words with the young christians made him very popular. Last fall Dr. French delivered an address in Trinity Reformed church next Tuesday evening, Feb 28th, at which time there will be two discussions or open parliaments. Rev. A. I. Martine will lead the first one on the subject of mission work and Rev. J. W. Richardson will have charge of the other subject, which will be a practical Endeavor topic. Everybody is welcome.

The County Trolley.

Elisabeth, Feb. 15.—The Elisabeth City Horse Railroad Company, which obtained a franchise last summer from the Board of Freeholders to construct a street railroad on the proposed boulevard from this city to Plainfield, filed consents Saturday in the county clerk's office of the owners of more than a majority of lineal feet of land along the proposed boulevard, from Morris avenue is this city to the Cranford line.

Bishop Wigger Will Visit Bermuda.

Newark, Feb. 15.—Bishop Wigger, who is recovering from an attack of grip, will sail for Bermuda Saturday of this week. The Bishop will be accompanied by Rev. Father Carroll, of Jersey City.

A Substantial Appreciation.

As an evidence of the feeling of appreciation that Former Mayor Gilbert had for the excellent work performed at his home Tuesday, he presented a $5 bill to be placed in the Firemen's Relief Association treasury.

VOORHEES' BED OF ROSES

JERSEY'S NEW GOVERNOR HAVING GOOD LUCK OVER APPOINTMENTS.

Happy Solution in Essex County—Proposed Appointment of Major Lentz Had Threatened Serious Trouble.

Trenton, February 15.—Governor Voorhees is meeting with rare good luck at the beginning of his administration over the distribution of the public patronage. The announcement that he will nominate Chandler W. Riker to the office of Prosecutor of the Pleas of Essex county meets with general approval. Major Carl Lentz had been an active candidate for the place. As his candidacy progressed it was found that he had almost as many enemies as friends.

While the former did everything possible to impress the Governor that the appointment of the Major would bring about severe criticism, the latter became more zealous in his behalf. The Major was the choice of the practical politicians. He had done a great deal for his party during the last five or six years, while serving as chairman of the Essex county Republican committee, and, consequently, his friends believed that he had merited the recognition he sought. Several members of the bar favored him, too, and, indeed, other lawyers of high standing insisted that the office should be filled by a man whose legal ability was without question and public reputation without blemish. They alleged that Major Lentz did not meet these requirements.

The Lawyers' Club of Newark was called upon to investigate charges made against him, and that fact in itself was considered a blight on the Mayor's prospects. He thereupon withdrew his candidacy, and by common consent, Mr. Riker was selected for the office. Thus the Governor was relieved from a very unpleasant dilemma. Had he appointed the Major much fault would have been found. And still, on the other hand, the politicians would have lavished praise on him for the act. Mr. Riker is in every way qualified for the place. He is an eminent lawyer, and a man of high reputation. Of course, he is not as active in politics as the Major, but still his loyalty to party has never been doubted.

It is not anticipated that this disappointment will in the least dampen the ardor of Major Lentz. He will continue to be the same aggressive and uncompromising politician his record has shown him to be, and the Essex County Republican organization will remain under the discipline of his master-hand. Until another opportunity arises to push the Major forward to a position commensurate with his services as a political leader he must content himself with being a member of the State Board of Taxation at a salary of $2,500 a year.

Justice Performed the Marriage.

At noon Saturday Vincent W. Nash, justice of the peace, united in marriage Luigi Carillo, of North avenue, to Miss Alfoezina Bicoardi, of Fanwood. Both are natives of Italy, and expect to make their home near Fanwood, where the groom is employed as a laborer. The witnesses to the ceremony were Jose Carbone and Michael Bicoardi.

Caught in the Car Tracks.

Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock Milkman B. R. Waldron, of Coddington avenue, met with a mishap in front of the trolley carhouse on West Fourth street, and he was obliged to temporarily abandon his route. He was delivering milk in a sleigh and in some way the runners were dished in the car tracks.

Funeral of a Young Man

The funeral of Arthur J. VanDyke, aged twenty three years, of Morristown, nephew of Lewis M., and John C. VanDyke, of this city, was held Wednesday at his late home. Relatives from this city were unable to attend on account of the recent severe storm.

The Third Postponement

Owing to the storm the service that was to have been held at the First Baptist church under the auspices of the Temple Builders was postponed to a future date. This makes the third postponement. As effort will be made to have the service next Sunday evening.

Sledded at Washington.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and Assessor Elston M. French, of the borough, are expected home today from their trip south. They have been stalled at Washington since Monday last on account of the heavy snow.

A Surprise Party

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Katie Meier, of 230 East Fourth street, last Friday evening. The surprise party was arranged by Miss Kittie Ackerman and Carrie Meir and Charles Davis.

NO GAME WITH YALE.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS DECIDED AGAINST IT LAST NIGHT.

Elected Officers for the Year—Chairmen of Committees Appointed—To Thank Mr. Newman Entering Vote.

The long deferred meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last Tuesday, eleven out of sixteen of the directors being present. The officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Stephen Carhoone; vice-president E. L. Bonney; recording secretary, A. B. Beers; treasurer, Curtis M. Thorpe. Recognition of the excellent work done by H. O. Newman as treasurer was referred to the executive committee for special action. Harry Gee was elected a director in place of J. R. Joy, resigned.

The following chairmen of committees were announced: Executive committee, E. R. Ackerman; religious work, G. M. Rittenhouse; social work, J. W. Gavett; rooms, Nelson Runyon; membership, A. B. Beers; entertainment, H. M Maxson; vacancies, R. H Radford; educational work, H. C. Munger; finance, W. D. Murray; boys' work, O. S. Rogers; literary, George S. Clay; physical work, John Valiant.

It was decided by unanimous vote not to grant the request of the basket basket ball team and allow them to play the Yale team at the Crescent Rink. While it was too late to pull the game off, the decision of the Board showed their sentiments on the matter and will prevent any large games under Y. M. C. A. auspices.

AN EXCITING PERIOD.

CIVIL WAR HISTORY SPOKEN OF BY PROF. MACE.

Last Lecture in the Course on the Development of the Nation—Interesting Historical Facts Related by Him.

Professor W. E. Mace, of Syracuse, finished his course of lectures upon the development of the nation Tuesday night in the Y. M. C. A. and treated of the history of the United States between the years 1850 and 1865 after the civil war. With the year 1855 the contest for Kansas was begun. The prospects of both parties, slavery and anti-slavery were good. At the first election Governor Reeder was elected, and a legislature favoring slavery.

Laws against aiding fugitive slaves were passed. The campaign of 1860 opened as soon as that of 1856 closed. The fugitive slave laws still existed, and there was the same resistance to them by the Free Soilers. Filibustering expeditions were numerous when in the midst of this came the Dred Scott decision in '57.

Following fast upon this important event came John Brown's first raid and the famous debates between Douglass and Lincoln. There were seven joint debates besides several outside ones. This contest gave to Douglass the Senatorship, but to Lincoln the Presidency.

Prof. Mace briefly outlined the events leading up to and following the election of Lincoln. He spoke of the secession of South Carolina and the beginning of the Civil War, where the lectures closed.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN A SHOE STORE.

Started at 8 o'Clock in the Evening.

HEAVY LOSS BY WATER.

GROCERY OF J. A. SMITH & BROTHER WAS FLOODED.

The Smoke and Heat Prevented Location of the Fire at First—Smith's Store Was Threatened—Firemen Gained Control After Two Hours Fighting—Were Nearly Frozen—Loss About $20,000

A disastrous fire occurred in the Pruden building, 119-125 West Front street, last Tuesday. It started in the rear of the basement to Abram Schloss' shoe store, No. 119. That store was gutted and the property of J. A. Smith & Brother suffered greatly from the smoke and water. The losses on property and contents will reach $20,000 nearly, all of which is covered by insurance.

Abram Schloss and the young woman he employs as clerk left the store that evening at 7:15 o'clock. Mr. Schloss says that he left one gas light burning in the back part of the store and fire in the stove near the centre of the room.

Shortly before 8 o'clock, the attention of Patrolman Meyers was called to smoke issuing from the upper windows of the Pruden building. He sent in an alarm from box 13, corner Front and Somerset streets, at 7:55.

The Alert and No. 2 hose wagons, drawn by two horses each, responded to the first alarm. Then Chief Doane sent back after the truck. The team was drawn by the regular horses with the grey team from the chemical engine as leaders.

Three minutes after the first alarm, Chief Doane instructed Driver Fehrling to send in a second alarm. The double hose wagon was also sent to the drill's three times before it arrived and had to be rescued by the passersby. The steamer also responded but was not used.

The black smoke rolled out of the upper windows in great clouds but no flames could be seen. Owing to the smoke, the firemen were unable to locate the fire but supposed it to be on the second floor where most of the smoke was. Eight lines of hose were laid in, four on each side. Assistant Chief Jennings was in command at the rear. Chief Doane and Assistant Chief Murray were in front.

The fire evidently started in the basement under the rear of Schloss' store. The building is a four-story brick structure, with a frame addition to the rear of Schloss' place. The flames made their way into the first rooms of the addition and up into the store. The fire followed a series of closets between the two stores and reached the second story. It was stopped before anything but the closet on the second floor was burned. The thin partition next to Smith's grocery caught and the latter store had to be flooded. The flames also made their way into Smith's basement.

After two hours of hard fighting the flames were gotten under control. As soon as the firemen were able to locate the heart of the fire they flooded it.

The principal loss by fire was in Schloss' store, the back part of which was completely gutted and the rest badly burned. Part of the floor collapsed.

George W. Bilyeu, painter, lived on the second floor over Schloss. His loss, principally by water and smoke, will reach $1,000. He had no insurance. On the third floor, John P. Sutton, driver, lived. His loss will be $25. No insurance.

George Smith, a foreman at the Potter Press Works, occupied the third floor over Smith's store. His loss by water and smoke will be $10. No insurance. On the second floor there were a suite of clubrooms which were damaged to the extent of $40. No insurance.

The dry goods store of Isaac Ledger, 116 West Front street, suffered slightly from smoke and water.

Chief Fairchild and several men of the North Plainfield Fire Department gave valuable assistance during the fire. While Chief Fairchilds was carrying a settee out of the burning store, a man fell against him and slipping on the ice he was thrown on the sidewalk, pushing his forehead. George Mehl, of the Zephyr Truck Company, had his hand badly cut with an axe.

The origin of the fire is a mystery that no one has yet been able to solve. The firemen believe that it had been burning an hour before they were

A SWELLED HEAD.

It ashed who is the greatest born,
By truth we are compelled,
If we make answer, this to say—
The man whose head is swelled.

His own ideas and weighty thoughts
So fill his little mind,
In others no good trait he sees,
To his own faults he's blind.

So great is his own self esteem,
So mighty is his worth,
He thinks all things would cease to move,
If he'd step off the earth.

He sees much that he'd criticise,
And much that makes him frown,
Not only this, he has the gall,
To "call his betters down."

These swell-head people we all know,
Can to themselves give thanks,
If sane the time they wake
And find they're only cranks.

S. G. C.

THE HUSBAND'S JEALOUSY.

She was only eighteen when Gilbert Aydon married her—a bright-eyed little thing, with hair like gold, and a complexion like the pink-and-white of a conch shell.

"Gil, you're a fool!" said his plain-spoken uncle, who had money to leave, and comported himself in a proportionately uncivil manner. "You're like all the rest of the world—infatuated by a pretty face."

"I confess, dear Gilbert, I am surprised at your choice," said his elderly maiden sister, "after having told you that Sylvia Simmerton was inclined to look favorably upon your attentions—why, Sylvia has three hundred a year of her own."

"I'm really afraid, Gilbert," said his mother, "that Florence is rather young and inexperienced."

"She'll grow older, mother," said the bridegroom cheerily; "and there's plenty of experience to be had in this world, if one only lives long enough."

And Gilbert Amydon and his pretty little wife were as happy as the day was long.

Florence cried a little when her husband was obliged to go away on important business connected with the firm in which he was a partner. They had been married only a few months.

"I wish I were going with you, Gilbert," said she; and Gilbert Amydon laughed and patted her rose-leaf cheek.

"What! have you already with a little sephyr of a creature like you!" said he. "How would you endure traveling all night and running about all day? No, no; you must stay at home and keep house till I come back."

So Gilbert Amydon went away.

He had not been gone many weeks before a long and acrid letter from his maiden sister, Drusilla, infused a bitter element into the current of his reflections.

"Florence is very well," wrote Miss Drusilla, who, although by no means either fat or fair, was forty at least, "and apparently very happy. She had friends to tea last night. Of course, I was not invited, although most inopportunely I called in, about the Dorcas Sewing Club, just as they were sitting down to tea. The Misses Myrtle were there, with their cousin, Major Darrock is very handsome"—these words were underscored with two vicious dashes of the pen—"and, judging from their conversation, Florence and he were old friends before she met you. I dare say it is all right—indeed, Florence told me that when she invited the three Myrtle girls she didn't know that Major Darrock had just arrived on a visit to them. But, nevertheless, I hardly believe it is well to re-ignite the ashes of an old flirtation on the altar of an absent husband's hearthstone. However, as I said before, Florence is very young, and can hardly be expected to comprehend these things."

Gilbert Amydon felt a sharp sting of latent jealousy go through his heart as he read his sister's words, but presently he broke into a smile, and tore up Miss Drusilla's letter unceremoniously into cigar-lighters.

"They would chat her up in a nunnery if they had their way, said he to himself. "Poor, dear little girl! she must have some amusement."

But Uncle Crawley's next letter was more vaguely annoying still.

"I suppose you have heard from your wife about the fancy masquerade ball," said he. "The young folks are all wild about it. Your wife is to go as Rowena to Major Darrock's Ivanhoe. The costumes are to cost no end of money, I am told. When I was a young man people didn't squander their incomes in that sort of way. But I suppose if you are willing, it's not my business to object."

Gilbert Amydon knit his brows and bit his lip, as he read the words that his Uncle Crawley had penned with such malicious pleasure. This was quite a different affair from the tea party to which Drusilla Amydon had taken exception. And for the first time in his life Gilbert felt in his heart a strong, angry tide of anger toward the beautiful young wife whom he had promised at the altar to love and cherish.

"If she is really going to this ball," he said to himself, "I don't know what the consequences will be. She knows I hate tal-masquerades, and she knows, too, that she has no business to go with that major fellow when I am away. Drusilla was right—she is too young for a wife. I should have thought twice before I gave up into her hands such unbounded power to sting and torture me. At all events, I wont stay here to be made a fool of. I'll go back home and judge for myself whether she is losing all her common sense and discretion.

He glanced at his watch.

"If I start at once," he thought, "I can be at Dedlington on the evening of the ball. And I'll do it!"

What a long, dreary ride that was—midnight jottings through endless stretches of woods and meadow-lands and forests, echoing rock—days when sleep and waking seemed oddly jumbled together! And the one pervading idea that filled his brain was Florence, robed in pale blue silk with her golden hair dressed as in an old picture he had once seen of the beautiful Saxon Princess Rowena. And all the time his heart was as heavy as lead within him.

Florence, whom he had loved and trusted—Florence, who had grown into his heart as the clinging ivy makes its way into the crevices of the granite rock—Florence, whose pure innocence and singleness of nature he had worshipped—what would life be worth to him if she should prove untrue? Not that he feared any such misery—no, he knew Florence too well for that—but a plum was in his mouth brushed off was a plum for him. She had told herself, with a hot, fevered anger throbbing through his brain; of what value were the smiles whose sweetness was lavished liberally on all alike?

And as he rode along, with folded arms and traveling cap drawn sullenly over his eyes, Gilbert Amydon felt like one who was already bereaved.

The house was dark as he ascended the steps and opened the door with his latchkey.

"Gone!" he said to himself, with a bitter smile. "Gone! Well, I knew it. What else could I have expected? She is no longer my sweet, home-loving Florence, but—Rowena, the Saxon Princess!"

With these thoughts in his mind, he strode up the passage, and opened the drawing-room door. No one surprised him at the dark now deserted. A cheerful fire burned in the grate—the shaded lamp threw its circlet of light on the red-covered centre-table—and there, all alone, sat Florence, her cheek resting on her hand, her soft eyes fixed intently on something in her lap. She was dressed for the ball.

It was the prettiest little tableau in the world. Amydon stood for a second, scarcely willing to disturb it.

"Florence!"

"O, Gilbert, Gilbert!"

And with a low, sobbing cry of joy she sprang to his breast.

"So you haven't gone to the fancy ball, after all," said he, as he sat down beside her, passing his hand fondly over her golden hair.

"To the fancy ball! I never thought of going, Gilbert. I knew you did not like the ball; and I hoped there would be the pleasure of going with you away!"

"They wrote to me that you were going as Rowena, the Saxon Princess," said Amydon, half ashamed of the words he uttered.

"O, I know!" said Florence, laughing. "Major Myrtle did want me to go. She was to be Rebecca, the Jewess, you know, and Major Darrock, her cousin, was to be Ivanhoe; and she thought it would be a nice party. She even ordered a costume for me, but I told her all along I shouldn't go; so Clara Myrtle had to content herself."

"While you are sitting here all alone, and studying my photograph?" he interrogated fondly.

"I—I'm afraid I was crying a little," confessed Florence, "for I was so lonely, and I wanted to see you so much."

"My own darling little wife!"

This was how Gilbert Amydon's brief madness of jealousy. Drusilla's spite and Uncle Crawley's quiet malice had all fallen short of their mark.

And Florence reigns undisputed queen at last over her husband's heart.

Holland and Her Colonies.

It is not the fiercest nations that have been the greatest successes at colonizing and getting rich out of gentle toil. Next to England, little pigmatic Holland has the most valuable colonies in the world. She still holds Java, with nearly 25,000,000 people, and although the natives are Malays they are very loyal. She also has other rich possessions in the east, the island of Sumatra being four times as large as Cuba, and the island of Celebes being more than twice as large. land, to say nothing of her six islands in the West Indies and her possessions in South America. The good-natured Netherlands, like the British, have held on to their profitable territory by keeping the spirit of trade alive rather than the spirit of autocracy, and avoiding the levy of murderous taxes, with nothing in return to compensate.

About Mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes, it is to be presumed, exist for some economic purpose, but what it is known only to etomologists. To the majority of people there is no information regarding them so welcome as the fact that they are gradually being exterminated by the advance of civilization. This being so, it should be additionally interesting to those who live in districts where mosquitoes abound to know how their departure can be expedited. Permanganate of potash, says a medical paper, can be used against them with deadly effect. Minute parts of the crystal are sufficient for the purpose. The same authority informs us that only two and a half hours are required for a mosquito to develop from its first stage, a speck resembling boiled tapioca, to its active and venomous maturity.

The Requisitions by the Government for It for Navy Flags.

Imperative requisitions by the Government authorities for the production of bunting for navy flags are what is known as superiority so well known to characterize the American article. The regulations prescribe that the fabric be made entirely of wool of the best quality, and show no imperfections, the weight to be five and one-fourth pounds avoirdupois per piece of forty yards in length, the yarn to be evenly spun, the warp and filling to contain no less than thirty-four threads to the inch, and the warp two-ply with one-ply filling, properly twisted; further, a tensile strength required of sixty-five pounds for the warp and forty-five poubns for the filling, in test pieces two inches wide. The colors must be as "fast" as it is possible to make them, and not liable to be seriously affected by being soaked continuously for twenty-four hours in fresh water and then thoroughly washed in water with which is combined a good grade of laundry soap. Every stripe and device on the flags made of this superb material are measured with mathematical geometrical accuracy, and the stars are put on so carefully and evenly that when the flag is held up to the light the stars, which are made of muslin and put on both sides, appear to be a part of the fabric. The stars are cut with chisels out of bleached muslin, said thirty thicknesses together on a large open block.—Boston Transcript.

THE FRENCH PEASANT.

After Harvest All the Fields Become Common Property.

The French peasant has an independent means of existence. He owns the soil he tills. If he employs laborers they, at least, will own a house and garden, and hope to own a plot. The English villager is either a small tradesman or a laborer. A garden which he cultivates but does not own is, as a rule, the extent of his possessions. There are two classes in an English village, and these may be subdivided into various religious sects. There is only one class in our French commune—a fact which has a material bearing upon the social economy of the community. Every inhabitant of the commune is a proprietor of something, and all are bent on saving, yet, with all their individualism, they combine for common and mutual interest. This is illustrated by the organization of the syndicate for buying at wholesale prices. They unite for the cultivation of the soil, lending each other horses and making up teams. Every commune has a field, which is common property, and where, on payment of a trifling charge, animals graze. After the harvest all the fields become common property, and the gros betail and the other betail are allowed to roam at large.—Contemporary Review.

BIGGEST WINE TANK IN THE WORLD.

Half a Million Gallons of Wine Pumped Into It by Steam in California.

Half a million gallons of wine, all in one still, deep, red lake, are the feature of this year's wine industry in California. The lake is the biggest vat in all the history of wine making. The famous great tun at Heidelberg held only 50,000 gallons. London boasted of its Monster, as did Heidelberg, and in San Francisco is one which holds 150,000 gallons. Before this huge underground cavern at Asti, in Sonoma, where 500,000 gallons of grape juice are to take on sweetness and flavor, all former ideas in storing vast quantities of wine are insignificant.

For one solid week two steam pumps forced into this reservoir four-inch streams of grape juice before it was filled and corked. For this huge storage tank is in reality a sort of cellar, being entirely buried well underground to preserve it from changes of temperature and the heat of the sun's rays. Its construction was a matter of sudden necessity. It unexpectedly became known that there was more grape juice in Sonoma vineyards than there was room in which to put it. The idea of a big concrete cistern was broached and quickly adopte. and in forty-five days from the time the first shovelful of earth was thrown out the steam pumps began their task of filling it.—New York Sun.

UNAPPRECIATED KISSES.

He never sunk a collier
To bottle up a fleet,
But the pretty maidens kiss him
And exclaim: "Oh, ain't he sweet!"

He never scoffed at danger,
Nor made a poet sing;
He has never done a single
Extraordinary thing.

Still the women, when they see him,
Utter words of wild delight,
And at once begin to kiss him,
Each of them with all her might.

But it hasn't swelled his head up,
Hasn't spoiled the little chap—
He is three weeks old and doesn't
Care a continental rap.

THE CRAMPTON MYSTERY.

"Please tell Mr. Crampton that I must see him—I have something of the utmost importance to tell him."

"Very well, sir."

The maid left Fred Palmer, a hustling youth, with an habitually sensational air, standing by the hat rack, and ran upstairs as fast as she could. The parlor seemed deserted, for there was no fire in it, though it was midwinter. Altogether, the house had a disagreeable feeling of sadness about it. No wonder, considering that the only son of the family had been missing for over a week, and nothing but a crumpled and battered hat found in a passenger coach on the railroad to give a hint of his fate.

Presently the maid came running down the stairs with, "Please come up to Mr. Crampton's room, sir." Which message she delivered breathlessly before she could touch the last step of the flight.

The young man found a picture of bereavement in Mr. Crampton's room. A week before that Leonard Crampton would have been cut down by any chance acquaintance as a robust, prosperous man of forty-five. This evening he looked, wrapped in a drab flannel dressing gown, and seated in an invalid chair close to the fire, like a man of seventy.

"You have something to say to me, Mr. Palmer?" he asked, in a shaky voice.

"Yes, sir, and it would not wait, or I would not have troubled you at this hour. To come to the point, I have traced the—murderer."

Mr. Crampton pulled himself forward by the two arms of his chair and stared with open mouth.

"Then poor Bob—my boy has been murdered!"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir," said Palmer, starting back and hesitating—"I—I thought—why, everybody says—I thought you were all reconciled to—to this view."

"Yes—yes; go on and tell me. I suppose it must be so. Sit down."

"The man has left Chicago, sir. The police think he has made his way to Oregon or Washington, they are looking for him on other charges."

"Yes, yes. I care nothing about other charges. Tell me about this—about my boy."

"Yes, sir," said Palmer: "I am coming to that. This man—commonly known as Snipper Clary—was seen here a week ago last Wednesday, wandering about the town. He had on an old brown traveling cap and a dispirited summer suit. Said he was looking for work. The police here had no idea as to his identity. Thursday he was seen speaking to poor Bob—"

"Good God!"

"Yes, sir. Then he followed Bob down toward the freight yards. You remember that was the night—"

"Yes. I remember that."

"Well, sir, it seems that the wife of the gatekeeper at the Love Lane crossing heard some one call for help—a man's voice. She went out and spoke to her husband about it, and he told her she was a fool for her pains. It was a drunken man trying to sing up the lane. Soon after that this same gatekeeper admits that a man answering the description of Clary, only with a derby hat, came to the crossing, carrying a bundle under his arm. Now—"

"And which way did he go?"

"Well, the gatekeeper says he turned and walked up the line away from town. It was just after that that the No. 9 train went out, you know, sir. And it was after No. 9 that the porter found Bob's hat—a derby—under the seat. The conductor said, you remember, that a rough-looking man boarded the train at Whitger's and paid his fare as far as Evanston."

The unhappy father was sobbing, and Palmer respectfully paused a moment in his story.

"What do you think this scoundrel did with my son? Where is the body?"

"I was looking through Love Lane this afternoon, sir, Crampton, do you know the cedar clump at the edge of the Carpenter place, just about fifty yards from the crossing?"

"Well?"

"I found the bushes a good deal trodden at one place there. The long grass in the ditch at the roadside is dry now, of course, but at this place it was broken and stamped. And two rails of the snake fence have been let down there. Mrs. Carpenter told me that she had never known any one to make a short cut through the cedar clump at that place. But I went and looked about among the trees and found a well there, it has not been used for years, and the boy goes that it is a used-up oil well."

"And you think?"

"Yes, sir. I think that the murderer threw poor Bob's body down that well."

"But isn't it filled up."

"Not up to the top, sir."

"Isn't there any machinery in it?"

"No, sir. The machinery was all removed long ago."

"Then," said Mr. Crampton, "I'll have that well opened, if I have to pay ten thousand dollars for it."

Here was where Palmer found his difficulty in the task he had set himself. The Carpenters—two brothers and his wife or one of them—refused to allow that well to be touched. Mr. Crampton, accompanied by Palmer, visited the Carpenters' place on the morning after this interview, the Carpenters pointed out that the short, thick undergrowth of brushwood at the mouth of the hole was not disturbed, as it would be if a dead body had been dragged thither and thrown in only a week before. Mr. Crampton pointed to the disturbed fence rails and trampled grass at the break in the fence, and the unquestionable evidence that some one had passed in that way, walked to the old well and gone back again the same way.

But the Carpenters, though they admitted all the evidence, denied the force of Palmer's theory that a murder had been committed thereabouts on the Thursday night of the previous week.

It must be said that the Carpenters were in a minority. Fred Palmer, in whose ability to ferret out a mystery much of his fellow-townsmen had great confidence, had discovered fresh evidence in the shape of a rag with blood on it in the ditch. Apart from all this strong circumstantial evidence, Fred Palmer was the assistant editor of a local paper, and had more than once before had successfully traced the guilt in another lesser crime to the guilty party.

In the previous case, a small gambling swindle, the opposition paper and most of the inhabitants had ridiculed Palmer's pretensions to being able to solve the problem; this time, at least, the citizens were very wary of premature ridicule.

The upshot of all this was that, while Mr. Crampton consulted lawyers to find a means of compelling the Carpenters to allow their oil well to be excavated, local public opinion in the space of forty eight hours pretty generally rose to Fred Palmer's level; that young Bob Crampton had been murdered for his watch and the considerable sum of money he was known to have had in his pocket; that the murderer was a tramp who had disappeared from the neighborhood on the night of Bob's disappearance, and that Bob's body had been thrown into the abandoned well.

"If you will only bring that villain to justice," Mr. Crampton said to Fred Palmer at a second interview, "you may command any service I am able to do you from now on."

That was just what Palmer wanted to hear from Bob's father, entirely because Bob's father was also the father of Clara, and because a certain reportorial ambition in this activity of Fred Palmer.

Palmer knew that Nipper Cary was supposed by the Chicago police to have made his way to Oregon or Washington state. He did not hesitate to know the desperate villain whose description answered so completely to that of the tramp with whom Bob Crampton had been seen.

He had $500 of his own within easy reach. He resolved to send that sum in his struggle for justice and Clara. So he went and spoke about the matter to his editor and chief.

"And you want to go all the way to Seattle to hunt this desperado the editor-in-chief remarked, in a meditative way.

"Just that," said Palmer. "See here; suppose I end by finding the fellow, the paper gets fame, doesn't it? Suppose I don't find him, what does the paper lose? You can get Giles to supply for me."

"Go ahead," said the chief.

And ahead Palmer went. But he did not leave town without one brief interview with Clara, in which he got that young lady—she was very young, besides being heart-broken about her brother—promised that she would be brother's murderer to justice she would honestly try to love him. The promise was not given very willingly, but it was sincere, and it meant an indefinite deal to Palmer, who was very sanguine.

So Palmer, leaving Mr. Crampton to fight with the pig-headed Carpenter family, set out for Oregon by way of Chicago.

Two days later a letter with typewritten address came to Clara Crampton. "I've found the scoundrel. I've just met that ass, Palmer, coming out of a police station. He rushed up and grabbed me by the shoulder. His jaw dropped when he first saw me. He says you all think I am dead. I am not.

"The fact is, a tramp I came across last week gave me a black eye, way out of Love Lane, trying to bulldose me into giving him something. You know, I meant to go out there and make a moonlight study. It ended in my giving him a bloody nose. Then I went on my way, carrying my sketching box and easel under my arm. The tramp tumbled so dead-like into the ditch that after I had left him I gave up the idea of making my moonlight sketch and came back to see if he was hurt badly.

"I found that he had crawled on to the Carpenter farm. Then he and I made friends over a book and a pipe, and I got to tramping with him. I had read so much about that sort of thing in magazines. Some days ago I caught on to it that my tramp was not a regular tramp at all, but a big criminal who was trying to get away from me. That he suspected me and gave me the slip.

"Since then I have been having a great time looking for him in the slums of Chicago—the police and I.

"I shall be home to-morrow. I am an ass, I know, to frighten you like this. But I'm not a still worse one. He says he will go to the Pacific and begin life afresh. I told him it was the best thing he could do. Your own brother, R. C."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

STAGE WIT.

Jokes Heard at Some of Our Metropolitan Theatres.

In "Gay Mr. Lightfoot," at the Bijou, W. H. Thompson says a husband is like an egg—the best part he's kept in hot water, the harder he gets.

During a jealous quarrel, Foreman and West, at the same theatre, discuss the alleged lover in the case. "Did you notice how his face lights up?"

"That's because he's lantern-jawed."

There's a deal of truth in this joke of the Russell Brothers at Weber and Field's:

"Which is worth the most—a horse or a man?"

"A man, of course."

"You're wrong. A horse is valuable when he's broken, but a man that's broken is no use to anybody."

Here's one of Fritz Williams's latest: Business was slow at the cafe adjoining a theatre. During the intermission nobody came in to "see a man." The proprietor sent his porter across the street to see if a rival establishment was getting all the trade.

"Anybody drinking in there?" he asked anxiously, on Mike returned.

"Divil a wan but two," was the paradoxical answer.

Richard Fuller Golden says he has discovered an occupation for retired sea captains—they should become insurance solicitors. In support of this statement he cites the case of a captain who, in trying to insure a farmer, nearly deluged him with his flow of eloquence.

"You're quite a talker," said the stranger. "How did you get your gift of gab?"

"Well," said the captain, "when I was before the mast I could talk to everybody."

When Digby Bell was playing in Newark recently a tall, elderly hayseed stepped up to the box office and asked:

"What be the play to-night?"

"Hoosier Doctor,"

"Hoosier Doctor," repeated the box office man, smilingly.

"My doctor ain't a-comin', so it don't concern you," snorted the man, and a row was imminent, when the employe explained the matter and restored peace.

Assisting Young People to Marry.

A plan for financially assisting young people to marry has been devised recently by a wealthy and philanthropic New Yorker, and there can be no doubt that the good man will find many would-be beneficiaries. The scheme may come to grief, however, through unfitness of the applicants, for it is one of the tenments of society that the people most willing to sacrifice anything are the least fit. Marrying goes on merrily, in all our cities, between people who have nothing between them and starvation but wages of a salary that may be stopped at any time by an employer's whim. Only a few look out for the best form of association for the financial encouragement of marriage is one that prevails n some parts of England; a couple intending to marry announce to their unmarried friends that contributions will be acceptable, and they pledge themselves to return any amount when the giver himself—or herself—is bout to marry. How many Americans, however, would contribute with such a promise as security?

He Killed Spiders.

"No money in spider-killing?" said the shabby man. "Isn't there, though? You don't know what a really spider-infested house is. In the country you've always noticed that the walls and ceiling-corners of houses are much more cobwebby than in the towns. It's almost impossible for a housekeeper to keep them down; they must be exterminated. Well, it has been done scientifically.

"I always carry ten or twelve pounds of sulphur and a very strong-smelling vegetable substance called asafoetida with me. I close the windows of the rooms and all the ventilators. Then I put a tray of powdered sulphur, generally about half a pound, in one corner of the room, and a small quantity of asafoetida in the other. I set light to both, and close the door tight, putting a wet cloth under the door-mat to keep all the air in.

"I then proceed to another room, and treat it in the same way. When I open the doors and windows of the room I have smoked out I find the spiders on the floor, dead as mutton.—Answers.

Mark's Confession.

One day Mark Twain was dandling his first-born infant upon his knees. His wife came in, and said, "Well, Samuel, you can't deny that you love that baby dearly." "No," said Mark Twain—"I can't admit that; but I don't mind confessing that I do respect the little thing for his father's sake."

BURIED DEFENSES.

OUR UNSEEN BATTERIES ARE OF THE UTMOST IMPORTANCE.

What Electricity Would Do for Us In Case of War With Spain—It Use on Board a Man-of-War—How Wires Are Operated From Aboard Ship.

"Take heed
How you awake our sleeping Sword of War:
We charge you in the name of God, take heed."

There is no nation on the globe today, to which the above quotation from Shakespeare applies with greater force than to the United States. Such should give heed to its warning. Other governments have more powerful navies and larger and better equipped armies, but of all nations the United States has the most complete mastery of that subtle and deadly something called electricity—and the King of the next war will be Electricity. As it stands to-day a handful of men could sweep away an army. The destructive power of a single bolt of electricity, says Edison, This fact makes a brief account of some of the more important uses that can be made of electricity, especially in the warfare, of pertinent interest now, when every southern breeze blows up a fresh war rumor.

In modern warfare the effectiveness of the heavy armor defenses of all great seaboard cities against the war vessels of an enemy becomes of the very first importance. Hostile ships must not be allowed to approach near enough to hurl their terrible explosives into the heart of a great city. If once the bombardment began, in a few hours the city would be in ruins. Electricity makes this needed harbor protection a possibility.

The waters of the surrounding harbors are plotted in such a way that the exact position of a ship at any moment may be known, by the aid of electric position and range finders, to an observer stationed at the shore, if he be miles away. Submarine mines, loaded with the most powerful known explosives, are placed in various parts of the harbor, and connected by means of wires with a common center. Men are stationed at this point, who, should a hostile fleet appear, have only to wait until a ship is in the midst of the submarine mines, then press a button and electricity and the explosive will do the rest. Not a ship afloat could withstand that could withstand the shock of the explosion of one of these powerful submarine mines.

Another method of harbor defense is suggested by Edison. "Suppose," says he, "you sink an endless cable to the bottom of a harbor, at the proper distance from the shore, and have it go around wheels just as the bridge cable is worked, so that it can be moved forward and backward. Insulate the cable so that it can be charged with electricity. Then attach torpedoes to it every 100 feet or more. Now by having a long cable you can handle torpedoes of a movable cable it would be possible to hit any ship that tried to enter the harbor. The operator of the cable at the land station could watch the ships calculate their positions with [illegible] where his torpedoes are and at the proper time fire one or more torpedoes two or three of them. The result is the destruction of the ship. If thought necessary the harbor could be lined with such cables and the protection of the city would be absolute. Torpedo catchers would not be effective against such a defense, because if they began grappling for the cable the hook on end of their grappling irons would notify the operator. All he would have to do would be to give a couple of torpedoes. That would be the end of the torpedo catchers."

Then there are the auto-mobile or Bob torpedoes, which are automatically propelled through the water from the shore by electricity fed to them through wires which are unreeled as the torpedo passes through the water on their missions of destruction. Should one of these strike a ship the torpedo explodes and the vessel is destroyed.

The uses of electricity on board a modern man-of-war are manifold. The lighting of the ship, the elevation of the great guns are moved and fired by electricity, the speed of the ship is defeated house by the country you've noticed that the walls and ceiling-corners of houses are much more cobwebby than in the towns. It's almost impossible for a housekeeper to keep them down; they must be exterminated. Well, it has been done scientifically.

THE WOMANS WORLD

An Old Time Wrinkle Recipe.

Any women who have read the Vicar of Wakefield would give much to know just what herbs and simples were used in the face wash that Mrs. Primrose and her bonny daughters were at such pains to make over the fire. Both dames and demoiselles of those times were famous for their fine complexions, and it is well worth while making a study of their means to this desirable end. Here is a recipe straight from old England that sounds as if it might be a compound like the famous "Primrose Wash." It is far more delicate than cold cream, cocoa butter or any of the emollients now so much in vogue, and when used over night all traces of it should disappear before morning.

To make, put a cup of good cream in a small saucepan over the fire and stir until it boils; allow to cool and reheat. Do this three times. While hot stir in the juice of two lemons and two tablespoonsful of cucumber juice. This may easily be pressed from this vegetable by cutting in bits the size of half a lemon and pressing in the squeezer in the same way as lemons. Stir in, also, two tablespoonsful of glycerine and one of honey. (The former may be omitted if it does not agree with the skin.) At the last add a few drops of any nice scent. The saucepan should be kept in hot water until the ingredients are well mixed, then removed and the contents stirred every few minutes until perfectly cold. It is now ready to be packed in small pots (like those that come with extract or beef), and covered with paper dipped in the white of an egg, to become air-tight. The face should be washed with good soap and hot water, shading off to cold, over night, and this ointment carefully massaged into the skin.

When glycerine is omitted use sweet oil instead.

As to Eating Before Sleeping.

A short time since physicians held the eating of food immediately before retiring almost a crime. The old theory is quite exploded. One medical journal, in commenting on the subject recently, said that while it is not good as a matter of fact, to go to bed with the stomach so loaded that the undigested food will render one restless still something of a light, palatable nature in the stomach is one of the best aids to quietude and rest. The process of digestion goes on in sleep with as much regularity as when one is taking violent exercise to add it and in no sensing in the stomach is very desirable for the night's rest. Some physicians have declared, indeed, that a good deal of the prevalent insomnia is the result of an unconscious craving of the stomach for food in persons who have been unduly frightened by the opinion that they must eat before going to bed, or who have, like many nervous women, been keeping themselves in a state of semi-starvation. Nothing is more agreeable on retiring for the night than to take a bowl of hot broth, like oatmeal gruel or some good nourishing soup. It is a positive aid to nervous people, and induces peaceful slumbers. This is especially the case during cold winter nights, when the stomach craves warmth as much as any other part of the body. Even a glass of hot milk is grateful to the palate on such occasions, but a bowl of light, well cooked gruel is better and during the cold months of winter should be the evening food of every woman who feels as many do, the need of food at night.—New York Ledger.

The Capable Girl's Lament.

"It's a terrible misfortune to be able to do thing ." commented one girl to her sister, who possesses the knack of doing everything, from millinery to scrubbing. It is true that such a person is apt to be overworked by her friends, who, seeing the deft fingers work so quickly, are too forgetful of the strength used in gratifying their requests to "just help me out on this dear, you do it so beautifully." However, it is well to teach girls to do everything that they are likely to need to know in everyday life or emergencies. But with all the rest of the knowledge, impress upon the girls a regard for their own strength and the power to say no when nerves cry out that the limit of healthful endurance is reached.

Paper Teeth Now.

It is certainly a reign of wood pulp that is upon us, for now a German has perfected a process for making false teeth, that is, artificial teeth for human use, manufactured from paper pulp instead of porcelain or the other materials usually used in the imitation of masticators of commerce. They are stated to be very satisfactory in every respect. They are not brittle and do not chip off. The moisture of the mouth has no effect upon these teeth and they retain their color perfectly. They are lighter than porcelain and cheaper to make.

Tortoise Shell Always in Favor.

Tortoise shell will ever remain in favor for hair ornaments, owing to its extreme lightness, which prevents any apparent weight to the wearer. The amber shell from the under part of the tortoise is handsome in light hair and more scarce than the dark veined shell, so it remains 100 per cent. higher in price and much sought after. The handsomest shell comes from Ceylon and the East Indies, with less choice from South America and Cuba. The best shell work is done in Italy.

A Tweed Bodice.

This stylish bodice is intended to be made of tweed goods to correspond with the skirt, the trimming being silk or velvet. It is arranged with a fitted lining, the under-arm side pieces of which are to be again used for cutting the material, and this is exactly like the lining, and to be tacked to same. The material front is gathered at the waist, and hooked down centre; then arranged from the neck is a revere of velvet, also lined with tweed material, or else with silk, and interlined with canvas, the outer edge being finished with a silk cord, while down the front a piece of lace is gathered, full enough to allow it to fall in cascade effect. The material back, which has a seam down the centre, is stretched over the lining back and round side piece. The band collar cut in the trimming material, line with silk, and interline with canvas and bordered with fur. The coat-shape sleeve is to be cut in lining, then the material, which tack to the lining under. The material upper is first put into downward pleats on either side, then tacked over the lining upper, and the two parts stitched together by the inner and outer seams, the wrist faced up with a piece of silk, and finished with a silk cord. The shoulder fulness is gathered to lining size, and the sleeve stitched in. Quantity of 42-inch tweed, 2 yards; 22-inch satin, 1-2 yard; fur, 1-2 yard.

Colored Handkerchiefs.

Colored handkerchiefs are really coming into vogue again, it seems. It is so reported every now and then, and they are to be seen in the shops, but women are actually beginning to carry them now. The handkerchief itself generally is of fine white linen, but it is embroidered in colors. A pretty design has a wreath somewhat larger than a silver dollar embroidered in two colors in one corner. Violets, forget-me-nots, daisies and arbutus, in their natural colors, have first place in these designs. Other pretty handkerchiefs have single flowers scattered all over them, or arranged so as to form a broad border inside of the narrow hem. Handkerchiefs of pale blue, pink, green or lilac linen, checked with a contrasting shade, are considered quite smart with sporting costumes. Conservative people prefer pure white linen, plain or set off with a bit of dainty embroidery or fine lace.

A Costly Needlework Kit.

In China the ladies of high class use very dainty thimbles. Some are carved from aquamarine pearls, with bands of fine gold, on which are engraved all sorts of fantastic things, the etchings of which serve for catching the needle, as the holes of the outside barbarian thimble. On the thimble she always has a mother of pearl case. With the thimble the Chinese lady has a delicate pair of scissors of the finest steel, in a sheath of pearl, and a pearl needle case. The articles are all enclosed in an exquisitely inlaid case of the purest mother of pearl. A New York lady, whose husband was in the China trade, has one of these Chinese needlework kits, which she values at $2,000.—Exchange.

Good for Colds.

An excellent drink for any one suffering from a hard cold, or even the cough that comes with grip, is flax seed lemon. It is simply made. Take four tablespoonfuls of flaxseed and over them pour one quart of boiling water. Let this steep for three hours, when the top should be poured off, leaving the flaxseed in the bottom of the pitcher. If the liquid is too thick it can be thinned a little with cold water. Add the juice of two lemons and sugar to taste. It is a very pleasant drink, and it loosens the cough.

Water as a Disinfectant.

Few of us realize how important a part water plays as a disinfectant. It is really such because it is a powerful absorbent. To flush closets and drains, then, is not only to wash away mechanical impurities, but to a large extent to destroy chemical poisons. A word to the wise is sufficient. It must be added, however, that a large uncovered vessel of water should stand in every sick room and be frequently renewed. The water not only absorbs many impurities from the atmosphere, but softens and tempers it. On the same principle one should never drink water that has stood uncovered in a sick room.

Fascinating Lingerie.

The latest petticoats of silk or batiste are cut to fit the hips like the gowns which cover them, and short petticoats as well have this same shape. Miles of ruffling and lace are used in the frou-frou around the feet, but the top must be as scant and plain as possible. The upper skirt is vandyked or scalloped as the case may be, and finished with a ruffle of lace or the wide flounce is scalloped and trimmed below. Chiffon flounces with tiny ruches on the edge trim some of the silk skirts of light colors. Bows of colored ribbon adorn the heading of the white flounces on the white silk skirts, and anything which makes them attractive and expensive seems to cast a spell over all womankind.

The season's corset cover is a most fascinating little trifle made of thin sheer batiste or nainsook, with narrow lace insertion encircling the waist line in a narrow belt of beading embroidery, through which ribbon is run and adjusted to the figure around the shoulders in the same way, except that the beading is lace and very narrow. It is made, too, after the French model, with no seams except under the arm. The bolero-shaped corset cover is very much liked, since it, too, does away with any superfluous material at the waist.

The bolero is used very prettily on the nightgowns like the one in the illustration and also in the Empire chemise. Dainty tucks and insertions of lace form these little jackets. A pretty model for a nightgown has an Empire waist, made by gathering the material in a sort of scant puff between two rows of embroidered insertion. A lace-edged frill forms a collar.

One article in the lingerie department which is every woman's delight is the matinee tea jacket, or dressing jacket, whichever you choose to call it. These garments range in style from the plain Geisha, with the large sleeves, up to the possible limit of extravagance in material and trimming. The Geisha is usually made of flannel and possibly cashmere, but there is a tempting display among the other jackets of Liberty silk trimmed with lace and frills of ribbon and the prettiest confections of silk and chiffon, besides no end of pretty designs carried out in fine white batiste made with fancy yokes. Jackets and petticoats to match in both silk and fine English nainsook are one of the fashionable fads, and if your corsets match your petticoat you are indeed up to date in the matter of underwear.—N. Y. Sun.

A FASHIONABLE NECK FINISH.

Bright Colors in Bad Taste.

Woman should not be tempted by the display of fancy kid gloves to be seen in many shops. They are hopelessly bad form. What woman of exquisite taste would dream of donning bright red, blue or green kids, or would be caught wearing a pair of white suedes embroidered elaborately in pink or blue, or black, in yellow and white? The Parisians are the best gloved women in the world, and the style of wearing suede gloves in white and delicate shades of tans, grays and browns prevails among them from year to year.

Stylish Bodice.

This corsage is of blue silk to be worn with a blue cloth skirt. It is trimmed with bands of white satin bound on each side with blue velvet. The bands are outlined with an embroidery of white silk with feather stitched design. The yoke is made of shirred chiffon and comet ribbons. The sleeves are trimmed the same as the waist.

How to Lace the Corset.

Here is another boon for the stout women who suffer from a surplus of hips, etc., and who have too much conscience or too hearty appetites to lace. Let them give ear to the new theory of lacing their corsets by which too solid flesh may be held in abeyance and yet no harm done physically.

The dressmakers have gotten this new device from a physician who says to pull out your corset laces as you now have them, lay the eyelet sides of the corsets vis-a-vis, as though to begin a fresh orthodox lacing, and then taking one lacer, put it from beneath through an eyelet at the waist line on that side of the corset lying at your left.

Draw the laced through as far as the top eyelet, run through this one and let the end four or five inches long project. Now take the other lacer and pass it through that eyelet next below the one where the other lacer first went through and draw it down to the bottom eyelet, run through and let a five inch end hang. Pick up the great length of the first lacer and begin zigzagging it back and forth through eylets on both sides of the two sections of the corset until an end hangs out opposite the first end mentioned.

With the long portion of the second lacer zigzag through the holes of both pieces of corset to the bottom, where an end must hang out opposite the second end mentioned.

When so laced up, put on the corsets, look them over and see what will happen. Simply pull on the top and bottom ends of the laces that are not zigzagged through, and the corset will first draw in to fit about the waist and ribs comfortably and without pressure. At top and bottom, though, where over the bust and hips, the edges of stays always project and add greatly to girth, these edges will draw in perfectly tight and flat.

No discomfort will be felt, and, so lacing her stays, a woman can reduce her hips and bust measurement a matter of three to five inches. In doing this the flesh is not rolled up under her chin or thrust out in ungainly lumps, because the stay is easy at waist line and over ribs.

Jenny Lind Off the Stage.

Jenny Lind the woman was greater than Jenny Lind the singer. The bishop of Norwich's son, subsequently Dean Stanley, wrote that she had "the manners of a princess, with the simplicity of a child and the goodness of an angel." Her character showed itself, he added, "through a thousand traits of humanity, gentleness, thoughtfulness, wisdom, piety."

At one of Dean Stanley's services in the cathedral she was moved to tears by the singing of the boy choristers and had placed reserves for them at her concert the next morning. When she came on the platform she greeted them with a smile of recognition which the boys never forgot.

While she was singing in Copenhagen such was the excitement that court and town begged her to give them one more day of song. A gentleman of musical culture had, with his wife, anxiously looked forward to her visit. When she came he was on a sick bed. Jenny Lind heard of his desire and found time to go to his house and sing to him and his wife.

When she went to London Mendelssohn asked her to sing to a friend of his who had long lain upon a bed of sickness. She went and cheered him with songs, the remembrance of which is still cherished by the family.—Presbyterian.

UNCERTAINTY OF FASHIONS.

Summer Fabrics Displayed in Shop Windows.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

Fashion has a variety of enticing charms at all times and seasons; but there is nothing else quite so fascinating after all as her uncertainty. No sooner do we feel ourselves comfortably fixed for winter gowns than summer silks, piques, batistes, organdies, and the sheerest lawns blossom out in the shops without any regard to temperature or present needs of dress.

Rather small patterns prevail among the new China silks and satin-finished foulards, some of the prettiest being polka dots of various sizes grouped together with scattering dots between groups. Among the new silks of the heavier kinds there are moires antique, glosse taffetas, shiny brocades prettily shaded in varying tints of one color for evening wraps and gowns.

The variety in cotton robe dresses of batistes and sheer lawns, trimmed with embroidery and lace, is also very tempting, as the trouble of making them up is simplified so much by the finished skirt, which requires nothing but a band. The satin finished crepe de chine is another material which is very popular and altogether lovely in the new sheath skirts, which seem to have come to stay for another season at least.

Just how all the pretty summer fabrics are to made up is a matter of conjecture at the moment, but it is pretty safe to say that our thin gowns will be cut with a train, that overdresses will flourish, and that ruffles of every kind and description will add their soft frou-frou to the varying modes of decoration. With the scant skirts and gauzy materials ruffles are almost a necessity to give the flare and hold the skirt out around the feet. Whatever the overskirts and tunics may become later, they have no perceptible effect on the figure yet, so far as broadening it is concerned, for they fit just as closely well below the hips as the skirt underneath, and if they are made very long, almost covering the skirt, they take very little from the height.

FUR TRIMMED WRAPS.

The Thermometer Makes Long Coats Popular Now.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

With all the talk about new and original fashions, and all the strange forms we see in gowns, coats, wraps and hat brims, it is simply a case of history repeating itself once again. The really new features of fashion are the smart touches which modern cleverness in dress gives to all things. Almost all the modes we have this season are old-time ideas revived, but if the ugliest fashion on record were to be reproduced for our approval, it would be with such ingenious modifications, such improvements in fit and detail of finish, that the old form would be lost in what would seem to be an original model. So far our fashions are both new and old at the same time.

The thermometer has a decided influence on fashion just at present, despite all our frivolous tendencies, and it is the long redingote, polonaise and princess cloak costumes that appeal most strongly to the leaders in dress. The long newmarket, with fur collar, revers and cuffs, is revived again; the chief difference between the new and the old model being in the rounded fronts and scant effect. Some of these garments have a bishop sleeve, gathered into a cuff at the wrist, while others are made with the usual coat sleeve and a flaring circular cuff of cloth, or turned back cuffs of fur. The circular flounce at the bottom, is also one of the new features, but quite as many are made in the shape of a long, loose sacque. Polonaises with circular flounces on the edge and narrow fur trimming, are especially good style, but all this popularity of long garments has not affected the fashion in short jackets, which are quite as much worn and more varied in style than ever before. They are close-fitting little coats, variously cut in scallops, points and squares around the basque, and finished simply with rows of stitching, but the revers collar is the point where the elaborate decoration centres.

Lace outlined with brown chenille over white satin forms the revers on one brown cloth coat, the edges being finished with a narrow band of sable. When black fur is used the chenille should be either black or white. Cream satin decorated with the old-fashioned ribbon embroidery mixed with chenille forms the revers on another brown coat. Smoked fox is the fur edging. Jet sequins are mixed with chenille embroidery or lace, and if fur is not desired as an edging tiny ruches of black tulle or chiffon are used. White panne velvet covered with a design in white satin cords makes another fashionable revers, and spotted colored velvets are also used. For these the edging of fur, or a frill of silk matching the spot in color, is the finish. White astrakhan, with some contrasting fur on the edge, makes another very elegant facing.

Among the latest cloth gowns of the dressy variety there are some novel features, which may serve as prediction of things to come in the early spring. One model is in gray cloth, with a deep yoke of tucked white silk. Small revers of pale gray satin embroidered with silver and gray turn down at either side, and the same embroidery is the finish on the overdress and skirt. The overdress, which is short in front, is one of the newest designs, and, like all the new skirts, it fits in a perfectly plain manner at the back.

Embroidery and machine stitching are decidedly the leading features of dress decoration which make the latest mode in this especial department possible to every one. While the embroidery is very expensive, the stitching is simple enough for the most inexperienced purse. There is a perfect craze for stitching, in fact, and velvet as well as cloth is another material which is very popular for this work. Bands of velvet are stitched on the edges of skirts, and the revers and collars of coats are also finished in the same way. Machine stitching is also used on the edges of the new ruffles, which are cut bias and are very full. Some of the new skirts have a ruffle around the bottom, and one model has a ruffle on the back breadth only, which is very full and reaches to the knees. Another has a ruffle on the back breadth only, which is very full and reaches to the knees. Another has a ruffle on the back breadth only, which is very full and reaches to the knees.

WITHIN THE HOME.

SERVICABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR THE PAINSTAKING HOUSEWIFE.

Food and Raiment, and Peaceful Things Conducive to a Helpful Manner—Prominence I. G'ven to What to Wear and How to Make It.

To candy lemon peel, boil it in sugar and then expose it to the air till the sugar crystallizes. Orange peel must first be soaked in cold water, to remove the bitterness, the water to be changed every now and then. Boil till soft and transparent in the sugar.

The addition of a little subcarbonate of soda to milk will prevent milk turning sour so soon as it otherwise would, and is not in the least injurious.

To prevent a door squeaking, rub a little soap or oil on its hinges, which stops it directly.

Baldness, it is said, may be remedied by daily rubbing the part with onions till the skin is active and looks red. This should be done morning and night.

Should a chimney catch fire, shut all the doors and windows at once, so that there is as little draught as possible to feed the fire, saturate a piece of coarse canvas or sacking with water, and stop up the bottom of the chimney with it, and throw either salt or sulphur on the fire.

If the teeth are loose, the following wash should be used every morning, and will make them once more secure; Take a quarter of a pint of port wine, dissolve in it a quarter of an ounce of myrrh, and add one ounce of oil of almonds.

To clean hair-brushes, wash them in a quart of hot water with a teaspoonful of liquid ammonia added. The backs should not be allowed to go in, the bristles merely want dipping about gently for some few minutes.

Umbrellas will last longer if, when wet, they are placed handle downwards to dry.

BLACK VELVET BOLERO.

Boleros are by no means unfashionable, for they can be seen in many shapes, trimmed with narrow velvet ribbon on the most up-to-date gowns. One in red serge has the skirt trimmed with all rows of black braid, divided into two sets of three, the first going round at the knees and the second just below, but only traversing the side gores. The under bodice and the quiplure lace over silk, while the bolero, was, like the sleeves trimmed with black braid.

Some of these jackets are made to such odd shapes that it is hard to distinguish our old friend, the bolero. A model in black velvet worn over a fancy silk vest and full sleeves is perfectly plain in back, but in front was slashed to form separate points. The whole was lined with silk and edged with narrow fur.

APPLE DUMPLING WITH POTATO PASTRY.

Put six ounces of flour into a basin, add a tea-spoonful of baking-powder and a little salt; mix well and rub in five ounces of butter, then add six ounces of mashed potatoes. Mix all thoroughly and add a small quantity of water if necessary. Roll out the pastry and line a greased basin with it, reserving part of the pastry. Fill this with apples, sugar and whatever flavoring you prefer, cover the top with the remaining piece of pastry, pinch the edges together and cover it with a well floured cloth securely tied down. Boil it in fast-boiling water for two hours. This pastry is very suitable for any persons to be much more wholesome than the suet crust which usually envelopes the apples. It is also suitable for hot pies of meat or fruit.

FADGE.

A very favorite bread made of potatoes goes by the name of fadge. Its manufacture is so simple that most cooks make it by the rule of thumb, and provided the recipe is ever found its way into any cookery book. The potatoes should be mashed as smoothly as possible and seasoned with salt, then to every half pound of mash flour well kneaded into them as will make a stiff dough that may be handled without breaking too easily. This should be rolled out to a thickness of about a third of an inch and cut into triangular or square pieces of convenient size. Prick each piece here and there with a fork to prevent its blistering, and bake on a very hot and well-floured griddle. This bread should be eaten hot and well buttered, or it may be fried on the morning for breakfast, when it will make a nice garnish for a dish of ham and eggs. Fadge is not extremely digestible, and should be partaken of cautiously by those who try it for the first time.

THE COIFFURE.

"Milady's" coiffure is receiving much attention from the manufacturers this season, hair ornaments, hairpins, etc., being shown in an unusually large number of novel styles. Pompadour or bolero combs, now so popular in Paris, will undoubtedly be in great demand here by spring. Another novelty is the empire or high-backed Spanish comb that many thought had gone out of fashion for good. The fulness at the sides of the head now demanded by the fashionable coiffure calls for many sidecombs, and it is a tribute to American taste that these combs are invariably plain. If a woman's hair is beautiful, she only diminishes its glory by wearing a row of rhinestones or other mock jewels on her combs, and, if her hair is not especially fine, she should not call attention to it by glittering decorations.

FASHIONS IN FANS.

Fashions in fans do not appear to vary much. They are still made of frah or white marabout feathers, in gauze, ornamented with sequins and inlaid with lace; also fans worked in seedlepoint. The most in vogue are of black lobophore feathers and emeralds spangled with gold; others with bone handles, and made of pomegranate leaves and marabout feathers, spangled with ruby or blue, or with gilt pearl sandlus made of lace.

Need of Constitutional Changes.

All careful and fair students of State affairs agree that there is imperative need for a constitutional convention in New Jersey in order that the fundamental laws of the commonwealth may be altered to suit the existing conditions, but nevertheless many of the smaller counties are opposed to any such process of changing. This is due to the fact that the smaller counties fear that a constitutional convention might strip them of their present Senatorial representation with a correspondingr increase of power to the larger bailiwicks such as Hudson and Essex.

There is urquestionably a good deal of injustice in the present Senatorial representation. For instance, Cape May county, with 12,857 population, has as much representation as Hudson with a population of 398,000. Hudson and Essex counties, the premiers of New Jersey, secure only two Senators to the seven of other counties whose total of inhabitants does not equal them. Of course, it would be utterly impossible to make an entirely equal ratio of population for each Senator to represent, but under the present constitutional arrangement Hudson and Essex do not fare as well as a strict view of popular government would accord them.

But the Senatorial representation is not the only faulty construction of the present antequated constitution, which has been patched by Legislative amendments till it puzzles the most astute lawyers to know exactly what some of its portions mean. There are a great many other sections that are obviously unfitted for this day and generation. Sweeping changes are desired, and the only proper way to secure them is by holding a constitutional convention.

The Possibilities.

The bare possibility that Plainfield might be prevented from using the sewage beds disposal system for its sewage, as undoubtedly Dunellen ethmen intend to make a reality if energy and liberal expense in legal channels amount to anything, leads immediately to the thought: What next shall be done to cope with the situation?

In the news columns of today's paper the subject is discussed in a thorough manner from several standpoints, and the conclusion is that tidewater disposal, with an immense truck sewer, is the only practical report. The article is written in the face of possibilities, not probabilities. But in the devious ways of this world nowadays it is only the foolhardy that hold themselves aloof from the possibilities.

Whatever is done, whether the present disposal system is retained, a sewer built through to tide-water or a new plant constructed, the citizens of Plainfield will do well to remember that it should be no temporary arrangement but a permanent fixture, and that the probable future of such and the obstacles it is likely to meet should be fully considered before any step is taken.

There were 27,337 deaths in New Jersey during the year ending June 30, 1898, as shown by the State Board of Health report. This is 2,485 less than the average for eight years, notwithstanding the increase of population. The death-rate per 1,000 population was only 15.10, the lowest shown in twenty years' record. There has been a general diminution in preventable diseases. The lowest death-rate was in Ocean county, 10.34 per 1,000; Cape May county is second with 11.0; Bergen and Sussex counties are a tie for third place with 11.09

The Metuchen Brooder observes that there is talk of running a branch trolley line from New Market to South Plainfield. Why not make the branch from Plainfield through that place to Metuchen? asks the Recorder. It would be a better paying route than projected between Plainfield and Metuchen by way of Oak Tree.

We see by the papers that an Iowa girl advertised for a husband and got one. Her entire outlay was $9 When war with Spain broke out her husband enlisted and later was killed at San Diago. She collected $3 000 insurance and is now convinced that advertising pays.

Draw the Line Properly.

Assemblyman Houston, of Elizabeth, has introduced a bill in the Legislature which is designed to saddle the expense of conducting the District Court of that city upon the county, as well as the cost of running District Courts throughout the State upon the counties in which they are located.

We have no doubt but that the District Court of Elizabeth relieves Union county of considerable expense that might be attached to it if certain legal matters that pass through it were handled by the justice of peace system. But from the text of the copy of the measure, which has been supplied to The Daily Press, it seems that its provisions are altogether too sweeping. Under the present arrangement the Court is supported by the city of Elizabeth. If Mr. Houston's bill becomes a law Elizabeth will be absolved of that expense except as it will pay its proportionate share of the county tax accruing to it, as it does for the maintenance of other strictly county institutions now.

This hardly seems fair. The District Court of Elizabeth exists principally for the benefit of Elizabethians and such residents who can appeal to its machinery without inconvenience, which obviously Plainfielders, could not or would not expect to do. There is no reason why Plainfield taxpayers should help to pay for the entire maintenance of this court. If, however, the existence of the court is now relieving the county of certain expenses that Plainfield would otherwise have to pay its share of, then it would be but fair and just for some arrangement to be made whereby Elizabeth will not be put to bearing the whole burden.

But the line should be drawn so that the county as a whole should not be compelled to pay more than what it is relieved of in the ordinary course of legal machinery.

Fair Senatorial Representation.

In discussing the project of forming a new county, with Plainfield for the county seat, the Elizabeth Journal says that the scheme should be killed without delay or remorse." The Journal, with many other State papers, lays particular stress upon the fact that with another county the injustice of Senatorial representation in the Legislature will be increased more than ever, because it would mean that one more member of the Upper House would be given to the people in the proposed new bailiwick. The Journal says:

"If representation in the Senate was based upon population as it is in the Assembly, the case would be diff-rent, but the new county would have one S nator to its 30,000 inhabitants, while Essex an I Hudson each have one to their 300,000.

In other w rds, the 126 000 people with 30,000 voters, in Uni n and Somerset c unties, who now have two Senators in the State Senate, would have three Senators if another county was formed. Their representation would be increased 33 1-3 per cent., while that of all the other lower counties would suffer a comparative decrease.

The Journal's "if the representation in the Senate was based upon population" is very well taken. It is suggestive. From a strictly honest and fair view the representation in the Senate should be according to population. It is that way in New York State and many other common wealths. It is not Democratic that Cape May county with a trifle over 12 000 people should have the same influence as Essex county with 300,000. If New Jersey enjoyed the New York plan of Senatorial representation the larger counties would not be put to the disadvantage in the Legislature that they are not subjected to, and neither would we, consequently, hear so much objection to the formation of a new county. At present the new county idea obtains a great headway in other sections on account of the prospect of further injustice in the apportionment in the Senate members.

With the representation in the Senate gauged on an equal basis in the matter of population in each district much of the hue and cry against the formation of a new county would be at an end.

What it Costs to Run a Newspaper.

The optimists who think that it is the easiest thing in the world to run a newspaper and live like bloated bondholders should ponder on the cost of running a great newspaper in New York, the various expenditures figuring up to about $2,000,000 a year.

There is spent for editorial and literary matter $220,000, for local news $290,000; illustrations, $18 000; correspondents, $125 000; telegraph, $65,000; cable, $27,000; mechanical department, $410,000; paper $617 000; business office, in rent, light, etc., $219,000, and 337,550 miles of paper are during an run.

Of course, it doesn't cost that much to run The Daily Press, but considering the revenues and the other details incident to publishing a newspaper in a small city the cost for managing the finances is even more difficult than the figures quoted above indicate.

Among the Republican candidates mentioned for the Mayoralty honors in the borough are N. B. Smalley, S. St. John McCutchen and A. V. D. Honeyman.

Relief For Our Young Women.

Something will presently have to be done for the relief of our young women who must keep up to date. Some of them look as if they were ready to snap at any moment. The strain of being "in touch" with the times is wearing some of them down to nervous ghastliness. The young lady who is abreast of things has to read all the new books, see all the new pictures, hear all the latest music, attend all the new plays, kiss all the latest heroes, dress for all the swell receptions, take a dash at all the bargain counters, study all the fashion papers and hold herself in readiness to dress for dinner or deliver an essay at short notice. Nothing is so crushing to the up to date creature as to be asked with a tone of contempt if she hasn't read Zola's or Tolstoi's last book, or seen Tissot's last picture, or sat out the last Symphony concert—that is to say, if she hasn't. And to do all these things she needs five more hours on the day, which she has to take from the night. How, she asks herself, am I to keep up this dreadful pace and continue to dress for dinner, for the street and for the opera? She has to travel four roads at once, the fashionable, the intellectual, the esthetic and the charitable, and as she does not wake up till 10 o'clock her routes are not all covered.

The case of Mrs. Titus, bridge keeper, is indicative of the sickly sentimentality that surrounds female ruffianism. Mrs. Titus, who has kept a country drawbridge for 20 years, was considered somewhat inefficient by the authorities, and an assistant was appointed to relieve her of some of her labors. She assaulted him and threw him off the bridge, declaring that she would take the life of any man who interfered with her job. A large admiration of her valor began to spread over the immediate community. Her picture bloomed out widely. She was a valiant old lady, a sturdy protector of her rights, etc., but she was arrested for assault with some difficulty. Magistrate Poole of New York city looked at her admiringly and said there were self reliance and character written all around her jaws. He then discharged her, and the court attendants gave three cheers. This recalls a former case before a New York police justice, in which a small burglar had attacked a large citizen on the street and robbed him. The only thing that the police justice saw was the discrepancy in size. So he reprimanded the big man for coming to court and discharged the small man for his bravery. Such methods have been in vogue in the New York police courts for years. Personal violence always gets off with a tip, but the thief who steals a loaf of bread in a gentlemanly fashion is doomed.

Lyddite, to use a theatrical phrase, appears to have "scored a success." It kills more men than either nitroglycerin or dynamite. In the language of scientific men, "its area of destruction is much greater than of any other explosive." It was used extensively in the Sudan campaign, and its efficiency in blowing pagans into atoms was triumphantly attested. Christian warriors are no longer appalled at the fecundity of the heathen. They can now kill a thousand of them while they are converting one. Several of the highest scientific authorities are represented as rubbing their hands together with great glee and congratulating mankind on the important part that lyddite will play in the future civilization of the world.

The New York board of health has received from the Medora Dressed Beef Company of the West a request to be allowed to ship dressed horse meat to New York and sell it there. The petition sets forth that horseflesh has been scientifically proved to be superior to beef in nutrition and less susceptible to certain diseases. What the action of the board of health will be is not yet known, but there is no provision of law that prevents the selling of horseflesh for food. It may not be generally known that in Belgium more horseflesh than beef is sold in the market.

The beef controversy grows more and more conspicuous. Two of the largest Chicago firms of packers have offered to pay $100,000 to any one who will prove that chemicals were used in any beef packed by them, and on top of this Dr. C. Maxwell Christine of Philadelphia offers to send affidavits to General Miles that he saw it done in Chicago. It would seem that these two parties ought to adjust matters speedily. Let Dr. Christine go to Chicago and get the $100,000 in exchange for his affidavit.

The appropriation of $5,000 to enable the secretary of agriculture to investigate and report upon the physiological action of alcohol was brought about by the pressure of a great many prominent men in the United States who wish to get an official declaration from the government on the alcoholic question. It is really a temperance and not an industrial move.

The third wedding of Adelina Patti, which took place at Brecon, Wales, recently, is said to have surpassed in brilliancy either of her previous efforts in this line. She was assisted by a fire brigade, the police, an ex-lord mayor and a double chorus of village maidens. Her husband, Baron Cederstrom, is only 29 years old.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespian and Music World.

The management of the new farce comedy, "Bimbo of Bombay," which was booked for Music Hall Saturday night, telegraphed Manager Edwards yesterday, that in consequence of inability to get the scenery which had specially been prepared for this city, he would be obliged to defer the presentation to later date. The scenery was ordered shipped from Hartford Monday morning, but the late storm tied up all kinds of freight on all railroads east.

The next attraction at Music Hall will be the "Jefferson Boys" next Monday night. No better endorsement of their performance is needed than the following from the Syracuse, N. Y., Telegram of Saturday last. "It was quite a family affair that engaged in the performance of 'Rip Van Winkle' at the New Wieting last evening The four sons of Joseph Jefferson and Edna Carey, the wife of Charles B. Jefferson, and Blanche Bender, the wife of Jospen Jefferson, Jr., assumed the principal roles. By their satisfying and interesting efforts, they gave further proof of the talent contained in this noted dramatic family. The chief interest in the performance naturally centred in the portrayal of 'Rip' by Thomas Jefferson. If the memory of his father's remarkable embodiment of the role would not obtrude occasionally, while one is contemplating the son's performance, the latter's delineation of the character would be most satisfying. In some respects, especially in the earlier scenes, it is a finer achievement than his distinguished father is now capable of accomplishing, since it is invested with greater bouyancy and youthful spirit. He has the command of pathos also, as was agreeably evidenced in 'Rip's' parting with his lrate wife. The entire portrayal was unexpectedly satisfying and proved beyond question that the younger Jefferson is perfectly capable of winning distinction as an actor on his own merits." Reserved seats for the Jefferson engagement will be on sale at box office Thursday.

WIFE FOLLOWS HUSBAND

DEATH MAKES A DOUBLE VISIT TO CLARKSON FAMILY.

Husband Passed Away Monday Night and This Morning His Wife Also Died—A Double Funeral Tomorrow.

A. J. Clarkson, of Union street, died Monday night as a result of an attack of pneumonia, and Tuesday his wife, Mary E., also passed away with the same malady. The former, who is sixty-four years of age, was taken ill with the pneumonia two weeks ago. He gradually grew worse, but his wife, who was seventy-four years of age, nursed him with tender care. She devoted her whole time to his care, and as a result exhausted her vitality, and last Friday she fell a victim to the sickness which her husband was suffering with.

When Mrs. Clarkson was taken sick her husband grew worse rapidly until his death came Monday. In the meantime Mrs. Clarkson's condition also became critical. Sunday she became unconscious and did not revive before her death. Consequently she knew nothing of her husband's death.

A double funeral has been arranged for the dead couple for tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from their late home on Union avenue, near Stelle avenue.

Mr. Clarkson has resided in Plainfield and vicinity for about forty years, coming here from Rahway to work for the late Manning Stelle. He was regarded with great respect by all of his acquaintances. For nearly twenty years he has been a deacon in the Congregational church. Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson leave two children—Thomas J. Clarkson, janitor of the High School, and Mrs. Charles Bilyeu, of Somerset street.

Upset in a Snow Drift.

George Thatcher, Louis Stover and Walter Place had an unpleasant experience Tuesday afternoon at the corner of North and Watchung avenues, when they were upset from a sleigh in which they were riding. The cause of the accident was a huge snow bank, and at first it was thought that all three men were injured. Friends assisted them into Mallieon's drug store, where an examination proved that they were all right. The horse, although quite fractious, did not get away and no damage resulted.

AFTERMATH OF STORM.

drifts were shovelled out. Somerset street was opened to the terminus. The only part of the line not cleared is from the car house on West Fourth street to Monroe avenue and West Seventh street. That will be cleared tomorrow.

ALL GOT THEIR PRESS.

Good Work in Delivering Plainfield's Favorite Paper Tuesday.

The carrier boys of The Daily Press circulation department found the deep snow a serious obstacle in the distribution of The Press Tuesday afternoon. The routes in the outskirts of the city were practically impassible. Manager of Circulation Stout and two carriers started out shortly after 2 o'clock in one of Uncle Dan Roberts' sleighs and were kept busy until 6 o'clock. But not a subscriber was missed. In some cases they had to break the roads and if the horse had not been a good one, they wouldn't have been through yet.

MAIL COMING IN NOW.

One Delivery Tuesday—Heavy Receipt of Mail Wednesday Morning.

Not until this morning did the mails begin to be carried with their usual regularity, but by night it is expected that everything will be in running order. The mail train which came in Tuesday morning did not bring the amount of mail expected so Postmaster Bird made only one delivery and that in the afternoon. Mails were sent out yesterday on whatever trains came along. None were sent further west than Somerville, the rest all went to New York and were distributed from there.

Wednesday the mails that have been accumulating for two days were poured in on the carriers all at once and they started out well laden. No Philadelphia mails went direct, but were sent to Elizabeth and transferred there. The regular mail will lies in the postoffice awaiting the running of the regular mail trains on which this class of mail matter has to be carried.

STORM NOTES.

William Ilsley, of the West End, had the misfortune to freeze both his ears while coming from New York last Monday afternoon. He left New York at o'clock and reached home at 9 o'clock in the evening.

H. W. Marshall's laundry was shut down at noon Monday owing to the lack of coal for the furnace and boiler.

summoned.

Mr. Smith is unable to estimate his loss as yet. He had $3,600 in the Retail Merchants Mutual Co., of New Jersey, and $3 000 in the Sun Insurance Co., through E. M. French & Co. He believes that the insurance will cover the loss.

All the firemen were thoroughly wet during the fire, and their garments soon stiffened and froze. They were considerably handicapped by the snow and cold.

William Schloss, manager of the shoe store, was seen by a Press reporter last Tuesday after the fire. He was unable to give any estimate as to the loss or the insurance carried on the stock.

It was not until 2 o'clock this morning that the department left the scene of the fire. Then some of the hose was frozen solid and had to be left until morning.

MRS. STEAD'S FUNERAL.

LAST SAD OBSEQUIES IN THE PASSING OF A CETENARIAN.

Services Held in the First Baptist Church—Dr. Yerkes Officiated—Interment in Plainfield Avenue Cemetery.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Thomas J. Stead, who died last week in the 101st year of her age, where held last Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the First Baptist church. The services were in charge of the pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes. During the services Charles L. Lewis sang "Rock of Ages," and "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

Dr. Yerkes spoke comforting and tender words of the departed and among other things he said:

"It is many years since our dead sister and her husband joined this church. It was during the first pastorate, that of Rev. Mr. Randolph. Those first days are not familiar to me, but from what I know of our sister's husband he was a steadfast man. Our sister was known to me and I know of her faith and hope. One day when calling on her I asked if she could remember certain pet sons. She said she could not. I then asked her if she remembered Christ, whereupon she replied 'I can never forget Him.' She lived quietly and peacefully with God and her life was hid in Christ. There is not one present who doubts our sister's estate, or her simple faith during the long years of her life. In one hundred years how much has transpired, what changes.

"One thing we know that whether we live to be one hundred years or not, we can all die like our sister in the faith. We all want that faith. We are to feel sad there is an unfilled place but the death of a young person, but this life was finished and completed, the Lord had completed His work in her. These children left feel a sorrow, for she was a good true mother. Her heart beat true to the interests of those she loved. Our mother is our best friend.

"Our sister's memory still lives though she be dead. She needs no human sympathy now, and I believe that if she could speak today she would say, 'Seek first the Kingdom of God.' God is very choice of His company and He loves His children, and is especially near to those who are of a broken-heart."

Interment took place in the Plainfield avenue cemetery, and those who acted as bearers were Harrison Coddington, Harry Coddington, Allan Coddington and Andrew Wilson.

MILLER TAKEN HOME.

Victim of the Cold Had Threatened to Kill Himself.

Frederick W. Miller, the stranger who was picked up in a comatose state by the police Thursday evening and supposed to be a victim of the terrible cold, was identified Saturday afternoon as Frederick W. Miller, of 258 South Orange avenue, Newark, who disappeared from his home February 3rd.

Miller, who is twenty-four years old, is a spring-maker and has been in the employ of Mr. Cook, 166 Elm street, New York. A few weeks ago he had a fall in the shop. His head was cut on a sharp piece of iron and he complained of great pain in his head. Shortly after he left his home his wife received a letter in which Miller said that he had determined to end his own life as he was sure that he would never get any better and would only be a burden to her. He begged her to take good care of their child.

A telegram, unsigned, was received from Newark Saturday stating that Miller would be sent for. In the afternoon the brother of the man at the Muhlenberg Hospital arrived and took charge of Miller. He was still in a comatose state. He was taken to his home in Newark late in the afternoon.

Filed His Claim.

FIRE DROVE THEM OUT.

TERRIBLE PLIGHT OF BOROUGH FAMILY MONDAY NIGHT.

Their Home Totally Destroyed by Flames That Caught From Chimney—The Firemen Responded But to No Avail.

While the storm was at its height Monday, about 11 o'clock an alarm of fire was sent in from Box No. 143, corner of Somerset street and Greenbrook road, for a fire that had broken out in the house on Duer street near Howard street, occupied by Vincent Kuldabes, his wife and three children. The house caught fire from the chimney on the second floor and by the time the alarm went in the flames had good control of the dwelling and it was with great difficulty that the family escaped with their lives.

Warren Engine Company boys responded in a highly commendable manner. They did not take the engine out, as the hose carriage was thought to be sufficient. The fact that the trolley cars were kept running on Somerset street during the day made it possible for them to roll the hose carriage on that street.

By the time the firemen reached the burning house there was very little left of the dwelling to save. Nothing is now left standing except the porch. The firemen did great work, however, and suffered intensely from the bitter cold. Walter Bennett had both hands frozen, and most all of the firemen suffered more or less in this respect.

The blaze illuminated the sky to a great distance, and a number of people were attracted to the fire. The house was owned by G. W. Benson, and, it is said, was insured. The loss altogether will be between $3,000 and $4,000.

Mr. Kuldeebes is a carpenter and is employed by Wyman & Haberle. He and his family are now stopping with friends. All they were able to save was the clothing on their backs with which they escaped.

About 2,000 feet of hose was laid from the hydrant to the house, but the water was of little use. After the firemen returned to the engine house a second alarm came in from Box No. 153, sent in by Chief Wilson, who did know that the firemen had been out. Chief Parshild together with a few of the firemen went out with the hose carriage, but before they reached their destination they were informed that there was no fire. In all sixteen men responded to the first alarm.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Warren Engine Company's Fair Came to a Successful End.

The Warren Engine Company fair came to an end Saturday evening when the various contests were decided. The Wolf-American cycle was presented to John Schenck, who turned in $232.55. Miss Ella Long won the gold watch, while Miss Ada Tunison secured the diamond ring. The pair of gavels were presented to Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., who secured 437 votes. The Saengerbunde were second with 436 votes. Morris VanArsdale secured the sofa pillow and Miss Carrie Mebl the handsome rocking chair. The parlor suit was won by Mrs. D. C Allen, and F. M. Lunger was the winner of the second ton of coal.

The barrel of flour was won by a Westfield man. The contest on the Rambler wheel will be decided on the evening of February 22d.

As far as the committee is able to tell at present the total receipts for the week were $1,150 and the profits about $800.

WILL THEY SPEND SO MUCH?

Westfield Citizens' Love for Their Children to Be Tested by Tax.

Westfield, Feb. 14—The Board of Education has decided to ask the people of this place to appropriate $15 000 for a new schoolhouse at the coming annual school meeting March 21st.

The plans of the new school have been submitted by Architects Karr, Poole & Lum, of New York city, and it is estimated that the new building will accommodate 500 children. A beautiful piece of property, situated at the corner of Elm and Walnut streets, in the centre of the town, has been selected as the site for the new building. Westfield has long felt the need of a new school for primary pupils, the present Prospect street School being an old, dilapidated firetrap, in no way capable of affording the necessary room for the children of the town, many of whom have only been allowed to attend school for half a day.

MORALLER'S FORM IN GYMNASTIC WORK.

Won Y. M. C. A. Novice Contest Without Trouble.

ELEVEN CONTESTANTS IN IT.

H. K. DOANE AND WALTER SAMPSON DID GOOD WORK.

They Finished Second and Third—Moraller Scored 112 1-2 Points Out of a Possible 120—Three but Moves on High and Low Bars, Parallels and Horse—The Moves—List of Contestants and Points Scored.

First honors in the gymnastic contest for novices, held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening, were won by Eric Moraller. Moraller made a remarkable showing, scoring 112½ points out of a possible 120. He was eighteen points ahead of the next highest competitor. The contest was considered a very successful one, some excellent work being done and eleven of the local gymnasts turning out to take part in it.

The contest was conducted on the general plan prepared by Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, which has already been published in the Daily Press. There were four standard pieces of apparatus. The contestants did three moves on each, the three being designated by lot from five selected ones.

The low bar came first. Walter L. Long, who was debarred from taking part in the contest owing to the fact that he was a medal-winner at a previous contest, did the different moves for the instruction of the contestants. The three moves on the low bar were as follows: Squat vault to back rest, circle bar head foremost and snap under.

Then came the high bar on which the moves were as follows: Feet through between hands to hang, return; pull up to chin, straight arm over left and right; circle bar head-foremost to position, back dismount.

The third series of moves were on the parallel bars and included the following: Rear vault, quarter turn; side riding seat, rear dismount; riding seat, both bars, swing and front vault.

The contest was concluded with three moves on the horse, which were as follows: squat vault, half left turn; rear vault, quarter left turn; half left turn, half right circle, to back rest, half left turn with dismount.

There were several surprises at the very start. In the work on the low bar, Hervey K. Doane and Walter Sampson showed up in surprisingly good form. Both are new men for honors in gymnastics and their performances were therefore watched with much interest. McKillop showed good form but lacked strength. He should make an honorman in another year. Great things were expected of Harkins but he fell down woefully in the low bar work. Herbert Brokaw did not come up to expectations. Moraller was easily the best.

On the high bar, Moroller still excelled but Harkins did well and stood second, scoring 25 1-2, out of a possible 30, Cranston, Doane Brokaw and McKillop were all 23 or better.

It was on the parallel bars that Moraller did his best work, scoring a clean 30 points. Robert A. Meeker, an old gymnast, who was one of the judges, said that his execution and form was perfect. Doane followed, to step upon Cranston's toes in the excellence of his work upon the parallels, with Brokaw tait a point behind. Doane, Sampson and Harkins followed a point behind with 23.

The bending of his legs on the rear last Moraller lost a point on the German hang work. He scored 29 1 2. Doane and Sampson tied for second honors in this kind of gymnastic work with 28 1-2 points each. Wilson distinguished himself with a score of 24.

There was a possible 120 points that each contestant might score in the three events. The points announced at the close of the contest, were as follows: Eric Moraller, 112½; Hervey K. Doane, 91½; Walter Sampson, 92½. Cranston, 91½; Wm. McKillop, 89; Brokaw, 88; Wilson, 85; Harkins, 83½; Beadiff, 81; Zimmer, 80½; Barlow, 69½.

Two medals were offered in the contest, a silver and a bronze one. Moraller wins the silver medal and Doane the bronze. Moraller easily outpointed the rest and was entitled to first place without doubt. Doane has been working hard during the past year and his great improvement is a splendid example of the successful results of systematic exercise as is provided for in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The same may be said of Sampson, who only fell behind Doane owing to his lack of strength to perform the evolutions on the high bar in the good form he showed in the other moves.

A good word should be said for Cranston, who is rapidly improving. As for Harkins, but for his poor work on the low bar, he would have undoubtedly been one of the first three competitors. He was the best on the high bar.

Robert A Meeker and Louis I. VanAlstyne were the judges of the work.

MAKING A HEALTHY CITY

WHAT THE BOARD OF HEALTH IS DOING IN PLAINFIELD.

City is Remarkably Free From Contagious Disease—Making Connections With Sewers Seen to be Resumed.

The following extracts from the tenth annual report of the Board of Health to the Common Council will be read with interest:

"It is with pleasure that we are able to report that the city has latterly been remarkably free from contagious disease, there being at present but one case of scarlet fever and one case of typhoid fever under our supervision. There have been during the past fall some cases of typhoid fever, but we have felt sure in almost every instance that the case was contracted outside of the city of Plainfield.

"Estimating the population at 15,000, there was an annual death rate of 14½ per thousand.

"We would call your attention to the fact that the death rate during the year 1898 was 1.7 per cent. lower than during the previous year.

"During the early part of the year a large number of sewer connections was made by the advice and direction of the Board, and in the central part of the city the use of the yard vaults has been abolished. The State law makes it the duty of the Board of Health to direct that houses and other buildings in the city of Plainfield be connected with the city sewer and it is the intention of the board to resume the orders for making connections as soon as the sewer beds are in condition to warrant such resumption.

"It is hoped that within the next two years all properties in the more thickly built up portion of the city will be connected with the sewer, and the use of yard vaults in these localities will be discontinued.

"The Board would take this opportunity to urge upon the Common Council the propriety of the city's assuming the business of the collection and disposal of garbage, ashes and other rubbish, with the understanding, however, that this Board could not endorse any plan for the collection and disposal of garbage unless such plan had received the endorsement of the State Board of Health."

WILFULLY ENDS LIFE BY BULLET IN BRAIN

Aged John I. Alston Shot Himself Saturday Afternoon.

HE GREW MELANCHOLY.

WIFE SAW HIM WANDERING ABOUT ROOM WITH REVOLVER.

Then Came a Shot—Patrolman Cash Summoned to Investigate—Found Alston Unconscious with Bullet Hole in His Skull—Died Four Hours After—Was a Book-Finisher—Lived With His Niece.

John I. Alston committed suicide Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock by shooting himself through the brain while standing before the mirror in his bedroom at the home of his niece, Mrs. Alexander Martin, of 659 East Sixth street. He never recovered consciousness, although he lived four hours after receiving the self-inflicted wound.

Mr. and Mrs. Alston moved to this city a year ago with Mr. and Mrs. Martin from Brooklyn. Martin was then an engineer on the Brooklyn Bridge. Alston had been a book-finisher by trade, but retired some years ago. He came from the west to live with the Martins. Of late, Martin has been employed as an oiler at the Jersey City yard of the Jersey Central Railroad.

Alston was seventy-two years old. Of late, he has been weak and ill and the fact seemed to trouble him greatly.

Saturday afternoon, the old man left his bed and wandered about the room in his night clothes. Then his wife saw him with a revolver in his hand, examining it. At 4:30 o'clock, wife and niece were in the sitting room on the first floor. They were suddenly startled by a pistol shot that sounded in the chamber above. Fearing that some awful catastrophy had taken place, they hurriedly sent Mrs. Martin's little daughter to the home of Mrs. W. S. Crook, of South avenue, to summon assistance.

Mrs. Crook went to the Martin home at once. She found the women there trembling with fear and dread and not daring to investigate the cause of the shot. Mrs. Crook saw Mamie Guilberg, and called to her to ask Patrolman Jerry Cash, who lives on South avenue, just below, to step over.

Alston lay on his back facing the bureau when the patrolman entered the room. His head rested in a pool of blood and blood stained the cover of the bureau. On the bureau there was a 32 calibre revolver, of cheap make, with three of its five chambers empty.

When Cash turned the head over he exposed a great hole in the left two inches above the right ear where the bullet entered. He were only his nightshirt. Summoning the terrified women Cash placed the dying man on the bed. Then he hastened to the home of Whitney Frasee, on South avenue, where he notified Chief Grant by telephone. The Chief and Dr. M. B. Long arrived in a short time

Dr. Long found that the shot had penetrated the brain and that the wound was mortal. There was no doubt that the man had deliberately shot himself. One peculiar fact was noticed by Patrolman Cash. While Alston had shot himself in the right side of the head, the revolver, when found, lay with the handle to the left and the barrel pointing toward the right. It seems probable, however, that it fell from his grasp and struck on the bureau.

Alston never recovered consciousness and died shortly before nine o'clock. There was no letter or message left behind, nor was there anything to show that the act was premeditated. The family say that his actions had been strange for the last week and they were inclined to believe that his mind became deranged. He had never spoken of being weary of life but had been very melancholy of late.

While the women down stairs were quite positive that they only heard one shot fired, it was at first supposed that he fired three of the chambers of the revolver contained discharged cartridges. A local reporter, on examining the revolver Monday, found that two of the chambers were rusty and the shells in them partially covered with verdigris, while one only showed signs of being recently used

Scholars Needn't Stay in Cold Room.

A meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education was held last Monday. The Board authorized the printing of slips for parents to sign, stating their wish that their children should be vaccinated. It was also decided that if the temperature in any class room fell to 60 degrees or below that the class should be dismissed.

Resignation Soon Asked For.

It is stated that the resignation of Charles P. Sebring as Fish and Game Warden has been requested. The State Commission doesn't seem to know a good officer when it gets one, as Mr. Sebring has certainly been efficient.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

CHILLY WELCOME TO RETURNING SOLDIERS.

Reached Home at 4 o'Clock in the Morning.

BUT THEY WERE HAPPY.

"A HOT TIME" THEY SANG AS THEY MARCHED FROM THE TRAIN.

Six Companies of Third New Jersey Volunteers Were Mustered Out Thursday—Patriotic Boys Came Home Friday Night and the Morning—Members of Company H Came Up on Special Train.

Not with the roll of the stirring drum nor the trumpet that speaks of fame, but singing the verses of that expressive song, "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," the Plainfield boys who made up a part of Company H, Third New Jersey Volunteers, struck town Saturday morning at 4:14 o'clock, and awoke the sleepers with their shouts of joy at being home again.

Last Thursday Co's. B, C, E, G, H, and I, of the Third New Jersey were mustered out at Athens, Ga., where the regiment was sent three months ago. Co. H, composed mostly of Somerville boys, with a splinkling of Plainfielders, came north in a special train over the Atlantic Coast Line to Washington where the boys took a special over the Baltimore & Ohio to Bound Brook where they arrived soon after midnight. There the Plainfield boys took a train due there at 2 o'clock Saturday but which was two hours late, not bringing them here until 4 o'clock

The privates of Co. G., from Keyport, came as far north as Philadelphia with Co. H. Privates Henry McCormick, James McCormick, John Sullivan, Charles Sprague, J. Van Arsdale, Benjamin Scribner and George Gildea were those who composed the Plainfield representation. They wore their uniforms and carried a few of their accoutrements, but had no guns.

Orrin Holmes and Mark Doud, of Company E, Elizabeth, came up yesterday by themselves. Mark brought home with him a fighting cock in a basket, which is the admiration of all his friends. Prentiss and LaMaire, two who joined Company B, Long Branch, also came home yesterday.

Before the boys left they were paid off in full, and left camp with anywhere from $75 to $115 about them.

WATCH WAS ON CAR TRACKS.

Miss Mary Brown Lost Her Timepiece and Found It Two Hours Later.

Friday evening when Miss Mary Brown, manager of Hillier & Co.'s store, was going to her home on East Fourth street, she lost her gold watch. That was about 8:30 o'clock and she did not discover the fact until nearly 10:30 o'clock, just before retiring. She felt uneasy about the matter and decided to return to town over the same way that she took in going home. She pressed into service a bicycle lantern and looked very carefully over the road. When she reached the corner of Front and Somerset streets and was about to give up the search, she happened to see her watch lying between the trolley tracks. The watch was not damaged in the slightest.

NEW TELEPHONES.

A Number Placed in Plainfield Residences This Month.

A number of new telephones have recently been placed in local residences by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. Among them are the following: W. A. Pinto, West Eighth street; John Vallani, Myrtle avenue; George D. Hallock, Willow avenue; J. C. Peck, Myrtle avenue; A. E. Huntington, Franklin place; Mrs. Jos. M. Myers; East Front street; J. B. Teachers' Examinations.

At the Somerset county teachers' examinations held last week but sixteen applicants presented themselves. Of these four secured their third-grade certificates, one of them being *a renewal; five secured their second-*grade certificates, of which two were renewals. Four failed to pass, one raised the standing of certificate previously secured, and one was permitted to take a partial examination for second grade while holding an unexpired third-grade certificate.

Completed Course of Study.

The Washingtonville school, in charge of Mrs. S. S. Higgins, has had a new experience. Beulah Wolfe and Mary Trofano, having completed the course of study prescribed for grammar schools in Somerset county, have passed a very creditable examination under County Superintendent J. A. Mots and have received from him a diploma. The examination was a rigid one and the girls have won well-deserved credit.

ELECTRICITY IN THE HOUSEHOLD

Its Progress Slow for Domestic Uses—Electric Kitchens Hardly in Sight.

"I think," said the electrician, with a weary air, "I saw something in the paper the other day about lighting closets with electricity. Opening the door turns on the light; shutting the door turns it off. It's a beautiful scheme, and as practicable as it is beautiful. But that's all the good it does. People will keep on pawing around in dark closets, or setting all their best clothes on fire by lighting matches among them until I am gray —or until you are, which you probably think will be longer.

"We hear a good deal of talk about the giant strides of science and things like that. I suppose it does seem to be getting over the ground when you look at it from one point of view. But from another way it seems fairly to crawl. For instance, twenty years ago there was in London an exhibition of cooking by electricity. Now you would think that in twenty years a process like that, one which comes home to every household, would have been adopted everywhere. And seven years ago the papers were full of descriptions of the Peabody house in Brooklyn, where the lighting, heating and cooling, washing, ironing and cooking were all done by electricity. People predicted then that the finish of the coal ranges and gas stoves was in sight. But I notice that the stove makers are still doing business and they don't seem to have a lean and hungry look.

"The invention of a thing isn't all that's necessary. That's only the first step. If you can't make your invention fit into the ways of people it reveals you will never get the world to use it. Cooking by electricity is hard ly any further along than it was five years ago, and it wont be any further along until it can be had for less than gas or coal. That time is coming slowly but surely nearer; in the meantime though, you won't find many electric kitchens outside of exhibitions. They have one down at the Edison Company's new plant in Duane street, but that doesn't count, outside. Every Friday luncheon is cooked there and served to the staff and the kitchen works all right. The trouble isn't in the cooking, anyway. It's in what the cooking costs.

"It's as hard to push a new device in electrical household appliances as it is for some people to get into society. Take electric curling irons, or rather the heaters for these irons. Women get them in the form in which there are electric lights, and the only way in which they can heat a curling iron is to use an alcohol lamp. There is more damage done to furniture and carpets and hangings in this way, from sparks and drippings of the hot iron, than the cost of the whole man of providing the attachments for heating the iron. Yet I know of only one hotel in this town where a woman will find that convenience.

"One trouble in getting private houses to use electricity is that they don't want to tear up the house to have the wires strung. The fine new houses are being provided with electric wires in the building, and many of the old ones have had them put in but people are slow about making changes of any sort. Physicians have been about as ready to avail themselves of the new opportunities as anybody. A great many of them have an office wire which taps the street wire and use electricity in cauterizing and for regular electrical treatment. It does away with any fussing with batteries, and is always ready. Dentists do the same way. But when it comes to really domestic uses we have to admit that electricity has gained ground very, very slowly. It's always the way, though. You will find men's offices equipped with the very latest conveniences, but the women's kitchens have to get on as best they can."

WIT AND HUMOR.

"My boy," they said to him warningly, "she's too smooth. She'll fool you every time. She's one of those sweet, clever little women, who knows just how to manage men. If you marry her, she'll be the boss.

"Well," he replied slowly, "from what I have seen of matrimony, it is a question of being handled with a club or with taffy, and for my part I prefer the taffy."

And their engagement was announced shortly afterward."—Chicago Post.

EDWARD KLINE MADE THINGS LIVELY AT HOME SATURDAY.

The Father Withdrew to the Barn When the Fun Began—Epic Blame is Equally Divided—Wife Didn't Like the Decision.

For the past five years the Kline domicile, at 207 Plainfield avenue, has passed through all the excitement usually attendant on a full-fledged war. Mrs. Rose Kline lives there. So does her husband, sometimes. So does her stepson, Edward, with much vigor. Saturday morning, Only Judge Runyon followed in the experience of his predecessors and had to look into these troubles.

Mr. Kline is something of a philosopher. When the wife and son enter upon one of their frequent arguments, Mr. Kline departs for the barn and waits for the excitement to pass away. In court, this morning, he was not inclined to take either side, said one was as bad as the other and that both were to blame.

The particular incident, that caused a review of the proceedings of the household by the City Judge, Saturday occurred early Saturday a. m. Boundsman Frederickson was hurriedly summoned to the house by the wife with the intelligence that her step-son was running her about the house at the point of a revolver. Frederickson went there and arrested young Kline.

At the trial it became evident that there was no love lost between stepmother and son. Each tried in his or her particular way to make life just as unpleasant for the other as possible and, according to the story told in court, it would like a stand-off.

The Judge extracted a promise from the nominal head of the house to call an officer should any further trouble ensue. He then advised them all to go home and live in peace and happiness. Mrs. Kline walled that she could live with "that boy" no longer and that she would have to take her children and go out into the cold world. She appealed to Chief Grant. The Judge tried to reason with her but finally tired of it and told her that she had better go into the the cold world.

She departed wailing sadly and went home where where the old life was resumed. Sentence was suspended on Kline.

SECOND "AT HOME."

Mrs. E. W. Hedges Received Her Friends Yesterday Afternoon.

The second and last of Mrs. Ellis W. Hedges "at homes" was given Thursday afternoon at her home on Watchung avenue. A large number of friends and society people were present, in spite of the severe cold. The rooms were artistically decorated with roses, while in the dining room, a charming effect was produced with pink roses and pink shaded lights. Mrs. Hedges was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Charles Butler and her sister, Miss Butler, of San Francisco, Cal., Mrs. F. H. Andrews and Mrs. Harmon, Mrs. A. H. Atterbury and Mrs. Clay presided at the table, assisted by her cousin, Miss Isabelle Butler and the Misses Ginna, Stewart, Munger, Munger, Abernethy and Andrews.

FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEMBERS.

Pleasant Entertainment Given to Grace P. E. Parish House.

Last Thursday in the parish house of Grace P. E. church a very pleasant entertainment was given for the enjoyment of the members of the Sunday school. Rev. Floyd Appleton, curate, was in charge and announced the various numbers on the programme. Miss Mabelle Smith rendered several selections on the piano and also sang several favorite selections. Miss Elsie Smith gave two excellent recitations, and Miss Hyatt rendered two violin solos in a pleasing manner. Harry Messersmith also sang a number of selections. A feature of the programme was the phonograph selections by W. W. Moore.

Successful Parlor Entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, opened their home Friday evening to the members and friends of the Brightside Circle, King's Daughters, for a parlor entertainment given for the benefit of the city nurse.

The programme comprised an opening piano solo by Miss Lillian A. Force, recitations by Miss Mary A. Luckey, character sketches by Frank O. Bristol, a vocal solo by Miss Purdue, of Orange, accompanied by Miss Lillian A. Force. A piano solo by Master Arthur VanArsdale, violin solos by Miss Hyatt, a vocal solo by Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, accompanied by Miss Hyatt.

A NEW SHOPPING SCHEME.

How New York Dry Goods Houses Get Business.

"You won't have to go as far as the racetracks if you want to find a tout," said a policeman who had lately been transferred to the shopping district. "There's lots of them here on this new post of mine.

"When I first came on the post I was kept guessing at the reason for the crowds of women in front of big windows. I never could get near enough to get onto the game, for what show has a man to get into a crowd of women looking at a new style of something to wear? I could always see one woman close to the window give another a card or write something on a slip of paper. At last I got so worked up about it that I asked my wife to find it out for me. It seems it was quite a boon to the business houses that mixed nowadays you can't for the life of you tell where a game stops and commercial enterprise begins. When a woman stops and gets to looking at some bargain in the window the woman alongside of her just mentions in a ladylike way that she saw some of the same goods down the street, and it was 3 cents a yard cheaper or some such thing as that. That starts them talking, and maybe the first lady thinks she'll go down to the other place and have a look to see if the goods are the same thing. She may want to make sure of the address, for it's hard to make your way when the place is so crowded, and then the other lady happens just by accident to have the card with her that she picked up when she was in there getting something. They work it mighty fine and make it seem as natural as you please, but every one of them women is a tout for the other shop. Think of the smartness of them! It's like getting a stable tip on what to wear.—N. Y. Sun.

FAITHFUL JIM'S BABY.

The Dog Goes Foraging and Returns With an Indian Child.

Several years ago, John Harms and wife, of Suisun, with their three-months-old baby, took passage on a steamer from San Francisco to the Klondike gold fields. They took with them from their home a large dog of no special breed, but, as Mr. Harms said, "dogs are valuable on the Yukon," and, as Mrs. Harms said, "Jim was baby's protector." The many stories of dogs' faithfulness to babies is not exaggerated in Jim's case. His only object of earthly worship was that baby. After a few months' residence on Bonanza Creek the baby died and Jim was inconsolable. He would not permit any one to come near it from his master, but kept watch over the little mound on the hill for many days and nights. One day he came home, and, after being fed by Mrs Harms, trotted off in the direction of Indian village about a mile distant. He was gone for a few or three days. One evening, when Mr. and Mrs Harms were eating their evening meal, they heard Jim's scratch on the door, and upon opening it there he stood wagging his tail ferociously and looking from one to the other, at his feet a little Indian baby he had stolen and carried home, tied up in a piece of old blue blanket, with nothing visible but its little round face.—Truth.

The Old "Lyceum" System.

During a long period, says Col. T. W Higginson in the Atlantic, I lectured a great deal in what were then called "lyceum" courses, which stretched over the northern half of the United States, forty years ago, to an extent now hardly credible. There were two or three large organizations or bureaus which undertook systematically the task of bringing speaker and audience together, with the least possible inconvenience to both. One of these, whose name I forget, Redpath, I negotiated in 1867 for thirty-five lectures and 110 lecture courses, undertaking to distribute the one with perfect precision, as to supply the other. As a result, the lecturer left home with a printed circular in his pocket, assigning his dozen or his hundred engagements, as the case might be. As a rule he would meet in each new place what looked like the same audience, would make the same points in his lecture as before, would sleep at what seemed the same hotel, and breakfast on the same tough beefsteak. He would receive the usual compliments, if any, and make the same courteous reply to the accustomed questions as to the acoustics of the hall and the intelligence of the audience.

White House Clock.

The most interesting clock in the *White House, of course, from its his*tory, is the clock in the blue parlor, which was once the property of Napoleon Bonaparte, who presented it to Gen. Lafayette, and the latter presented it to Gen. Washington. The frame of it is made of alabaster and French gilt bronze. It has to be wound but once a month. It keeps Hour, day of month and year when first made. What is known as the Lincoln clock, purchased when President Lincoln was in the White House, is an object of interest in the Red Room and is of ebony and gold. It strikes the quarters, halves, and hours. In Mrs. McKinley's room is a clock which has been running without the slightest intermission for nearly thirty years. The clock at the foot of the stairs leading up to the President's office is the one that the public generally sees. It is rather modern in construction, of the "regulator" pattern, and is very reliable. The clock in the Private Secretary's room is admired for its cathedral gong rather than anything else, but it is a good clock, and has so proved itself for the ten or fifteen years it has been there."—Washington Star.

HOW A SEWER MIGHT REACH TIDE WATER

Many Obstacles Would Have to be Overcome.

AT AN ENORMOUS COST.

VARIOUS LINES THAT HAVE ALREADY BEEN SUGGESTED.

The Line Once Surveyed—Topographical Difficulties to be Encountered—A Line Cross Country Would Necessitate a Pumping Station—New Brunswick Would Object to Use of Upper Raritan—The Cost.

The old question of the sewage disposal beds has bobbed into prominence again. This time the good folk of Dunellen have declared their intention of bringing suit against the city of Plainfield for damages from the alleged nuisance. They even want the Supreme Court to compell the city to refrain from using the beds. So the old question comes back again. If the present system of sewage disposal is to be given up as Dunellen evidently wants Plainfield to do, what is to take its place? The sewer to tide water is generally considered the only other resource.

It was way back in 1892 that the movement looking toward some form of sewage disposal was practically considered by the citizens of Plainfield. At that time a committee of prominent citizens was appointed by the Mayor to consult with the Council regarding the best method of disposal that would answer the conditions. One of the ways considered was, of course, the sewer to tide water.

A survey was made for the benefit of the committee by P. E. Dunham. The line ran down West Front street, through the borough of Dunellen, crossing under the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad just beyond the town and following along South avenue to where Lincoln is now. The line then ran across country to a point on the Raritan just below Field's dam, which is located a mile and a half below Bound Brook. The line for this proposed sewer was five miles in length, and the grades were so arranged that the flow would be steady in the direction of the Raritan.

Another line for the sewer was afterward suggested which necessitated the erection of a pumping station. The flow was to be by gravity from Front street and Rock avenue to some point near South Plainfield. There the pumping station was to be placed. From that point the line was to take a course across country passing near Stelton to a point below Martin's Dock, which lies on the Raritan river two miles below New Brunswick. This sewer would be nine miles long. It would be necessary to pump from an elevation 20 feet above tide-water to one of 120 feet near the river.

Those who have studied the topography of the country in that region have found that there is a plateau lying between New Brunswick and Woodridge that is even higher than Plainfield, and which would be a complete barrier to any sewer unless connected with a pumping station to overcome the difference in levels.

The only way then, in which a gravity sewer could reach the Raritan is by the route to Field's dam already mentioned or by following the course of Green brook to the junction with Bound Brook and the subsequent course of the latter stream until its union with the Raritan. The principal objection against attempting to empty the sewage into the Raritan river at either of these points was that, even supposing New Brunswick and the other attlements along the banks of the river made no vigorous protest at the time, it would be a matter of a comparatively short number of years before these municipalities would arise in their wrath and render the system useless through process of law.

With these powerful arguments against the course already outlined, it was generally agreed that the sewer would necessarily have to go to some point below New Brunswick. Now beginning half a mile below Martin's Dock, the point mentioned as the end of one proposed line, the Raritan river spreads out on broad flats while the channel follows a very winding course through them. It has been claimed by some that the sewage turned into the river at this point would make a very unpleasant place of the flats and consequently involve the city in legal troubles that would be sad or worse than those of the present.

The sewer would therefore have to approach very near to Perth Amboy, where the influence of the ocean tides is felt, to overcome the obstacles mentioned. Such a sewer would either come over the plateau and thus involve a pumping station or follow the course of the Raritan valley. While no survey has ever been made with that object in view, it is possible that a gravity sewer might be made to follow closely the bank of the river from Field's dam or even the mouth of Bound Brook, could the necessary right.

With a rough calculation as to the size of the sewer necessary to build, it was estimated that it would cost in the neighborhood of $75,000 to $100,000 to build a sewer on the line of the survey first described. This would not include the right of way but merely the material and construction.

The cost of the sewer with pumping station to Martin's Dock, exclusive of the rights of way, was estimated at $130,000. The cost of the construction of a sewer, without including any very deep cuts or tunnel work, was roughly estimated at $15,000 a mile. This would make the cost of the sewer, emptying into the Raritan river close to its mouth and following the line of the water courses to that point, something like $180,000. If a pumping station was necessary, then the cost would grow every day without question. Then must be taken into consideration the cost of securing the right of way, a portion of which along the Raritan is particularly valuable. Any estimate of such cost, it is easy to see, would be impossible without a proper investigation of the subject.

While the sewer to tidewater is generally looked upon as the only other alternative should the present system of sewage disposal be changed, there are a score of plans that could be presented. It has been suggested that the time is not far distant when North Plainfield and Dunellen will both be considering the same question that Plainfield took steps to answer back in 1892. The three municipalities might, to follow the same suggestion, unite their efforts. A tract of land close to to the mountain could be purchased that would be a mile at least from Dunellen, North Plainfield or Evona. There are but a few houses there which could easily be bought. A set of disposal beds could then be constructed and a pumping station built on Rock avenue, near Green brook, to pump the sewage to them. The running expenses of the pumping station would, however, be large and continuous.

PASSED THE CENTURY MARK BEFORE DEATH.

MRS. STEAD WAS IN HER 101ST YEAR.

She Possessed Remarkable Health Up to the Very End—Born in Sussex County.

The death of Mrs. Thomas J. Stead of Somerset street, occurred last Wednesday night the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allen, of the borough. Mrs. Stead was in her 101st year of her age and the oldest resident of Somerset county. She was born in Sussex county in May 1794, but the greater part of her life was spent in Somerset county, in the valley back of North Plainfield. She was a woman of rare qualities and a steadfast Christian. She was the oldest member of the First Baptist church. For many years she had lived a quiet, retired life at the home of her daughter.

In May of last year Mrs. Stead celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of her birthday and the event was one of special moment. She was in her usual good health up to the time of death, and her demise was unexpected somewhat.

Mrs. Stead leaves two children, Mrs. Allen, with whom she lived, and Thomas J. Stead, Jr., of the Fenfield Hat Company, New York. Mrs. Harrison Coddington, of the borough, is the only grand-child. There are three great-grand child children, Miss Coddington, Allen Coddington and Harry Coddington, of the borough.

Girl Overcomes by the Cold.

Miss Elizabeth Jordan, aged 18 years, colored, and a former resident of Elizabeth, is now detained at the home of Mr. Lewis, colored, Manning avenue, suffering from the effects of the cold weather which nearly caused her death. She attended the firemen's fair in the borough Thursday and took part in the cake walk. Miss Jordan wandered about the borough until 3 o'clock the morning when she succeeded in getting into the Lewis home. Chief Marshal Wilson was sent for and he advised that Overseer of the Poor David Weaver be notified. This was done and Borough Physician Carman was sent for and gave proper treatment. Several times during the day Miss Jordan had had spells and become unconscious.

Desks and railings have been moved about and when the work is completed an entire change will have been made in the appearance of the place, and more privacy will be insured.

JERSEY PEOPLE CLAIM AUSTRALIAN MILLIONS

They Are After the Wealth of an Antipodean Croesus.

FORTY MILLIONS ARE IN IT

CLAIMANTS ARE CHILDREN OF A NEW PROVILENCE SHOEMAKER.

Trace of the Fortune Was Secured Through a Newspaper Paragraph Telling of the Death of James Tyson—Proofs of Relationship Now Being Sought—Legal Proceedings to Be Started.

New Jersey people are after the wealth of James Tyson, who died last December in Melbourne, and was reputed to be the wealthiest man in Australia and one of the largest land owners in the world. His fortune was estimated at from twenty-five to forty millions of dollars, and consisted largely of real estate in Melbourne.

The claimants are the children of John Tyson, who was a large shoe manufacturer in New Providence, in this county, and died thirty years ago. He came to this country from Lancashire, England, in 1818, and prospered. His children are Mrs. Johanna Hatfield, of Newark; William Tyson, of Kaneville; George Tyson and Mrs. Annie Miller, of Morristown; John Tyson and Mrs. Mary Addison, of Chatham; Mrs. Hannah Ellis, of Millburn, and Mrs. Rowena Miller, of Boonton, Thomas Tyson, another son, who was a wealthy lumber merchant of Morristown, disappeared in 1860, with $7,000, and it is thought he was murdered for his money.

Mrs. Hatfield, who lives with her son, Charles Hatfield, as astrologer, read several newspaper articles published recently about James Tyson, his wealth and his eccentricities. One of these related that he never married because of an early love affair. Another said he was born in Cumberland, England. Mrs. Hatfield then remembers that her father had told her that his home was on the border between Lancashire and Cumberland, and that a few years after he came to this country his brothers Watson and James had gone to Australia to hunt for gold.

Watson died in "the bush." James made money gold mining, and afterward went into sheep and cattle raising. Her father, however, had lost sight of him for many years. Mrs. Hatfield says she is satisfied that James Tyson, the Australian millionaire, was her father's younger brother. She has sent to her father's home, in Lancashire, for proofs of the relationship, and as soon as they arrive she declares she and her brothers and sisters will begin legal proceedings to obtain possession of the Tyson millions.

HIS WHEEL BURNED UP.

It Was in Thompson Building Fire and Bard Co. Wouldn't Pay for It.

Augustus Marsh sued the Bard Cycle Company Thursday afternoon in Justice Nash's court for the value of a wheel which was destroyed in the fire that occurred in their store in November. The wheel was a Cleveland and Mr. Marsh used to store it with the Bard Company while he was in New York during the daytime. That Saturday night Mr. Marsh didn't ride his wheel, so it was burned.

G. W. V. Moy, the druggist, who was admitted to the New Jersey bar last June, represented the plaintiff, and secured judgment against the company for $75, the value put upon the wheel.

Clarence L. Murphy appeared for the defendants and tried to have the case postponed by filing an affidavit that Mr. Colgate, an important witness, was out of town. Mr. Moy produced a witness to show that Colgate was in town at 11 o'clock Thursday morning so Justice Nash refused an adjournment. Notice of appeal was given.

WHITE'S CLERKS MADE MERRY.

The Light Fantastic Toe Tripped in Red Men's Hall.

The clerks in Edward White's dry goods store gave an invitation dance Thursday in Red Men's Hall. The company did not consist entirely of the employes of Edward White, for there were guests present from New York, Newark, Elizabeth, Bound Brook and Plainfield who joined in the festivities with the others.

This was the first dance given by the clerks of that store, but last night's dance was so successful that they are already talking of giving another. The idea was first suggested by two lady clerks and two of the gentlemen employed in the store, Miss Sadie Searing and Miss Daisy Snyder, J. C. Martin and Casper F. Waglow, who formed the committee.

Rogers, with three pieces, furnished music for the dances which were kept up until 3 o'clock. Refreshments were served during the evening, and in the early morning hours the party dispersed.

WILL LOWER BED OF CEDAR BROOK

One Method of Lowering Level of Ground Water.

ADOPTED BY THE CITY.

IT IS EXPECTED TO REDUCE LEAKAGE INTO SEWER SYSTEM.

Gang of Street Commissioner Gavett's Men Have Been Cleaning Out the Bed of the Brook and Lowering it From Six to Eighteen Inches—Is Not Expected to Stop All the Leakage.

For nearly a week a gang of Street Commissioner Gavett's men have been at work cleaning out the bed of Cedar brook and lowering it anywhere from six to eighteen inches. While the cleaning is an annual affair it is hoped that by lowering the bed of the brook that the height of the ground water in Richmond street and vicinity will be lowered and the leakage into the sewage system reduced.

Every storm washes a quantity of sand, gravel and other debris into the brook, helping to clog its channel. To keep the brook running clearly, the street department has for the last few years looked after the channel yearly. Incidentally they have lowered the bed of the brook each time. As a result much of the land on either side of the brook that was formerly swampy is now well drained.

They worked first on that portion of Cedar brook south of Watchung avenue, bordering Cedar Brook Farm. The brook was lowered from six inches to a foot there. The land on either side was consequently improved. The greatest need of lowering is in that part of the brook between Putnam and LaGrande avenues, where the brook runs parallel with Richmond street. The gang of men are employed there at present.

Close to the LaGrande avenue bridge, it is expected to lower the brook as much as eighteen inches. The depth will be gradually reduced to twelve inches toward Putnam avenue bridge. With this noticeable lowering of the brook, the level of the ground water will be lowered, the leakage into the sewer system decreased and the general health of that neighborhood bettered. While it is not expected that this method will entirely do away with the leakage, it is expected to give some relief.

Thursday afternoon, Street Commissioner Gavett was obliged to stop the work temporarily and employ his entire force in cleaning the snow off the sidewalks. The work will be resumed shortly and continued until the whole length of the brook, where it passes through the residential district, has been cleaned.

Entertained at Whist.

The Thursday Evening Whist Club was entertained last Thursday by Mr and Mrs. Edward N. Brown of Westfield, and the members had a delightful time. The trip there and back was made in a box sleigh and the ride formed one of the pleasant features of the occasion.

Clarence Sutphen, of West Second street, is spending a few weeks in the Bermuda Islands.

SPLIT IN SILK COMPANY.

BULLOCK & YOUNG, THE PROMOTERS, HAVE RETIRED.

They Wanted Absolute Control of the Company and the Stockholders Declined to Accede to This Request.

The Watchung Silk Company and the promoters of the local silk mill have separated and are now going their own devious ways. The split came about on the question of management. Messrs. Bullock & Young, of Paterson, the promoters, wanted to have entire control of the business affairs of the concern. The Directors agreed to everything but the appointment of the bookkeeper whom they declared must be appointed by them.

A meeting of the directors and stockholders of the Watchung Silk Company was held last Thursday at the office of the secretary, Harry C. Bunyon, in the Babcock building. Messrs. Bullock and Young were present and explained their position stating that they never would have entered into the company unless they had understood that they were to have exclusive control. The stockholders sustained the stand taken by the directors to the effect that Messrs. Bullock and Young might have entire charge of the buying, selling and running of the factory, but that the directors should appoint the bookkeeper and look after the financial end.

No agreement satisfactory to both sides could be reached and Messrs. Bullock and Young withdrew. They asked that they be given a price on the plant so that they might purchase it and conduct the business themselves. The stockholders did not favor that idea and expect to continue the business, placing a superintendent in charge under a regular salary.

LEAVES UNCLE SAM WITH HONORABLE DISCHARGE.

CHARLES FETERSON OUT OF ARMY.

He was With General Miles at Porto Rico, Where He was Stricken With the Fever.

Charles A. Peterson, of Watchung avenue, who enlisted May 23d in the Engineer Corps, U. S. A., has been honorably discharged from service, and Thursday morning arrived home. Peterson has seen about nine months of army life, most of which, however, was spent in the hospital where he was ill with the typhoid fever.

Peterson was assigned to Co C, and July 5th he left Newport News on the Grand Duchess for Porto Rico. When he arrived there Peterson was one of those transferred to the Commanche, Gen. Miles' vessel and he was also one of those to form Gen. Miles' body guard ashore and on board the vessel.

Peterson was taken ill while in Porto Rico, and September 15th was sent north and lay ill in Fortress Monroe (Old Point Comfort) until December 7th when he was sent to Willetts Point, L. I., on thirty days sick furlough.

Horse Couldn't Stand the Cold

A horse owned by Grocer Wm. A Wilson, of the West End, became chilled Friday morning while standing in front of a customer's house and ran away. Later the rig was found at Mr. Wilson's store and there was no damage.

OVERCOME BY COLD AT DOOR OF CITY JAIL.

Old Railroader, Half Frozen, Was Dragged Inside.

AN OFFICER HEARD HIM.

WANDERER WAS THAWED OUT AND GIVEN NIGHT'S LODGING.

William Donnelly, of Newark, an ex-Brakeman, Was in Hard Luck—Had Been Looking for Work—Was Trampling Back to His Old Home—Sought Refuge at Station House Friday Night.

William Donnelly, an old railroad man out of work, was saved from a lingering death by freezing Friday evening through his timely arrival at the police station, a haven of warmth and shelter. Saturday a. m. he was able to totter away in his hunt for work.

Donnelly was formerly a brakeman on the D. L. and W. Railroad. His home was in Newark, but trouble and illness broke it up and Donnelly was forced to wander about the country to find means of sustenance. He was too weak to return to his long place and there didn't seem to be anything else for him to do. Some people might have called him a tramp.

During the last cold snap Donnelly felt the cold keenly. He has lived in freight cars, barns and wherever there was a chance to lay his head. Some of the farmers were kind to him and he managed to get enough to eat to keep body and soul together.

Friday Donnelly pushed on toward this city and reached here during the evening. His limbs were benumbed and he could scarcely drag one foot after the other. Inquiring of a passerby, he found the way to the station house. Up the snowy path he staggered, falling twice before he reached the door. In trying to descend the little flight of steps that leads down to the entrance, he fell again. An officer inside heard the noise and, opening the door, dragged Donnelly inside.

Donnelly was very weak and nearly frozen. After being thawed out, he was given a night's lodging in a cell. Saturday a. m. he basked before the fire for a time and then continued on his tramp toward his old home at Newark.

Voehl, Mrs. Sears, Mrs. LaRue, Mrs. Peterson, Miss Hall of Elizabeth; Miss Edith Sharp, of Somerville; Misses Emma LaRue, Nellie LaRue, Bessie Richards, Margaret Richards, Ethel Reynolds, Bessie Reynolds, Lena Street, Hattie Voehl, Emma Voehl, Elizabeth Voehl; Jake Voehl, Willie Firstbrook John Carney, Loyd Sharp, Russell Sharp, Charlie Wood and John Vanion.

LANTERN TIPPED OVER, CAUSED AN $700 FIRE.

ROBERT M'NABB'S BARN BURNED.

Fire Occurred at 6 O'clock This Morning—Fire Department Was Not Called Out.

Just at daylight Friday morning Robert McNabb's barn, on the Babway Road, took fire and was burned to ground. The contents, consisting of three tons of hay, two wagons, one a runabout, carpenter's tools and a number of chickens and fowls were lost. A horse and a chest on taining other tools were saved, but before Mr. McNabb could rescue anything more the fire had gained such headway that it was dangerous to go near the burning building.

Just how the fire originated is not known, but it is thought that the dog knocked over a lighted lantern which Mr. McNabb had left in the centre of barn floor while he was doing the morning chores.

Mr. McNabb arose about 5 o'clock and went out to see to his horse, and after feeding him went to the chicken yard to go to feed the fowls. Upon his return to the barn a few minutes later he found the whole interior in a blaze, and the latter lying on its side.

At first Mr. McNabb thought that the lantern had exploded, but later concluded that his dog, in chasing a rat, upset it. Mr. McNabb had $250 insurance on the building and $450 on its contents, which he thinks will bring him out whole. As there is no fire alarm box near, and the fire had gained such headway before it was discovered, no alarm was sent in.

CHANGES IN BOROUGH BOARD OF EDUCATION.

TERMS OF THREE MEMBERS EXPIRE.

Some of Present Incumbents May Be Re-elected—Democrats to Make a Contest.

The terms of three members of the Board of Education of the borough will expire this year. They are R. M. Fountain, E. A. Overton and A. V. D. Honeyman. George F. Brown, now collector, resigned early in the year, but he says that he has received no word that his resignation has been acted upon. According to the law he cannot hold membership in the Board and be collector, hence his resignation. As a result the vacancy caused by Mr. Brown's resignation will have to be filled. As yet there is very little talk as to who will be chosen to fill these vacancies. It is likely that some of the members will be returned, but there are good prospects of a strong fight on the part of the Democrats for honors.

It has been stated by men of good sound judgment that the present membership of the Board is too large, nine members, and that a Board of five or six members would be large enough. This sentiment is growing every day. It is said that with a membership of nine it is difficult to adjust differences that are bound to appear, and with a Board of a less number the differences would not be so great. It is also said that if Plainfield can run her school business with five commissioners, surely North Plainfield ought to get along with that number.

THE SEWAGE BED VIEWS.

They Are Instructive In View of the Present Agitation About Them

In view of the excited agitation in Dunellen and the western part of the city over the sewage beds, the cuts on either side of this article, showing the beds in various conditions, are particularly interesting and instructive. The pictures from which the cuts were made were taken last fall. Street Commissioner Gavett says that the beds were in ordinary condition for that time of the year when the pictures were taken, and therefore are fair and representative views.

TO SUE TRACTION COMPANY.

William VanHorn Wants Pay for Injuries to Himself and Horse.

William VanHorn, of this city, after vainly negotiating with the New Brunswick Traction Company in an attempt to settle with them for injuries sustained by himself and horse two months ago, has at last concluded to go to law to secure a settlement and has placed his claim in the hands of Codington & Hwackhamer, who will bring suit against the company before Justice Warden, of Dunellen.

VanHorn was driving home from Bound Brook several weeks ago, when his horse stepped off of the dirt road on to a trestle owned by the Traction Company, and fell through the open work. The trestle was built lower than the roadway, and the night being dark, VanHorn could not see where he was driving. Several men were required to get the horse out of the trestle. The horse was cut some, and the wagon was broken.

A Sleighing Party.

Miss Nettie Bamrsache, of the borough, arranged an enjoyable sleighing party Friday night. There were about fifteen young people in the party and all thoroughly enjoyed the ride, which took in some nearby places.

WAYWARD LIFE ENDED BY SUICIDAL ACT

Remains of Walter Brown Found in the East River.

HE LIVED AT DUNELLEN.

DISAPPEARED FROM HOME ABOUT TWO MONTHS AGO.

Had Been Addicted to the Excessive Use of Liquor—Resented the Attempt of His Brothers to Reform Him—for His Habits, and Suddenly Left Home—Had Been an Expert Stenographer.

Dunellen, Feb. 10—Word was received in this place last night that the remains of Walter Brown, aged twenty seven years, who mysteriously disappeared from his home two months ago, were fished out of the East river yesterday afternoon, into which he is supposed that he had jumped in order to end his miserable life. Brown was an expert stenographer, and previous to his disappearance had been employed in the Central Railroad of New Jersey building on the corner of Liberty and West streets in New York.

During the past two years he had become addicted to the excessive use of liquors and frequently came home in a benuddled mood as a result. He lived with his two brothers on the old New Market road in what is known as the Barker house. One of his brothers is a cripple, and the other, Edward, is a stenographer employed in New York. The two brothers of the dead man are the reverse of the latter in habits, and while Walter resided with them they frequently took him to task for his dissipation. In their endeavors to reprove him Walter became fretful of their interference with his conduct, and two months ago he left home one morning and never returned. Until they received the news of his death last night neither one of the brothers knew what had become of the wayward fellow since his disappearance.

It is probable that he committed suicide in a fit of despondency. Walter and his brothers came to Dunellen about two years ago. They moved about but little in local society and were not well known by the town people. The brothers, however, were held in high esteem by those who knew them. The only fault of Walter seemed to be his drinking habit, and the vice seemed to have too strong a hold on him to overcome.

Edward will probably claim the body at the morgue in New York today, and arrange to give the remains decent burial.

The Hackmen Danced.

The hackmen's dance given in Washington Hall Thursday evening was very well attended and everyone had a good time. During the evening there was a cake walk which was won by John Goff and Miss Mamie Denise. Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music for dancing.

A Handsome Gift to Calvary.

The Calvary Baptist church was the recipient of a very handsome communion set this week, the gift of a strange lady. Miss Jackson. The set is to be used in their new church.

COACHMAN'S HEAD CUT.

EXCITING RUNAWAY STARTED ON NORTH AVENUE.

Horse Frightened at Engine Blowing Off Steam, and Tipped Over Cutter—Kicked Itself Loose and Had Wild Run.

A runaway occurred February 9th on North avenue which resulted disastrously for John Doull Miller's horse and sleigh. Mr Miller and his coachman, Henry Sampson, were both thrown out, and Sampson was cut about the head.

Mr. Miller was driving from his home on East Ninth street to the station to take the 7.53 train to New York. The horse is a spirited one. Just after passing under the Watchung avenue railroad bridge an engine standing near began to blow off steam. This frightened the horse and he broke into a run which carried the sleigh around the corner into North avenue on one runner.

Then the horse began to kick, and in a moment the shafts were broken off and the front of the sleigh demolished. The horse shied in towards the gutter and right in front of the station the sleigh struck the curb and both men were thrown out.

Mr. Miller who was driving, fell in the gutter and was not hurt, but the coachman struck his head on the sharp curb, cutting a gash behind one ear. He was taken to Mallinson's drug store where his cut was bandaged, and later he was sent home.

The horse left the sleigh, and continued his run down Park avenue and Somerset street to Craig place where he was caught by Chauncey F Brout.

Down Somerset street the horse took the sidewalk. Near Powers' store a little girl stepped out of a store almost in front of the runaway. She had a narrow escape, but managed to get out of the way in time to avoid being struck. The animal was taken charge of by John Haffner, and later sent home. Mr. Miller took a later train to New York.

CHIEF MARSHAL WILSON TO RESIGN HIS OFFICE.

HIS RECORD HAS BEEN A GOOD ONE.

Mayor Wilson Has Been Notified of the Chief's Decision—Who Will be His Successor.

After a very satisfactory service as Chief Marshal of the borough for two years, William A. Wilson has decided to retire from his position at the end of the present borough year, and has so informed Mayor Wilson. Mr. Wilson has been a thoroughly honest man and has attended to his duties in a business-like manner since he has been in office. While he has made enemies, owing to his position, he has many friends who will regret to learn of his decision. Since he has been at the head of the borough police department the order of the borough has been excellent. It is now an open question as to who will succeed him.

Mr. Wilson has not yet decided just what business he will engage in after his term expires and he retires from office.

Music Was a Feature.

The Christian Endeavor Society service at the First Baptist church Friday evening was well attended and was very interesting. The music was a feature and many took part in the service.

BEDROOM GUTTED BY EVENING FIRE.

Lively Conflagration at Andrew Vanderbeek's Residence.

FROM MYSTERIOUS CAUSE.

OWNER AT HOSPITAL AS THE RESULT OF NERVOUS ATTACK.

Mr. Vanderbeek Has Been Ill for Several Weeks But Insisted on Getting Up—Fire Started in Closet but Spread to Bedroom and Attic—Loss $300, Insured—Good Work of Chemical Engine.

In some mysterious fashion fire started in a closet at the residence of Andrew Vanderbeek, 940 West Front street, Feb. 8th and destroyed the contents of the closet and the room adjoining before the firemen were able to subdue the flames. The fire gained fierce headway, and, in extinguishing it, the efficiency of the chemical engine was again thoroughly demonstrated. The loss was heavy and fully covered by insurance. As a result of the excitement attendant to the fire, Mr. Vanderbeek is now resting at Muhlenberg Hospital after a severe nervous shock.

Mr. Vanderbeek resides in one of the row of handsome residences that make up West End Park. He has been ill for several weeks and has not been out of bed until last evening. His daughter, Mrs. J. J. Shotwell, and her husband have been staying with him.

The fire was first discovered in a closest opening out of the back room on the second floor, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Shotwell, shortly after 7 o'clock. Jacob Krisey, a neighbor, sent in an alarm from box 48, corner of West Front and Albert streets, at 7:21 o'clock. The fire department responded.

The flames spread from the closest and soon the interior of the room adjoining was all ablaze. The fire also ran up between the partitions and started a conflagration in the attic above. When the firemen arrived, the room was a mass of flames and the house was filled with smoke. A stream from the chemical engine was turned into the fire and soon brought the fire under control. Had the regular streams been used, it would have flooded the house and destroyed much property before the fire could be extinguished.

The fire was in a rather difficult place to get at. After forty minutes fighting it was extinguished. In the room were two beds, two bureaus and some other furniture. All was practically destroyed. The woodwork in the room was also badly charred. The attic above the room was damaged to a limited extent.

The house is the property of Mr. Vanderbeek. The loss is estimated at $300, which is covered by insurance.

When the fire occurred Mr. Vanderbeek insisted upon getting up. The excitement of the occasion was a severe shock to his nervous system, and it was deemed best to send him to the hospital later in the evening where he might have rest and quiet.

Walter Walker, Jr., of Jackson avenue, has entirely recovered from a recent operation.

SNOW AND WIND RESULT, BLIZZARD.

The Whirling, Eddying Snowflakes Piled in Hugh Drifts.

BUSINESS PRACTICALLY AT A STANDSTILL.

Railroad Trains Stalled, Streets Blocked and Only Those Ventured Out Who Had To.

Street Railway Did Its Best, But the Snow and Wind Was Too Much For It—Street Commissioner Gavett Handicapped For the Lack of Men—Public Schools Dismissed—Fire Department Prepared For Hard Work—Business Houses Were Closed—One Mail Since Yesterday Morning—Many Other Interesting Details.

(From The Press of February 14th.)

All Jersey is now fast in the embrace of a great blizzard that raged with unremitting vigor for thirty-six hours. Traffic on steam and street car lines was paralyzed and is only now recovering on the most important lines. Business is practically suspended and Plainfield itself is as securely snow bound as it was at time of the memorable blizzard of '88.

All the necessary elements that go to constitute a genuine blizzard were apparent. There was a gale blowing from the north-east that whipped and whirled the snow and built it into monstrous drifts, many of which still deny all efforts to pass them. The snow fell thick and fast and came in fine light flakes that were easily carried by the wind. Then the mercury remained but a short distance above the zero point and added impediments to the general situation.

The snow storms marked the preceding week and left some eight inches of snow on the ground, somewhat drifted. Sunday there came another storm that added five more inches. The wind blew Sunday and the snow began to drift. When the blizzard proper opened up its campaign, there was, according to the report of Weather Observer Neagle, just thirteen inches of snow on the level.

The campaign of this powerful storm was regularly opened late Sunday afternoon. It began to snow hard and fast and the wind blew out of the northeast in long and powerful gusts. All Sunday night it snowed and the wind blew. Monday morning found the city nearly cut off from the rest of civilization. Solitary trains struggled with the elements at times, but the fight was nearly a hopeless one and only a few ever accomplished their journey. The local traction company made a good fight but the elements were too much for it.

All yesterday it snowed with varying force and the drifts grew rapidly under the direction of the fierce wind which swung around to the north during the afternoon. There was little abatement in the storm until midnight. Then the snow stopped falling, the cluds broke and the stars came out. With the ending of the snow the wind increased in violence and made up for any lack of snowfall by blowing what had fallen in great clouds and drifting it everywhere.

It is next to impossible to tell how much snow fell during the storm. The snow is so drifted now that there is not a level spot to be found. Conservative estimates place it at sixteen inches, making a total of nearly thirty inches at present. As the snow nearly reaches the tops of the fences all through the city and borough, there seems no exaggeration in that estimate.

Saturday night, the mercury stood eight degrees above zero. Sunday morning it was six and rose to ten degrees above zero during the day. At night it fell to seven. This morning, at 7 o'clock, the thermometer registered eleven degrees above zero.

Everybody has been comparing this storm with the memorable one of '88. The snowfall this year is greater than in '88, but the wind did not reach as great a velocity as on that occasion. The general results are, however, just as bad.

STREET RAILWAY STRUGGLE.

All Regular Schedules Abandoned—No Cars to Netherwood or Dunellen.

No institution in Plainfield was more hard struck by the blizzard than the Plainfield Street Railway Company. The whirling, eddying and drifting snow completely lost the tracks to view under high white barriers, and effectually knocked the the regular schedules to smithereens. Every available employe was hard at work all day yesterday and today in the vain endeavor to keep the road open, but they were only partially successful.

The trouble began Sunday afternoon, when the cars commenced to run behind their schedules and caused innumerable delays and aggravations on the various lines. Yesterday morning saw the real opening of the tug of war with the elements, however. The continual fall of snowflakes during the night had done its disastrous work. Superintendent Adlemann started out to cope with the difficulties as best he could. Double headers were sent out exclusively. At all points along the various lines, where the wind had a sweep, huge drifts were encountered, and the cars tugged and moaned as they plowed their way through the snow. The first car on the line to Netherwood encountered an immense drift at Woodland avenue, and succumbed. The crews turned about and ran back to the centre of the city, and since that time no car has gone through to the Netherwood terminal.

Superintendent Adlemann was out early and he soon realized that it would be a useless task to try to cover the whole length of the Front street line, and so Grant avenue was established as the western terminal.

By the peculiar caprices of the storm the Somerset and Fourth street line was the easiest to keep open. Cars were run with considerable regularity over that line at half hour intervals all day. The Front street line ran as a sort of a go-as you-please. Six big snow plows—four of them hauled by double teams of horses—were kept busy all day. They were put two together. One led the way, clearing away the heaviest parts of the drifts and then the other followed sweeping the snow clear of the tracks. But the road was drifted full again rapidly and it was only by repeating the process that minature mountains of snow were not formed to completely block the way.

The amount of travel on the street cars was very small all day. The biggest sum that any of the cars registered were $5 and $6 for the day's business.

At 7 o'clock last night cars No. 12 and 14 got stuck on the Putnam avenue switch. After much work, however, the cars were started out in a small's pace and finally reached Plainfield avenue on the Fourth street line at 1 o'clock this morning. Then the power was shut off, and the cars were snowed in for the night on the street corner. As the rest of the cars were able to get into the car barns.

RAILROADS HARD HIT.

Central Did Fairly Well in Running Local Trains to New York.

Passenger traffic on the Jersey Central Railroad between Plainfield and New York just exists and that's all. West of Somerville the lines of that railroad are effectually blocked by the snow. The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, west of Bound Brook, is also at a standstill with no immediate prospect of an opening for traind.

The Central officials made a desperate attempt to keep their passenger tracks between Jersey City and Dunellen open. The east bound trains were the most successful. Out of the forty eight scheduled to run yesterday, there were eleven that got through. It took from two to four hours to reach Jersey City and then the trip across on the ferry was accomplished with difficulty.

The last train to struggle on the P. and R. route reached Plainfield at 11:45 o'clock Saturday night. It reached Jersey City in safety. The last train to leave Plainfield for Jersey City left here at 5:30 o'clock. All the trains were drawn by two locomotives and consisted of two or three passenger coaches.

Only six of the forty eight westbound trains ever reached Plainfield. A Philadelphia train passed Plainfield at 3:55 o'clock Monday morning and passed Bound Brook. It is not known whether it arrived safely. A Somerville local arrived here at 2:17. It reached Somerville in time.

The paper train left Jersey City at 4:30 and reached here at 6:27. It brought the New York morning papers and the mail. There were two engines attached. The train went on and in the Pinderne cut ran into a great drift. The locomotives left the rails and blocked both tracks. The wrecking train was sent out from Elizabethport and finally succeeded in clearing them away.

A Dunellen local reached Plainfield at 11:07 in the morning with difficulty. The only train of the afternoon reached here at 2:17, drawn by a passenger and a freight engine. The latter was out of water, and they had to stop here a half hour to take it. The train left at 2:42, and reached Somerville where it was disbanded.

The first train to reach Plainfield this morning left Jersey City at 1 o'clock. It reached here at 6:58 and went on to Dunellen.

At 7:14, a train was despatched to Jersey City and reached there in two hours. Two locomotives were used on all the trains.

At 8:58, a special of two locomotives and four coaches left Dunellen and arrived here ten minutes later. There was a crowd of commuters who had been waiting at the depot from five to an hour. As the train pulled in, a great cheer arose that then there was a big scramble to get aboard and get seats. Over three hundred piled about the train, sixty more than its seating capacity. It was announced that the train would not make any regular stop until it reached Jersey City.

Heavy freight locomotives were kept running most of the night in an attempt to keep open the passenger tracks. No plows were used. The greatest trouble was met with in the cuts at Bayonne and those beyond Bound Brook. Switches were covered and the rails were slippery.

The railroad officials are not even thinking of the freights and coal traffic at present. All their energies are turned toward caring for the passenger traffic. Had the snow been heavy and sandy like that of the blizzard of '88, they say that the lines would have been entirely blocked for several days.

ONE MAIL ARRIVES.

Postmaster Bird and His Staff are Patiently Waiting for Results.

No communication with the outside world, through the mails, has been had since early yesterday morning when the paper train, due here shortly after 5 o'clock and carrying the first mail from New York, reached the city about 6:30 o'clock. This mail was delivered by the carriers. Since then no mail has been received from New York or points south and west, although Postmaster Bird is expecting some at any time.

Yesterday being a holiday, it was intended to deliver but one mail, so the storm made no difference there. The carriers were told last night to report at 10 o'clock this morning to deliver the mail. The carriers managed to make their collections, but the amount of mail dropped in the city was so small that it will not be delivered until the mails from the outside world are received.

About 10:30 o'clock this morning the paper train from New York succeeded in getting through bringing with it the mail, which was sorted as quickly as possible and delivered. By night it is hoped to get one from Philadelphia.

CAN'T GET ENOUGH MEN

Street Commissioner Gavett Has a Big Job, But Can't Get Workmen.

The work of Street Commissioner Gavett is hampered by his inability to secure men. All of them are busy, and those who are not have no desire to go to work for the city at $1.50 a day when they can make five times that much shoveling paths for those who are unable to do it themselves. All this morning the Street Commissioner has been hunting for help, but no one wants work, and he is forced to attack the work of clearing away the snow with a gang of only twelve.

The street gang went to work Sunday morning clearing off crosswalks. The snow plow also was out, but the men went in again at noon so as to be fresh for the next morning.

Yesterday morning there was a gang of eight at work, but the snow blew so hard that they were sent in again at noon, all except John Seay and Robert Yetman, who were with the snow plow. These men stuck to their task of breaking rough paths through the principal streets until dark.

This morning soon after daylight the gang, increased to twelve men, began their battle with the snow. Crosswalks are being cleared, and wherever possible the two snow plows are being used to break paths. As soon as more men can be hired the snow now piled up in the gutters will be carted away.

The people themselves are pretty generally clearing away the snow from in front of their houses assisted by the snow plows.

MILKMEN KEPT AT IT.

They Had a Hard Struggle, But Succeeded in Supplying Customers.

The milkmen had a hard struggle of it, and if the storm had not abated somewhat during the night it is probable that Plainfield would be threatened with a milk famine. While many of the local dealers in milk reside in the city or its immediate suburbs, all of them are compelled to go out into the country to secure their supply of the commodity. It was a tough time that the milkmen had, but stuck to their jobs and succeeded in supplying all their customers, although some of them did not get their lacteal fluid until late in the day.

NO DANGER OF COAL FAMINE

Meat Supply May Run Short, Though—Dearth of Green Vegetables.

There is no danger of a coal famine even if no coal is received here for a month, according to the dealers themselves. Potters, Scott and the water supply company are well supplied, some of them having enough coal on hand to last for months.

As for meat, unless some is sent before the week is out, the supply will run short. The Union Beef Company have enough on hand to last all this week, as they received a car load Monday, but the Plainfield Beef Company are almost out of provision, and unless they can get a car through by Thursday will be unable to supply the retail dealers.

Grocers, too, are anticipating a dearth of green vegetables and such provisions as they buy fresh every day or two.

GOOD TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Only Two Lines Got Out of Order and These Were Soon Repaired.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company suffered the least of any in the storm and they been exceedingly fortunate in this respect. In all about five local wires were out of order, but these will be repaired by noon. Two trunk lines were out of order, the New Brunswick and Newark and the New Brunswick and New York. These lines have been temporarily fixed so that they are now being used.

Governor to Take Third Degree.

Friday Governor Voorhees will take the third degree in the Masonic Lodge at Elizabeth and several Masons from this city will attend the meeting.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CLOSED.

Superintendent Maxson Snow Bound and Principal Travell Dismissed Those Who Come.

Yesterday being a legal holiday, there was no session at the public schools in the city and borough. Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the Plainfield schools, is storm bound at New Haven. Out of an average attendance of two hundred, there were thirty out at the Stillman High School this morning. A number were girls. Principal Travell dismissed them and and telephoned to the other principals to do the same. It is expected that school will be regularly resumed tomorrow.

No sessions were held at the Borough Public School today as the children were unable to reach the school. The sessions will probaby be resumed tomorrow when the walks will be cleared off.

DIGGING OUT.

Big Force of Men Clearing Away Drifts in the Business Centre of the City

The business section of the city has taken a very wintry aspect. Great banks of snow, partly drifts and partly the snow from the sidewalks, are on every street to the height of five, six and seven feet. Some enterprising dealers have placed advertisements on top of them.

Patsy Christmas has a gang of thirty men at work shoveling the snow off the car tracks on West Front street.

Wm. Hand & Son have been given the contract by the city of cleaning Park avenue from Front street to North avenue. This morning they had three carts and six men at work, but the force will be increased this afternoon.

A Foolhardy Trip.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, February 14.—Walter Titus, of Washingtonville, started to drive from Newark to Plainfield yesterday. When he reached here last night he was overcome by the cold and became unconscious. Several noticed his condition and stopped the horse and carried Titus in Grogan's Hotel, where two doctors attended him. He was sufficiently recovered today to come to Plainfield on a train.

Hurt by an Icycle.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Feb. 14.—Michael Moynihan, of Bound Brook, driver of engine No. 94, of the Central Railroad, met with a painful accident at the roundhouse yesterday morning while getting his engine out of the house. An immense icycle hanging at the entrance broke and struck him on the head and shoulders, inflicting two deep cuts, one in the scalp. His injuries were not so serious but that he was able to remain at work and do what he could.

In the Suburbs.

The suburban places that surround Plainfield are temporarily dead to the world. Where the railroad does not connect them with the outer world, communication is shut off. Up in the Washington valley the roads are all blocked with hugh drifts. Scotch Plains has managed to dig its way out to a limited extent.

SPOKE TO THE JUNIORS.

Rev. J. O McKelvey Made an Address in the Y. M. C. Meeting.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey spoke to about forty of the members of Franklin and Somerset Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon. A much larger delegation was expected to out, but the storm kept them at home. But those who did attend listened to a strong gospel talk upon the importances of living Christian lives.

Mr. McKelvey chose for his text these words from Second Peter, 'Give diligence to make your calling and election sure.'' He spoke of the importance of being fit to carry on the work of civilization and said that to succeed fully do this we must have health, education and, but most important of all, salvation. The call of God to sinners, through Jesus, his son, 1900 years ago, is perpetuated today in the New Testament.

Some people think that God personally calls those who are elected to be saved, and that the others perish, but Mr. McKelvey said that is not so. The calls is to everyone. Those who hear the call and accept salvation, are saved; those who do not, have themselves to blame.

Fire in Mr. Gilbert's Home.

An alarm of fire was sent in by telephone from the residence of Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of Central avenue and Eighth street, at 8 o'clock Tuesday a. m. Chief Deasy and the No. 2 hose wagon responded. They found the smoke pouring from the registers. The cause of the smoke was found to be a bit of wood and a candle left inside the heating dome of the furnace by workman who repaired it. The great heat set fire to the candle. It was allowed to burn out.

Death of Mrs. Benson

Mrs. Helena Benson, of New York, widow of the late Charles Benson, and sister of the late Former Mayor Maxson, of this city, died suddenly at the Aviston, New York, Monday.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a pulmonary phthisic, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to recommend the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Enormous.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for them?" He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $20 a year. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who spoke highly of the benefit they had derived from the use of Ripans Tabules, but objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elderly lady replied, "I may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I have no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

A copy of the testimonials in the daily press, and a statement of the number of Ripans Tabules sold during the past year, will be sent on receipt of postal card addressed to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce street, New York. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists generally. The five-cent packet is sufficient for ordinary occasions. The family bottle, containing a dozen packets, is sufficient for a year.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1899. NO. 8.

"Support the Constitution. Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

REASONS FOR MAKING GREATER PLAINFIELD.

Advantages That Are Urged to Effect Consolidation.

W. L. SAUNDERS' ADDRESS.

TIMELY INTEREST BECAUSE OF THE BOROUGH ELECTION.

Mr. Saunders Sums Up the Situation in an Exhaustive Manner, and From His Point of View Makes a Strong Argument—One City Would Do Away With Much Unnecessary Expense.

Information on the subject of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield is in great demand just now inasmuch as a canvass to ascertain the sentiment of the voters of the borough is being made and the proposition is to be voted upon at the coming borough election. Two years ago, when a number of North Plainfield citizens formed themselves into a consolidation society to urge the project, former Mayor Saunders delivered an address on the subject. Among the reasons for consolidation he mentioned the following:

"1—It is one of the fundamental maxims of business and Government that two men should not be employed to do work, which can be done equally as well by one. Two Mayors, two Councils, two Clerks, two Attorneys, two Tax Assessors, two Collectors, two Street Commissioners, two Chiefs of Police, two Fire Chiefs, two Overseers of the Poor, are unnecessary in this little circle of ours. It is simply extravagance in time and money. Not one of us would think of keeping up such an organization in his own business.

"2—Joint co-operation in building and maintaining sewers and other improvements would reduce the per capita expense and aid in getting the best results. A community of twenty thousand might afford to go to tide water for sewage disposal, while one of half the population might not. Plainfield's present system is probably the best under existing circumstances, but think of the folly of North Plainfield building its own system to tidewater, or maintaining separate disposal beds! Are the intelligent taxpayers of the borough ready to buy property in the face of the fact that the city beds are big enough for two? Will they be willing to employ men to take care of them when the men employed by the city can attend to both? The alternative is to go to tidewater at an expense which makes it prohibitive. Yet who will deny that the borough must in time be sewered? It will not do to rely forever on our gravel soil. It is difficult to convince intelligent people that one portion of a town with cesspools is as good a place to live in as another with sewers.

"3—The administration of justice is retarded by the present condition. The authority of the city and borough police stops at the county line, so that criminals escape capture by flight across the brook. The only magistrates in the borough are justices of the peace, hence important civil and criminal cases must go to Somerville, an inconvenience and expense in time and money. Plainfield has only a city court, which has many limitations. Consolidation would probably entitle the city to a district court for cases now tried in Elizabeth. Need one ask for a better reason for union than that it will aid in the administration of justice?

"4—Municipal improvements are retarded by the lack of political co-operation between the two towns. Much of the delay in opening up Watchung avenue was due to this conflict. The streets in the city which lead to the brook are in bad condition, because of neglect and the feeling that if anything is done our neighbor will get the benefit of it. Sycamore avenue in the borough has recently been cut through to Front street at private expense, and it will probably be a difficult matter to get the chairman of the street committee in Plainfield to accept and care for the little spur on his side because those foreigners in the borough will get all the benefit and should pay the tax. No such conditions would arise if we were united. If a bridge is needed across the brook it will not be built until the two boards of chosen (and very precious) freeholders are brought together each in their respective county seats. Think of this kind of home rule! A board of freeholders in Somerville and another in Elizabeth passing on the question whether or not Plainfield can have a bridge for one of its streets!

"5—Free access to the public schools and to the public library is much to be desired. The High School of the city is not free to borough residents. A free library is a fruitful source of cultivation and enlargement; it is open to the poor as well as to the rich, and the charge which is made for residents of the borough, even though it be small, is nevertheless a barrier to its general use.

"6—The laws that govern cities are not the same as those that govern boroughs, hence where the two are practically merged in one there is an inequality of conditions. The difference in the saloon license tends to drive the saloon into the borough. The laws compel them to close at eleven o'clock at night in the city while in the borough they keep open till twelve and sometimes later. After eleven at night the city empties its saloon refuse into the borough. I have known this to result in so much disorder as to require a special officer to look after the regions of the bridge at night.

"7—A single Board of Health would probably clean the filth from the brook and mend its evil ways. What is everybody's business is nobody's business, and in spite of laws, threats and wranglies the brook is still the same foul and unkept thing—an open letter.

"8. One fire department with all that this implies.

"9. One police department.

"10. Lower taxes because of the increase in the per capita.

"11. The borough is now contributing to build up and extend the business district in the city and without getting any benefit from taxation.

"12. The population of Plainfield is 13,620, that of North Plainfield, 4,879. The influence of Plainfield would be extended. The rating is now too low because it is based on the population of the city alone, while in reality the borough should be added. Post offices and other privileges are based on population.

"But you will ask how union be brought about? The friends of this movement are united only in their desire for consideration by that means which is the most equitable. An act of the Legislature should be the first move, next a vote of the people. Four plans have been proposed as follows:

"1—Consolidation without changing the county lines.

"2—To take a slice from Somerset county thereby bringing North Plainfield into union.

"3—Adding Plainfield to Somerset county.

"4—A new county."

FIRST NIGHT OF FAIR IN WASHINGTON HALL.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA IN CHARGE.

Three Booths Trimmed in Natty Colors—Committee in Charge of Arrangements.

Washington Hall this week is the scene of a fair which the members of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., are holding.

The hall is decorated with flags and greens, and with the fancy-colored booths makes a handsome appearance. There are three booths: the grocery booth in red, white and blue; the fancy booth in red, and the candy booth is white.

The committee in charge of the fair consists of Mrs. I. F. Biker, chairman; Mrs. Eliza Radle, Mrs. E. Mattis, Mrs. Mary Hoffman, Mrs. Hannah Thompson, Mrs. Ellen Smith, Mrs. Hester Campbell, Miss Ratie Johnson, Mrs. Amelia Wyckoff, Mrs. Agnes Randolph, Mrs. Sarah Page, Mrs. Winnie Allen, Mrs. Mary Welsh, and Messrs. G. S. Martin, F. W. Welsh, George Allen and Howard Bennett. These look after the various booths and have general charge of the fair. A feature of Friday evening will be a supply of home-made clam chowder which will be served.

Fell on the Ice.

Mrs. William Wilson, of Grove street, is detained at home the result of a severe fall she had on the ice Saturday evening in front of her home. She was considerably bruised about the body, while her arms and wrists were sprained to a large degree, giving her great pain. Dr. Buchanan was called and prescribed the proper treatment. Mrs. Wilson will be confined to the house for a week at least.

To Devote His Time to Musical Work.

Wm. Holmes, the well-known baritone soloist at the First Baptist church, has decided to devote all his time to a musical career. He has resigned his position in New York and will give vocal instruction at his studio, 440 West Front street. Mr. Holmes is a pupil of Dr. Carl E. Duff and is well and favorably known in local musical circles.

Insurance Settled.

The Orient Insurance Company has settled with William Schloss for his loss by fire last week at his shoe store on West Front street. Mr. Schloss receives $1,550 and keep his stock to dispose of it as he sees fit.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

J. M. Barrie's dramatization of his famous novel the "Little Minister" will be seen here at Music Hall Friday night. It will be presented by Charles Frohman's Company, one which he has especially selected to present this successful comedy. Mr. Frohman has taken especial pains to give the comedy the cast that will in every way do justice to it, and those who have seen "The Little Minister" say that the dramatization is fully as good, if not better than the story, Mr. Barrie. It is said, has given us a delightful play. A play that has been given for 300 performances, and every one of them attended by an audience that packed the theatre to the doors, certainly must have a great deal of merit in it.

* * * * * * *

At the Proctor continuous theatres in New York in these early spring days the crowds are taxing the capacity of both houses. At the Twenty-third Street Theatre the shoppers flock in droves, taking an hours' respite from the turmoil of bargain hunting. This theatre, just west of Sixth avenue, is in the very heart of the big retail dry goods district and is the most accessible of any continuous house in town for suburban visitors. From points in Long Island and on the line of the roads running out of the Grand Central depot, the Palace, at 58th street, Third and Lexington avenues, is the most accessible as it is but a few minutes distant from 42d and 34th streets. For the week of February 20th, and including the holiday, Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22d, elaborate bills have been arranged for both houses. On Washington's Birthday, the doors will open at both houses at 9:30 a. m. and the programme will run continuously without a break until 11 p. m. The stars at the Twenty third Street Theatre are Edward Harrigan the famous New York comedian, assisted by his own company in "My Son Dan;" Isabelle Urquhart and company in "Even Stephen;" Thos. J. Ryan and Mary Richfield. At the Palace are the Three Leightons, the greatest of all aerial acrobats; Marzella's wonderful troupe of 200 birds; Marco Twins.

Manager Edwards has succeeded in getting the heating apparatus in Music Hall in good working order after a severe trial and is able to assure his patrons that hereafter the theatre will be comfortable no matter how cold the weather is.

* * * * * * *

In the presentation of "Rip Van Winkle" by the Jefferson Comedy Company in Music Hall last night Manager Edwards scored another distinctly creditable attraction. It may be well said that men may come and men may go but "Rip Van Winkle" seems to go on forever, for as old as it is the dramatized legend of Sleepy Hollow it is bright and interesting whenever seen in the hands of capable actors. And to say that it was presented last night by the Jeffersons—minus Joseph, Sr., however, but with his sons who have inherited much of their father's particular talent, which has been added to with ideas of the histrionic art drilled into them by years of association with the elder on the stage—is tantamount to crediting the performance as the best of "Rip Van Winkle" to be seen on the stage today. Thomas Jefferson played the title role. In appearance he resembled his father very much, and in acting he carried out the character of "Rip" in much the same manner as his sire, whose association with the part was so familiar to all theatre-goers that to mention the name "Rip Van Winkle" meant to think of Joseph Jefferson and vice versa. The supporting company, including three other sons of the elder Jefferson, together with the scenic accessories, was all that could be desired to make the performance a finished one.

Couldn't Find Papers.

Milkman Sage, of Stirling, who supplies customers in this vicinity with milk each morning, also combines with that business supplying the Stirling people with New York papers, which are thrown off here every morning from the paper train. Lately Sage has not been able to find his papers when he reached the station mornings, and Roundsman Frederickson has been making a quiet investigation. He believes that some news boys have been picking up the roll of five New York Journals and selling them, and pocketing the proceeds. Hereafter a sharp lookout will be kept on the lads.

CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP OF WHITE'S BIG STORE

Crosby & Hill Took Possession Tuesday.

WAS A GENERAL SURPRISE.

MR. WHITE WILL RETIRE ON ACCOUNT OF POOR HEALTH.

The Business Transferred Entire—Mr. White Still Owns the Building—No Change in Staff of Employes—New Firm is From Wilmington, Del.—Has Branch Stores at Morristown and Perth Amboy.

The sensation of the morning came in the announcement that Edward White, the well known local merchant, had decided to retire from business and that his big store on West Front street had passed into the hands of Crosby & Hill, who hale from Wilmington, Del., where their principal store is located. The new comers already have two branch establishments in New Jersey, one at Morristown and the other at Perth Amboy, where they have been seine-ity successful.

The news of the change in the management of the big store came to the public Tuesday without warning and was the principal topic of discussion on the streets Tuesday. Even to the interested parties the deal was consummated with a celerity and dispatch that gave them the information but a short time in advance of its general announcement. Last summer Crosby & Hill considered the advisability of purchasing Mr. White's business in Plainfield, but no action was reached at that time. A little correspondence and yesterday afternoon W. K. Crosby, senior member of the firm, with S. B. Carson, one of his managers, came to Plainfield. A settlement was reached at once and the establishment was turned over to the new firm last night.

Crosby & Hill have had much experience and have met with uniform success in all their stores which are conducted with a view of giving their patrons the best possible service and the best goods at the lowest possible prices. They will continue the business in this city on the same broad liberal lines under which it flourished during Mr. White's time.

Mr. White has been intimately connected with the business progress of the city every since his youth and has built up this store until it has become equal in many respects to the big department stores of the big cities. The building, where the store is located, is the property of Mr. White and will remain so. He has leased it to the new owners of the business who will continue in the same quarters.

To a Press reporter Mr. White said this morning that he sold out as his health would not permit him to give his business the attention it needed. He will remain at the store for a few weeks to give the new comers the benefit of his advice and knowledge of the local affairs and see them well started. Then he will retire from all business for the spring and summer and take a well earned rest.

Mr. Crosby, the senior partner, is in town today but will soon return to Wilmington. The business will then be left in the hands of S. B. Carson, a thoroughly experienced man, who will manage the establishment for the present. Both Mr. Crosby and his manager impress the visitor as energetic business men who intend to give Plainfield their best efforts in providing for their wants.

There will be no changes in the staff of employes at the store and the arrangements will remain the same for the present at least.

Next fall Mr. White will resume his business career and will take charge of several thill accounts in wholesale houses. He will make his headquarters in New York or San Francisco.

Settled Out of Court.

The case in tort between J. H. French and Peter Zimmerson, which was to have been tried yesterday afternoon before Justice Moffett, was settled out of court. Zimmerman, who used to keep a butcher shop where Mundy & Drake now are, broke a large pane of glass in the store, which, Mr. French, who owns the store, claims Zimmerman refused to replace. Suit was therefore brought against Zimmerman for damages, but the case was settled before going to trial.

Goes to California for His Health.

George L. Colgate, president of the Bard Company, dealers in sporting goods, has gone to California for his health, where he expects to remain until spring. The Bard Company will continue to do business at their present station on North avenue.

A PASSION FOR TRUTH.

ONE OF CROMWELL'S CHARACTERISTICS NAMED BY DR. RICHARDS.

The Largest Lecture of the Season Before the Monday Afternoon Club—Audience Pleased With the Discourse.

No lecture of the season before the Monday Afternoon Club has been so largely attended as was that delivered Monday afternoon at the Casino by Dr. William R. Richards on "Oliver Cromwell." Giving a brief outline of the condition of England then corrupt, of the church, the growth of puritanism and the march of events in which Cromwell was concerned, Dr. Richards made a close analysis of the character of Oliver Cromwell.

He described him as a leader among men was greatly of dissimulation, but on the contrary, he had a passion for truth. He granted that he was inconsistent, caring more for God's thought of him than his reputation with men. He described vividly Cromwell's army, made up from the ranks of the non-conformists, who never lost a battle. As a soldier, there was but one opinion of Cromwell, who always fought to win. There was much question about his statesmanship.

This was shown at the best in his dealings with the Scotch, and the next when dealing with the Irish. His foreign policy was described as magnificent. In war in dealing with the English parliament that Cromwell failed, and this failure was caused by his masterful force that was impatient of the methods of others. Dr. Richards closed his lecture of thrilling interest by an account of the punishment that came to England by Cromwell's failure, and that was the restoration of the sound rings and the end of puritanism, but which happily was transferred to new soil in a new England.

The justice of Dr. Richard's estimate of Cromwell was shown in this that the admirers of Cromwell in the audience were satisfied and that his depreciators were content that he was not put on a pedestal for hero worship.

LIQUOR DEALERS WANT LAW.

Bill to Be Introduced by Them to Abolish the "Bleeding" Process.

Elizabeth, February 21.—A bill will be introduced in the House indorsed by the Board of Excise and drawn by the Liquor Dealers' Association, of this city. The bill provides that a saloonkeeper shall require only one or more signatures to remain permanent. In other words, the saloonkeeper will not be compelled to look for signatures to his license application each year, as heretofore, unless he violates his pledge to keep an orderly house, etc.

The bill also intends to protect the saloon keeper from what is known as the bleeding process by the signers, who, it is claimed, exact credit, political preferment, loans, etc. Saloonkeepers throughout the State favor the bill, and every effort will be made to have the bill become law. The Legislature committee of the association will select the Assemblyman to introduce the measure.

HIGH WATER AT NEW BRUNSWICK.

Raritan River Choked With Ice, and the People Fear a Flood.

New Brunswick, Feb. 21.—There is danger of a freshet in the Raritan River. The ice in the Millstone and other tributaries of the Raritan has broken up and also the ice in the river above the city. It has gorged at the landing just above the city, and the river has risen five feet, flooding the surrounding meadows and covering the causeway leading to the landing bridge. The water is within a few feet of the floor of the bridge.

The ice in the river in front of New Brunswick is solid from New Brunswick to the bay. In some places it is 13 inches thick. If the gorge above the river breaks the ice and water will have no way of escaping and the lower part of the city will be flooded. The volume of water in the river has enormously increased by the thaw, and merchants along the water-front have moved their goods to the second floors.

LAWMAKERS ON DECK.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE STARTS IN FOR REAL WORK.

Two Bills Passed—Resolution Calling for Popular Election of Senators—New Plan for Jury Drawing by Senator Stokes.

Trenton, Feb. 21—Routine business and the introduction of bills formed the major part of the work of both Houses of the Legislature last night. The House passed the bill authorizing the erection of a home for aged disabled firemen by the State Firemen's Association, and also a bill allowing constables a fee of 50 cents for attendance at the hearing of any person who may have been arrested.

The House referred to the Committee on Revision of Laws a resolution by Mr. Abbett (Dem.) favoring the election of United States Senators by popular vote. Mr. Abbett wanted the House to vote on the resolution, but Mr. McKee, the Republican leader, moved its reference and the motion was carried by a party vote. The Republicans voted in the affirmative.

House bill No. 103, providing for a State Board of Children's Guardians, was recommitted to the Committee on Revision of Laws. The bill is meeting with much opposition.

In the Senate Senator Stokes introduced a bill which changes the present system of drawing juries. Grand juries and petit juries must be chosen by lot from a list of all those in the county eligible to jury duty. The list must be filed with the county clerk subject to revision by the county court.

Senator Wm. M. Johnson introduced a bill extending the State aid law to cases where roads are built by townships.

The members of the two Houses, after adjournment, attended a reception given by the Republican Club of this city in honor of Senator-elect John Kean and United States Senator Wm. J. Sewell.

OFFICERS MARCHED IN RANKS IN COMPANY H.

PRIVATES ARE IN A SPUNKY MOOD.

Somerville Company, in Which Plainfielders Were, Wouldn't Be Led Otherwise.

Somerville, Feb. 21—The members of Company H, Third Regiment, who were recently mustered out of the service and returned from the camp at Athens, Ga., were invited to attend a service at the Second Reformed church last Sunday evening. When the soldiers assembled at the company rooms on Main street prior to the hour for service, they declared that they would not march to the church under command of Captain John H. Wehrly and Lieut. Harry Plass. The men maintained that the officers had not treated them right. The trouble began when the company first went out and has continued until now.

The company finally started from the rooms under command of Sergeant E. A. Thompson. The officers fell into line in the rear and were jeered at several times as they went along the street. At the church they took seats behind the men in the pews that had been reserved. The action of the men caused quite a sensation in the town. Tomorrow night a banquet will be given by the citizens in Somerset Hall, and it is feared that there may be unpleasant circumstances.

A number of Plainfield boys were members of Company H.

NOT EVEN A QUORUM PRESENT.

Not Enough Board of Trade Members Present to Hold a Meeting.

Last Monday was the regular time for the Board of Trade meeting, but as usual there was a lack of a quorum. The usual four or five members assembled and after a smoke and a chat decided that they would adjourn to meet when a sufficient number of members would come together. While the few members were together they engaged in a discussion regarding the enterprise (?) of the local merchants, some of whom are members of the Board.

A member of the Board previously suggested that an effort be made to assist the G. A. R. in celebrating next Decoration Day, but it is hardly thought that there will be enough enterprise manifested to carry the scheme through.

Wants Wages and Borrowed Money.

Mrs. Mary Leary, of 40 Madison street, New York, has brought suit against Adrian C. Pickhardt, of this city, on contract, before Justice Mattison. Miss Leary is suing for two months wages, $36, and $99 borrowed money. She claims that when he paid her wages he would immediately borrow it again. The plaintiff is represented by T. W. Nash, Jr., and the case will be tried next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

VICTORY WAS EASY FOR PLAINFIELD TEAM

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Defeated Hasbrouck Heights F. C.

BY A VERY LARGE SCORE.

FINE EXHIBITION OF TEAM WORK IN BASKET BALL.

Game Played in Local Gymnasium—Plainfield Won By Score of 40 to 8—As Game Was Easy, Home Team Did Some Spectacular Playing—Smith's Long Throws for the Goal Sensational.

Scoring at the rate of one point for every minute of play the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. had an easy thing of it in its match with the team from the Hasbrouck Heights Field Club, played in the local gymnasium Monday evening. While Plainfield won by the large score of 40 to 8, the game was not as uneven as the first match played at Hasbrouck Heights.

It was a pretty game, even if it was rather uneven, and there was plenty of enthusiasm shown particularly for the visitors. The crowd realized that it was a one-sided contest and so gave its sympathy to the weaker side. When the visitors threw their first goal the players had to wait several minutes for the applause to subside before resuming play.

The game furnished an opportunity to the home team to show off its abilities. The visitors, while they played hard, lacked the training and endurance of the Plainfield boys and so played much slower. As a result, there was a great exhibition of passing on the part of the local players. There was really some fine work done. The team work was almost perfect, and the Heights' men were fairly bewildered by it.

The scoring for Plainfield began at once. Several times Egan and Long worked a pretty little trick at the start and scored without the ball ever passing out of the hands of the home team. George Proctor Smith made some flying leaps and tries at goal with success. He also did some secondrate goal-throwing from a distance.

The game opened with both substitutes, Carroll and Bonny, playing. Eric Moraller came in collision with Fred Bonny and cut his face. Smith took his place for the time. In the second half, the Moraller brothers went in and the team lined as of old. Then followed a very clever bit of team work and passing.

The Hasbrouck Heights men showed a decided improvement over the form in the first game. The lively game tired them out toward the last and they showed signs of weakening. They were playing on the defensive most of the time.

The teams lined up as follows:

Plainfield.	Hasbrouck Heights.
Long.....right forward.....Leighton
Bonny.....left forward.....Benedict
E. Moraller.....centre.....Doyle
Egan.....centre.....Doyle
Carroll.....right guard.....Roberts
E. Moraller.....right guard.....Roberts
Smith.....left guard.....Orr

Score—Plainfield, 40; Hasbrouck Heights, 8. Goals from the field—Long, (4), Bonny, (3), Egan, (1), E. Moraller, (2), Smith, (7), Carroll, (2), E. Moraller, (2), Leighton (3), Doyle (2), Roberts, (1). Goals on fouls—Long, (5). Fouls called—Long, 1. Referee—Hasbrouck Heights, A. Behrens—D. E. A. Heywood.

LITTLE WATER TO FIGHT FIRE.

Low Pressure to Blame for Much Damage to Four Buildings.

Somerville, Feb. 21—Fire which started about 1 o'clock yesterday morning did much damage to four buildings. The flames originated from a stove in Charles Spector's house and spread rapidly. Mr. Spector was badly burned in his attempt to put out the fire.

The flames got into the attic and spread through the buildings adjoining for nearly half a block. The firemen were handicapped by a low pressure of water, but finally got the flames under control after the roofs and third floors of all the buildings were destroyed.

Charles Schwed and the Dougherty estate own the building. The loss, about $6,000, is covered by insurance.

Lace Curtains Caught Fire.

On Saturday evening last a serious conflagration was averted at the home of Valentine Utzinger, No. 75 Grandview avenue. Mrs. Utzinger changed the position of a lamp, placing it near a lace curtain. In a few minutes the curtain caught fire and was blazing fiercely when discovered by a son, John Utzinger, who promptly removed the lamp and extinguished the blaze.

UNAPPRECIATED KISSES.

He never sunk a collier
To bottle up a fleet,
But the pretty maidens kiss him
And exclaim: "Oh, ain't he sweet!"

He never scoffed at danger,
Nor made a poet sing;
He has never done a single
Extraordinary thing.

Still the women, when they see him,
Utter words of wild delight,
And at once begin to kiss him,
Each of them with all her might.

But it hasn't swelled his head up,
Hasn't spoiled the little chap—
He is three weeks old and doesn't
Care a continental rap.

THE CRAMPTON MYSTERY.

"Please tell Mr. Crampton that I must see him—I have something of the utmost importance to tell him.'

"Very well, sir."

The maid left Fred Palmer, a hustling youth, with an habitually sensational cast of mind, to go up one pair and ran upstairs as fast as she could. The parlor seemed deserted, for there was no fire in it, though it was midwinter. Altogether, the house had a disagreeable feeling of sadness about it. No wonder, considering that the only son of the family had been missing for over a week, and nothing but a crumpled and battered hat found in a passenger coach on the railroad to give a hint of his fate.

Presently the maid came running down the stairs with, "Please come up to Mr. Crampton's room, sir." Which message she delivered breathlessly before she could touch the last step of the flight.

The young man found a picture of horror when he entered Mr. Crampton's room. A week before, that grizzled Crampton would have been set down by any chance acquaintance as a robust, prosperous man of forty-five. This evening he looked, wrapped in a drab-colored dressing gown, and seated in an armchair close to the fire, like a man of seventy.

"You have something to say to me, Mr. Palmer?" he asked, in a shaky voice.

"Yes, sir, and it would not wait, or I would not have troubled you at this hour. To come to the point, I have traced the—murderer."

Mr. Crampton pulled himself forward in the two items of his chair and stared with open mouth.

"Then poor Bob—my boy has been murdered!"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir," said Palmer, starting back and hesitating—"I—I thought, everybody says—I thought you were all reconciled to—to this view."

"Yes—yes; go on and tell me. I suppose it must be so. Sit down."

"The man has left Chicago, sir. The police have been made his way to Oregon or Washington. They are looking for him on other charges."

"Yes, but I care nothing about other charges. Tell me about this—about my boy."

"Yes, sir," said Palmer; "I am coming to that. This man—commonly known as Nipper Cary—was seen here a week ago last Wednesday, wandering about the town. He had on an old brown traveling cap and a dilapidated mustache. Said he was looking for work. The police here had no idea as to his identity. Thursday he was seen speaking to poor Bob—"

"Good God!"

"Yes, sir. Then he followed Bob down toward the freight yards. You remember that was the night—"

"Yes. Never mind that—"

"Well, sir, it seems that the wife of the gatekeeper at the Clara Crampton depot saw some one call to her husband. She went out and spoke to her husband about it, and he told her she must be dreaming, that it was a drunken man arying to sing up the fence. Later, after a hearing in an police station admits that a man answering the description of Cary, only with a derby hat, came to the crossing, carrying a bundle under his arm."

"And which way did he go?"

"Well, the gatekeeper says he turned and walked up the line away from town. It was just after that that the No. 9 train went out, you know, sir. And it was on the No. 9 that the porter found Bob's hat—a derby—under the seat. The conductor said, you remember, that a rough-looking man boarded the train at Whinger's and paid his fare as far as Evanston."

The shaggy father was sobbing, and Palmer respectfully paused a moment in his story.

"What do you think this scoundrel did with my son? Where is the body?"

"Going through Love Lane this afternoon, sir," Crampton, do you know the cedar clump at the edge of the Carpenter place, just about fifty yards from the crossing?"

"Well?"

"I found the bushes a good deal trodden at one place there. The long grass in the ditch at the roadside is dry now, of course, but at this place it was broken and stamped. And two rails of the snake fence have been let down there. Mrs. Carpenter told me that she had never known any one to make a short cut through the cedar clump at that place. But I went and looked about among the trees and found a well there, it has not been used for years, and the scoop goes that it is a used-up oil well."

"And you think?"

"Yes, sir. I think that the murderer threw poor Bob's body down that well."

"But isn't it filled up."

"Not up to the top, sir."

"Isn't there any machinery in it?"

"No, sir. The machinery was all removed long ago."

"Then," said Mr. Crampton, "I'll have that well opened, if I have to pay ten thousand dollars for it."

Here was where Palmer found his difficulty in the task he had set himself. The Carpenters—two brothers and his wife or one or them—refused to allow the well to be touched. When Mr. Crampton, accompanied by Palmer, visited the Carpenters' place on the morning after this interview, the Carpenters pointed out that the short thick undergrowth of brushwood at the mouth of the hole was not disturbed, as it would be if a dead body had been dragged thither and thrown in only a week before. Mr. Crampton pointed to the disturbed fence rails and trampled grass at the break in the fence, and the unquestionable evidence that some one had passed in that way walked to the old well and gone back again the same way.

But the Carpenters, though they admitted all these evidences, denied the force of Palmer's theory that a murder had been committed thereabouts on the Thursday night of the previous week.

It must be said that the Carpenters were not to be blamed for their part, in whose ability to ferret out a mystery most of his fellow-townsmen had great confidence, had discovered fresh evidence in the shape of a rag with blood on it, and a long hair, torn from all this strong circumstantial evidence Fred Palmer was the assistant editor of a local morning paper, and at least once before had successfully traced the guilt in another lesser crime to the guilty party.

In the previous case, a small gambling swindle, the opposition paper and most of the inhabitants had ridiculed Palmer's pretensions to being able to solve the problem; this time, at least, the circumstances were very wary of premature ridicule.

The upshot of all this was that, while Mr. Crampton consulted lawyers to find a means of compelling the Carpenters to allow their oil well to be excavated, local public opinion in the place of Palmer's fellow-citizens generally came round to Palmer's views; that young Bob Crampton had been murdered for his watch and the considerable sum of money he was known to have had in his pocket; that the murderer was a tramp who had disappeared from the neighborhood on the night of Bob's disappearance, and that Bob's body had been thrown into the abandoned well.

Palmer's success in bringing that villain to justice," Mr. Crampton said to Palmer at a second interview, "you may command any service I am able to do you from now on."

It was just what Palmer wanted to hear from Bob's father, chiefly because Bob's father was also the father of Clara. There was more than mere reportorial ambition in this activity of Fred Palmer.

"No, ma'am."

Obeying Orders.

Many years ago when Lord Dufferin was about to go to India as viceroy, he instructed his steward to build a stone wall around a famous ruined castle on his Irish estate, in order to protect it from vandals. On his return home, several years after, he found to his amazement that the old castle had disappeared, and in its place was a circular wall inclosing nothing. Sending for his steward, he demanded to know why his orders had not been carried out. The steward insisted that what he had ordered had been done.

"But where is the castle?" asked the marquis.

"The castle, me lord!" That old thing. Shure I pulled it down to build the wall wid. I didn't want me to be going miles for materials with the finest stones in Ireland beside me?"

In telling the man to build the wall his lordship had said nothing about the preservation of the castle.

Mr. Hardhead (hotly)—"I know it's true, Mr. Goodheart said he heard you."

Mr. Greathead—"Goodheart? I remember now what you refer to. But that, my friend, was during the election campaign."

Mr. Hardhead—"Oh! The campaign! Beg pardon. What'll you take.—New York Weekly.

THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY

He Was Unable to Make a Trade With a Grocer

The family had only lately moved into the neighborhood. A day or two after their arrival the head of the family went to the grocer in the neighborhood and asked the price of a can of condensed milk.

"Fifteen cents," said the proprietor.

"Fifteen devils!" exclaimed the customer, "why, man alive, I don't want to buy a dozen cans, but only one. What do you ask for half a can, whole sale figures?"

"Never sell half a can."

"I reckon you never sell anything, if you make up your goods in that way. Suppose I take a whole can, will you come down to a dime?"

"Fifteen cents is the usual price."

"That may be with unreliable, transient customers, but I am an old citizen of Galveston, and the store that catches my permanent trade will have to be enlarged within six months. Say a dime, and throw in a pound or two of soda crackers, and it's a whack."

"I can't make a good deal in the course of a year!" asked the proprietor with a sneer.

"Do I buy a good deal? I should say I did. Why, it won't be more than two months before I'll buy a box of matches. The box I'm using now is more than half gone, and I only got it last February, too. Say a dime for the condensed milk, and one of them stale watermelons thrown in as a sorter inducement, and you can put these two nickels in your pocket for safe."

"Fifteen cents is the lowest price."

"I wish you could see my blacking-brush. It can't hold out over Christmas, and then I am bound to negotiate for a new one. Throw one box of blacking in with the condensed milk, and it's a transaction."

"I won't do it."

"All right! You won't do it. I'll just keep my eye on you. I'll bet your stock is insured for twice what it's worth, and you are going to have a fire pretty soon. When a merchant don't want to build up a trade he is fixing to fail or swindle somebody. Good morning, sir."

Making the Most of Leap Year.

A cow and a mule were harnessed together and hitched to the plow, and a woman was holding the plow and ripping the soil of Kansas up the back at a great rate as I rode along the highway. I halted to watch the novel sight and as she caught sight of me the woman stopped the outfit and came striding across the furrows to say:

"Hello, stranger! Did ye stop at the shanty?"

"Yes, stopped for a drink."

"Was the children all right?"

"I saw seven or eight playing on the grass and having a good time. Where's the old man?"

"Pegged out last fall."

"Do you mean he died?"

"Didn't do nuthin' else fur about three months, and he finally got thar. Yes, he's gone to a better land, and I'm working to pay up his debts."

"Then you are a widow, of course?"

"Sartinly. Goin' to settle out here?"

"Possibly."

"Married?"

"No."

"Want me?"

"No."

"Stranger, shake!" she exclaimed, as she came nearer and extended her hand. "You ar' a critter as knows you gait, you ar', and it does me good to meet you. FAIR EXCHANGE.

Who laments the verdure vanished
From the hillside and the field
In the Fall?
Shall we cling to recollection and to melancholy yield?
Not at all.
Let the leaves and the daisies in the year's procession pass.
Let bone in idle folly cry "Alack!" not yet "Alas!"
When the ceiery is smiling on the table from the glass
Crisp and tall.

Why recall the morning jewels with their sparkle and their glow
Which we've lost?
And will because the dewdrops which were glistening long ago
Turn to frost?
The sight of glimmering globules as they drip into the pan,
When the feast's in preparation on an epicurean plan
Makes the diners of the present fully worth to any man
All they cost.

And he who mourns the songbird that was erstwhile perched so high
On a twig,
Deserves no recognition for his hypocritic sigh.
He's a pig.
For the bird which in the oven is roasting, so serene,
Adds a vastly greater share of picturesqueness to the scene,
And he's infinitely sweeter and at smallest seventeen
Times as big.

STORY OF A STOLEN KISS.

"My dear Leslie," said Henry Seymour to his ward, "I do wish you would try to be a little less fast; every one is talking about you and it is very painful to me."

"My dear guardy," said the young lady he addressed, a very pretty girl, about eighteen, "what have I done? I adopt a more ladylike manner, like those nice, quiet girls, Colonel Bond's daughters. I assure you, Leslie, men do not care for fast girls, however much they may flirt with them, and I confess I should like to see you well married."

"Now, my dear Sir Henry," said Leslie coaxingly, "tell me, did you ever hear me say anything the least weeny bit improper?"

"Certainly not, my dear child."

"Then let me tell you those nice, quiet, ladylike girls you admire so much are the ones that would make your hair stand on end. If you could only hear how they go on when we are by ourselves. I should be quite ashamed," she added, with energy, "to even think of the things they discuss freely; indeed, I cut them whenever I can. As for marrying—really all the young men I know are such muffs or prigs I detest the whole lot. What is my next crime?"

"You smoke cigarettes, Leslie," said her guardian sternly. "I was told you were actually seen with one between your lips on the boat coming up the river the night."

Leslie hung down her head a little and then said, with a slight blush:

"I cannot deny I tried one once, and indeed it was so nasty and made me feel so sick that I do assure you I am not likely to do it again."

"I am glad to hear it. So you think all young men muffs or prigs? I hope to introduce to you one who answers neither description; you have of course heard of Captain Murray?"

"Do you mean the Captain Murray who gained the Victoria Cross for defending that fort so gallantly in the last campaign? Of course I remember all about him. Why—"

"He is coming home, and, being the son of an old friend, he has promised to give me a visit, and I expect him shortly."

"How delightful! I shall like to meet a real hero. I hope he is handsome."

"Douglass Murray was a very good looking lad, but you will not suit him, young lady; he abhors 'fast girls,' and is very fastidious.'

"Well, I shall survive his disapprobation, I dare say. Amy will suit him to a T. She is such a demure little mouse." And Miss Lindsay took herself off.

In due time Captain Murray arrived. Leslie Lindsay was disappointed; she could hardly believe that quiet, unassuming young man could be the hero who had started the whole civilized world into admiration. But her guardian's great annoyance she seemed to make a point of showing herself in her worst colors, and when Sir Henry asked her whether she thought Captain Murray a prig or a muff she declared he was both.

One very hot day in July Leslie and Sir Henry's daughter, Amy Seymour, were returning from making a call. The drawing room windows opened on the veranda, which was covered with luxuriant creepers. Leslie had very good and pleasant inside on such a sultry day. The two girls were about to enter the room when Leslie, who was in advance, suddenly drew back and pointed inside. Amy peeped in. There was Captain Murray fast asleep in an arm chair near the window.

"What a chance, Amy, for me to win a pair of gloves."

"For shame, Leslie. You surely would not think of such a thing."

"Who's afraid?" said Leslie. "Besides he is really fast asleep and will never know, and the temptation is too much for me. Consider, the hero the whole world raves about," and with a mischievous look at Amy, she stepped lightly in and dropped a kiss as light as a puff of thistledown upon the sleeper's forehead.

As the sound of the girl's retreating footsteps died away Douglass Murray opened his eyes, and, smiling to himself, said:

"I suppose that is considered a feat girl. I must confess I like her, and he shies she is really true and womanly. That fast manner is all humbug. I must not forget to pay my debt, however," and he laughed. "She thinks me a muff, I know. Never mind, that kiss was very nice—I forgive her."

A day or two afterward, as they were all at breakfast, Sir Henry said:

"Leslie, there is something for you," handing her a small packet, marked "Parcel Post."

"What can it be, I wonder?" she said, as she cut the string; "the handwriting is quite strange to me," and she was not a little put about unconcernedly when Amy remarked:

"It is just the shape of a glove box."

Leslie started and looked guilty across the table at Captain Murray, who was, however, going on with his breakfast.

She took off the paper wrapper and discovered a white box—it did look horribly like a glove box, Leslie thought, as she lifted the cover—and, yes, inside lay several pairs of dainty kid gloves of different colors.

Hoping nobody noticed her confusion and not daring to look across the table she was replacing the cover of the box when Captain Murray said very coolly:

"I always pay my debts, Miss Lindsay. I do not like to feel under any obligation."

Hastily seizing her parcel Leslie rose, and, murmuring something to Sir Henry about not feeling very well, she flew upstairs and locked herself into her room, where she had a good cry.

After a little time she took a look at the gloves.

"Just my size. I wonder how he knew; and six buttons—and how pretty they are. He is not quite such a 'prig' after all, but it makes no difference to me, I shall be civil to him of course, but I shall not speak to him if I can help it."

One morning, however, fortune favored him. He was in the garden and Leslie was walking toward him; she was quite unconscious of his proximity and they must meet in a moment more. When she saw him standing near she lifted her eyes with a look to his with a wistful, half-beseeching glance.

"Miss Lindsay," said Douglas, "shake hands with me, please. I am afraid I took a most unfair advantage of you; pray forgive me and let us be friends."

"Oh, Captain Murray, I do feel so awfully ashamed of myself—what must you think of me?"

"Shall I tell you what I think of you, darling?" as he gently drew her toward him; "I think you a dear, sweet, lovable girl, and if you can put up with such a muff as I am as a husband—"

"Oh, please don't," said Leslie, interrupting him; "do not remind me of my impertinence. You are much too good for me, but indeed," with earnestness, "I will never do it again."

"I call that positively unkind, I assure you," said he, laughing. "I do not care how many times you repeat the operation——"

Leslie has been Mrs. Murray now some years, but her husband has never regretted he married a fast girl, while she declares she has found from experience all men are not either prigs or muffs.—London Evening News.

National Customs.

The traveler who lands at Calais from Dover and stops there over night is put into a bed having a hard round bolster, surmounted by a huge square pillow, very different from anything of the sort he has before seen, but which he finds quite the best—perhaps the most great comfort—wherever he goes in France. Here is a French fashion.

The traveler who enters Switzerland—it matters not where—has honey placed before him the first time he breakfasts or takes a meal. If he has not been treated to honey before in any adjacent country in which he has traveled, not, at least, unless he has specially ordered it; but now it is placed before him without his cares for it or not, and it continues to appear both at breakfast and tea, so long as he continues his sojournings in Switzerland. Here is a Swiss custom.

One who crosses from France to Germany exchanges customs in regard to the dinner hour. The evening dinner and the time of night for retiring to rest. The Frenchman eats but little in the morning or through the middle of the day, reserving his dinner until the close of the day. The German dines at midday. So much is this the practice, the very word for dinner signifies "midday's meal." And even fashionable Germany goes to its evening's entertainment at half past six P. M., and dines at two o'clock before the night has barely begun in London or Paris. Here are German habits.

The more one travels, the more, of course, he observes of these national peculiarities. He finds them existing not merely in such outward matters as those just indicated, but in every department of life. So numerous, so deeply rooted, so widely prevailing are these peculiarities as to stamp indefaceably the national character.

JUDGE DAILEY'S CONVERSION.

He Interestingly Relates the Incident that Led Him to Investigate Spiritualism.

The subjects of spiritualism and spiritual manifestation never fails to interest, for those who believe are continually on the outlook for new evidence and new supporters of their belief, while even those who scoff are forced to admit that many manifestations actually occur which apparently are unexplainable otherwise than by accepting the theory of a supernatural agency as the true evidence. One of the best known exponents of spiritualism is Judge Abram H. Dailey of Brooklyn, whose high position and intelligence gives peculiar emphasis to his opinions and beliefs. Interested in learning what influence has been brought to bear upon a mind naturally so practical and discriminating, strong enough to turn it in such a direction, a press representative sought an interview with Judge Dailey and was rewarded with a very interesting talk upon the subject.

"The son of New England parents, holding orthodox views, I was naturally religiously inclined," he began, "but there was so much that was mysterious and inconsistent in the Scriptures as expounded to me—so much that seemed unjust—that from early childhood I was continually searching and reaching out for myself. If it was true, I argued, that God had revealed himself in the early ages of the world, why were so much manifestations given in these days? We of to-day were His children just as truly as the men of old; we had the same trials and temptations and sorrows and longings; the same need of guidance and comfort; of present help, however slight, in this existence and hearness. Why, then, should it be withheld from us? The great injustice of it smote me. Where is the earthly father that would thus desert His children and devote them to eternal punishment if they transgressed his laws, I asked.

"Search and reason as I would I could find no convincing proof of a personal God, no proof of a being who had the interest of every living creature at heart and duly stood aloof because we refused to accept Him, and I came to believe that only through the study of nature and its inexorable laws could the solution of creation, life and eternity be solved.

"For years I had finished my law studies, had begun to practice, and had a wife and little child, a frail little thing, who we were puzzled to note slept with her head and feet bent back and her body almost in a bow. Further, her skin was often cold and lifeless to the touch.

"We were living in Barrington, Mass., and at the other end of the town was a Mrs. Clark, a poor, uneducated, but respectable and kind hearted woman whose powers as a medium had begun to make quite a stir in the community. She was a simple, unpretentous young man, but straightforward and honest as the day, became intensely interested in the rumors concerning Mrs. Clark, and at length prevailed upon me against my will to accompany him to her house. She received us politely, conversed for a time on general topics, then after a while paused, her eyes closed, and when in a few moments she began to talk again it was as if an entirely different person spoke in her room. Her voice and manner, and even her face, were changed.

"'I see a little child,' she began. 'See how far back she bends her head. It is because the light hurts her eyes and she is not used to it. It will injure her if they are not careful. And her ankles! See how deadly cold they are! The circulation is very bad. She must be treated,' and she mentioned her trance controls remedies that should be administered.

"I was greatly impressed, for we had spoken of the child's condition to no one, and even if we had the woman's position was so removed from ours that the matter could have reached her ears. Furthermore, we found that what she said was true, for when we put the child to sleep in the dark her position remained natural and her circulation was greatly improved by the treatment prescribed. I was not drawn toward spiritualism; indeed, I was bitter against it, and there the matter rested.

"About a year later this same little child became violently ill. Her temperature rose to 105, and finally her throat swollen shut. I waited until the physician told us we would have to lose her—that there was nothing more to be done—and then I said to him: 'Doctor, I am going for Mrs. Clark.' 'Go,' by all means,' he answered, 'and God speed you, for I can do no more.' We had removed to another town, some fifteen miles from our old home. It was a bitter winter night. The wind blew fiercely and the roads were deep in snow, but I bundled out my sleigh and drove all the way. It was midnight when I reached the house, but I succeeded in waking Mr. Clark, who put his head out of the window and spoke to me. When he heard my errand he at first refused to let his wife come. 'You must be crazy,' he said, 'to ask a woman to ride fifteen miles on such a night as this. She can't go, and that's all there is about it,' and he was closing the window when I heard a call. 'Yes, I am going—wait for me,' and in a few moments she appeared, bundled in shawls and wraps from head to foot. When we reached home she warmed her clothing at the fire so as not to chill her, took the child on her lap and in a few moments went into a trance.

"'This case is dark—so dark,' she murmured. 'Still, there is a ray of light. It is the brain; you must bind wet cloths on the brain and wait till morning.' We bound the child's head as directed and in the morning she seemed a trifle better. Then Mrs. Clark went into a second trance.

"'The darkness is breaking away a little, still it is very black,' she said, 'and I can see a little cabin, a black man's cottage, and in it on a shelf herbs and barks. Brow these. The trouble is with the brain!' She then described minutely the cabin of a negro called Black Sam, which I was positive she had no knowledge of when in a normal condition. I procured the herbs, which our physician prepared and administered, and to-day the child is married and living in this city.

"Many claimed that the spirit of some great physician controlled Mrs. Clark. Others claimed that it was the work of the devil, or that the woman was an impostor. As for myself I claimed no insight into the matter; only I said, if this be the devil's work, let us have more of it, or if this be the work of the sons of Belial, then they are angels. But even this apparent miracle did not convert me to spiritualism, and it was many years after I had left Massachusetts and settled in New York that in an endeavor to expose what I believed to be pictures I became convinced that in the air about us are innumerable intelligence, which at times, by the aid of certain sensitive and responsive organisms, such as are possessed by those known as mediums, are able to communicate with the material world."

Housecleaning by Wholesale

A professional housecleanser made her appearance in Washington several years ago, although the rise of the professional housecleaner in New York and other cities has only recently been heralded. This professional housecleaner of Washington came here from Dayton, Ohio, to visit some relatives after the death of her husband. In their Ohio household establishment the couple had always lived up to the husband's ample income, and when he died he left nothing. The Dayton woman arrived in Washington at the beginning of summer, and she noted the great number of houses in Washington that were closed up for the summer or about to be closed up. She was a born housekeeper, and she wondered if she couldn't make something by getting the contracts to give some of the houses about to be closed up a thorough overhauling from cellar to garret. She had had business ability, and the residences turned over to the supervision of the night watchman. Her suggestion at the first residence at which she applied—that of a famous patentee of this city—was received with interest, and she persevered and got permission to overhaul the houses of nearly a hundred prominent Washington families about to leave the city for the hot weather. Then she hired a couple of colored women, assembled her cleaning gear and began work as the houses were closed. She put in the summer at the work, and when the occupants of the homes returned in the fall they found their residences as bright and clean as a gold dollar from cellar to basement. The Dayton woman charged variable fees for her work, and made a good bit of money at it during the first summer's work. She has since trebled her clientele, and now supervises the semi-annual housecleaning of many of the most wealthy residents in the district.—Washington Star.

A Well-Timed Rebuke.

The habit—for it is often nothing more—of deteriorating speech is so common that it would be well for all of us to stop and think about it, says Dupee's Banner.

This sort of thing is so often heard. "I don't think she is so very pretty as people say," or "I don't think he (or she) is so very clever"—or economical, or stylish, or bright, cheerful, or a thousand other things. We do not always think, think, think, while, perhaps, we do not think her so very pretty as we have heard, we do not think her pretty, and, again, if not very clever, surely interesting, and all the others in like manner. It is simply a habit with many people, not skin-deep, but just the cruel and unfortunate habit of depreciating speech. A woman with a sharp tongue, but with the tenderest of hearts, the most generous of natures, but with a keenly critical and satirical nature intuitively, her character was brought up "all standing," as she expressed it, after she had been talking one day with a friend about several people, and before a group of young girls who were visiting friends.

In a sudden lull in the talk the girl said, as if by uncontrollable impulse, "Don't you like anybody?" "What do you mean?" said the startled woman. The girl blushed and hesitated, and then said, "Please pardon me, but it seemed to me," and she added, as it was passed off and passed by, as in the polite world things that are unpleasant are passed over; but into the heart of that woman the criticism sank deeply, and from that hour she watched and guarded herself, and now she does not depreciate in speech, and, if she cannot appreciate, is silent. It is well to remember the wise words of Emerson: "Omit the negative propositions. Don't waste yourself in rejection nor bark against the bad, but chant the beauty of the good." What a changed and better world we should all live in if we only followed that advice!

THE NEW WHITE HOUSE.

The sentiment in favor of a new Executive Mansion in Washington—a greater White House—will soon take tangible, definite form.

Plans have already been prepared by J. M. Pelz, the architect of the new National Library, the Carnegie Library, at Allegheny, and the Georgetown University.

According to the ideas of Mr. Pelz, the new Executive Mansion should stand on Meridian Hill, the central high point of the magnificent amphitheatre of hills inclosing the city of Washington. The northern limit is fixed at Huron street, the southern boundary extending to the rectangle between Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Boundary and U streets, and the eastern end to Fourteenth street.

"That the present White House is inedequate to the demands of the country," says the writer, "is a statement which will scarcely be controverted. It was designed a hundred years ago for a people of three or four millions in number. The nation has already grown to 70,000,000, with a promise that this will be doubled in the next forty years.

"Our Executive Mansion is at present a crowded business building, unfit for family residence and wholly unequal to the social demands of the age. The guests of the Presidents of the United States enter and depart in multitudes through a single door and sometimes through the windows. It is not too much to say that the crushes at White House receptions approach too near the border line of the disgraceful.

"The establishment is a beautiful souvenir of a hundred years ago and is none too large at the present day for the executive offices of the President of the United States. The house will be best honored and revered by preserving its graceful outlines and perfect proportion as it now stands. The addition to it of a larger structure would but mar its modest beauty, while in turn would detract from the larger building, which should be structurally and symmetrically perfect."

Mary Foote Henderson says Mr. Pelz has for years been inspired with the idea of building a new Executive Mannon on Meridian Hill. The location seemed to lend itself naturally to every requirement of the object in view. It is suggested that the central location is especially convenient and accessible for the winter season, while for a summer residence it is "the most desirable spot in the whole district," there being no cooler place within a radius of twenty miles than Meridian Hill. The elevation is absolutely free from malaria and infectious gases, while the declivity provides a perfect and rapid drainage.

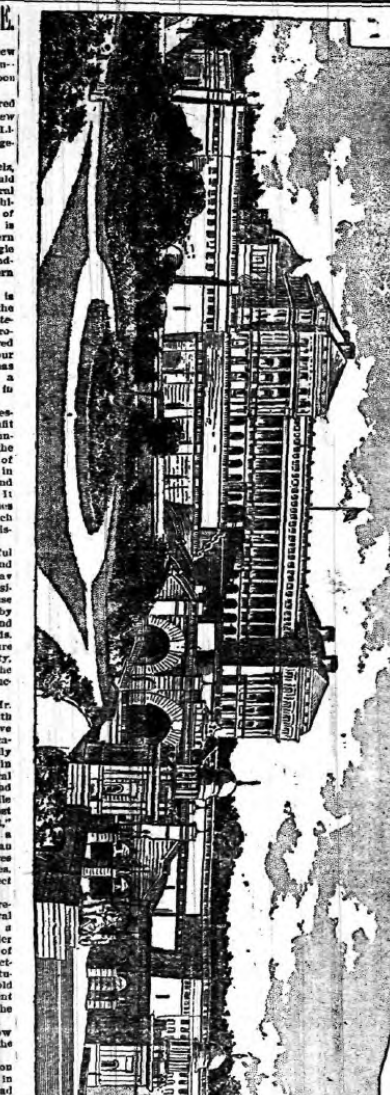
An examination of the plans prepared by Mr. Pelz, shows the general design of the White House to be a modern adaptation of the Roman order of architecture. The material of which the building shall be constructed is white marble, which will perpetuate the traditional color of the old mansion, while the semi-transparent stone derives new beauty from the sun and clouds.

A reference to the picture will show that the building is constructed in the extract from the letter H.

The great enhancement of the mansion in the centre of the main building in Mr. Pelz's plan would lead to a broad vaulted hall, with a view of the gardens and palm houses in the distance.

"The experience of the past," says Mrs. Henderson in concluding her descriptions of the plan, "has demonstrated the folly of building a Capitol or a White House to suit only the necessities of the time in which it is built.

"Let the lesson be accepted in the planning of the new executive mansion which may not only challenge the admiration of the world and the pride of the American people but satisfy the demands of our ever increasing population."



As With One Voice They Spoke Up.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: At a little uptown gathering not long ago the guests played some simple games and told ghost stories, and managed to have a good time in the old-fashioned way.

Pretty soon one of the gentlemen said:

"I don't believe we appreciate what a steady old slow coach the human brain is. Notwithstanding all our talk about quick wits, and flashes of intelligence, the brain is not so easily thrown from its accustomed ruts. If, for instance, I ask you a question which is entirely new to you, but which your honest old brain mistakes for a query quite similar in construction, it will go right ahead and telegraph the reply in its own hidebound way."

"That sounds interesting," said one of the guests, "but show us an example."

"I will," said the first speaker, "with the proviso that you answer it promptly." He smiled, and then, without any haste, quietly asked: "Who saved the life of Pocahontas?"

"John Smith!" roared twenty voices.

"You see," said the questioner.

Monkey Puts Out a Fire.

Mrs. Peter Minetti, of Belleville, Ill., owns a monkey and confines it in a wire cage. Recently Mrs. Minetti put some fresh coal on the grate fire, locked up the house, and went to visit some friends. A lump of burning coal fell to the floor and set fire to the carpet. The monkey broke out of the cage and hurried into an adjoining room, secured some articles of wearing apparel, and threw them over the burning carpet, completely smothering the flames. When Mrs. Minetti returned home the monkey was sitting beside its cage carefully nursing two badly burned paws. The timely action of the monkey averted a conflagration.

When Choate Was Rattled.

An unpublished story about Mr. Choate tells of the only time his serenity was ever ruffled while cross-questioning a witness. It was during a famous will case, and Felix McClusky, formerly doorkeeper of the house of representatives, was the witness.

"Now, Mr. McClusky," insinuatively asked Mr. Choate, "isn't it true that you are the modern Munchausen?"

"You're the second blackguard that has asked me that in a week," roared McClusky. "An'—" The roar of laughter, in which Surrogate Rollins himself joined, drowned the remainder of Mr. McClusky's retort, and it was fully five minutes before business went on again.

A SWELLED HEAD.

If asked who is the greatest bore,
By truth we are compelled,
If we make answer, this to say—
The man whose head is swelled.

His own ideas and weighty thoughts
So fill his little mind,
In others no good trait he sees,
To his own faults he's blind.

So great is his own self esteem,
So mighty is his worth,
He thinks all things would cease to move,
If he'd step off the earth.

He sees much that he'd criticise,
And much that makes him frown,
Not only this, he has the gall,
To "call his betters down."

These swell-head people we all know,
Can to themselves give thanks,
If some fine morning they awake
And find they're only cranks.

S. G. C.

THE HUSBAND'S JEALOUSY.

She was only eighteen when Gilbert Amydon married her—a bright-eyed little thing, with hair like gold, and a complexion like the pink-and-white of a conch shell.

"Oh, you're fool!" said his plain-spoken uncle, who had money to leave, and comported himself in a proportionately uncivil manner. "You're like all the rest of the world—infatuated by a pretty face."

"I confess, dear Gilbert, I am surprised at your choice," said his elderly maiden sister, "after having told you that Sylvia Simmerton was inclined to look favorably upon your attentions—why, Sylvia has three hundred a year of her own."

"I'm really afraid, Gilbert," said his mother, "that Florence is rather young and inexperienced."

"She'll grow older, mother," said the bridegroom cheerily; "and there's plenty of experience to be had in this world, if one only lives long enough."

And Gilbert Amydon and his pretty little wife were as happy as the day was long.

Florence cried a little when her husband was obliged to go away on important business connected with the firm in which he was a partner. They had been married only a few months.

"I wish I were going with you, Gilbert," said she; and Gilbert Amydon laughed and patted her rose-leaf cheek.

"Why, what should I do with a little sceptre of a creature like you?" said he. "How would you endure traveling all night and running about all day? No, no; you must stay at home and keep house till I come back."

So Gilbert Amydon went away.

He had not been gone many weeks before a long and acrid letter from his maiden sister, Drusilla, infused a bitter element into the current of his reflections.

"Florence is very well," wrote Miss Drusilla, who, although by no means either fat or fair, was forty at least, "and apparently very happy. She had friends to tea last night. Of course, I was not invited, although most inopportunely I called in, about the Dorcas Sewing Club, just as they were sitting down to tea. The Misses Myrtle were there, with their cousin, Major Darrock is very handsome"—these words were underscored with two vicious dashes of the pen—"and, judging from their conversation, Florence and he were old friends before she met you. I dare say it is all right—indeed, Florence told me that when she invited the three Myrtle girls she didn't know that Major Darrock had just arrived on a visit to them. But, nevertheless, I hardly believe it will do to re-ignite the ashes of an old flirtation on the altar of an absent husband's hearthstone. However, as I said before, Florence is very young, and can hardly be expected to comprehend these things."

Gilbert Amydon felt a sharp sting of latent jealousy go through his heart as he read his sister's words, but presently he broke into a smile, and tore up Miss Drusilla's letter unceremoniously into cigar-lighters.

"They would shut her up in a nunnery if they had their way, said he to himself. "Poor, dear little girl! she must have some amusement."

But Uncle Crawley's next letter was more vaguely annoying still.

"I suppose you have heard from your wife about the fancy masquerade ball," said he. "The young folks are all wild about it. Your wife is to go as Rowena, to Major Darrock's Ivanhoe. The costumes are to cost no end of money, I am told. When I was a young man people didn't squander their incomes in that sort of way. But I suppose if you are willing, it's not my business to object."

Gilbert Amydon knit his brows and bit his lip, as he read the words that his Uncle Crawley had penned with such malicious pleasure. This was quite a different affair from the tea party to which Drucilla Amydon had taken exception. And for the first time in his life Gilbert felt in his heart a strong, smarting tide of anger toward the beautiful young wife whom he had promised at the altar to love and cherish.

"If she is really going to this ball," he said to himself, "I don't know what the consequences will be. She knows I hate masquerades, and she knows, too, that she has no business to go with that major fellow when I am away. Drusilla was right—she is too young for a wife. I should have thought twice before I gave up into her hands such unbounded power to sting and torture me. At all events, I wont stay here to be made a fool of. I'll go back home, and judge for myself whether she is losing all her common sense and discretion."

He glanced at his watch.

"If I start at once," he thought, "I can be at Dedlington on the evening of the ball. And I'll do it!"

What a long, dreary ride that was—midnight lollings through endless stretches of woods and meadow-lands, and tunnels of echoing rock—days when sleep and waking seemed oddly jumbled together! And the one pervading idea that filled his brain was Florence, robed in pale blue silk with her golden hair dressed as in an old picture he had once seen of the beautiful Saxon Princess Rowena. And all the time his heart was as heavy as lead within him.

Florence, whom he had loved and trusted—Florence, who had grown into his heart as the clinging ivy makes its way into the crevices of the granite rock—Florence, whose pure innocence and singleness of nature he had worshipped—what would life be worth to him if she should prove untrue? Not that he feared any such misery—no, he knew Florence too well for that—but a plum with the bloom brushed off was no plum for him, he had told himself, with a hot, fevered anger throbbing through his brain; of what value were the smiles whose sweetness was lavished liberally on all alike?

And as he rode along, with folded arms and traveling cap drawn sullenly over his eyes, Gilbert Amydon felt like one who was already bereaved.

The house was dark as he ascended the steps and opened the door with his latchkey.

"Gone!" he said to himself, with a bitter smile. "Gone! Well, I knew it. What else could I have expected? She is no longer my sweet, home-loving Florence, but—Rowena, the Saxon Princess!"

With these thoughts in his mind, he strode up the passage, and opened the drawing-room door. To his surprise, it was neither dark nor deserted. A cheerful fire burned in the grate—the shaded lamp threw its circlet of light on the red-covered centre-table—and there, all alone, sat Florence, her cheek resting on her hand, her soft eyes fixed intently on something in her lap—his photograph!

It was the prettiest little tableau in the world. Amydon stood for a second, scarcely willing to disturb it.

"Florence!"

"O, Gilbert, Gilbert!"

And with a low, sobbing cry of joy she sprang to his breast.

"So you haven't gone to the fancy ball, after all," said he, as he sat down beside her, passing his hand fondly over her golden hair.

"To the fancy ball? I never thought of going, Gilbert. I knew you did not like balls; and, besides, where would be the pleasure of going, when you away?"

"They wrote to me that you were going as Rowena, the Saxon Princess," said Amydon, half ashamed of the words he uttered.

"O, I know!" said Florence, laughing. "Fanny Myrtle did want me to go. She was to be Rebecca, the Jewess, you know, and Major Darrock, her cousin, was to be Ivanhoe; and she thought it would be a nice party. She even ordered a costume for me, but I told her all along I shouldn't go; so Clara Myrtle is wearing it to-night."

"While you are sitting here all alone, and studying my photograph!" he interrogated fondly.

"I—I'm afraid I was crying a little," confessed Florence, "for I was so lonely, and I wanted to see you so much."

"My own darling little wife!"

This was the last of Gilbert Amydon's brief madness of jealousy. Drusilla's spite and Uncle Crawley's quiet malice had all fallen short of their mark.

And Florence reigns undisputed queen at last over her husband's heart.

Holland and Her Colonies.

It is not the fiercest nations that have been the greatest successes at colonizing and getting rich out of gentle toil. Next to England, little phlegmatic Holland has the most valuable colonies in the world. She still holds Java, containing 25,000,000 people, and although the natives are Malays they are very loyal. She also has other rich possessions in the east, the island of Sumatra being four times as large as Cuba, and the island of Celebes being larger than all New England. To say nothing of her six islands in the West Indies and her possessions in South America. The good-natured Netherlands, like the British, have held on to their profitable territory by keeping the spirit of trade alive rather than the spirit of autocracy, and avoiding the levy of murderous taxes, with nothing in return to compensate.

About Mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes, it is to be presumed, exist for some useful service, but what it is known only to entomologists and a few others of people there is no information regarding them so welcome as the fact that they are gradually being exterminated by the advance of civilization. This being so, it should be additionally interesting to any one who lives in districts where mosquitoes abound to know how their departure can be expedited. Permanganate of potash, says a medical paper, can be used against them with deadly effect. Minute parts of the crystal are sufficient for the purpose. The same authority informs us that only two and a half hours are required for a mosquito to develop from its first stage, a speck resembling cholera bacteria, to its active and venomous maturity.

PARLOR MAGIC.

Some Really Astonishing Tricks Based On Scientific Principles.

A very interesting experiment to work out during the performance is one based upon the action of chemicals. About an hour is required for this, so it should be commenced just before the entertainment, and the things left to stand as part of the outfit on the table. Take three medium-sized leaves from a red cabbage and strip them to pieces, and put them to a clean earthen dish and pour a pint of boiling water over them. As soon as the water is cool, transfer it all to a pretty glass bowl and set that on the magic table. The water will be of a rich blue in an hour. At the same time take four clean wine glasses and put six drops of common vinegar in one, six drops of baking soda dissolved in water in the second, and six drops of alum solution in the third. The fourth is to be left empty. No one would notice the small quantity of liquid in these glasses.

When you are ready to use them you say something like this: "You see these empty glasses. I shall pour this blue liquid into them. They will, at my command, change their color. This (taking the empty one) shall remain blue. This one shall turn red (taking the one with the vinegar), this shall become green (taking the one with the soda), and this one shall take on royal purple. (The alum makes purple.) this is very effective, as well as pretty.

A boiled egg—boiled for fear of accidents—is put, large end downward, in a wine glass. Another glass like it is stood an inch distant. The performer must blow forcibly down in the side nearest him of the glass with the egg, and it will jump out and into the other one. Better try this two or three times privately to make sure of distance and force required.

Air pressure may be used as the basis for the dancing waterbaby." This is easily made, and is very comical. A clear glass milk jar should be filled with water up to an inch from the top. A small walnut has the meat taken out and the shell fastened together with sealing wax, so that it is watertight. At the lower end a small hole is to be made. Two threads are fastened to the shell by wax, and these are tied to the head of a small wooden doll. A bullet is fastened to a string around the waist and hangs down a trifle below the feet. The hole in the nutshell is right over the doll's head. When this is done put the doll down into the water, and the water must reach to about an inch from the top, when all is in. A piece of bladder is to be firmly tied over the mouth. This should be wet first, as that makes it more pliable, and no air must enter. When this is dry the baby is ready to dance for you. You press the cover with one finger, and that causes a corresponding pressure of air upon the water, which is then filled with water, and that makes it heavier, so that it rises and falls with each pressure of the finger.

A puzzling trick in chemistry is to take a very transparent glass goblet with four drops of hydrochloric acid in the bottom, then a saucer where the bottom has just been dipped in ammonia. Cover this glass tightly with the saucer and step away, declaring that you will cause the smoke from a cigarette to all pass inside the glass. The glass will slowly fill with fumes of smoke. It is the union of these two volatile liquids which forms the white fumes.

If one wants to do a really remarkable thing let him get a handful of lettuce seed and soak them over night in alcohol. Then have a flower pot or box not over six inches deep. In the bottom strew 2 inches of well mixed loam or florist's soil. At the beginning of the evening's performance the lad should show this box of soil and tell them that before the audience leaves he is going to show them some of his farming. He then takes his seeds, and after putting in the box 2 inches more of soil, composed of one part loam and one part of quicklime, he scatters his lettuce seed all over the top and then sifts a little more loam, very fine and thinly over the seeds. Then he waters the whole and stands it directly in the light. In ten minutes the seeds burst, in twenty there are two leaves, and at the end of an hour, if kept sprinkled a couple of times, the lettuce leaves will have attained the size of a quarter of a dollar, and ought to be numerous enough to make the whole top green.

KINDNESS TO HOBSON'S MEN.

The Hero of the Merrimac Acknowledges the Courtesy of His Captors.

Lieutenant Hobson gives in his "Merrimac" papers, in the Century, an account of the kind reception he and his men received on the "Reina Mercedes."

When we were all on board and had laid aside our side arms and accoutrements, the launch headed around and stood for the Reina Mercedes, and I directed the men, who were shivering to get down near the furnace, to which no objection was raised. Not a word was spoken till we reached the Mercedes. However great may have been their curiosity and interest, the officers, after their first kind words of greeting, forbore to ask questions or make remarks. When we came alongside the senior officer asked if I would be good enough to go on board with my men. So courteous was his manner, we might have been guests coming to breakfast. The officer of the deck and the executive officer met us at the head of the gangway. I bowed, salute, and inspected the men for their condition. Those who were still shivering were sent forward at once. Two stimants and friction for Kelly's leg showed a wide gash that had become clogged with coaldust. Murphy had a wound on his right hip, twelve or fourteen inches in length and perhaps a quarter or a half of an inch in depth, which he had received in the blast when he fired torpedo No. 1; and though the wound certainly must have been very painful, he had not uttered a groan or made any reference to it during all the time that had elapsed. It was only after our arrival on the Mercedes that we learned of it. The men were all more or less scratched and bruised from colliding with objects in the vortex whirl, but there was no injury of consequence, the lifepreservers having formed excellent buffers. The executive officer followed the inspection, and gave directions for the care of the men. Kelly and Murphy went to the surgeon, and all received given facilities for washing and were supplied with dry clothing.

How to Study Law.

To obtain a broad and comprehensive view of the "entire body of the law," there is nothing better for a beginner's reading than Blackstone. There is, however, so much to the original Blackstone that is obsolete and archaic, so much of "mystic, dark and discordant lore," that the American abridgement of the Commentaries (we think by Prof. George Chase) is for the young student preferable to the original—interesting as is the latter to the student of history.

Kent's commentaries should be read carefully and critically for the frame work of American law. For the law of Contracts, probably the most important branch of the law to be mastered by the student, Bishop is the simplest to master, being a single volume, and is fairly full and complete. Parsons (3 vols.), Story (2 vols.), and Wharton (3 vols.), are more elaborate treatises, each being a standard work. On Equity, there is nothing better than Story. Other elementary works which might be read in succession are Abbott, Gould or Bayles on Pleading and Pleading; Washburn on Real Estate, Cooley or Pomeroy on Constitutional Law. Greenleaf on Evidence; Redfield or Schouler on Wills and Probate Law; Wharton's Criminal Law; Browne or Schouler on Domestic Relations.

These suggestions presume that our young friend knows the Constitution of the United States by heart, that he has a reasonable degree of familiarity with the history of his country, especially in the formative period, and that that he is a daily student of our New York Code of Civil Procedure. If not the latter, let him make it a vade mecum till he knows its contents.

Get Bouvier's Law Dictionary and consult it whenever you meet in your reading a term which you do not fully understand. If your two years in college did not give you at least a smattering of Latin, get it now. It will immensely increase your studies intelligently without it. A little volume, Reed's "American Law Studies," will be found very useful as a guide to intelligent reading. You can get it at any law book store, or read it in any law office to which you have access. And, whatever you read, read not carelessly or thoughtlessly, but with the concentration of every faculty upon your subject.—New York Mail and Express.

General Sewell's New Honor.

The retirement of Major-General Plume and the nomination and confirmation by the Senate of General Sewell to be his successor puts the latter in complete command of the National Guard of New Jersey. All Jerseymen know of the generalship of Sewell in political ranks, and how well he commands, but it will not be his political experience that will serve him in good stead in his new military position. As a matter of fact, General Sewell has a military record back of him that convinces those who are acquainted with it that he will undoubtedly make a worthy successor to General Plume.

General Sewell was mustered into army service at the beginning of the Civil War, being Colonel of the Fifth New Jersey Regiment. During the battle of Chancellorville General Mott was severely wounded, and Sewell led his brigade in a resistless charge and achieved one of the most brilliant successes of the war. He captured eight colors from the Confederates and recaptured the regimental colors of a New York regiment. April 9, 1866, he was made Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Chancellorsville. At the beginning of the Spanish War President McKinley appointed him a Major-General of Volunteers, but he declined the honor.

Dunellen's Early Stand.

In discussing the proposed suit for damages to be instituted against the city of Plainfield by the borough of Dunellen by reason of operation of the sewage beds, and the alleged ills they heap upon the latter community, the Dunellen Journal makes the following interesting observations:

Whether Dunellen has good ground for damages is a question for the courts to decide, but a little of the history of the case is of interest at this time. When Plainfield decided that sewer beds were about the only effective means of disposing of the city sewage, within the limits of reasonable expense, a committee of engineers was appointed to select a site for such beds. This committee did not, at the first, recommend the beds which Plainfield finally purchased, but a large tract of land to the west of Dunellen and admirably located for the purpose. Then Plainfield made a proposition to Dunellen to the effect that if the latter would allow its main trunk sewer to be built through its limits, and thus on to the tract of land far to west Plainfield would, in consideration of the privilege, agree to permit Dunellen to make use of this sewer without expense. But Dunellen flatly refused, and Plainfield was compelled to buy land for sewer beds much nearer to either of these communities, namely, the New Dunellen and the extreme northwestern part of Plainfield are sorry that the beds are located so near to the boundaries of the city and the borough.

News From Hackensack.

That one has to go away from home to hear the news of home is a truism so manifest at times that it would be useless to dispute its worth. And so it proves in much of the discussion concerning the Greater Plainfield project. Over in Hackensack, which is considered by Plainfielders as the jumping off place in New Jersey, The Record has been looking into the subject and here is some of the startling information it offers:

Indications point to a conclusion on the part of the people of Plainfield to do something that shows horse sense. At first the scheme was to annex to the city the suburban district, scoop in a slice of Union, Middlesex and Somerset, and become the fountain head of a new country. That would have been a real good thing for Plainfield as no one can blame that wideawake Jersey municipality for aspiration. Now, however, a wave of common sense has caused the breast of the powers that be, in which their lives, moves and "be" the President of the Senate. Plainfield will probably annex itself to Somerset county, and though there may be a little trouble to wrest the county seat from Somerville it ought not to be done, although no one can throw very much blame on Plainfield if that end is sought.

Assemblyman King's pure beer bill is said to be doomed to defeat. Perhaps the collar on it is not large enough for the Legislators to get hold of.

This week, at least, the Legislature will have no blizzards to excuse their failure to do something in the line of actual work.

DOES COFFEE AGREE WITH YOU?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grain. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." It nourishes and feeds the system. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening substance of pure grain. Greater Power for Newspapers.

The exciting occurrences of a public nature during the past year has had the effect of making newspapers read more than ever, and a consequent lack of interest in books, magazines and periodicals that were not in touch with the course of events. This fact is brought out conspicuously by the annual report of the librarian of the Paterson Free Public Library, which was submitted to the trustees of that institution yesterday. The librarian reports that there has been a decrease of almost 13,000 in the number of books lent during the year.

The demand for books upon naval warfare and upon Spain and her colonies is large, but the librarian thinks that many people who read chiefly for recreation discontinued taking books and are reading newspapers.

What has been Paterson's experience no doubt is the same of many other towns. One inevitable result of such a condition has been to strengthen newspapers throughout the land, making them more influential in shaping public affairs and giving them greater scope for accomplishing their aims and purposes. And at last, but not least, it has resulted in putting the advertising merchant in touch with increasing purchasing power to be secured through the well-timed and common sense announcement finding a place in newspaper columns.

Jury Commission Again.

A jury commission bill is one of the important measures pending before the Legislature. It provides for two commissioners of jurors in each county, one from each party, who shall draw all grand and petit jurors, receive a compensation of $4 a day and serve for one year or three years. Several years ago a bill like this met with much favor in the Republican party, and, in fact, a law to that effect was passed. Subsequently it was repealed by the Democrats. Of course, the Sheriffs do not want any such law, because it would decrease their fees. There are now twelve Republican and nine Democratic Sheriffs in the State, and should they pool their interests or any other measure their influence is scarcely to be resisted. This jury commission bill has for its author Mr. Bell, of Bergen county, where a Democratic Sheriff was unexpectedly elected last November. The bill is not likely to become a law at this session of the Legislature.

Mayor Wilson's Message.

Mayor Wilson's annual message to the Borough Council, presented Friday night and published complete in Saturday's Press, is typical of its author in that it is a straightforward business document, in which fanciful theories do not find a place.

The Mayor devotes his message to reviewing the workings of the municipal government, of which he is the chief executive, almost exclusively. He takes occasion to make only one suggestion, and that is in reference to improving the condition of Somerset street in a manner that will permit the street funds from being constantly expended to put it in half-way good condition.

As the last message that the Mayor will present before his term of office expires it is quite proper that he should indulge in a little discussion as to the views he has taken in his official position. He does this with a nicety of words and an abundance of common sense that is admirable. The keynote of the Mayor's successful administration is found in this sentence in his message: "In short that what is desirable in the management of the public business is just what is needed to make private business successful, and I have acted upon that theory."

That the Mayor has made practical use of this idea can be found in the fact that never before has the business of North Plainfield borough been on such a sound basis as it is today. Whether Mr. Wilson is renominated and re elected, or whether he is succeeded by someone else, it is to be hoped that the next Mayor will follow out this same application in handling affairs of the municipality. That it is the right and proper view of conception of duty on the part of the Mayor cannot be gainsaid.

Elevate the Standard.

The Hackensack Republican, in common with the rest of newspapers of New Jersey, holds a poor opinion of the State's justice of the peace system. The Republican says: "Some citizens of the peace in this State have organized for the purpose of obtaining increased jurisdiction for small cause courts, and to secure better compensation for their services. One of the arguments in favor of the movement is that by enlarging the powers of justices for the adjudication of simple cases a considerable sum would be saved to the taxpayers from lessening the business of the court of oyer and terminer. There may be something in this, but many citizens would pay a considerable sum out of their own pockets to have their case tried in the higher court rather than let them go before some justices of the peace. One of the most important objects in a movement regarding the justice courts should be that of elevating the standard of the men who are to preside over these vehicles for deciding questions that may come before them. Until this is done the powers of the justices should not be enlarged. There are a few intelligent justices. There are more who don't know enough about law to distinguish between a piece of Coke and a Blackstone.

Beef for the Sailor.

Not the least of the curious facts brought out by the beef controversy, and a fact that is not generally known, relates to the beef that is bought for the merchant marines of the world. An old ship's surgeon has furnished a statement that the beef served to the men on the best of the steamship lines has often been in the stores of the British navy for three years, after which it is sold at auction and is generally bought up by the commissary department of the steamship lines. If it is not used up within a year or so, it is resold and bought up by smaller lines and tramp steamers and finally reaches the whaling craft. This authority says that he has seen many a cask of meat on a transatlantic steamer bearing the marks of Aden, Calcutta, Bombay, Melbourne and San Francisco, showing that the meat had been making voyages for three or four years and traveling all over the world, and he testifies from personal knowledge that meat kept in this way so long becomes green and black around the bone and the bone becomes soft. This is fit food for men is absurd, but the poor sailors have grown accustomed to it and they take it rather than go without meat at all.

Illustrated Crime.

It seems hardly credible that morbid Paris, in its search for sensations, should resort to surgical operations. But the statement is circumstantially telegraphed that the latest craze of the gilded youth of Paris is for stereoscopic exhibitions of surgical operations in which the subject and the operators are shown in action, and a great deal of satisfaction is expressed that at last a genuine sensation has been reached. A few more discoveries and Paris will not need to have a revolution. The ghastly evidences of degeneracy in the gay capital have reached no worse exhibition than this. But what are we to think of the men of science who allow a private operation to be photographed to make public amusement for the crowd?

On every side the Justice of Peace system seems to be getting hard knocks. Yesterday's Newark Advertiser takes an editorial whack, as follows: "As long as the office of Justice of the Peace exists some method should be devised of looking into the characters of candidates for this office. Ordinarily no attention is paid to the candidates in elections, who are voted for without inquiry and without the least regard for their fitness. The legal fraternity, which is jealous of the standing of the State judiciary, has also an interest also in the personnel of the petty magistracy, and it could not do a better service than that of investigating and making publicly known the character and antecedents of candidates for Justice of the Peace."

No appointment which Governor Voorhees has made or will make in the future is more merited than the nomination of Charles H. Baxter, of Plainfield, to succeed himself as State Superintendent of Public Schools. The principal part of Mr. Baxter's life work has been with educational matters and in such a way as to put him in close touch with the varied conditions and needs that the public schools constantly bring to the attention of their official head in the State. During his previous three year term Supt Baxter successfully adopted several innovations in the conduct of his office that experience has proven to have wellmerited and popular. It is a gratifying fact for Plainfielders to know that so creditable an official is a resident of this city.

In another part of today's Press will be found a portion of an address delivered by former Mayor Saunders, of the borough, on the project of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality. Mr. Saunders had made an exhaustive study of the consolidation question, and what he says will be recognized as important and interesting at this time in view of the fact that North Plainfield voters will be given a chance to express their opinion on the matter in an informal manner at the approaching borough election.

If the French republic elected a successor to its dead President by popular ballot it is doubtful if there would be any Frenchmen left to vote when election day arrived. When it comes to political excitement and chicanery France easily leads the world.

One of the questions of importance that will come up in the borough after the election next month will be the erection of a building for a borough hall.

JOYLESS JOKER IN LONDON.

American Complains That City Knocks Out His Frolicsome Humor.

An American in London asks a question: "I wish you would tell me what is gone with the frolicsome humor I brought here from my native land. You are real white men in this city, but you are powerful sad, and that tells on the stranger till he gets back as well be an ox. Out at Colorado Springs I was the most buoyant man in the country. Here I don't buoy worth a cent. My friends called me Laughing Willie. I've got no more laugh in me now than a mummy. The first stroke of business I did here I was pleased with it that I wanted to tell the other man the story of the tin-roofed cock-tail. You should have seen his face. He said he didn't listen to stories in business hours. I went to a club, a regular palace, a magnificent hall, full of busts, and I said, 'I want tell somebody that story or die.' There was an old gentleman on a settee, and I said, 'Have you ever heard the story of the tin-roofed cock-tail?' He looked fierce. 'Am I right in supposing that a cock-tail is a drink?' 'You are, old man,' I said, 'you bet every dollar on it.' And I had just started a real live laugh when he spoiled everything with, 'Then you mustn't talk about drinks in this hall.' Snakes and Injun! How can I ever laugh again? I won't tell you the story of the tin-roofed cocktail, for you'd never put it in. Certainly not. This column, like the hall of the Mausoleum, is no place for drinks."

But my correspondent's grievance is real enough. There is a kill-joy solemnity in our fine island decorum. We cannot even discuss holiday recreations without an awful sense of responsibility.—Illustrated London News.

It Had Just Happened.

The other night—or, rather, it was very early in the morning—the telephone in a certain newspaper office rang loud and long. Most of the workers had gone home for the forty winks that newspaper people contrive to put in between times, but there was one man on the "dog watch"—that is, you know, he was the one person detailed to stay around the office and be ready for anything from a murder to a fire. At that hour of the day—about, we'll say, somewhere around 3 A. M.—when a telephone in a newspaper office rings it generally means a police story that is worth looking up, so the "dog watch" hastened to answer the summons.

"Hello!" said a voice; "is it too late to get something into to-morrow morning's paper?"

"Not if it's important," was the reply.

"Oh, it is," assuringly.

The reporter rushed for a pad of paper and a pencil, screwed his ear up to the telephone again and said:

"All right; fire away, there!"

Then the voice was heard again, tremulous with emotion:

"The engagement of Miss —— to Mr. —— is announced."

There was an explosion of wrath at the other end of the line, and the rules of the telephone company against irate persons from indulging in profanity were smashed into smithereens.

"Why under the blankety-blank-blank" (that wasn't exactly what was said, but it will do, you know) "didn't you send in such stuff earlier in the day?"

"But I couldn't," said the voice, apologetically. "You see, it just happened."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Anthony Trollope's Ink.

Mr. Trollope's big voice drowned every one else as he chaffed my father down the length of the dinner table, says Mrs. G. Porter's "Annals of a Publishing House." He had jested over golf (John Blackwood was a devotee and attained to being captain of the St. Andrew's club), what would he not do next? He used to make daring assaults upon the most cherished articles of the Blackwood faith.

Blind, and with a devotion to the sovereign was one of his favorite points of attack. "Now, Blackwood, how could the death of the sovereign possibly affect you?" he would say. "If you heard of it to-morrow morning, and were perfectly well you would eat just as good a breakfast;—you would not even deny yourself that second kidney." It was in vain to protest that in the face of such a calamity the very idea of kidneys would be distasteful. Mr. Trollope bore everything before him and prepared for another attack.

The conservative party and Dizzy were a tempting subject for a tilt. "You blind Blackwood, you know you think exactly about Dizzy as I do; you know you would be very glad to hear he had been hard up for—for shoplifting." Tableau! all holding up their hands and Mr. Trollope delighted with the sensation he had produced.

Then He Changed the Subject.

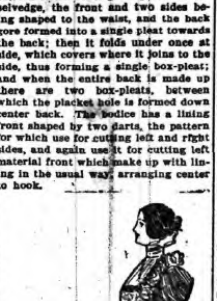
Pleasant.

He (preparing to leave)—I assure you, Miss Sweet, the time has passed away very pleasantly this evening.

She (abstractedly)—Yes, it is pleasant to know that it is past.—Truth.



The neck part of each front is filled in with a yoke of plain material, gathered round neck, along the shoulder, also across the figure, and with the fitted front hook down center. The right front is covered with the material front, slip-stitched plain to yoke, and joined in with right lining shoulder, armhole and side seam, the waist fulness being arranged in two single pleats either side to fall toward center. The left half of this front must be faced back on the wrong side with a piece of sarcanet or ribbon, round the top, along shoulder, also down the straight edge, where the clasp is to be sewn on, so that after hooking fitted fronts down center this double-breasted part can hook over to the left side, where it is outlined with a frill of accordion-pleated chiffon, lace, lisse, &c., the square neck being outlined with passementerie. The two side pieces and French back are cut in lining and fancy silk, which make up together in the usual way, the pointed basque being faced up on the wrong side with sarcenet, and finished with a piece of folded ribbon, mitred front and back, and finished on the left side with a bow. The band collar cut in canvas, line sarcenet, and cover with the full collar of plain material, this being cut on the cross, and without a seam down front, then rucked round the band, to which is secured across back and round right front, but from center front across left side it must be left detached and hooked at back, then finished at upper edge with a lace frill. The under sleeve is to be used for cutting lining and material, which tack and make up together; then cover lining upper with material upper, and stitch to under sleeve by the inner and outer seams, while elbow fulness in upper sleeve is gathered to space on under sleeve as notches show. Where the lining and material upper sleeves are cut up at the wrist the material and lining edges are to be turned in together and slip-stitched down, the wrist being faced up on the wrong side, with sarcenet and edged with a lace frill, while shoulder fulness gathers to lining size.

A Waste Paper Basket.

The Empire style of needle work will greatly beautify this quaintly-shaped basket. The basket itself should be made of thin red mahogany and the cloth pattern will be found easy of adjustment to the side. To add to the effectiveness of the needle work design the other three sides can be prettily hand-painted, and a waste-paper basket will then be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

TWO DAYS IN BOX CAR.

TRAMPS WERE HUNGRY WHEN THEY GOT OUT AT DUNELLEN.

Afforing Satisfying Their Craving for Food They Filled up With Whiskey and in case Adjourned to the Women.

Dunellen, Feb. 20.—Two rough looking men belonging to the tramp fraternity, visited the borough Friday and terrorized several women and children before they finally left and were last seen going down the road towards Bound Brook. They were first seen during the forenoon, when they applied at one or two houses for food, telling a pathetic story of having been shut up in a freight car for two days during the blizzard, unable to get anything to eat.

The men were as hoodlie as could be expected, after having been half starved, and thankfully received what was given them and ate it with a relish. When the men's stomachs were filled they made a visit to one of the hotels and had several drinks which they paid for. After they were well warmed up with whiskey they set out again, but now their mood had changed, and they were ugly.

At two or three houses where they stopped and begged, they were offered food, but when it was handed to them they threw it aside with ugly words. At Mr. Laire's house the men were particularly crusty, and swore at Mrs. Laire because she had no coffee to offer them. Towards night the husbands of the women came home, and when told about the two men started out in search of them. The tramps had left town, but it is probable that it would have fared badly with them if they had been caught.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Instead of expending a million dollars additional to complete the Rahway Reformatory it would be far better to use the completed part for the State Arsenal and devote $200,000 to placing an additional wing on the State Prison at Trenton, covering the ground where the old arsenal building now is. By this means the penal management could be brought under one head, as it should be. The new wing could be made subject to distinctive features that would classify it as a reformatory, and the annual expense of running it would not be one-quarter that of maintaining the Rahway Institution.—Camden Telegram.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A letter from Tallahassee, Fla., to H. E. Rider says the oat crop and all the vegetables in that locality will be a total failure this year on account of the severe cold weather last week. The writer stated that the thermometer registered two degrees below zero on Sunday night, the 12th inst.

Col. Julian Scott's trusted companion in his studio for the last few years has been a big cat. The cat lives in the Colonel's apartments in the Stillman building and seems to possess almost human intelligence. The fact has just come to light that it was this same cat that first gave the alarm of fire that aroused the town when it was supposed that the Stillman building was afire. It happened that afternoon that the Colonel was taking a nap on the lounge in his room. He was awakened by the cat which carefully tried to pull open his eyelids with its paws, earnestly meowing all the time. The cat's efforts finally aroused the Colonel who opened his eyes to find the room full of smoke. Then the Colonel took measures at once to get the fire department whereat the cat stopped crying and quietly viewed operations from a secluded vantage point. The Colonel valued cat greatly before but it has now attained even greater value in his eyes.

It has been fully demonstrated that Ely's Cream Balm is a specific for Nasal Catarrh and cold in the head. This distinction has been achieved only as the result of continued successful use. A morbid condition of the membrane in the nasal passages can be cured by this purifying and healing treatment. Sold by druggists or will be mailed for 50 cents by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York. It spreads over the membrane, is absorbed and relief is immediate.

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME

WHAT IS GOING ON IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES.

Happenings of Interest to Plainfield Enthusiasts—What the Local Teams are Doing—Gossip Among the Players.

Much regret has been generally expressed among the basket ball enthusiasts and other lovers of good sport that the attempt to allow the local basket ball team to meet some of the best teams of the country should fail and that, not only the Yale game has been cancelled, but the whole policy of playing the leading teams opposed. While arguments against the Yale game have been advanced going to prove that the Yale management wanted too much of a guarantee and that there were various other technicalities in the patch, it is well understood that the real reason for the opposition to the game on the part of the Y. M. C. A. directors was that they do not wish the team to play in Plainfield anywhere but in the Y. M. C. A. building. Now the gymnasium in the building was never built for basket ball games, neither was there any attempt to provide for an audience there. The gallery was intended for a running track. The result is that the association team is practically prohibited from playing any of the large teams who are compelled to ask a suitable guarantee.

When the question of the Yale game was considered by the physical work committee, Robert A. Meeker, one of the committee, while in opposition to the game under the Y. M. C. A. auspices, remarked that he would give his support to the team if the game was played under another name. The ruling of the A. A. U. prevents the players playing on another team or under another name without an interval of two months, so such action was impossible. There has been a general expression of the wish that another year will see the local basket ball players as an independent team, not connected with the Y. M. C. A. With Manager George Fuller in charge, the team would undoubtedly do well for basket ball is deservedly popular here, and games with good teams would be largely patronized.

Miss Mary Constance Patton, of West Fifth street, who entered Smith College last autumn, has just been chosen on the leading basket ball team of the college. The selection is made from the best players without regard to class, and only these are eligible who passed the examinations without a low grade or a condition.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Central Journal Bowling League.

	Won.	Lost.	Highest Score.
Roselle	29	8	906
Park	21	11	911
Cranford	20	12	911
Westfield	16	16	915
Clark Th'p'n	15	17	944
S. J. A. C.	12	18	944
Orchard Court	8	22	911

The Parks have only three more games to roll and those all away from home. They are scheduled for Thursday evening at the alley of the Newark Bay Boat Club in Bayonne. The Roselle Casino team is still in line for two more series of three games each. If the Parks should win their series of three and Roselle should lose five out of the six games, then the Parks step up into first place. Two victories for Roselle would tie the teams and three would give Roselle the championship. So, it is easy to see, the chance of first place for the Parks is awfully slim. The Newark Bay Boat Club team is quite strong this season, particularly on its own alleys where the Parks have to roll. Unless the Parks develop some phenomenal improvement in their bowling, the very best they can hope for is to win two out of six on the Newark Bay. For Roselle has to roll three games on the Cranford alleys, and, in the ordinary course of things, would probably win all three. Cranford has promised to put up the game of its life and down the leaders if possible. It's doubtful, however, if they accomplish very much, and Roselle can be counted on winning two of the games. That would tie the two leading teams if the Parks won everything, and then Roselle is not likely to lose all the remaining series of three games with Elizabeth. So it can be seen that the Parks are apparently cut out for second place unless they lose all their next series, and Elizabeth wins nine games straight, which is not likely.

WILD BIRD'S EGGS AS FOOD.

Many That Are Eaten in Europe and Regarded as Delicacies.

In Germany and Holland crows' eggs are considered a luxury among the poorer classes, and on Prince Bismarck's eighty-third birthday a present of one hundred of them was made to him. The eggs of the rook are also looked upon as delicate food by the Germans and Hollanders. The Chinese are not only fond of swallows' nest soup, but they eat the eggs of this little bird with great relish.

Among the South Sea Islands the natives depend largely upon this kind of food, which the birds prepare for them in nests, and so important is the source of this food considered that they will rarely destroy the birds. On the great rookeries they have found the eggs supplied abundantly for them for ages, and they gather them so easily that there is no disposition to destroy the birds. It is only when civilized man comes, intent upon destroying the birds for their feathers and plumes, that these great inland rookeries have been depopulated.

In Friesland the farmers have almost tamed the sheldrakes like domesticated fowls. The sheldrakes have laid their eggs in countless numbers on the heaths of the Dutch Norfolk, and the farmers, instead of killing the birds or frightening them away cultivate their acquaintance and build artificial burrows or nests in the grass for them. In these nests the sheldrakes go on laying their eggs, despite the fact that they are almost daily robbed of them. In some instances the female birds will even allow the farmers to handle them to remove the eggs. In return for all this the farmers protect the birds, and after a certain season they permit the birds to sit on their eggs and hatch out young ones. The young sheldrakes are protected just as much as our young barnyard chickens are.

The chief eggs that are sold for eating in Holland and other European cities include those of the wild ducks and fowls, gulls, plovers, sheldrakes, meadow-hens, guillemots, pewits, redshanks, turnstones, snipe, curlews, dunlins, crows, rooks, cranes, herons, coots, storks, pelicans, vultures, hawks, owls and many of the smaller land birds. These wild birds' eggs are cheaper in many countries than hens' eggs, and they constitute the chief egg diet of both rich and poor.—Boston Transcript.

GAME RECORD OF THE KAISER.

A Fine Score for a Hunter Who Can Use Only One Arm in Shooting.

In view of the fact that the kaiser's left arm is withered and useless, his record of 32,867 head of game killed with his own hand during the last two decades is a remarkable one. It is contained in his game book, which has recently been published for private circulation among the royal personages and court circles of Europe. Comprised in this total are some "pieces" which do not fall to the lot of every sportsman. Thus there are a couple of so-called "aurochsen," a species of bison that is still to be found in certain German districts in Europe. It was exceedingly plentiful a thousand years ago, but is now almost entirely extinct. Then there are 2,175 wild boars, sixteen thousand hares, seven elk shot in Sweden, three reindeer killed in Norway and a half a dozen bears, three of which were laid low in Russia and the others in Hungary. Stags figure for 1,289, pheasants at 9,643, while the emperor has only managed to bag three snipes. The record of 121 chamois is distinctly good when it is remembered what an exceedingly difficult game this is to shoot, entailing as it does, mountaineering of the most arduous and perilous character.

It must be borne in mind in connection with this game book that the kaiser cannot use his left arm to support the gun or to take aim. He is obliged to rest his weapon upon the shoulder or arm of the keeper or loader who attends him on these expeditions, and to shoot with a light rifle or fowling piece, specially constructed for him.—New York Tribune.

A SERF'S FORETHOUGHT.

Bought His Freedom With a Barrel of Oysters.

Count Scheremetef, an immensely and powerful Russian noble who lived in the early part of the century, had among his serfs a man named Schalouchine who had amassed an enormous fortune. He had offered as much as $250,000 for his freedom, but in vain. One day Scheremetef gave a dinner party, and to his disgust there were no oysters to begin the banquet with. They were not to be had at any price," replied the steward. At that moment Schalouchine was ushered in among the guests, and Scheremetef pulled him as usual.

"Your freedom," he yelled, "you cannot have it for you offer a million of rubles. A million, pshaw! a few dozen oysters would be worth more than that to me at this moment." "Do I understand then, my lord, that you grant me my freedom if I procure them for you?" "I," was the answer. Schalouchine had brought a barrel of oysters, having heard of the dinner. The deed of freedom was immediately signed. Schalouchine took his place among the guests, and the latter's descendants are now by the wealthiest bankers in Russia but were ennobled about a quarter of a century ago.—London Illustrated News.

Portly Passenger—May I ask what prompted you to give me your seat, young man?

TURNED OVER BY A MACHINE

A Contrivance Which Enables One to Pass the Nights in Comfort.

The San Francisco Examiner tells about a man who has invented an apparatus to turn him over in bed. The man is Walter Hyde, Mr. Hyde is quite old and is troubled with an incomplete circulation of the blood, causing sleeplessness. If he remains in one position long a mild form of paralysis follows and he cannot sleep at all. Mr. Hyde concluded that if he had some mechanical means to turn himself over during the night he could go to sleep and not be under the necessity of awakening.

Being somewhat of a mechanical turn of mind, Mr. Hyde concluded to experiment. The result of his tinkering and thinking is the mechanical contrivance which hourly turns him over without awakening him from his slumbers, and which he says works so charmingly that his paralysis with accompanying sleeplessness is a thing of the past. The frame on which the contrivance rests hangs from the bedstead by means of pinions, one at the head and the other at the foot. The frame is kept in position by being secured at the sides to a clock-like apparatus with cogs and levers to tilt the mattress frame, the motion of the rocking being governed by the clock and spring apparatus. The tilting of the frame is so nicely graduated that the sleeper is unconscious of the change, but continues undisturbed in his night's sleep, as the mechanism attached to the frame automatically changes his position during the hour to the right or to the left side as the case may be.

MONEY IN APPLE CORES.

Used by Confectioners in the Manufacture of Jellies.

A market for cores and skins of apples has been opened in South Water street, Chicago.

In the large hotels the apple cores accumulate in goodly quantity each day and the collection of a month would have a selling value of several dollars, in most of the restaurants and hotels this fruit refuse is thrown away with the garbage. If it were collected and desiccated it could be turned into delicious jelly and syrup. This is the use to which the apple cores and skins are put in Chicago and this is the reason there is a market for them. Confectioners purchase them occasionally in large quantities and pay as high as one cent a pound. The average price is about one-quarter cent a pound.

It matters not what kind of an apple core it is. Nor is it important whether the core has been cut with a silver knife or gnawed by the teeth—everything goes, for when these dried cores and skins are ready to make jelly, syrup or gelatine they pass through a process of cleansing and filteration.—New York Journal.

Peculiar Peruvian Pottery.

A distinguishing feature of much of the Peruvian pottery is a long, slim neck, and nearly every vessel is ornamented with a figure of some sort, having holes to represent eyes and other openings. These afford a passage for the air forced out of the mouth when blown into the vessel. By an ingenious contrivance the air in escaping produces a sound similar to the cry of the creature represented. Thus a utensil decorated with two monkeys embracing each other, on having water poured into or from it, would give a sound like the screeching of those animals. One decorated with a bird would emit bird-like notes, while a mountain cat on one jar would mew, snakes coiled around another would hiss, one of the most curious of these figures was that of an aged woman. When the jar was in use her sobs became audible, and tears trickled down her cheeks. The manufacturers seem to have known all about atmospheric pressure.

Unexplainable Explanation.

A gentleman, talking with a young woman, admitted that he had failed to keep abreast of the scientific progress of the age.

"For instance," said he, "I don't understand how the incandescent light, now so extensively used, is procured."

"Oh, it is very simple," said the lady, with the air of one who knows it all. "You just turn a button over the lamp, and the lights appear at once."—Judge.

Rather Fastidious.

A French lady learning the English language, had made very good progress, she thought, and one day accepted an invitation to dine with some English friends. As the dinner went on, she was offered a dish that was new to her. Not fancying its appearance she declined it, saying:

"Thanks, no. I eat only acquaintance."

Highly Considerate.

"If it wasn't for me my class in school wouldn't have any standing at all," said Hubert.

"Nonsense!" said his aunt. "Your mother says you are the foot of it."

"I'm sure," said Hubert. "How could it stand if it didn't have a foot?"—Harper's Round Table.

The Farmer's Correct Idea.

Tennyson used to tell a story of a farmer, who, when being read-hoo on a never-ending fire and brimstone, consoled his wife quite sincerely with the naive remark:

"Never mind, Sally; that must be wrong; no constitooshun could stand it."—Tid-Bits.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS DONE WITH LEAGUES.

Will Withdraw From Interscholastic Association.

THE LACK OF MATERIAL.

WILL CONFINE EFFORTS IN ATHLETICS TO LOCAL CONTESTS.

Former Action Will be Taken Friday Afternoon—No Athletes of Prominence Remain in Plainfield High School—Only a Few Ever Contested in State Games—Baseball a Failure Two Years.

After a general decline in the number and ability of its athletes, the Plainfield High School Athletic Association has finally decided to withdraw from the membership of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association. While no formal action has yet been taken on the question, there is no doubt but that the association at the next meeting, which will be held Friday afternoon, will decide to withdraw.

It is a matter for general regret that the association should be forced to take such a step but the present condition of athletics in the High School seems to warrant it in the opinion of the principal workers in the association. While there are still a number of boys who are staunch believers in athletics, there are none there, at present, who would stand any show in the state interscholastic meet, nor is there sufficient material in the school to support a baseball nine or football eleven, capable of making it worth while to try for the championship of the state association.

Plainfield High School boys were the originators of the Interscholastic Association from which they now intend to withdraw. A meeting was called in the High School in this city in the fall of 1895, when the temporary organization was effected. George Proctor Smith and Frank Wilbur Cornwell, of the Plainfield High School, were prominent in the association and its formation. Smith was elected the first president and Cornwell was placed on the executive committee.

In the spring of '96, the first games were held and Plainfield was represented in the them by Carroll L. Runyon, George Proctor Smith, Frank Wilbur Cornwell, Raymond B. Carroll and Lindley M. Hillman and finished third out of seven schools.

The Plainfield High School finished third in the '97 games, with a representation of Hillman, Runyon, Smith and Harry Cuming. Plainfield was represented at the start in the baseball championship but the schedule was never completed owing to lack of funds to pay the expenses of the team.

Last spring, Runyon and Smith competed and landed Plainfield fourth out of ten schools. A baseball team opened the season but met with the same fate and for the same reason as the nine of the previous year. The High School was never entered in the football championship.

This year, the High School is practically without athletes. Runyon and Smith have gone. So have Hillman and Cuming, the bicycle riders, and Rhey T. Snodgrass, Arthur W. Lederer and Henry W. Brower have graduated.

There are still many of the boys who would gladly compete in a field day, open only to their own ranks, who would not stand any show against the best schoolboy athletes of the State. So it is proposed to go ahead with athletics, perhaps arranging a dual meet with Leal's School, but not to make any attempt to gain representation in the State meet.

The baseball team has proved an expensive adjunct to the association, for the team went to different parts of the State and the association had to bear the expenses. The outfit was also costly. This year a nine will be formed, but games will be scheduled with nearby teams and so heavy expenses, caused by lengthy trips all through Jersey, will not be incurred. There are plenty of good teams right in the neighborhood that will give the Plainfield boys all the playing they want.

A meeting of the Athletic Association will be held Friday afternoon, when the question of resigning from the State organization will be considered. As the principal workers there have declared themselves in favor of resigning, there is no doubt but that such action will be taken. The prospects of an entertainment to raise funds for the baseball nine will also be considered. The members will also discuss the advisability of holding a field day in the spring.

THE CHRISTIAN PATH LAID OUT FOR CHURCHGOERS.

The Union Meeting of Colored Churches Adopt Resolutions Decrying Cake Walks and Kindred Amusements.

The colored church-going people of Plainfield have become religiously enthused, and to further the movement on foot a union meeting was held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday afternoon after the Sunday-school session. The speakers were Rev. Scott Wallace, Rev. W. D. Johnson, Rev. Mr. Groves, Rev. G. W. Mitchell and Rev. E. E. Jackson, pastor of the church in which the meeting was held. Rev. Mr. Jackson was made chairman of the meeting and made a few stirring remarks. Rev. Mr. Wallace was introduced and spoke on the subject of "Union." He was followed by Revs. Groves, Johnson and Mitchell.

Several resolutions were read and adopted denouncing all church members who frequent public balls, liquor saloons and gambling dens, as being unfit for Christian membership.

There were also resolutions adopted denouncing all entertainments such as punching the donkey's tail, cake walks, games of chance, etc., for the benefit of churches.

Mr. Jackson stated that the reasons for offering these resolutions were that the ministers and Christian people could come out and take a stand against these practices and try if possible to lift the colored people to a higher plain morally.

The result of the meeting caused quite a stir among the colored folks, who are wondering just what line of attack will be followed. Other meetings along this same line will be held from time to time.

ROW WITH A CONSTABLE.

OFFICER ALLEGES THAT HIS LIFE WAS THREATENED.

He Tried to Levy on Goods at New Market and was Driven Away at Point of Revolver — Two Arrests Followed.

New Market, Feb. 20—There was an interesting incident connected with the levying of a constable on some goods belonging to Mrs. Amelia E. Hayes, Saturday, which has resulted in the arrest of Col. William B Hayes' hired man and servant girl. Constable Luther Mundy went to the Hayes place to make a levy to satisfy a judgment obtained against Mrs. Hayes. He was ordered off the place by the hired man, and alleges that the girl threatened to shoot him.

Counsellor W. S. Angleman, of Plainfield, secured a judgment against Mrs. Hayes for Julius Lehman, a New York lawyer, last Tuesday in Justice Storms' court. The claim was for attorney's fees in some law business that Lehman had done for her. An execution was issued against Mrs. Hayes, and Saturday morning Mundy went out to the Hayes' farm to make the levy.

He levied upon a horse and carriage when his work was rudely interrupted by the appearance of the hired man who ordered the Constable off the place. Mundy attempted to explain to him that what he was doing was only his duty, but the fellow paid no attention to the explanation and repeated his orders. It is not known how the affair would have ended if the hired girl had not taken a hand, and running up with a revolver is said to have pointed it full at Mundy's heart and ordered him to leave.

He went, and never stopped until he got to Plainfield where he told his story to Mr. Angleman. The two came back together, and before Justice Storms a complaint was sworn out against the two, charging them with threatening an officer in the discharge of his duty, and soon afterwards they were arrested. Justice Storms held them in $600 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Colonel Hayes, it is said, left Saturday for the West Indies.

HONORED MEMORY OF A CHRISTIAN LEADER

Memorial Service Held For the Late Dr. French.

AN ENDEAVOR MEETING.

IT WAS IN CHARGE OF THE PLAINFIELD LOCAL UNION.

Miss Florence G. Hawkins, President of the Union, Was in Charge of the Service—High and Worthy Eulogies for the Late Endeavorer—A Dr French Memorial Fund Was Started.

Those who attended the memorial service held for the late Dr. J. Clement French, in the Trinity Reformed church Sunday afternoon, realized that the loyalty of the New Jersey Christian Endeavorers towards their chief was not loyalty in name only. The service was well attended, and a spirit of sadness at their loss brooded over all.

Miss Florence G. Hawkins, president of the Local Union Christian Endeavor, had charge of the meeting, and introduced the speakers who were Mrs. D. M. Runyon, ex-superintendent of the missionary department of the State; Rev. J. W. Richardson, one of the vice-presidents of the State Union, and E. E. Anthony, State Treasurer.

Upon the pulpit platform besides these four was Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., who offered prayer. He spoke tenderly of the departed president, who remained young to the last and never lost his interest in young people. He prayed that Dr. French's mantle of virtues and goodness might fall upon them.

The three speakers were those who had been personally acquainted with Dr. French. Mrs. D. M. Runyon, was the first to talk, said, "We are seldom called upon to mourn for a leader, but sooner or later the time must come when ones near and dear to us are called home. And at that time our hearts are more tender and we are more inclined to listen to the Word of God.

"For three years I served as superintendent of missions under Dr. French and that entitled me to a place on the executive committee and here I came into personal contact with the president." Mrs. Runyon spoke of three particular qualities which Dr. French had and which helped make him so successful: cordiality, a habit of being prompt in his attentions to every department of his work, and a willingness to go anywhere or do anything for the cause.

"Peace, be still. A great man has fallen this day in Israel," were the words with which Rev. Mr. Richardson began his remarks. "I cannot say that I would wish him back here, ' the speaker said, "Death is only the vestibule to Heaven. I cannot wish him back, he who has exchanged the cross for the crown."

Mr. Richardson spoke of the dead president's fortitude during his illness and how he had passed out of this life into the next in the same heroic way in which he had urged others to be prepared to go. He also spoke of Dr French as a Christ like man, and said he was one of God's sublime creations on earth.

Mr. Anthony said that Dr. French had called him his friend which he considered a high honor. He spoke of his love for his president, and how much he had gained spiritually from his constant association with him. He said that Dr. French loved the Christian Endeavor cause with all his heart, and that on one occasion during his last illness, when his mind was wandering, he lay in bed and preached a sermon, the burden of which was to young people. Mr. Anthony showed that even in his illness and suffering, the Doctor had his mind on his work.

During the service L. H. Biglow, Jr., who had charge of the music, sang very sweetly the hymn, "Homeland," which a male quartette sang at the funeral service of Dr. French.

Letters were sent to all the officers in the union reminding them of the service in memory of the president, and Miss Hawkins said yesterday that she had received answers from almost all of them. At the close of the meeting a collection was taken which which will be the nucleus of a fund to be known as the Dr. French Fund," and which will be devoted to furthering some work which he was deeply interested in. The memorial service ended, but the spirit of Dr. French will brood over the Endeavorers for many a long day.

The collection amounted to $6 69 The thirteen letters which Miss Hawkins received from the State officers will be read at some public meeting of the local union. There was not time to read them Sunday, as was expected.

Evangelist Belknap Now at First M. E. Church.

THE SERVICES YESTERDAY.

HIS MANNER ON THE PLATFORM IS BRISK AND VIGOROUS.

First Meeting Held Last Sunday—Large Crowd Present—Dr. Belknap Sang—Explained Methods of Campaign—Several "Seekers" Came Forward at Last of Meeting—Meetings to be Continued This Week.

The series of revival meetings at the First M. E. church began last Sunday under the charge of Rev. Dr. J. D. Belknap, of Syracuse, and promise to be different from anything in the line of evangelistic work seen in the city. The meetings will be continued this evening and all the week.

Every evangelist has a method of work particularly his own and Dr. Belknap is no exception. At the first glimpse he impressed his hearers as being very energetic. He opened his campaign of saving souls with vigor and in a very business like way. Music and singing promise to play an important part in it.

The meeting opened with a song service. He had dispensed with the pulpit and desk and had substituted a parlor organ which served a double purpose. Sometimes the singing was by the choir and congregation with the big organ accompaniment. He sang alone, as well, playing his own accompaniment.

Dr. Belknap is a man above the middle height, well built, and one who impresses the observer at once by his energy. His hair is very dark with a sandy mustache and short sidewhiskers. He has a powerful baritone voice that filled every crevice and cranny of the auditorium when he wished.

There was not the slightest semblance of form or ceremony in his conduct of the meeting. He was frank and out-spoken and plunged into the work without hesitation.

After the usual opening exercises in which several of his solos were interspersed, he gave a short talk from a text in Deuteronomy 32 31. "Their rock is not our rock." It was a short informal talk on the necessity of making God a part of every life. In his brisk business like manner he drew many illustrations and impressed the points on his hearers with vigor. He talked without notes, making frequent gestures His illustrations were common little happenings in life, frequently his own experiences while in the work. He told no humorous stories.

His talk was short but vigorous and pointed out how necessary it was that every life contained God and the evils that followed the lack of it. He then asked all the professed Christians in the house to rise and nearly all present did so. He explained that his usual method was to ask the "seekers," as he termed the converts, to occupy seats together at one side of the church. He also asked that the Christians sit by them. The object of thus gathering the "seekers" together was, he said, to make a public profession of their conversion. While it was not necessary he hoped all would do so.

Then he made a strong appeal to the congregation and several came forward during the singing of a hymn and occupied the seats designated. Then, as all knelt and a short prayer service was held, the evangelist passed among the congregation speaking to those who he hoped to bring to Christ.

The service ended with more music and prayer, after which the consecration was dismissed. The church was well filled.

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Reform Club to Celebrate the Event Next Thursday Night.

The Reform Club will celebrate its fifteenth anniversary Thursday night, and will provide as an entertainment for the members and those who attend a mock trial. Benjamin Hand is to be charged with murdering his wife, and will come up to the bar of justice, behind which will sit Justice of the Peace J. E. Mosher, for trial.

Lawyer Hand will prosecute. His will be an easy task, as the jury have already made up their minds as to Mr. Hand's guilt, so all of his lawyer's pleadings in his behalf will be in vain. Lawyer Swackhamer will represent Mr. Hand, and an evening of fun as well as profit is expected. Refreshments will be served at the close.

Couldn't Tell Where He Got It.

William Chester was haled before City Judge Runyon Monday morning, charged with being drunk and disorderly Saturday evening. He was arrested at that time by Patrolman McCarty. He had a bottle of wine in his possession that he could not account for. The Judge suspended sentence temporarily until the police could make an investigation to see if an owner could be found for the bottle.

ROSELLE IS ASSURED OF CHAMPIONSHIP

Little Chance Now of Parks Finishing First.

THE GAMES FRIDAY NIGHT.

ROSELLE WON THREE STRAIGHT FROM WESTFIELD.

The Park Club Only Managed to Get Two Out of Three in Series With Cranford — Poor Scores Rolled at Roselle and Plainfield—Parks Were in Poor Form—Ought to Have Had Three.

There's little chance now of the Park Club standing first this season in the Central Journal Bowling League. There is a possibility, of course, but the results of the six games rolled in the league Friday evening just about settled the order of the finish. It will be Roselle first and the Park Club second. Roselle Friday greatly strengthened its grasp on first place by winning three straight from the Westfield Athletic Club while the Parks were only able to win two out of three with the tailenders from the Cranford Country Club.

The exhibition of bowling on the Park Club alleys last Friday was not very creditable. Three games were rolled between the teams of the Park Club and the Cranford Country Club. Nether side managed to reach a total of 800 pins, and Will Thiers was the only one to make an individual score better than 200. There was evidently something the matter with the Parks, perhaps that old hoodoo that they picked up a Westfield, for at any rate they failed to come up to the usual standard of excellence.

Three games were rolled and the Parks took two of them. Of course that was better than losing two or three, but they ought to have won all of them. Cranford couldn't roll at all and ought to have been swamped if the Parks had rolled as they did early in the season. Then Cranford was minus her best man, who is waiting for a chance to roll against Roselle, and didn't come to Plainfield, for which the Parks ought to be duly thankful. It is even said that Cranford was not particularly anxious to win last night.

The first game was decidedly poor with the Parks in the lead all the time. With all their poor rolling they couldn't keep back with Cranford's feeble work and won out by a big margain. The second game showed the Cranford team ahead for the first four frames. The shock was so great that they promptly fell down and the Parks won by 60 pins.

The third game was positively exciting even if neither side could do anything wonderful. The Parks led for the first five frames, then Cranford braced up and took the lead. It might have been all right in the end, but Cranford got four sloppy strikes on the ninth frame, while the Parks only made spares On the windup a Cranfordite doubled up and the rest made one strike and two spares, while two splits were included in the Parks' share. That was too much and Cranford had no trouble in winning by 33 pins.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.

	1st.	2d.	3d.
W. Thiers	127	204	163
Hibbard	154	149	149
Worth	148	139	132

CRANFORD COUNTRY CLUB.

	836	792	791

The bowling team of the Westfield Athletic Club went to Roselle last Friday and rolled three games with the Casino team of that place. Westfield had high hopes of downing Roselle's cracks and letting Plainfield step into first place. The Roselle boys were in winning form and took all three games. None of the scores were high, Roselle only doing better than 800 in one game. In the first Roselle rolled 760 and won by 16 pins. They won easily in the second by 96 pins The third was another walkover for Roselle.

Defendants Did Not Appear.

Judgment was rendered in Justice Moffett's court Saturday against C. Chapot & Sons for about $65. The plaintiffs in the case were the Brotherhood Wine Co., of New York, who sued the Chapots for several gallons of a particularly good brand of whiskey, which they purchased from the wine company at wholesale. Pope & Runyon brought the suit, and as the defendants did not appear, judgment was given.

A Fine Record.

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association has proved itself one of the best institutions of its kind in New Jersey. The stockholders of the second series have matured their shares and received their money in ten years and five months. A demand has already been made for the opening of the seventh series.

SMOKE, BUT NO FIRE

FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT TO FIND IT.

Colonel Scott's studio in the Old Stillman Building Began to Fill With Smoke—The Firemen Found No Fire.

The tenants of the old Stillman building on West Front street enjoyed all the excitement of a fire Friday afternoon without the usual accompanying discomforts. Shortly before 3 o'clock Col Julian Scott, the artist, whose studio is located on the third floor of the building, detected the odor of smoke. His rooms began to fill rapidly with it. He hastened down and notified his landlord, Former Judge W. M. Stillman, who in turn notified the fire department Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon responded. An alarm was then sent in from the new box nearby by D. S. Dunavan. The fire-alarm whistle refused to work at first and there was a delay.

Chief Doane, Assistant Chief Jennings and a few of the firemen hunted all over the building but without finding any signs of fire. The smoke in Col. Scott's studio gradually disappeared and a careful investigation revealed no more.

A great crowd gathered outside and waited patiently to see the fire. Finding that no fire was forthcoming, the people went away at last. The recall was sent in half and hour after the alarm. The firemen were unable to account for the smoke in the studio unless there is a leak in a flue that has not yet been located.

Another alarm was sent in Friday at 9 o'clock. Col. Scott found his room filling with smoke again so he telephoned the fact to Chief Doane. The Chief, Assistant Chief Jennings and four firemen went around with axes and extinguishers. The extinguishers were used in the chimney flue. It is supposed that there was a slight fire in the chimney. If there was any, it was soon extinguished.

YERKES' CHAPEL WORK

MISSIONARY WHO HAS HAD CHARGE TALKS IN AN INTERESTING WAY.

Dr. Heinrichs Says That Excellent Results are Being Accomplished Among the Heathen in That Eastern Land.

Rev. Dr. Heinrichs, a missionary, who has been in charge of Yerkes' chapel at Tettu, India, spoke last Sunday at the First church under the auspices of the Temple Builders' Society of the church, who are supporting the work at this chapel. Dr. Heinrichs is an entertaining speaker and told a little about the work being carried on at Yerkes' chapel. At present there about thirty workers at the chapel and several competent teachers. Recently an important railroad has been located near Tettu which runs from Madras to Calcutta, making Tettu one of the principal places along the route. He spoke of the excellent work being done among the heathen of that country and how they are being taught not only the English language, but about Christ as well.

Dr. Heinrichs said that the students are exceptionally bright and make excellent progress in their studies, a number maintaining the average of 100 in all their studies. He cited many obstacles in the way of teaching Christ, chiefly the high caste people and the many forms of religion that are to be found in that country.

During the service last evening special music was rendered by the choir. George H. Batchelor, of the Temple Builders' Society, had charge of the meeting and at the close a collection was taken for the work presented.

PLAINFIELDERS WERE THERE.

Close of the State Y. M. C. A. Convention in Rahway Last Sunday.

The State convention of the Y. M. C. A. at Rahway closed last Sunday after a successful series of services. Among those from this city who were in attendance at the various sessions were Stephen Osboone, E. L. Bonny, F. H. Andrews, A. B. Meredith, O. S. Rogers, A. C. LaBoyteaux, L. I. VanAlstyne, T. A. Cuming, F. H. Martin, C. E. A. Heywood, T. H. Stafford, J. A. Stafford, W. D. Murray.

F. H. Andrews spoke yesterday morning and O. S Rogers last night. William D. Murray responded to Dr. Leggett's address of welcome Thursday night. A conference of the physical work committee was held Saturday afternoon at which L. I. VanAlstyne presided, and also a conference for Bible study at which Mr. Murray presided. The Plainfield association was also represented at conferences on educational work, physical work and boys work.

Congressman Fowler Answers.

A letter received by the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church from Congressman Fowler, states that their petition to him to protest against the admission of Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah, has been received, and that he will give it his careful attention.

ANNUAL REPORTS TO BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Work in Various Departments Briefly Summarized.

THE FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN COST OF RUNNING FIRE DEPARTMENT.

During the Year 621 Feet of Cross-walks and 10,000 Feet of Sidewalks Have Been Laid—Fire Loss in Borough Has Been But $3,740—Police in Good Condition—$434 Fines Collected.

The only matters of importance considered at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last Friday were the annual reports presented by the various committees. The first matter considered was the message of Mayor Wilson, which will be found in another part of the paper. After the reading of the message Clerk Arnold presented his financial report and showed a total balance of $4,250 19 and a cash balance of $163 29. The report of Collector George F. Brown showed the receipts to be $81,66.. 72 and the expenditures $81,050 22. There is $471.51 to the credit of the Watchung avenue account and a borough cash balance of $163 29. Overseer of the Poor David Weaver reported a balance on hand of $135 03.

Mr. Woolston, chairman of the committee on streets and public health, reported the receipts to be $38 751 03 and expenditures $34,508.04. He reported in detail the amount of work accomplished on the streets of the borough and stated that 621 feet of cross walks had been laid and 10,000 feet of sidewalk.

Mr. Rogers, chairman of the fire, water and lamps committee, reported a great reduction in the maintenance of the fire department, and paid deserving tribute to Chief Fairchild and all of his assistants for the very able and efficient work accomplished during the year. He reported that there had been seven alarms of fire, with a total loss of property amounting to $3 740. Six new fire hydrants were added, making a total of 83, at an expense of $15 each, and there are 323 electric lights in the borough. Mr. Rogers also complimented Chief Fairchild, the sixteen firemen, and the police force, for the excellent work performed at the fire in the borough last Monday night, when Vincent Kuidoshes' house was destroyed. He praised the men for laying so much hose in all the snow and storm, when to all appearances the man who was burned out was so indifferent. He believed that if an alarm had been sent in promptly the house would have been saved.

Mr. Bris, chairman of the license and marshal committee, stated that the force, consisting of four marshals and a chief, was in excellent condition and he believed that the borough is well guarded from disturbance, etc. This report was supplemented by the report of Chief Marshal Wilson which showed that during the year 151 arrests were made, of which number 27 were sent to jail, 2 to the asylum, 69 fined, 5 held for the Grand Jury, 8 transferred to the Plainfield authorities, one was a case of desertion from the U. S. Army, and sentence was suspended on 39. Thirteen persons were given lodging over night and in all $434 was collected from fines.

Mr. MacLaughlin, as a member of the auditing and finance committee, as well as the committee on taxation and assessment of taxes, reported that the books of the borough had been examined and were found to be all right. This report was a verbal one, but a written report was presented later and filed.

Mr. Burtis offered a resolution to the effect that a sufficient number of copies of the borough reports be printed under the direction of the stationery and printing committee, so that every taxpayer and real estate owner can have a copy. This comprised the business of the evening and the Council went into executive session.

Judgment Against Chapot & Son.

Frank Zibette and Pierre Lessler have both secured judgment again C. Chapot & Sons in Justice Nash's court. Zibette sued on a protested check and secured judgment for $43.13. Lessler, who at one time was employed in Chapot's factory, sued for wages due him and got judgment for $68.15. In both cases the defendants put in no appearance.

Back to His Old Place.

Harry McCormick, formerly conductor on the street railway, and late member of Co. H, Third Regiment, has returned to his first position and now is in charge of car No. 12.

Only One Registration Day.

There will be only one registration day in the borough prior to election and that will be Tuesday, March 7th. Election will occur Tuesday, March 14th.

Chance for the Democrats.

There seems to be a chance for the Democrats to elect some Councilmen in the borough next month.

The FARM

Spraying Fruit Trees.

The insect known as the apple leaf folder may be readily killed by thoroughly spraying infested trees just as soon as the insects begin to hatch, and if they have had time to fold the leaves to any considerable extent. The spraying should be done just as the apple tree leaves are unfolding.

The spraying mixture should be: One pound of Paris green, three pounds of fresh lime, 160 gallons of water.

Since there are three broods of this insect each year there are three periods during which spraying can be most successfully done.

The leaf crumpler, another insect very injurious to apple trees, may be readily killed by thoroughly spraying the infested trees while the leaves are unfolding and before the blossoms open, with the same mixture.

If necessary, the trees may be sprayed again immediately after all the blossoms have fallen, but in this case the amount of water in the mixture should be increased to 240 gallons.

Never spray a fruit while it is in bloom; serious injury to the blossoms and imperfect pollination may result and honey bees will be killed.

Never omit the fresh lime, and always use two or three times as much lime by weight as Paris green. This will lessen the chance of burning and consequent injury of the trees. Spray with mixture of the strength just given. To make it weaker is to render it less effective in killing insects; to make it stronger is to injure the foliage of the trees. Always see that the mixture is constantly stirred while spraying. Apply with as much force as possible, and use as fine a spray as can be made. Spray thoroughly. Hold the spray on the tree long enough to saturate it and to reach all parts, and always spray from at least two sides.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Value of Cream.

Cream varies in the amount of butter fat it contains, according to the cows or milk from which it is obtained, temperature of creaming, thoroughness of the operation, etc. Repeated analyses have shown that a properly worked separator will extract as much of the butter fat from milk as will the Cooley can system, and perhaps even more, both methods get more of that fat than the open pan or shotgun can. Either of the methods first named would therefore extract about the same quantity of butter fat from say 100 gallons of mixed milk from the same herd, but the only way to ascertain the amount of butter fat in the cream is by the Babcock test or by analysis. The density of the cream from a separator depends upon the way the separator is operated, and the size of the regulating cream outlet, which is a screw eccentrically pierced. By turning this screw slightly, the cream is made thicker or thinner. For example, you can turn the screw so the cream will be slightly the other way and makes the cream of very much less density, much thinner. One quality of cream might contain 40 to 50 per cent of butter fat, and the thinnest quality of cream might not contain more than 20 to 25 per cent butter fat.—American Agriculturist.

The Proper Care of Milkcans.

They should be kept clean, and free from rust; they should be well rinsed as soon as may be after being used. Rinse first with cold water, then scrub thoroughly with a brush, both inside and outside, using warm water—almost hot—or better, a good soapsuds. Use it often, anyhow; give particular attention to seams, and don't forget the outsides. You know the inside is often judged by the outside. Finish with scalding water—not just hot water. Turn your cans upside down long enough only to allow them to drain, then turn them right side up or on their sides in the fresh air, and you will have clean, sweet cans. It is a very common error to leave them over a stake or on a board, as invariably the cans will be soured thereby. The hot air or steam rises and has no escape, consequently condensates in the cans and ours. Much milk, otherwise well cared for, if often tainted from no other reason. A rusty can should not be used, as it imparts a foreign flavor to the milk.—American Agriculturist.

Growing Root Ginger.

If you like to try unusual things, try growing ginger. Get a few pieces of dried root ginger, the kind you use for your confectionery in the fall, and plant just below the surface in a pot of rich earth. Keep the earth moist and warm, and the ginger will soon sprout.

If kept in a warm place and watered freely it will send up long, slender shoots like coarse grass, some of them over two feet high, and the odor, when you bruise them, is very much like lemon verbena.

The Importance of Pure Salt.

Butter makers should remember that salt will absorb all foul odors as readily as sweet cream or butter. All should bear in mind this most important point, that pure salt is one of the first ingredients to produce first-class butter. Therefore be very careful and purchase your salt from a store where it has not been kept with other merchandise. Barrels for salt instead of sacks are to be recommended as the barrel is a greater protection from foul odors.—Orin Douglas.

The FARM

Black Knot of the Plum and Cherry.

This fungous disease attacks all species of plums and cherries, both wild and cultivated. As far as has been determined, it does not trouble other fruit and forest trees, although the enlargements caused by injury and insect galls are sometimes taken for it.

The outer or cambium layer of new wood cells just under the bark of twigs seems to be the home of the black-knot fungus. The spores obtain a foothold there and when growth begins the fungus spreads through the soft cell walls. After a little while the trouble appears on the branch as a distinct elevation. This is due to a derangement of the new cells which causes a distorted growth that finally becomes black and hard. The disease is very contagious, spreading from the spores or seeds of the fungus. Of these there are two kinds, summer spores, or those produced during the early part of the season, and winter spores, that mature late in autumn and are ready to germinate the first thing in spring.

The trouble usually begins in the fall and appears as a slight swelling of the bark on the branches, these making but little growth until the following spring, when they begin to develop, mature rapidly, and are full grown in a few weeks. For a time the bark over the forming knots expands, but finally bursts, exposing the deceased growth beneath. The fungus continues to grow throughout the summer and at the end of the season a dead mass of tissue results, which usually forms a home for insects, which cause additional injury to the tree.

The fungus produces spores so abundantly that it is advisable to remove and destroy the knots as soon as they can be seen. Wild cherries and plums are attacked as well as the tame varieties. It is absolutely necessary to keep the knot off these if the trouble is to be completely eradicated. Knots on a single wild tree will produce spores sufficient to infest an entire orchard. Therefore trees of every kind should be cut down at once and the knots burned or completely destroyed. When only a few branches are affected these can be cut out and the remainder of the trees disinfected by washing thoroughly with bordeaux mixture made as follows: Dissolve six pounds of copper sulphate in one gallon of hot water in an earthen or wooden vessel. In another vessel slake four pounds of fresh quick lime. Strain the latter and add to it 50 gallons of water. Into this pour the dissolved copper sulphate and mix thoroughly. Or a very strong solution of sulphate of iron may be used.

These solutions, if applied with a strong force pump, will destroy the spores resting from the bark of the tree and spreading conditions favorable for their development. They also may kill a great many spores, and prevent the formation of more, if applied to the affected part of the tree, but will in no wise cure the disease. The knot ought to be removed before it breaks open, for bees and other insects will spread the trouble. As soon as the swellings appear on the limbs, cut off the branches, two or three inches below the diseased part, then wash with a strong solution of iron sulphate and later apply some oil paint or linseed oil. Because of the exceedingly contagious character of this disease, it can be killed out only by concerted action in a neighborhood or county.—American Agriculturist.

Odor in Milk.

To determine whether an odor in milk is due to bacteria or otherwise, set a pail of the milk at a temperature of say 70 degrees in a room known to be free from odor. After three or four hours open the milk, stir it briskly, and notice whether the odor has increased or not. If the former, then the trouble is of bacterial origin. If the latter, it is an odor from some outside source and can probably be traced to the stable or milk room. At all seasons clean everything thoroughly. If the cause is bacteriological, that is, there is an undesirable ferment present in the milk and the cleaning does not remove it, go to some one who has milk that is known to be all right. Get a quantity after it has become sour, stir it briskly and put a little into all the pails, vats, strainers, churn, etc. In fact, wash them in this sour milk, leaving some in to act as a starter to correct the bad fermentation when more milk is introduced.

The most troublesome ferments may be got rid of in such a course. Bad ferments betoken uncleanly work. By far the best of all remedies is prevention and prevention is obtained by cleanliness.—F. W. Mossman.

Seeding Grass in Corn.

At the second cultivation before the corn is hoed, sow on grass seed with a liberal hand. It is important that the entire surface of the ground be covered. Even seeding will do much toward keeping down weeds. I have a field seeded in this way last season, and it is in first-class condition. Bone dust was sown at the same time. To prevent injury to the grass, the corn should be removed the last of August or the first of September. I put my 1896 crop of corn into the silo.—A. Tompkins, New York.

REVIEW OF MUNICIPAL WORK FOR PAST YEAR

Mayor Wilson Sends His Annual Message to the Council.

CREDITABLE RECORD MADE.

IT HAS COST $30,000 TO RUN THE BOROUGH GOVERNMENT.

The Mayor Says That One of the Most Important Questions to be Met in the Near Future is the Maintenance of Somerset Street—The Mayor Explains His Conception of Duty.

The annual message of Mayor Wilson, of the borough, was presented and read at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council held last Friday. The message complete is as follows:

Gentleman of the Council:—The time has arrived for making our annual report to the people of the manner in which we have performed the trust reposed in us by them, and it gives me pleasure to be able to say that there is no department or item of the borough government or finances for which apology need be made, but on the contrary that I believe the more familiar the tax payers are made with the details of our municipal affairs, the better satisfied they will be with your stewardship.

During the past year, as during the past year immediately preceding, the public health has been wonderfully good, and we have enjoyed a freedom from epidemics of contagious deseases which shows that the sanitary conditions of our borough are the best, and this reflects great credit upon the care, intelligence and vigilance of our Board of Health.

The police department has, during the past year, been enlarged and improved. Its work has been done quietly and without attracting undue attention, but the effect is marked. Several disorderly houses have been broken up, and disorderly persons driven permanently from the borough, to its great benefit, and the fact has been made apparent that to be drunk and disorderly in our streets is an expensive luxury. The result is a gratifying reduction in the number of such cases, and a corresponding feeling of security from danger to insult and obscenity which is particularly appreciated by our ladies and children.

The fire department deserves the hearty thanks of our people for its efficiency and thorough organization. Through the energy and enterprise of its members Warren Engine Company will soon be uniformed and equipped in a manner of which all may well be proud.

The contract for lighting the borough streets expired in January, 1899, and a new contract has been made at a reduction of 50 cents per lamp, and upon better terms as to the character of light to be furnished, which is a substantial advantage.

During the year about nine thousand feet of new flag sidewalks have been laid, making a total of about thirty thousand feet, or nearly six miles of such sidewalks, laid during the two years in which I have been Mayor, and I feel confident that no one would willingly return to the old condition of affairs in this particular.

Over six thousand five hundred feet of gutters have been newly graded and macadamized during the year. More than six hundred feet of crosswalks have also been laid to the great convenience of the public, while several new culverts now carry off underground surface water, which formerly impeded pedestrians.

Our new Collector of Taxes has, by his energetic and systematic business methods, succeeded in collecting the taxes due the borough to a most commendable extent, so that the delinquent taxes now amount to much less than at any time for years past.

The settlement with the former Collector, referred to in my message a year ago as desirable, has been accomplished, with the result that the borough has received thousands of dollars which the experts' investigation showed it was entitled to, and a system of accounting has been inaugurated which safeguards the borough treasury to the greatest practical extent.

During the year about to close we have received for general borough purposes in round figures the sum of $38,000.

Our expenditures have been, again in round figures, for the various department as follows: Street department, including subscriptions from property owners, etc., amounting to about $9,000 $7,600; fire department and water supply, $3,000; street lighting, $5,800; police department, $4,000; support of poor, $1,800; general borough account, $13,450; balance unexpended, $4,200; total, $38,000.

The details of these expenditures will be found in the reports of the various committees having charge of the several departments, and I would recommend that our citizens and taxpayers read these reports with care, in order that they may become entirely familiar with the purposes for which their money is disbursed, and may give to their representatives in the Council credit where it is deserved and criticism and suggestion if it be required.

In this connection I would suggest that perhaps one of the most important questions to be met in the near future is that relating to the maintenance of Somerset street. At present it seems to require annually nearly one-half of the entire road fund to keep that thoroughfare in repair. Unless some other than the present method of repair can be found, it would probably be economy to cover the street with some permanent pavement.

As my term of office is about to close, it may not be out of place if I say a word relative to the spirit in which I entered upon its duties and have endeavored to discharge them. It will be remembered that I did not seek the office, and it was only my belief that every citizen owes it to the community in which he dwells to bear his share of the public burden, when called upon to do so, that led me to allow my name to be used in connection with the position. Having been chosen by the people, by a most flattering vote, for the place, I endeavored to serve them to the best of my ability. I am no politician, and know nothing of politicians' methods, nor do I believe that in the management of our borough affairs any important political principles are involved. My conception is that what is needed here is sound, business methods, systematic supervision of details, careful consideration before determination upon a policy, and a reasonable and fair enforcement of the laws and ordinances upon all persons alike, without favoritism or regard to politics. In short that what is desirable in the management of the public business is just what is needed to make private business successful, and I have acted upon that theory. Those rules which I have been taught to value by a lifetime of business experience I have endeavored to apply, and I believe that time will demonstrate that, although they may not square with the rules of politics, they will produce results in the long run more satisfactory to the public.

To you, gentlemen of the Council, as also to all the officers of the borough, I desire to express my sincere appreciation for the uniform courtesy and respect with which I have been favored, and which has done so much to make my association with you pleasant. It is compensating for the many annoyances which are necessarily attendant upon the office.

Success will surely crown your individual enterprises if you give to them the same constant, intelligent and honest attention which you have devoted to your official duties during the term for which I have occupied the office from which I am about to retire.

J. F. Wilson, Mayor.

ONE FUNERAL FOR TWO.

OBSEQUIES HELD OVER REMAINS OF MR. AND MRS. A. J. CLARKSON.

The Husband Interred in Plainfield Avenue Cemetery and the Wife in North Plainfield—Services Were Simple.

The double funeral of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Clarkson was held Thursday afternoon from the late home on Union avenue, and Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, where the deceased attended, officiated. He spoke words of comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones, and dwelt upon the exemplary Christian lives of those who had gone. The services were quite largely attended by relatives and friends who had known Mr. and Mrs Clarkson so long. There was a beautiful, yet simple display of floral tributes. The burials were separate, the husband being interred beside the grave of his first wife, while the wife was placed beside the grave of her first husband. The husband was buried in the Plainfield avenue cemetery and the wife in the North Plainfield cemetery. This arrangement was according to a dying request.

Those who served as pallbearers were Randolph Stelle, Smith Garretson, A. J. Winckler and L. H. Morgan, all intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson.

MANY MASKED FACES AT SAENGERBUND HALL

Annual Masquerade Ball Was a Great Success.

MANY PRETTY COSTUMES.

OPENED WITH EFFECTIVE GRAND ENTREE OF BURGHERS AND INDIANS.

Over Four Hundred Were Present—Most of Them Were Fancy Costumes—Those Who Led the Grand March—Miantonomo Tribe Assisted in Full Regalia—Dancing Continued Until 5 o'Clock.

A little thing like a rain storm had no effect on the masqueraders bound for the eleventh annual masquerade ball of the Gesang and Turn Verein last Thursday. The staid old Dutch burghers stepped down several centuries, the wild and ferocious Indians came out of the trackless wilderness and some hundred of various other kinds of characters showed up in the Saengerbund Hall Thursday at the appointed time. The ball was to have been held the night of Feb 13 but was called off on account of the blizzard and postponed until Thursday. With an attendance of over four hundred, most of whom wore fancy costumes, the ball proved to be a decided success.

While there was some desultory dancing early in the evening, the ball really opened with the "grand entree." Charles F. Meyer, the floor manager, appeared in a court costume of the time of Louis XIV, of France, a magnificent red silk coat, embroidered with flowers; knickerbockers, cocked hat and powdered wig. His insignia of rank consisted of a magnificent silk sash of the National colors. He led the grand march with Sachem G. W. Houseman, of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men.

Then followed Mr. Meyer's assistants, W. Ricketts and Emil Vick stream; the floor committee, Herman Klinsman, G. Peterson and H. Hansen; and three of the reception committee, F. White, L. Fahn and C. Fehrle, in costume similar to that of the leader. Eight wild and desperate Indians in their war paint, right from the wigwams of the Miantonomo Tribe, came next in line. They were Andrew Stiglitz, Lawrence Scheelein, E. I. Vroom, Fulmer Johnson, Chas. Keller, L. Rosenthiel, Thomas Kane and P. Collins.

Some seventy-five couples in all variety of costumes, from that of a returned veteran from the war to a fairy queen, fell in line behind them. After they were cleverly led through a variety of evolutions the dancing began again and continued until nearly 5 o'clock next morning.

Charles Feller and August Wolff, the other members of the reception committee, were on hand at the door. Supper was served at midnight. Prof. Wallander's orchestra furnished the music.

ALL NIGHT GETTING HOME.

Thursday Evening Euchre Club Were Victims of Belated Train.

Sixteen members of the Thursday Evening Euchre Club went to Rahway Thursday and were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. LaForge. They had a delightful time while at Rahway, but the trouble in reaching home made the trip an interesting one. The party went to the station at Rahway to take the 11:46 train for Elizabeth, but were informed that the train was two hours late. It happened, however, that they did not leave Rahway until 2:30 o'clock. When they reached Elizabeth they learned that the next train to Plainfield left at 4:45 o'clock. The time was pleasantly passed about the railroad station, but before the train arrived there were many heavy eyes. The party arrived in Plainfield before daylight and succeeded in reaching their several homes before they were discovered. As Benjamin LaVere arranged the trip, the members of the club are inclined to think that he is the hoodoo.

The first and second prizes for the women were won by Miss Mabelle Force and Miss Bertha Wheeler, while William N. Tier and Benjamin LaVere were the winners of the gentlemen's prizes. Miss Etta Neumann and George Neumann secured the prizes awarded to visitors.

CHURCH MADE NO DEFENSE.

C. H. Hand Secures a Judgment Against Calvary Baptist Church.

In Justice Mansfield's court Thursday afternoon Chas. H. Hand secured judgment against the Calvary Baptist church for $23.75. The church put in no defense. Murphy & Blair, their lawyers, asked for an adjournment, but this was not granted.

Architect Clum sold a claim for $30 against the church to Mr. Hand, and when the latter presented the order it was not honored. It is said that the church will meet the order as soon as their finances will permit.

BIG HOME PROPOSED FOR AGED WORKMAN.

Land as a Site for the Institution Already Donated.

LINCOLN IS THE PLACE.

THE PROJECT IS MEETING WITH FAVOR AMONG LABOR UNIONS.

Will be Modeled After the Childs-Drexel Home for Union Printers in Colorado Springs—Henry G. Gottlob, the Projector, Believes in Having Lincoln Home Open to All Aged and Infirm Union Men.

The much discussed project of building a State home for aged and infirm workmen in Lincoln will be considered at the next meeting of the Federation of Trades and Labor Unions of New Jersey. The basis of the idea, which originated with Henry G. Gottlob, of Newark, chairman of the Federation, is the Childs-Drexel Home for union printers in Colorado Springs. This institution is conducted by the International Typographical Union, and was founded through the generosity of the philanthropists whose name it bears. They donated $10 000 as the foundation of a fund for building the home.

It is Mr Gottlob's idea to have the home open to the aged and infirm of every sect and every craft, good character and membership in a labor union to be the only requirements. For the sight of such a home a tract of land has already been offered by the New Jersey Realty Company in Lincoln.

"I believe," says Mr Gottlob, "that the sum of one hundred building lots will enable us to raise $20 000 for a building with a hospital annex. The market value of these lots is about $2 000. We could doubtless dispose of half of them in exchange for labor and material on the building, and the other half to buyers on easy terms. The home will probably be three stories high, with a mansard roof, and will be fitted up with the most approved sanitary appliances.

"Boilers, electric light plant and kitchen will occupy the basement. The second floor will be divided into a library, assembly room, amusement room and chapel. The upper floors will be used for sleeping and living rooms. By working on the farm of 160 acres the institution can be made self supporting.

WEDDED FORTY YEARS.

MR. AND MRS. M. C. DOBBINS CELEBRATE MARRIAGE ANNIVERSARY.

The Visitation of Friends was a Complete Surprise to Them—Visits and Plans Made Rendered—Many Handsome Gifts.

Thursday at their home, No. 117 Elmwood place, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins celebrated in a pleasant manner the fortieth anniversary of their marriage. A happy feature of the celebration was the fact that it was a complete surprise to the celebrants, and it was not until several of the guests arrived that they began to realize what was going on. Early in the evening two of the invited guests called at the home. They had a delightful time while at Rahway, but the trouble in reaching home made the trip an interesting one. The party went to the station at Rahway to take the 11:46 train for Elizabeth, but were informed that the train was two hours late. LITTLE SUFFERING FOLLOWED BLIZZARD.

Organized Aid Association Had But Few Applicants.

WANTED COAL AND WOOD.

AMPLE PROVISION WAS MADE FOR ANTICIPATED DEMAND.

Twenty Applications Made Since Last Friday—All Were Well Cared for—Six Tons of Coal Distributed to Needy Ones—No Very Bad Cases of Destitution Reported to Association.

Throughout the country the severe cold wave and the succeeding blizzard brought suffering into many homes. The supplies of coal and provisions ran short and many nearly froze or starved. In this city, however, there has not, as far as can be learned, any importunate cases of destitution. Suffering there was, of course, and always is but in no unusual amount as was reported in other cities.

The Organized Aid Association, while it distributes no aid or relief to those in need, is really the head quarters. All cases that come to the attention of that organization are looked into and then turned over to the proper source of relief. All cases are first referred to it.

As the centre of the work of relief, a local reporter interviewed the Association's agent, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Thursday afternoon, regarding the extra demands made upon the Association as a result of the cold and snow storm. It was found that there had been but little increase in the aid rendered although ample provision had been made for such a contingency.

From Feb. 11th up to Feb. 16th there were some twenty applications for aid made. They were for food and coal, principally the latter. Yesterday there were none. At the first of the cold wave there were several citizens who contributed both coal and cash to the Relief Association to be doled out at the direction of the Organized Aid Association in such cases of destitution as might come to its notice. All the applications were granted.

Some six tons of coal, in lots of a quarter of a ton each, was distributed during that time, partly to the new applicants and the remainder to those who are already under the care of the Relief Association.

Mrs. Woodruff expected that she would be overrun with appeals for aid after the storm, but the number was small, and yesterday there was none at all. Since the time she first started her duties as agent for the Organized Aid, Mrs. Woodruff says that she believes that the deserving poor of the city were never better off than they are today.

The work done by the Organized Aid and Relief Association does not represent all the charitable work done in Plainfield by any means. There is lots of it going on privately and unostentatiously every day, and during the cold wave and blizzard many needy ones were relieved from imminent privation in this way.

AN AFTERNOON TEA.

Given by Mrs. Tremaine in Honor of a Washington Friend.

In spite of Thursday's severe storm a very delightful afternoon tea was given by Mrs. Morris Sawyer Tremaine, of Buffalo, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Middleditch, of Mercer avenue. The tea was given in honor of Mrs. Tremaine's friend, Miss Michner, of Washington, Pink roses and shaded candles were the decorations of the dining room, producing a charming effect. Mrs. Tremaine and Miss Michner were assisted in receiving by Mrs. James Middleditch, Mrs. Howard Beebe, Mrs. Harry Johnson, the Misses Helen Clark, Mabel VanDeventer, May Waring, Mary Bushnell and Belle Patterson, while Mrs. Eugene Moore and Mrs. Gribbon, of Brooklyn, presided at the table.

Application for Prize Money.

L. A. Miller, of this city, a son of Sebastian Miller, has applied to the Government, through Justice Mosher, for prize money. He served on the United States steamship Hornet, during the late war, as chief carpenter's mate, and when he made the application he was in the United States Naval Hospital in Brooklyn. He says that the Hornet made several captures during the war, and claims that he is entitled to some of the prize money.

Suing for Wages.

Miss Mary Leary, of New York, has brought suit against Adrian Pickhardt, of Sycamore avenue, for $35 for services rendered, in Justice Mattison's court. Miss Leary was a domestic in the employ of Pickhardt, and now claims that he owes her considerable salary, besides certain money borrowed. Suit was brought for her by V. W. Nash, Jr.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Opportunities.

Every day offers some new opportunity for women's work, because every day creates some new necessity. The incessant demand for novelty is considered, by some people, to be the great evil of modern life; but it is undoubtedly a blessing to the class of women who are called "reduced gentlewomen."

This is, unfortunately, an ever growing class, perhaps because the gentlewoman who now considers herself "reduced" would have, a few seemed, a few years ago, to have, if not a comfortable, at least a tolerable existence. The sudden cessation of luxuries that comes to many women when the bread winner meets with death or of disaster plunges them at once into this body of reduced gentlewomen, and they begin to look for some way of earning money to provide if not the luxuries at least the semblance of them.

The production of staple articles is in the hands of hand workmen, and it is in catering to the fads and caprices of society that the novice finds her most lucrative field. A modern mother, who is perhaps a leader of fashion, has determined to have her children brought up on the music of the future. Unable to find a nurse who is capable of singing Wagner to these unfortunate infants, she employs a young gentlewoman to croon Wagnerian lullabies to the morning nap and the night's repose. This might seem to be a joke, but it is a serious determination on the mother's part, and it offers an acceptable livelihood to the singer.

Again, a butterfly of society likes to have exclusive designs for her gowns; so she has in her employ a young woman who does nothing but invent lovely costumes, making water color sketches of milady's appearance in daring color combination and original shapes and fashions. This employer was, not many years ago, as well able to buy gowns as her present employer, and, if rank in America were dependent upon birth or pedigree, would far outclass her.

Every one knows the story of the old Indian who said, "I like to see white girl work," Perhaps, in the grande dame's willingness to employ her less fortunate sister, there is some of this aboriginal quality; or perhaps it is only a grandiose desire to patronize—which desire is of course quite foreign to American ideas of equality, but which, nevertheless, is latent in every human breast.—Puritan.

The Art of Praising Our Friends.

No, we do not remember to say nice things in one another, or rather we do not make the effort to say those nice things we are often actually thinking.

It is not that we mean to be grudging of our praise, nor are we restrained by delicacy, but we just do not think of opening our mouth and unclosing our lips on the pleasant thought that would give Mary undeniable pleasure. There, no doubt, have been times when you yourself have worn a new gown or made some conspicuous effort of one kind or another, and found a friend utterly silent on the subject—so silent that you thought she had no good thing to say, and so kindly held her tongue; then later (through more thoughtful chancelet) trickles to you a warm approval that she had spoken behind your back.

Behind-the-back approval is extremely valuable, more so than before the face, of course, but somehow it is never so sweet.

Flattery. It is not flattery to speak of a true admiration. It is rather a duty to do so than to refrain. The use of clean, honest praise is not its abuse. It costs more effort to speak pleasant thoughts aloud than to think them in silence, and when one feels irritable or tired the effort is greater to thus make one's self very pleasant; but there is no doubt whatever about the duty in the case.

I once saw a father walk up to a man his little boy had made and pinned on the wall. He stood before it a long time in silence, and in silence walked away. The little fellow was sitting in the room, and his father knew he was there. He was watching with his eager child's eyes, waiting anxiously for a word of approval. As none came his poor little face fell unhappily. Straight into the next room walked the father, and said, carelessly:

"Robert has drawn a very clever little map in there. Look at it when you go in."

"Did you tell him it was clever?" asked a judicial listener, following from the room where little Robert still sat.

"Why, no. I ought to have done so. I never thought to mention it."

"Well, you ought to be ashamed of yourself," was the deserved reply. "Go back now and tell him."

We ought all of us to be ashamed of ourselves a dozen times a day for like sins of omission. It costs so little to say nice things, and the result in another's pleasures is out of all proportion to our trouble.

An Ideal Cosmetic Box.

A dear old Quaker lady who was asked what gave her such a lovely complexion and what cosmetic she used replied sweetly: "I use for the lips, truth; for the voice, prayer; for the eyes, pity; for the hands, charity; for the figure, uprightness, and for the heart, love."

SAVED BY LITTLE CHILDREN.

An Episode of an Indian Raid in Utah Nearly Thirty Years Ago.

Robert F. Spearman, attorney for the Department of Justice, Washington, is at the Albany. Mr. Spearman has been engaged in the taking of testimony, on behalf of the government, in Indian depredating claims.

"In taking testimony in these Indian cases," said Mr. Spearman, "I frequently hear some very interesting stories concerning early frontier life. I remember one case in particular, which I think will be one of the most remarkable exhibitions of courage in an 8-year-old boy that have ever heard of. It occurred near the town of Beaver, in Utah. A ranch in that vicinity was attacked by the Indians and one man who was visiting the ranchman was killed, and for a while it seemed as if the whole party, wife and children, would fall prey to the savages. The house was surrounded by the Indians and the people within defended themselves as best they could, but the ranchman, watching his opportunity, lowered his little boy and his daughter, who was but 12 years old, from the back window and told them to try to make their way to the cañon and follow it down to Beaver, where they could obtain help. The two children succeeded in reaching the cañon unobserved, and, with presence of mind and bravery which, I think, is remarkable for a child of that age, the boy told his sister to follow down one side of the cañon and he would follow the other, so that in case the Indians should find one of them the other might not be killed. They succeeded in reaching Beaver, where a relief party was organized which hastened to the rescue of the besieged party. At the beginning of the siege the Indians had heard the children in the house, and missing their voices the alert savages discovered that they had gone and endeavored to overtake them, but being unsuccessful, and knowing that help would soon arrive, withdrew before the rescuers could reach the ranch."—Denver Republican.

WHERE HARD TIMES ARE UNKNOWN.

Unbounded Success of the Mormons as a Business Community.

The large profits of the Mormons as farmers financially are exhibited in the Atlantic Monthly for November by William E. Smythe, and the showing is remarkable. In the 40 odd years since these people settled, virtually penniless, in Utah, they have expended $360,000,000 for the cost of maintaining church and state, the two having been virtually one. All this, excepting $20,000,000 brought in by immigrants, was the product of farming by irrigation. Each Mormon farmer enjoyed an average income of $432 a year above the cost of living. He has been compelled, moreover, to give a tithe every year to the church. Broadly speaking, all the farmers are proprietors and none tenants. The land in Salt Lake City was originally parcelled out in equal quantities to the heads of families. Water for irrigation, and other utilities were owned by the community, each man holding shares according as he contributed labor to the construction. The farmers were thus from the first accustomed to co-operate as needed for themselves rather than to specialize, and the consequence was a never-failing product and complete self-sufficiency. They have never felt "hard times."

Stores, factories, banks and industrial enterprises generally were conducted on the co-operative plan as joint stock companies. The famous Zion's co-operative mercantile institution, which includes stores, a boot factory and several other departments, has paid an average of 91-3 per cent dividends yearly. The capital stock is now over a million dollars.

VARIETIES.

Hood once said of himself that it was only for his "good blood" that he was "a lively thought."

The wood of the pine-tree is used for the sounding-boards of pianofortes, as it does not warp under change of temperature or atmosphere.

Only 70 years have elapsed since the first railway in the world was finished. During that comparatively brief period 400,000 miles have been constructed, the British Empire accounting for about a sixth.

The reason why birds do not fall off their perch when asleep is because they cannot open the foot when the leg is bent. Thus a bird while waking must close its toes as it raises the foot, and open them as it touches the ground.

A bamboo church organ is reported to have been built at Shanghai, and it is said to surpass organs made of metal. As bamboo can be obtained of all dimensions, from the thickness of a pen to pieces a foot in diameter, this natural wood costs little more than the simple labor, and the notes are—so says the report—beautifully soft and pleasant to the ear.

There is at least one country in the world where it costs nothing to die. In some of the cantons of Switzerland all the dead, rich as well as poor, are buried at the public expense. Coffins and all other ordinary articles are furnished on application to certain undertakers designated by the government. Everything connected with the interment is absolutely gratuitous, including the grave and the religious service. All classes avail themselves freely of the law.

FIRE HORSES TO GO.

AUTOMOBILE FIRE TRUCKS TO BE INTRODUCED IN THIS COUNTRY.

A Noiseless, Invisible Motor Will Do the Work More Efficiently—The Idea Has Much in Its Favor, and Will Doubtless Be Used in All Large Cities.

Science has killed the fire horse. Before long the noble hero of a thousand mad races for life or death will be no more. The automatic fire truck has come to take his place, and soon every fire department of importance in the United States will be in possession of one of the latest inventions.

The new automatic fire truck will be in every way a more practical and efficient aid to fire fighters than its more picturesque predecessor, but from an artistic or sensational standpoint there will doubtless be many persons who will regret the passing of the fire horse.

The inspiring sight of a bare headed driver, with loose reins and slender whip, urging his three big horses to greater speed, will give place to the cool headed motorman, sitting in the driver's seat, increasing or reducing speed as the occasion may warrant by the simple turning of a lever, and guiding the apparatus in a similar manner.

In appearance the automatic fire truck does not differ greatly from the hook and ladder truck of to-day. There is the same arrangement of ladders along the body of the truck, the same footboard for the crew, and the manipulation of the rear steering gear is the same. The radical difference is in the arrangement of the front wheels and the driver's seat.

The motive power of this automobile is what is known as a compressed air gas engine of continuous running design.

The engine which furnishes the motive power is placed just above the front axle and directly beneath the driver's seat. A system of cog wheels and levers acts directly between the engine and the front wheels; in fact, the engine machinery, which is very simple and consists principally of cog wheels, is located directly in front of the engine, almost beneath the footboard of the apparatus.

Extending upward from the machinery, through the footboard, and reaching to a height a little above the driver's seat, are two levers, which resemble those in common use on cable cars. One of these levers is used for the double purpose of steering the machine and as a brake, while the other lever controls the speed of the engine.

The engine is so constructed that when the driver takes his seat and grasps the left hand lever the whole apparatus is ready to start. By simply drawing the lever toward himself the driver sets the truck in motion. The cogs on the lever, which work the wheels, fall into another set of cogs which work directly from the engine, and the start is made.

A most important feature is found in the fact that, in order to stop the truck it is not necessary to stop the engine. A forward pressure on the left hand lever throws the cogs out of place, and a pull on the right hand lever applies the compressed air brakes. Should this not stop the progress of the truck in sufficiently short time, the cogs can be thrown back into place and the engine reversed and an extra set of other brakes applied to the rear wheels of the truck.

The truck can be driven at a speed of forty miles an hour if necessary and in order that it can travel at a high rate of speed over smooth and slippery pavements, the tires of the wheels are roughened as provided (like a horse's hoof) with calks or short spikes. This improvement has been found to be most successful, especialy in turning sharp curves.

Another great advantage of the new invention is found in the fact that the motive power being so completely under control it can be used immediately for elevating an extension ladder, which is of the greatest importance both in the fighting of fires and the saving of human life.—New York Herald.

McPherson the Winning Name.

The London and China Telegraph says that in Otago, New Zealand, where Scotchmen are in the majority, a contract for mending a road was to be let, and the most acceptable bid was signed "McPherson." Notice was sent to the said McPherson to complete the contract, and lo! he appeared in all the glory of yellow hue and pigtail! "But," gasped the president of the Board, "your name can't be McPherson?" "All lightee," cheerfully answered John Chinaman, "nobody catchee contract in Otago unless he named Mac." The contract was signed and the Mongolian McPherson did the work as well as if he had hailed from Glasgow.

Sufferers from Gun Discharging.

Krupp guns are certainly not desirable neighbors even in times of peace. The inhabitants of Essen suffer much to preserve their house property from the trials of the heavy guns close by. Many houses and walls show large fissures from the shocks, and others are actually unsafe. At the latest experiments all the doors and windows in one quarter of Essen flew open at every discharge, while one house had thirty panes of glass broken.—Tid-Bits.

A Rare Dish.

"Your majesty," said the chief of the King of the Cannibal Islands, "we have in the larder to-day a couple of fine fat captives who say they are twins. What is your royal pleasure?"

"Twins?" replied the potentate. "That is fine. I have an idea. Serve them both at dinner, and the Queen and myself will eat a philopena."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Smart for Street Wear.

A stylish design for alpaca, cashemire, faced cloth, canvas, plain or fancy silk, &c. The six-gore skirt, measuring 1½ yards at hem, would be used for lining and material, and made up together, interlining foot apart about 1 inches up with horsehair cloth, cut the same shape as gores, and stitched in with seams. Place center of front and back to a fold in material to avoid seam, the side of back gore to selvedge, and the line of oblong holes, running lengthways down the side gore, on exact straight of material, while on to the back part of side gore a small piece has to be joined as shown by the round perforations. The foot of skirt is trimmed with narrow braid, immediately below which is arraiged fancy braid, put on as illustrated, the trimming line being indicated on pattern by round perforations, while carried entirely around skirt is a border of the fancy braid.

The front, also front part of side gore as far as round as perforation, are fitted plain into the band, the remainder of side gore eased, while the back gore, also the back itself, are gathered into the band, the placket-hole being formed on left side. The fitted lining bodice would have the front darts stitched up, then join on the side pieces and back, but leave the shoulder seams andone for the present. Cover with the material front and back, which can be of chiffon, muslin, silk, satin, &c., and which cut without a seam down back, and stitch back and front, together by the under arm seam. Gather the neck and shoulders which draw up to lining size and tack to same, also round armhole, and gather waist, back and front on to lining, hooking fronts down same. The sleeve is to be cut without a seam down the back, and stitched to the front by the under-arm seam, then tack to armhole of bodice; also shoulder and neck, while now the shoulder seam can be stitched, thus fixing lining, material, and Eouave shoulder all firmly together. Eouave can be lined with silk.

The short basque is worn inside skirt and the waist banded with ribbon, tied at back in a smart bow, or fastened beneath a rosette. Coat-shaped sleeve, the under of which use for cutting both lining and material. Cover lining upper with material upper, the shoulder fulness of which gather to lining size. Stitch upper and under together by inner and outer seams, where the fulness at elbow in upper sleeve between the two notches is to be gathered to corresponding space on under sleeve. Face up wrist with sarcenet, and finish with the braid trimming.

An Umbrella Holder.

The device for holding umbrellas can be made of leather or of canvas and meets a great need in the household. In the first place it will create a desirable place for canes and umbrellas and secondly it will keep the umbrella silk from getting dust and hail-worn. Pockets at the sides are intended for riding gloves.

AMERICA'S NEW GEM.

IT WAS FOUND IN MEXICO AND FIRST EXHIBITED IN CHICAGO.

It is Christened Cyclops—History of the Name—The Stone is Cut and Mounted Like an Opal—The Third Semi-Precious Stone Found in This Country.

At one of the Chicago jewelry stores a new stone has been placed on sale which has never been shown anywhere else in the world. The stone is called the cyclops and is peculiar and original in its every respect. It was first found by an opal miner in an extensive mine near the City of Mexico. The miner, in order to ascertain whether he had discovered anything of practical value, sent some to Chicago to have them examined. The stones were cut, and it was found that they made very beautiful ornaments for jewelry.

In the rough, the stones have much the appearance of a rose on the upper side, and vary in size from a large pea to a penny. In the center on the under side of each is found a little cavern of quarts of a reddish color. When the stone has been smoothly cut this little red spot plainly shines through the clear substance of the stone, and from this the stone is given its name—the cyclops. The clear quarts substance, which is chalcedony, has apparently accumulated on the red colored nodule in strata, and in general shape resembles a hemisphere with the red ball in the middle of the flat side.

The stone is extremely new and has been so pronounced by all experts who have seen it. The same specimens, which are now in Chicago, were taken to Europe and were there exhibited to some of the best known specialists, who pronounced them beautiful and well worth developing.

The present value placed upon the stone is about the same as that of the opal, varying according to the beauty and quality of each individual specimen. The lapidary gives the cyclops the same cutting as he does the opal, called en cabochon. In this cutting, as is well known, no facets are cut, but instead, a smooth rounding surface.

The finding of a new stone is of considerable importance in the mineralogical world. It happens seldom that a discovery always attracts much wide attention and considerable comment. In our own country only three semi-precious stones have been found which are not in the other parts of the world.

America's first discovery, peculiar to its own soil, was found about forty years ago on Isle Royal in Lake Superior. This stone was called the chlorastrolite.

The second stone which was a native of America only, was found about fifteen years ago in North Carolina. It was found by a man named Hidden and after him was called the Hiddenite.

Next in discovery to the hiddenite comes the cyclops. As a gem of value and in all probability in appearance the cyclops will outrank either of its predecessors.—Chicago Times-Herald.

ANOTHER BRIGADIER GERARD.

He Understood His Worth and Had No Fear in Proclaiming It.

There is something so bluntly honest and bold in the self-criticism of a man who appreciates his own virtues, that it may well appal the soul unaccustomed to confidence. Says the author of "John Bull's army": An English General, in reviewing a corps of cavalry, suddenly stopped before a splendid-looking fellow, and asked abruptly:

"Which is the best horse in the regiment?"

"Number Forty, sir."

"What makes you think it is the best horse?"

"He walks, trots, and gallops well; is a good jumper, has no vice, no blemish, carries his head well, is in his prime."

"And who is the best soldier in the regiment?"

"Tom Atkins, sir."

"Why?"

"Because he is a honorable man, is obedient, tidy, takes good care of his equipment and his horse, and does his duty well."

"And who is the rider of the best horse?"

"Tom Atkins, sir."

"And who is Tom Atkins?"

"I am, sir."

The General could not help laughing, but he gave a sovereign to his informant, who received it without moving a muscle.

Tale of a Cat.

Jim is a very intelligent cat who is the pride of all the clerks in a well-known business house on Market street. It happened that a young lady, entered the store in question, wishing to pay a bill. She was told to take a seat on a large settee while the office boy obtained the receipt. Now, the back of this settee rests against a railing which incloses the office. This railing is very much like a backyard fence, and for that reason is a favorite place for Jim. He was in the habit, when the lady took her seat, and he cast admiring glances at her. She was neatly attired in black, and had a large stuffed bird in her hat. Everything went well until Jim spied the bird, and with a jump he was on her hat, much to the alarm and fright of the lady, who instantly jumped to her feet, screaming loudly. Jim was quickly removed, but could not be driven away while the lady remained in the store.—Philadelphia Record.

Startled.

On a recent Sunday in a church in Dublin the choir was startled during the singing of the psalm by the appearance of the organ-blower's head, who shouted out:

"Sing like fury! The bellows is busted!"—Pearson's Weekly.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabule, and cause it to be put up in the form of a lozenge and distributed among the poor."

Gains Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department.

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in favor of them and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the honorable character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I always employed a physician and did so up to the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I then resolved to try faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that is the saving of $20 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules was all I ever used in a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters of the lady, who objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady replied: "Why, may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the story about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF.

A new style of package has been put on the market containing twelve tabules packed in a convenient form to carry in the vest pocket, the vest pocket case, or in the purse. This is the cheapest way to buy Ripans Tabules, as the price of the twelve is but five cents. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists generally. One grain of the five-cent cartons (12 tabules) may be had by mailing fifty cents to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce street, New York. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists everywhere. The Ripans Tabule is the best medicine known to man for the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, constipation, and all disorders of the stomach. One grain dose. Sold by druggists.

BIG PARTIES SPLIT ON TOWNSHIP ISSUES

How They do it in North Plainfield Township.

SPRING ELECTION COMING.

VOTERS DIVIDED INTO FACTIONS BY GROGRAPHICAL LINES.

Greenbrook Holds Busy at Republican Primaries and Nominates That Ticket—Washingtonville and Part of Scotch Plains Combine in Citizens' Movement—The Offices to be Filled This Year.

Although there are only a hundred and fifty voters in North Plainfield township, that part of Somerset county has more than its share of excitement attendant on election time. This year the township election takes place Tuesday, March 14th.

While the party lines are strictly drawn on Nation and State issues, the township is entirely changed politically on local affairs. The Republican stronghold in the township is Greenbrook or Sebring's Mills. Washingtonville and a part of Scotch Plains make up the rest of the township and contain most of the Democrats in the township. The Republicans of this section have for the past three years united with the Democrats, forming a so-called "Citizens'" party.

On local issues, the Greenbrook faction has controlled the Republican primaries and nominated its own officers. The Washingtonville and Scotch Plains contingent have put their Citizens' ticket on the field and have, during the past three years, been mainly successful.

This year the offices to be filled are town committeeman, township clerk, constable, assessor, collector, the terms of which are three years, and overseer of the poor and surveyor of the highway, for one year each. There seems likely to be another hot contest between the two factions for the choice of most of these.

Wednesday evening, March 8th, the "Citizens" will hold their caucus at Fluger's Hotel. The only contest of importance will probably be for the nomination for committeeman. The residents of the Scotch Plains section want representation, and have chosen Benjamin Schenck as their candidate. William Smith, of Washingtonville, will also be a candidate for renomination.

CITY HOTEL CHANGES.

Landlord Beerbower Contemplates Going Into the Restaurant Business.

John Beerbower, propriety of the City Hotel, is contemplating extensive changes in his house to meet the competition that has lately developed in that line of business in this city. The improvement in prospect is to alter the dining room of the hotel so as to make it suitable for a restaurant business.

With that in view Mr. Beerbower has a set of plans in the hands of a well-known builder who is figuring on them. It followed out they will necessitate tearing out the brick sidewall on Park avenue side of the dining room and putting in a full plate glass front, with large double doors for an entrance direct from the street into the dining room. If the changes are made it is expected to commence the work the first of April. When finished Mr. Beerbower proposes to serve a regular dinner at a moderate price and also to serve other dishes to be found in restaurants at all hours of the day and night.

Crusade Against the Saloons.

Elizabeth, March 1.—The Elizabeth Anti-Saloon League held a meeting last night in the study of the pastor of St. James' Methodist Episcopal church. It was decided to bring Francis Murphy, the apostle of temperance, here next month to hold a series of meetings, so as to arouse the people, after which the league will begin a vigorous warfare against the saloons.

High Salvationists Here.

Brigadier Scott and staff, of the Salvation Army, came to Plainfield last Tuesday and held a meeting with the local soldiers. The meeting was for the soldiers only and was private. There was also present a delegation from the Bound Brook branch of the department. Meetings will be held every evening this week and the public is cordially invited.

Mission Workers to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be held in the church parlors Friday afternoon, beginning promptly at 3:30 o'clock. An address by Mrs. Darwin R. James, president of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, may be expected.

CREMATORY PLANT TO BE OFFERED TO THE CITY.

THE DIRECTORS DECIDE TO SELL OUT

Annual Meeting Held Tuesday—The Stockholders Do Not Care to Keep At It.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company held a meeting last Tuesday at the Union County Country Club and elected directors for the ensuing year as follows: John W. Murray, Jas. Clark, Harry G Runkle, Andrew Lutkins, Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., John T. Fritts and DeWitt C. Ivins. Another meeting will be held in a few days, when officers will be elected from the board of directors.

During the evening the directors entered into a discussion of the future of the plant on De Kalb avenue. Some members thought the plant could be run by the company so as to pay a good dividend. Others thought it would be better to dispose of the plant to the city and let them run it according to their own ideas. It was finally decided by the majority that it would be best to offer the plant to the city, and it is likely that this plan will be adopted at some future date.

M'CARTY'S TWO VICTIMS.

BOTH MEN WERE DISTURBING THE CITY'S PEACE.

One Fought the Policeman and Had to Be Clubbed—The Other Thought He Owned the Depot—Judge Fined Them.

Patrolman McCarty had two victims to look after last Tuesday. The first one came at 10 o'clock. A man, who said he was Thomas Sullivan, wandered along Park avenue, near Front street, with an overload of intoxicants. He had started for Hopewell from New Brunswick and taken the wrong train. His brain was befuddled by the drink, and he had only a faint idea where he was.

McCarty started the man to the lockup. At Second street, Sullivan laid down and announced that he was going no further. Then ensued a lively time. Sullivan decided to disarm the officer, who was compelled to use his club. Meanwhile, Sullivan made the air fairly blue with his profanity. With the assistance of Patrolman Myers, Sullivan was finally locked up.

This morning, when arraigned before City Judge Runyon, Sullivan explained that he hadn't the slightest idea what happened during the night. The Judge fined him $5 for resisting an officer.

McCarty's other victim was W. P. Jerrolamon who thought that the North Avenue station was a privileged place for him. The officer said his language was very bad, Jerrolamon said he was drunk. The Judge remarked that Jerrolamon ought to know better, and fined him $8 or twenty days in jail.

City Judge as Entertainer.

There was a good attendance last Tuesday at Hope chapel when one of the series of entertainments was given under the auspices of the young people of the church. A very informal programme was presented consisting of popular selections by City Judge Runyon and recitations by Mrs. Frank Smith, all of which was greatly enjoyed. The balance of the evening was passed in sociability after which refreshments were served. Frederick H. Andrews had charge of the affair and under his direction a pleasant evening was spent.

Salamagundi Party.

A pleasant salamagundi party was given Tuesday evening by Miss Grace Emmons, of Jackson avenue, to about twenty-five of her young friends. All sorts of games were played and handsome prizes were awarded the winners. A portion of the evening was spent in dancing, and among those who indulged in the light fantastic was the genial "Pete" Emmons, father of the hostess.

New Clothing Store.

Matthew Cashin, who has resigned his position with William Sebring, the clothier, has associated himself with Schepflin & Schultz, the clothiers, on West Front street. The new store will be opened in the Schepflin building this week, but the formal spring opening will not take place until Saturday, March 11th.

Visitors Talked.

At the meeting of Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., held Monday evening, the initiatory team from Camp No. 43, of Somerville, was present, and initiated several candidates. There were excellent addresses by Representative Bicknell, of Atlantic City, and Lawyer Frederick Pope, of Somerville.

—A sociable and entertainment will be given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church Friday evening. It will be called a "Chinese Evening."

FIRST APPEARANCE BEFORE TOWN FOLK.

Successful Concert of Metronome Club Tuesday Night.

AT MONROE AVE. CHURCH.

MISS MARION SHORT PROVED A PLEASANT ENTERTAINER.

Concert Was Under Auspices of Young Men's Bible Class of the Church—Church Was Filled to the Doors—Wasn't Even Standing Room Left—Miss Short Best in Humorous Sketches.

The crowd that turned out for the concert at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church last Tuesday left no doubt as to the success of the affair. Even the sign "standing room only," had there been one, would have been removed before the programme had barely opened. The concert itself was very creditable to both promoters and participants.

The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Young Men's Bible class of the church. Owing to the limited seating capacity of the church the sale of tickets was necessarily limited. As it was the church was crowded to the last extent.

Prominent in the programme was the Metronome Banjo and Mandolin Club, a local musical organization. This was their first appearance in Plainfield this winter. The club has been practicing steadily this winter and the result was apparent. They played with a skill and vigor that made the rousing marches sound better than ever. Their time was excellent and altogether the club made a showing that will compare very favorably with even the college organizations of that kind. Among their numbers was a medley of popular airs, arranged by Fred VanEps, musical director of the club. They were called upon for an encore at every appearance. They ended the programme with the ever popular "Georgia Camp Meeting."

Miss Marion Short is not a stranger to Plainfield, but her recitations was even more satisfactory than at her past visits. Her forte was certainly in humorous selections. Her imitation of the small boy in Eugene Field's "Limitations of Youth" was capital. The impersonation of the Irish servant, and the accompanying tale of her mistress' experiences at housecleaning, was perfect. In her thrilling and dramatic selections she was styled, but the audience liked best her funny sketches that had the gift of being just bubbling over with fun. While the selections themselves were well chosen, it was the personality of Miss Short that rendered them so pleasing.

Charles W. Harrison assisted in the programe with several tenor solos. He pleased best in his negro melodies which quite captured the hearts of the juvenile part of the audience. He also sang with banjo accompaniment.

The Metronome Club is composed of Fred VanEps and Fred C. Smith, banjos; Rev. J. W. C. O'Donnell, Raymond B. Carroll, J. Caspar Kirkner, Albert Littell, C. VanEps, mandolins; D. W. Littell, Jr., guitar; Mr. Harold, piano.

ADVICE TO ENDEAVORERS

IMPORTANT OPEN CONFERENCE OF YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

Missionary Work of the Society and the Remedy for Indifference Were Discussed in an Animated Manner.

Two questions of importance to Christian Endeavorers were discussed Tuesday at the open conference conducted by the local Christian Endeavor Union held in the Trinity Reformed church. They were "The Missionary Work of the Christian Endeavor Society," and "Are Christian Endeavors Becoming Indifferent? If So, What Is the Remedy?"

The discussion of these two topics was the most important feature of the conference. The first discussion was led by Rev. A. I. Martine, who had a unique way of conducting open parliaments. After describing the importance of mission work, Mr. Martine called upon the chairmen of the missionary committees of the various societies represented in the local union, and asked them to give a brief synopsis of the work their society is doing. Responses were made from Dunellen, Washingtonville, Park Avenue Baptist, Trinity Reformed, Congregational, Warren Mission, Mt. Pleasant, First Baptist, East Third Street mission and the First Presbyterian societies, describing the kind of mission work, in home or foreign fields, that the society is engaged in. A few words from Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., and from Rev. A. E. Main, closed the discussion.

Rev. J. W. Richardson's theme provoked more discussion, for there were two opinions as to the indifference of Christian Endeavorers. E. E. Anthony didn't think they were as much so as the older people. Ethan Lanphear said that there were too many societies in the church any way, and suggested that those that lacked spirituality get out.

Mr. Richardson said that the causes of this alleged indifference were: First, a lack of personal responsibility; second, a dependence on real emotions for service; third, forgetting the judgment.

The remedy, he said, was: First, letting God take hold of us; second, a willingness to pay the price of a Christian character; third, to magnify the fact that I personally can help to pay the bills; fourth, by prayer and meditation.

The service opened with a service of song led by H. J. Martin. Mrs. E. E Anthony presided at the piano. During the evening Miss Charlotte Messersmith rendered a solo, and Miss F. G. Hawkins, president of the local union, presided. Three letters sent to the president by State officers, relative to the death of Dr. French, were read. The letters were from Dr. J. Cornelius Brett, state president; Miss Ida E. Moore, State secretary, and Rev. L. B. Dyett, one of the vice-presidents.

THE BOROUGH REPUBLICANS.

Former Mayor Hegeman Calls the Primary for Saturday Night.

Former Mayor Hegeman has issued the call for the Republican primary in North Plainfield, to make nominations for the approaching municipal election. The time set is Saturday night in the basement of the public school building. From present prospects the primary will be a lively one.

Asbury Park, March 1—The members of Company A, Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, have adopted resolutions asking Captain J. H. Mudell to resign. The volunteers charge the captain with overbearing conduct at Pompton Lake and Athens, Ga., and say that they will not serve under him in the National Guard.

Making Store Improvements.

The J. P. Laire Hardware Company is making some changes in the interior of their store to facilitate the showing and handling of goods. Father Miller Still in the Hospital.

Rev. Father Miller, of Manning avenue, is still confined to the hospital in Newark, where he submitted to an operation for appendicitis. He is, however, improving steadily. Rev. Father Brannon, of Perth Amboy, is in charge of St. Joseph's church, in the borough, while Father Miller, the rector, is ill.

Purse for Crow's Widow.

The friends of Mrs Crow, the widow of Manning T. Crow, the policeman, who was shot by burglars at Somerville, in January, are making up a handsome purse. The townspeople seem all interested in this fund, and are glad to show their appreciation of Mr. Crow's bravery in this way.

CITY'S POOR LIVE IN A COMFORTABLE WAY.

Industrial Home is Conducted in a Creditable Manner.

INMATES SEEM TO BE HAPPY

MR. AND MRS. TENEYCK ARE RIGHT PEOPLE IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

A Visit to the Home Shows It to be a Splendidly Conducted Institution—Building is Commodious and Pleasant—Plenty of Good, Wholesome Food Served—Good Conduct From Inmates.

A visit to the City Industrial Home, just off from West Front street on Rock avenue, will convince anyone that it is one of the best conducted municipal institutions to be found in the State. A reporter called at the Home a few days ago and was shown through the institution by Superintendent Israel TenEyck. The contented look which the inmates evidence shows plainly that Mr. TenEyck, assisted by his wife, is the right man in the right place. They are undoubtedly the best superintendent and matron the Home has ever had.

The Home is a commodious building, pleasantly situated with large open fields surrounding it. In the summer months it is a particularly pleasant place, and in the winter, when most of the inmates are compelled to remain indoors, it is comfortable, light and airy.

At present there are eleven inmates who are under the care of Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck. Though fate has landed them at the bottom of life's ladder they live their uneventful life in the serene satisfaction that they shall not want, at least, for the common necessities of life.

The front part of the building is occupied by the women and the rear by the men. While the rooms are not furnished as the average person would like, yet they are comfortable and clean. Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck are most kindly and considerate in their treatment of the unfortunates, and as the reporter passed through he heard nothing but praise for the superintendent and matron.

Supper was in preparation when the reporter visited the home, and he was impressed with the wholesome food which was being cooked, plenty of which was furnished to each one of the inmates.

The inmates are not kept under a strict espionage and discipline, as is the deplorable case in too many institutions of the same character, but are allowed to do pretty much as they please so long as they keep within the bounds of reason and good conduct. As a matter of fact, the generous notions of Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck are sufficient to make them appreciated, and whatever their wishes are in respect to the life of the Home are observfully complied with.

Italians Looking for Work.

Large parties of Italians are beginning to gather in the towns along the Central Railroad, in the hope of getting work on the trolley roads this spring. Word has been passed around among them that the trolley roads will be built, and they are swarming in this direction. There is hardly a ship entering New York from Mediterranean ports that does not bring some addition to the Westfield or Cranford population.

A Ten-cent Department.

If there is one thing that people in general favor it is a department filled with good, useful articles that can be purchased at reasonable prices. Recognizing this VanEmburgh & Son have estabied a 10-cent department at their store on West Front street, and it offers an excellent opportunity for persons to secure many useful articles at a price within the reach of all. Inspection is invited.

Installed Officers.

Chosen Friends, Plainfield Council, No. 44, initiated two candidates at their meeting Tuesday, and installed their newly elected officers. The grand State officers were present, and a good time was enjoyed by all. Miss Christina Smith presided at the piano.

Entered Wall Street.

J. Caspar Kirkner, of West Eighth street, has resigned his position as deputy sheriff, under Sheriff Kirk, at Elizabeth, and accepted an advantageous position with his father, Jacob Kirkner, in "Wall street."

To Come Back to Plainfield.

The many friends of F. S Cutler, who has been living in New York for the past year, will be pleased to learn that he and his family will again take up their residence in Plainfield on Richmond street May 1st.

NEW RESIDENCES GOING UP IN THE WEST END.

COUNCILMAN LIEFKE'S ENTERPRISE.

He is to Erect Three New Houses at the Corner of West Front Street and Grant Avenue.

Henry Leifke, the Front street baker, is making some improvements in the realty line that is going to enhance the value of property at the corner of West Front street and Grant avenue. He has purchased a sufficient amount of land on that corner to erect three handsome houses, each with a frontage of 66 feet, all with modern improvements. These houses will be built for speculative purposes.

The house occupied by Mr. Leifke at West End Park he has sold to W. H. Moore, who owns considerable property in that neighborhood. Mr. Leifke has secured another lot in the vicinity with a frontage of 53 feet and upon that he will erect a house for his own use. In the meantime while his new house is being erected he will occupy rooms over his store on Front street, W. H. Brokaw, the contractor, has the work of putting up the houses for Mr. Leifke, and one of the dwellings is now well under way.

NECESSARY PRECAUTION

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO BE VACCINATED TO PREVENT SMALL POX.

Superintendent Maxson Arranging to Send Out Cards so That All Unvaccinated Children May See the Physicians.

In view of the large number of children in the schools who are unvaccinated, and as a precaution against small pox, which is now epidemic in several States, the Board of Education has arranged with the school physician to make appointments at each of the public schools, when all the children whose parents desire it, will be vaccinated free of charge.

Superintendent Maxson is now arranging to send out cards, notifying the parent of each unvaccinated child of the date when the physician will be present at the school, and giving the parent an opportunity to express his desire for his child to be vaccinated. No child will be vaccinated without the written consent of the parent.

The occurrence of two deaths from small pox in New York yesterday emphasizes the wisdom of the school board in taking prompt action to make it impossible for the disease to get a foothold among the school children.

M'ALL AUXILIARY ELECT.

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead Chosen President—Vice Presidents From Churches.

At the annual meeting of the McAll Auxiliary, held in the Plainfield Public Library Wednesday, Mrs. Frederick G Mead was elected president; Miss Zadie VanBoskerk, secretary and Mrs. John Gray Foster, treasurer. Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, who has served the auxiliary so long as chief executive, wished to be retired.

The vice-presidents from the various churches were chosen as follows: Crescent Avenue, Mrs. A. C. Baldwin; Grace P. E., Miss Florence Tweedy; Congregational, Mrs. Wm. B Wade; Trinity Reformed, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck; First Presbyterian, Mrs. James Petrie; First Baptist, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert; Seventh-Day Baptist, Mrs. J. VanSickle; Park Avenue Baptist, Mrs. F. K. Fisk; Orthodox Friends, Minnie Wood.

Teased by Small Boys.

Henry Mohring is a well-behaved German living on South Second street. He has been frequently teased by some of the small boys of the neighborhood. Warrants were issued in the case for James Harding and Hudson Morris, colored, both are small boys. Harding appeared as directed and the Judge suspended sentence. Morris has been hiding in a barn. He was afraid to appear when his companion did. Now the police are laying for him and it promises to go hard for the young colored lad if he is caught.

Guinee Gets Out of Jail.

Constable Amos Moffett went to Elizabeth Tuesday and secured the release of Patrick Guinee, who is charged with stealing various guns from the Rood Machine Tool Works. Guinee was held in $200 bail, and James Muldowney and the prisoner's uncle, Patrick Guinee, went on the bail bond. Guinee's case will come before the next session of the grand jury.

Had No License.

George Potter, colored, was arraigned before City Judge Runyon Wednesday, charged with collecting garbage without a license and with depositing it on a private dump within the city limits. A CYCLONIC TALK BY ASSEMBLYMAN MURRAY

Hearing Given on Bill to Reduce Telephone Charges.

BERATED THE MONOPOLIES.

SENATE PASSES THE BILL FOR THE PAY OF SOLDIERS.

Single Men Will Receive $8 and Married Men $6 a Month for the Time That They Were in the Service—The Volunteers Wanted More—A Bill Passed to Change New Brunswick Ward Lines.

Trenton, March 1.—"Just like a cyclone," said some of those who attended the hearing of the committee on corporations in the Assembly yesterday afternoon on Assemblyman Murray's bill reducing the rate of telephone tolls. The remark was occasioned by the steady flow of oratory that the Plainfield statesman used in the effort to win favor for his measure.

According to the terms of Mr. Murray's bill the rates should be as follows: In cities of over 100 000 population, $60 per year; cities of from 20,000 to 100,000, $40 per year; cities under 20,000 population, $30 per year. Mr. Murray, who is an indomitable talker, occupied the entire time of the committee. He told and retold of the monopolistic tendencies of the telephone companies.

Assemblyman Wood, one of the committeemen, while Murray was getting up some fresh steam, managed to get in a word to the effect that if the matter was not interfered with it would be regulated in time by the law of competition. Spencer Weart, of Jersey City, at another talkative period in Murray's hearing managed to enter a protest on behalf of the Independent Telephone Company. A further hearing will be given as Mr. Murray did not get a chance to finish his argument.

Senator Ketcham, of Essex, succeeded in having passed his measure providing for the compensation of volunteers in the late war with Spain. Of the three measures pending in the Legislature the Ketcham bill made the smallest provision for the soldiers. It provides an allowance of $4 a month for single men and $6 for married men from the time they were mustered into the United States service until they were mustered out. On this basis the cost to the State will be about $200,000. The volunteers ask for an appropriation of a half million dollars. The legislators agree that with the demands on the public treasury for the improvement of State institutions, public schools, roads, etc., it will be impossible to appropriate more than the amount provided for in Ketcham's bill.

The House passed a number of bills, the one provoking the most discussion being the Senate bill which makes mandatory the readjustment of ward lines in any city where one ward has a population as great as that of three other wards. The bill affects New Brunswick. Assembly bills which passed were those authorizing cities to pension families of policemen killed in the discharge of their duty; appropriating $300 for the erection of a monument to the New Jersey sailors who were killed in the explosion of the battleship Maine; making five per cent. the legal rate of interest; making it a misdemeanor to use the American flag for advertising purposes.
